Scotch under Lord Leven; but on the approach of the king to the city, after his defeat at Naseby, they raised the siege. Hereford was one of the last places which held out for the king, and to reward this devotion Charles II., on coming to the throne, granted the city a new charter, accompanied with the motto, "Invictæ Fidelitatis Præmium." It is now governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors, and returns two members to parliament for the borough. The assizes and quarter sessions for the county are held here.—Hereford has generally been considered a very healthy town. The streets are broad and well paved, and lighted with gas: the private houses are mostly built of brick. The principal public buildings are—the Shire or County Hall, built in 1817, after a design of Sir Robert Smirke's, a commodious structure, with a portico, supported by eight fluted pillars: it consists of a large hall, which is used at elections, assemblies, &c., and the rooms appropriated to the law and record officers; the county gaol, in Commercial-road, enclosed within a high brick wall: the entrance to this is a rusticated gateway with Tuscan pillars; the city prison, formerly one of the gates of the ancient walls; the townhall, now entirely removed, formerly situated in the High Town, a wood and plaster building, supposed to have been erected in the reign of James I.; the infirmary, situated near the river, first opened in 1776; the union workhouse, a substantial building erected in 1836; and the post-office, a neat building. The theatre, where Clive, Siddons, Kemble, and Garrick commenced their careers as actors, and which was for many years under the direction of the Kembles, has been pulled down, and a corn exchange with clock turret has been erected on its site. The markets are held under and around the old townhall. There are also very large manure works at Holmer, within the liberties of the city.—The most interesting object in Hereford is the cathedral, which stands on the S. side of the city, near to the river. Previous to the erection of the present edifice, more than one large church had already at various times existed in Hereford. So early as the reign of Offa, King of Mercia, a church stood here, which was afterwards pulled down by Milfred, a governor of Mercia, in the reign of Egbert, to give place to a more imposing edifice. Concerning the erection of this second church, tradition has handed down the following account:—Offa having, at the instigation of his wife, murdered Ethelbert, King of the West Angles, in expiation of his crime caused Ethelbert's remains to be deposited in the church at Hereford, and erected a tomb over them, at the same time making large donations to the church. On becoming Governor of Mercia, hearing that miracles had been performed at Ethelbert's tomb, and satisfied with the results of his inquiries as to their genuineness, Milfred resolved upon erecting a new church in place of the old one, for which purpose he made a large addition to the valuable treasures which the church had already acquired from the munificence of Offa and the offerings of the numerous pilgrims who resorted hither. This church was completed in 825. After the lapse of 200 years, Milfred's church had fallen into decay. Athelstan, Bishop of Hereford, commenced the erection of a new one, which was completed about 1030. This church was destroyed by Gryffyth in 1055. After the destruction of Athelstan's church, the present cathedral was commenced by Bishop Robert, of Lorraine, and completed by Bishop Raynelm about the year 1115. Since that time several additions have been made to the original structure. The central tower was built about 1200; and a beautiful tower was erected over the W. front, probably in the reign of Edward II. or Edward III. In 1786 this tower fell, destroying the western portion of the cathedral. A new western end was built by Wyatt, in a style not in correspondence with that of the original architecture, which sadly mars the beauty of the exterior. The cathedral is cruciform. The principal dimensions are—extreme length, 350 feet; breadth, 174 feet; height of nave, 63 feet; breadth of nave, 28 feet; height of tower, 160 feet. The cathedral contains many beautiful and interesting monuments, some of which are very ancient. The cathedral has been extensively restored by G. G. Scott, Esq., mainly through the dean and chapter. Large contributions have been given by the gentry and landed proprietors towards this object. There is a service held in the Lady chapel for the parish of St. John, as that part of the cathedral is within the parish. In the chapter-room is a very curious old map of the world—one of the most ancient in existence. The college is a quadrangle, containing the residences of the vicars. The library, at the E. end, contains many valuable books and manuscripts. The cloisters connect the cathedral with the bishop's palace, an ancient building situated near the banks of the Wye. The tower, which rises from the intersection of the nave and transept, was formerly surmounted by a wooden spire covered with lead, but this was pulled down at the end of the last century. Besides the cathedral, the principal churches in Hereford are—All Saints, at the top of Eign-street, consisting of a nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a tower surmounted by a lofty spire—the living, val. £180, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor; St. Martin's in the Ross-road, a cruciform building with a spire, and containing a stained-glass window; St. Nicholas, at the end of Victoria-street, having a massive square tower; St. Peter's, in St. Owen-street, founded by Walter de Lacy about 1080, consisting of a nave, chancel, N. and S. aisles, and a tower. The Roman Catholics have a chapel here. The Methodists, Baptists, Friends, and Independents, have places of worship. There are several schools in the city; the cathedral school is the principal one. In 1859 magnificent National schools were erected by the Vicar of St. Martin's, in the early English style, to correspond with the vicarage and church. Hereford also contains a museum, literary institution, library, and reading-room. There are numerous charitable institutions in the town—Coningsby hospital, for 1 invalided soldier and 10 old servants; St. Ethelbert's hospital, for the maintenance of 10 poor women; Trinity hospital, for a corporal, 2 men, and 12 widows; St. Giles's hospital, for 5 poor men; William's hospital, for 6 poor men; Shelley's hospital, for 6 poor widows; Price's hospital, for 12 aged freemen of the city; and Lazarus hospital, for 6 poor widows.—The principal antiquities in the town are—a few remains of the castle, and an old house in Wildemarsh street, formerly belonging to the Black Friars, adjoining which was a chapel and buildings of the Knights Hospitallers of Jerusalem. Portions of the old city wall are still standing in three or four parts of the city. Of the various other monasteries and religious houses which existed in the city previous to the Reformation, there are no longer any traces.—The diocese of Hereford is in the province of Canterbury. It includes the greater part of Herefordshire, part of Shropshire, Worcestershire, Monmouthshire, Radnor, and Montgomeryshire, and comprises 338 benefices.—Several persons of celebrity have been born in Hereford, as Nell Gwynn, David Garrick, and Havard. There are two weekly papers published in the city—the Herefordshire Journal, Conservative, one of the oldest established in England; and the Hereford Times, Liberal, commenced in 1832. Wednesday and Saturday are market days. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in February, Wednesday in Easter Week, 1st July, and 20th October, chiefly for cattle.

HEREFORDSHIRE, an inland co. situated in the W. of England, on the borders of Wales, between 51° 49′ and 52° 24′ N. lat., and 2° 20′ and 3° 7′ W. long. It is bounded on the N. by Shropshire and Worcestershire, on the E. by Worcestershire and Gloucestershire, on the S. by Monmouthshire and Gloucestershire, and on the W. by Radnorshire, Brecknockshire, and Monmouthshire. By the Act 7 and 8 Vict. c. 61, several detached portions of this county, which were locally situated in Shropshire, Worcestershire, Radnorshire, and Monmouthshire, were taken from it, and a detached portion of Worcestershire, locally situated in Herefordshire, was added to it. The extreme length of Herefordshire is 40 miles, and the extreme breadth 34 miles. Its area is 838 square miles, or 534,823 statute acres, and includes within its limits 26,129 houses, of which 25,134 are inhabited, and 815 uninhabited. Its population in 1861 amounted to 123,712, and in 1851 to 115,489, showing an increase of 8,223 in the decennial period.—In the earliest periods of our history Herefordshire formed part of the territory of the Silures, a tribe of the Iberians, in whose possession it remained until its conquest by the Roman general, Julius Frontinus, about the year 73. Of its occupation by the Silures, a record still remains in the names of several of the streams in the county. Numerous traces of Roman roads and entrenchments exist in various parts. Of the former, Watling Street, one of the most important in England, passed by Brandon and Wigmore to Kenchester, and by way of Dore and Kington to Abergavenny. During the period of the Heptarchy, Herefordshire was included in the province of Mercia. In 819 the Danes, who had previously occupied the county for a short time, regained possession of it, and elected Cenolph their king. This second occupation of the Danes was also of short duration, for they were defeated by the West Angles, under Alured, and Cenolph was slain. Herefordshire, from its situation on the borders or "marches" of Wales, was peculiarly exposed to the ravages committed by the Welsh in their inroads into England. In the year 1055 it was invaded by Gryffyth, a Welsh prince, at the head of an army of his countrymen. He defeated the English under Ranulph, Earl of Hereford, captured the city of Hereford, and after setting fire to the cathedral, and plundering and slaughtering the inhabitants, retired with a large booty into his own territory. To avenge this outrage, Harold, son of Earl Godwin, was sent by Edward the Confessor into the Marches. The Welsh were defeated, and a treaty was concluded, the conditions of which were so repeatedly violated by the Welsh, that Harold, on ascending the throne of England, issued a decree that any Welshman found on the English side of Offa's Dyke (part of which ran through Herefordshire) should lose his right hand. Even this stringent measure did not deter them from continuing their inroads, and for several centuries afterwards Herefordshire was still subjected to the attacks of bands of marauders from Wales. In 1087 an insurrection took place in the county, headed by the Earl of Hereford, Lord Mortimer, and Odo, Bishop of Bayeux. On the king promising to redress grievances, and Odo consenting to leave the kingdom, tranquillity was restored. In the dispute between Maud, daughter of Henry I., and Stephen, Herefordshire was the scene of several contests. In the reign of Henry II., the Welsh, invited by the defenceless condition in which the garrison towns had been left on the demolition of the castles by that monarch, committed great depredations in the county, which they continued until the arrival of an English army, sent by Henry, to restrain them. From this period to the time of Owain Glyndwr, when Herefordshire, like the rest of the counties on the borders of Wales, was greatly disturbed by his incursions, few events of importance occur in the history of this county. During the wars of the Roses, a great battle was fought (in 1461) at Mortimer's Cross. In the 27th year of Henry VIII. a statute was passed for incorporating England and Wales, by which the extent of Herefordshire was increased. In the civil war between Charles I. and the parliament, this county did not escape the commotions which prevailed in the other parts of the kingdom; the city of Hereford was besieged by the parliamentarians and captured, was retaken by the royalists, was afterwards besieged by the Scots, and was relieved from them by the king on his retreat from Naseby.—The surface of Herefordshire is hilly. The principal elevations are—in the W. the Hatterel range of the Black mountains, commanding fine views; and two ranges running parallel to the Hatterel, one of which commences at Mynydd-Ferdinn, and terminates at the Vagar Hill; the other runs from Mornington Stradle to Middlewood; in the S.E. a range of hills extending from Lea to Woolhope and Stoke Edith; in the E. the Malvern hills; in the N. the hills about Downton, Leintwardine, and Ludlow; and a range running south-westwards towards Kington.—The chief rivers of Herefordshire are, the Wye, the Lugg, and the Teme. The Wye rises in Cardiganshire, near Plinlimmon, and entering Herefordshire, runs northwards, forming part of the boundary between Radnorshire and Herefordshire. It then flows in an easterly direction to Hereford, thence southwards to Ross, forms part of the boundary between Herefordshire and Gloucestershire, and finally quits Herefordshire at the Leys. The scenery of the Wye during the greater part of its course is very picturesque. This river is only navigable for barges. The Lugg rises in Radnorshire, and entering Herefordshire, flows eastwards to Leominster, thence in a more southerly direction to Mordiford, where it joins the Wye. The Teme rises in Radnorshire, enters Herefordshire, then flows into Shropshire; again enters Herefordshire at Ludlow, and finally quits it near Burford. Other streams are—the Arrow, Fromie, Leddon, Doyer, and Munnow. All these streams abound with trout, and are remarkable generally for the beauty of their scenery.—The climate of this county is variable, but extremely healthy. Herefordshire belongs to the Old Red sandstone formation. The soil consists for the most part of a deep, heavy, red loam, with substrata of clay or gravel. The principal productions are—wheat, barley, oats, turnips, peas, and vetches. The chief wheat-growing districts are in the centre of the county, and between Hereford and Ledbury. The best barley is grown in the S.E. Large crops of oats are produced on the high grounds in the E. and W. Orchards are numerous in all parts of the county, and large quantities of cider are made. Hops are extensively grown in the eastern and central parts of the county. Herefordshire is very celebrated for its breed of oxen. Many horses, especially draught, of moderate quality, are bred. The breed of sheep which thrives best in this county, is a cross between the Leicester and the Ryeland. A considerable supply of Welsh mutton is sent to the Herefordshire markets. The county is well wooded, and possesses a large quantity of good oak.—Herefordshire is divided for civil purposes into the hundreds of Broxash, Ewyas Lacy, Greytree, Grimsworth, Huntingdon, Radlow, Stretford, Webtree, Wigmore, Wolphy, Wormelow, Hereford City, and Leominster Borough, and contains 221 parishes, and 7 market towns—Hereford, Leominster, Weobley, Ross, Ledbury, Kington, and Bromyard. The county is divided into 8 Poor-law Unions—viz. Bromyard, Dore, Hereford, Kington, Ledbury, Leominster, Ross, and Weobley. Herefordshire is in the Oxford circuit; the assizes and quarter-sessions for the county are held at Hereford; county courts are held at Bromyard, Hereford, Kington, Ledbury, Leominster, and Ross. Three members are returned to parliament for the county, two for the city of Hereford, and two for the borough of Leominster.—For ecclesiastical purposes, with the exception of a few parishes, which are in the diocese of St. David's, the whole county is included in the diocese of Hereford, of which it forms an archdeaconry.—The manufactures of Herefordshire are of very little importance: gloves and woollen stuffs were formerly made to some extent, but very few hands are now employed upon them. The greater portion of the labouring population is engaged in agriculture and in the making of cider; a very small portion is employed in malting, brewing, and coal-mining.—The principal railways which traverse Herefordshire are the Shrewsbury and Hereford—a continuation of which, the Shrewsbury and Crewe, joins the London and North-Western railway at Crewe; branch lines of the Shrewsbury and Hereford railway exist between Leominster and Kington, between Craven Arms and Knighton, and a third runs to Tenbury; the Worcester and Hereford, running from Hereford by way of Ledbury to Worcester, from which point there is direct railway communication with all parts of the kingdom; the Newport, Abergavenny, and Hereford, connecting Herefordshire with South Wales; and the Hereford, Ross, and Gloucester railway. From Hereford the principal roads are—to Ross, 14 miles; to Ledbury, 15 miles; to Hay, 20 miles; to Kington, 19 miles; to Abergavenny, 24 miles; to Monmouth, 20 miles;

to Leominster, 13 miles; to Ludlow, 24 miles; to Bromyard, 14 miles. The principal canals are the Ledbury and Gloucester and the Leominster and Tenbury.—Of the many forts and castles which Hereford anciently possessed, there are but few traces. Of the castles of Hereford, Goderich, Clifford, and Bredwardine, and of the fort at Brampton Bryan, some portions still exist. There are a few British remains, the most remarkable of which are the Herefordshire Beacon, Offa's Dyke, and a pile of stone called Arthur's Stone. Of Roman roads and entrenchments there are numerous remains. The great road Watling Street entered this county near Leintwardine, passed by Kenchester, and left it near Longtown. There were other Roman roads from Gloucester and from Worcester to Kenchester. Traces exist of Roman entrenchments between the Malvern hills and Whitbourn, Thornbury Croft, Brandon and Cawall Knoll; and of an encampment near Downton.—The monastic institutions of Herefordshire were about 21 in number, and were situated at Aconbury, Barton, Clifford, Carswell, Dewlas, Dore, Ewyas, Flanesford, Hereford, Kilpeck, Ledbury, Leominster, Limebrook, Monkland, Shobdon, Titley, Wigmore, and Wormesley. The principal seats of the nobility and gentry in the county are—Eywood, near Titley, of Lady Langdale; Gartons, near Mansel Gamage, of Sir H. G. Cotterel, Bart.; Goodrich Court, Colonel W. H. Meyrick; The Hall, Brampton Brian, of the Countess of Oxford and Mortimer; Hampton Court, near Hope-under-Dinmore, J. Arkwright, Esq.; Hardwick, near Clifford, of Colonel Powell; Harewood House, of Sir Hungerford Hoskyns; Heath House, Leintwardine, of Sir W. Clark, Bart.; Holme House, near Holme Lacy, of Sir E. F. S. Stanhope; Kentchurch Court, of Colonel J. L. C. Scudamore; Knill Court, of Sir G. Walsh, Bart.; Moccas Court, of Sir V. Cornewall; Putley Court, of Major J. R. Stock; Shobdon Court, of Lord Bateman; Stoke Edith Park, of Lady E. Foley; Titley Court, of Admiral Sir T. Hastings; Yatton Court, near Aymestrey, of Lady F. Harcourt.

HEREFORD, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 3 miles N.E. of Tenbury, its post town, 6¼ from Ludlow, and 8 from Leominster. It is situated on the river Teme and Leominster canal, and contains the tnshps. of Upton and Little Hereford, with the hmlt. of Dirty Middleton. The land is partly in hops and partly arable. The soil is of various qualities. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Ashford-Carbonell, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £300, in the patron. of the Bishop of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is an antique stone structure with a belfry containing three bells. The interior of the church contains a piscina, sedilia, old register, with several monuments, also two brasses of very ancient date. Here is a school for children of both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The charities consist of cottages for the poor. Easton Court, a modern mansion, is the principal residence. Sir Joseph Bailey is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

HERESON, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Lawrence, hund. of Ringslow, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 2 miles from Ramsgate.

HERIOT, a par. and post vil. in the E. district of co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 10 miles S. of Dalkeith. It is a station on the Edinburgh and Kelso branch of the North British railway. It is bounded by the co. of Peebles, and by the pars. of Temple, Borthwick, Fala, and Stow. It is situated in the valley of the Heriotburn. It is 10 miles long and 6 broad. The surface is hilly and moory, containing part of the Moorfoot range. The principal summits are Blaketip Scars and Dewar Hill. The par. also includes Broomieknowe, Fala Hill Inn, and Robertson. The Heriot rises in the S.W. of the parish, at Ensum Cleugh, among the Moorfoots, and joins with the Gala at Haltree. There is but a small area of fertile arable land. This par. is in the presb. of Dalkeith, and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The minister has a stipend of £158. The church was built in 1804, and there is a Free church, which shares duty with the adjoining parish of Stow. Here is a parish school. The manor of Heriot anciently belonged to the Morvilles, and subsequently to Roger de Quincy, by whose daughter it was granted, with its church and appurtenances, to the monks of Newbattle, who held it until the Reformation, when the Ker family became possessors of the parish. There are some erect stones said to be of Druidical origin. Traces of camps are seen on the hills. At Dewar farm two stones bear the name of "The Piper's Grave." "Lot's Wife's Pillar" stands near Wolf Cleugh. Near Heriot House is Mary Gibb's Stone, so called from a woman of that name who was burned upon it on the accusation of witchcraft. Trout and salmon abound.

HERM ISLAND, one of the Channel Islands, in Little Russell Strait, about 4 miles N.E. of St. Peter's, Guernsey. It was anciently called Vosargie, and is 3 miles long by 1 mile broad. There are two beacons, and a small pier harbour from which quantities of granite are shipped. The surface is partly cultivated, but the shore extremely dangerous owing to the rocks and shell banks.

HERMISTON, a vil. in the par. of Currie, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 2 miles from the village, and 7 from Edinburgh.

HERMIT-HILL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Wortley and par. of Tankersley, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Peniston, and 5 S.W. of Barnsley. It is situated near the river Don.

HERMITAGE, a par. in the lib. of Fordington, co. Dorset, 5 miles N. of Cerne-Abbas, its post town, and 13 N.W. of Dorchester. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £85. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £64. The church is a small plain building dedicated to St. Mary, and has a bell turret.

HERMITAGE, a chplry. in the par. of Hampstead-Norris, co. Berks, 4 miles N.E. of Newbury.

HERMITAGE, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of West Bourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 6 miles N.W. of Chichester. There are also numerous seats and small places of this name in various parts of England and Ireland, but too insignificant to require separate notice.

HERMITAGE WATER, a small stream in co. Roxburgh, Scotland. It rises under Milden Wood Hill, and joins the river Liddell. On its banks stands Hermitage Castle, built by Alexander II. in 1240, but now an imposing ruin, covering 100 feet square. In it Sheriff Ramsay was starved to death in 1342 by William Douglas; and Bothwell visited by Queen Mary in 1561. The family of Scotts took from it the title of viscount.

HERMITRAY, one of the Inverness Islands, W. coast of Scotland. It is inhabited by a few fishermen, and lies about 5 miles S.W. of Renish Head, in Harris Sound.

HERNE, a par. in the hund. of Bleangate, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 6 miles N.E. of Canterbury, its post town, and 3 N.E. of the Sturry railway station, on the South-Eastern line. The London, Chatham, and Dover line has a station at Herne Bay. It was formerly a market town, and includes the watering-place of Herne Bay. The land is well wooded, and is partly laid out in hop-grounds. The prevailing timber is oak and elm, with ash, maple, and hazel. The soil is chiefly clay, resting on a substratum of gravel, and produces good wheat crops. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,474 19*s.*, and the vicarial for £557 19*s.* The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £360, in the patron. of the archbishop. This living was held by Bishop Ridley from 1538 to 1550, when he was translated to the see of London. There is also a district church at Herne Bay, the living of which is a perpet. cur. The parish church, dedicated to St. Martin, is a fine structure with a square tower, and contains some brasses bearing date from 1420, and tombs of the Fineuxes, Milles, &c. There are places of worship for Independents and Wesleyans—the former at Herne Bay, the latter in the village of Herne, also National schools. In 1565 two girls were born joined together, resembling the Siamese twins, but they lived only a few days. The Blean Union poorhouse is situated on Herne Common. On the confines of this parish are the remains of an ancient episcopal palace in which Archbishop Cranmer resided. In the Channel near the bay numerous fragments of Roman earthenware have been found, supposed to be the vestiges of a cargo of pottery wrecked whilst the Romans were in Britain. A pleasure fair is held at Herne on Easter Tuesday.

HERNE, a hmlt. in the hund. of Christchurch, Ringwood div. of co. Hants, 3 miles from Christchurch. It is a station on the Christchurch branch of the London and South-Western railway.

HERNE BAY, a chplry. and watering-place in the par. of Herne, hund. of Bleangate, and lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 9 miles from Canterbury, and 65½ S.E. of London by the London, Chatham, and Dover line of railway, on which it is a station. Steamboats of a superior class run daily during the season to and from London. The town of Herne Bay is situated on a bay on the northern coast of the county of Kent, and presents a remarkably pleasing appearance from the river. It has considerably increased of late years, and became an ecclesiastical district by an order in council in 1841. The town, which is laid out on a large scale, is only partially built, consisting principally of several range of houses fronting the bay, with some very good inns. It is lighted with gas and paved, and has a parade 50 feet wide, extending for nearly a mile in front of the town. [Its government is vested in 24 commissioners, who hold their meetings in the townhall. On the Parade, where the baths are situated, is a clock tower, which is of use to the mariners as a landmark. Opposite the parade is the wooden T-shaped pier, 3,000 feet in length, and 400 feet at the end, having an inclined plane 20 feet in width, for the convenience of landing passengers at all times of the tide. There are assembly and billiard rooms, and a library. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church, called Christ Church, has accommodation for 800 persons. The Independents have a chapel, and there are National and infant schools.

HERNE HILL, a hmlt. and suburban district in the par. of Camberwell, co. Surrey, 3 miles S. of St. Paul's, London. It is a station on the London, Chatham, and Dover railway. It is situated near Dulwich, and is now covered with villa residences surrounded by gardens. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £500. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, was built in 1844 by Mr. Alexander, and has a spire 115 feet high.

HERNHILL, a par. in the hund. of Boughton-under-Blean, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 3 miles E. of Faversham, its post town, 6 S. of Whitstable, and 6 N.W. of Canterbury. The village, which is small, is situated to the N. of Watling Street. The land is partly in hop-grounds and orchards. In that part of the parish adjoining the Blean woods is some fine old timber. The soil varies from stiff clay to light sand. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £292, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a tower containing five bells, and a beacon turret at its southern angle. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a parochial school, and a chapel for the Wesleyans. The Archbishop of Canterbury is lord of the manor.

HERNIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanegwad, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles W. of Llandilo-Fawr.

HERON, or HERN, WEST, a hmlt. in the par. of Blackwater, hund. of Christchurch, co. Hants, 4 miles N.W. of Christchurch, and 5 S. of the Kingwood railway station. It is situated on the river Stour, near Heron Common. In the vicinity is Heron Court, the seat of the Earl of Malmesbury, noted for its gallery of paintings and portraits, brought from Park Place.

HERRIARD, a par. in the upper half of the hund. of Bermondspit, Basingstoke div. of co. Hants, 4½ miles S.E. of Basingstoke, its post town and railway station on the South-Western line. It contains the tythg. of Southrope. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £288 15*s.*, and the vicarial for £200. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £147. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, the tower of which fell down more than two centuries ago. There is a school capable of accommodating 100 children, supported by F. J. E. Jervoise, Esq., who is lord of the manor, and resides at Herriard House, a mansion situated in the midst of an extensive and well-wooded park, 7 miles in circumference.

HERRINGBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Stokesby, hund. of East Flegg, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N.W. of Yarmouth, and 3 S.E. of Acle-by-the-Ferry. It is situated on the navigable river Bure. It formerly had a hospital, or college, founded by Hugh Attefenne in 1475. Until recently it formed a distinct parish, but is now united with Stokesby. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Stokesby, in the dioc. of Norwich.

HERRINGFLEET, a par. in the hund. of Mutford, co. Suffolk, 6 miles W. of Lowestoft, its post town, 7 S.W. of Yarmouth, and 1 mile N. of Somerleyton railway station. The village is small, and situated near the navigable river Waveney, over which is a bridge called St. Olave's. The houses have an irregular appearance. There are traces of a priory of Black Canons, founded in the reign of Henry III. by Roger Fitz Osbert. It continued till the Dissolution, when its revenue was returned at £49 11*s.* 7*d.*, and the site granted to Henry Jernyngham. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient structure, with a round tower containing two bells. The interior of the church contains some stained windows. The register dates from 1706. The parochial charities produce about £34 per annum. Here is an endowed National school for both sexes. Herringfleet Hall is situated in a wooded park, and commands extensive views of the surrounding country. Henry Mussenden Leathes, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

HERRINGSWELL, a par. in the hund. of Lackford, co. Suffolk, 3½ miles S. of Mildenhall, its post town, and 2 E. of the Kennet railway station, on the Cambridge, Newmarket, and Bury St. Edmund's branch of the Great Eastern railway. It is a small village, situated in the vale of a small rivulet, a branch of the river Lack. There are several rabbit warrens in the neighbourhood. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1807. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Ethelbert, is an ancient thatched structure, with a tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1748. Herringswell House is the principal residence, situated in the midst of fir-trees.

HERRINGTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Whiston, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Rotherham.

HERRINGTON, EAST AND MIDDLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Houghton-le-Spring, N. div. of Easington ward, co. palatine Durham, 2 miles N.E. of Houghton-le-Spring, and 4 S.W. of Sunderland. The high road from Durham to Sunderland passes through the township, dividing it into two villages. There is a small Wesleyan chapel at Middle Herrington. The Earl of Durham and the bishop are the lords of the manor.

HERRINGTON, WEST, a tnshp. in the par. of Houghton-le-Spring, N. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 2½ miles N.E. of Houghton-le-Spring, its post town, and 4½ S.W. of Sunderland. It contains part of the hmlt. of Coxgreen, which is situated about 5 miles W. of Sunderland, on the S. bank of the river Wear. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the lime and stone quarries. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Houghton-le-Spring, in the dioc. of Durham. The church, which is a small stone structure, was erected in 1840, and is dedicated to St. Cuthbert. There is a parochial school.

HERRIOTFIELD, a post-office vil. in the par. of Monzie, co. Perth, Scotland, 14 miles W.N.W. of Perth.

HERSHAM, or HEVERSHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Walton, first div. of the hund. of Elmbridge, co. Surrey, 5 miles S.W. of Kingston, and 1 mile from the Walton station on the London and South-Western railway. The vil. is situated on the river Mole. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £100. The church, erected in 1839, has a gable turret containing one bell, and is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The Independents have a chapel, and there is a National school for both sexes. In Oatlands Park is the new district church of St. Mary's, erected in 1862, with a belfry containing one bell. Near to this church is the Metropolitan Convalescent Asylum, erected on five acres of land presented by the late Earl of Ellesmere. It is a large building with upwards of 200 beds, and further accommodation is afforded by the recent erection of a new wing. This excellent institution is supported by voluntary contributions.

HERSTMONCEAUX, a par. in the hund. of Foxearle, rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, 4 miles E. of Hailsham, its post town, and 10 S.W. of Battle. It is a small agricultural village, situated on the road from Lewes to Battle and Hastings. The manor formerly belonged to the De Hursts, one of whom was of Monceaux in France, from which circumstance the village takes its name. It came afterwards to the Fiennes, who built the castle, and from them to the Dacres and the Naylors, who sold it. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £339. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £920. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, containing tombs of the Fiennes, also a curious brass of Sir Thomas, bearing date 1402. Here is a National school for both sexes, supported by voluntary contributions. The Independents have a place of worship. About a quarter of a mile distant from the church are the ruins of Herstmonceaux Castle, situated in a valley, and built in the reign of Henry VI., being one of the most ancient brick structures in England. The castle, which was dismantled in 1777, is surrounded by a moat, which is now dry. The building measures 214 feet in length by 206, and has towers 84 feet in height.

HERSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Swanage, co. Dorset, 4 miles S.E. of Corfe Castle.

HERTFORD, or HARFORD, a market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, also the county and assize town of Hertfordshire, 21 miles N. of London by road, and 26 from the Shoreditch station of the Great Eastern railway, which has a branch to Hertford, the station being at the E. end of the town. A branch line for goods traffic only connects this line with the Hertford, Luton, and Dunstable section of the Great Northern line. It derives its name from the tribe of the Hertings, whose capital was situated near a ford on the right bank of the river Lea, at the extremity of the great plain extending from S. to N. 25 miles. In 673 a national synod was held here. And it is again mentioned in 905 as having been rebuilt by Edward the Elder, when he constructed the castle of Hertford to check the incursions of the Danes, who had recently devastated the country. In the reign of John the castle was taken by the barons and Prince Louis of France, and at a subsequent period was granted with the town to John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, and to the queens of Henry IV., Henry V., and Henry VI. Within its walls the illustrious Edward III. kept Jehan II. of France and David of Scotland prisoners. Queen Elizabeth held her court here on several occasions, and resided within the castle, which has undergone so many repairs and alterations that but a small part of the original building is now left standing. The greater part was rebuilt about the time of James I., and modernised at the end of the last century.—The town is irregularly laid out, but the streets are well paved, lighted with gas, and clean. It contains the shire hall, a spacious brick building, situated in the market place, comprising townhall, council chamber, assembly room, grand jury rooms, and other judicial and municipal offices; the new corn exchange and free library, erected on the site of the old butchers' market in Fore-street, a commodious structure roofed with glass, but having a front of Bath stone surmounted by a colossal figure of Ceres,; also the county gaol, union poorhouse, Hertford General Infirmary, two banks, savings-bank, iron foundries, malthouses, breweries, coach-building establishments, literary and scientific institution, with 4,000 volumes, wharves chiefly used for the conveyance of corn and coals by the river Lea, which is here navigable, and so continues as far as London. In the immediate vicinity of the town are brickfields, lime-kilns, rose gardens, and nursery grounds. The trade is confined to the sale and grinding of corn, making of malt, oilcake, &c., besides which there is a large retail trade in supplying the numerous gentry of the surrounding country with commodities from London. The limits of the borough extend through a circuit of about six miles, comprising, according to the census of 1861, 5,168 acres, with a population of 6,769, against 6,605 in 1851. It returns two members to parliament, and is governed by a municipal corporation, consisting of a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 town councillors. The assizes, quarter sessions, elections of borough and county members, county court, sittings of the county and borough magistrates, and of the poor-law guardians, are held, and three newspapers are published, in the town.—For ecclesiastical purposes Hertford forms two parishes, All Saints and St. Andrew's; the rectory of St. John, and the liberties of Little Amwell and Brickenden, being now annexed to the former. The living of All Saints is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. with St. John's rect. £290, in the patron. of the lord chancellor and the Marquis of Townshend alternately. The church is a large cruciform structure of the 14th century, with a square tower, surmounted by a spire at the west end. It has a peal of 10 bells, and was thoroughly repaired in 1840. It contains a marble tablet to the memory of the officers and privates of the 49th (Hertfordshire) regiment who fell in the Crimea. The register dates from 1653. The living of St. Andrew's is a rect.,* val. with St. Mary's rect. and St. Nicholas' vic., £271, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church is a small structure of the 12th century, with a low tower surmounted by a spire. It has a peal of eight bells, and will accommodate about 600 persons. It is intended to rebuild this church on a more extensive plan, so soon as the subscriptions can be collected. The register dates from 1560. The Independents, Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, Baptists, and Roman Catholics have chapels, and the Society of Friends a meeting-house. The Roman Catholic chapel is an ornamental building erected in 1859 on the site of the old Priory, in the rear of Christ's Hospital; this latter building faces the road leading from Hertford to Ware, and has accommodation for 400 boys and 100 girls; it is designed as a nursery for the great establishment in London, and the infirmary is calculated for the reception of 100 children whose health requires especial attention. About two miles from the town is Haileybury College, in which the civil servants of the East India Company were formerly educated, but now converted into an academy conducted on similar principles to the great public schools of Marlborough and Rossall. In Hertford are also the Cowper Testimonial National schools, erected in 1841; Hale's free grammar school; the industrial training college; the free green-coat school of industry, founded in 1784, but rebuilt in 1850 by public subscription; and infant schools for the parishes of All Saints and St. Andrew.—The free public library, which occupies a gallery at the end of the new corn exchange, is open without charge to the inhabitants of and visitors to the town. The Poor-law Union comprises 18 parishes, and the union poorhouse is situated in the town. Hertford is the head of a deanery, and of County Court and superintendent registry districts. The market, which is on Saturday, is one of the largest in the county for corn. Fairs are held on the third Saturday before Easter, on 12th May, 5th July, and 8th Nov.

HERTFORD, a hund. in co. Herts., contains the towns of Hertford and Hoddesdon, and the pars. of Great Amwell, Bayford, Benges, Little Berkhampstead, Broxbourne, Cheshunt, Essendon, Hertingfordbury, Stanstead St. Margaret, Stapleford, Tewin, Wormley, and part of All Saints, comprising 34,410, exclusive of the liberty of Hertford. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeaconry of St. Alban's and diocese of Rochester.

HERTFORDSHIRE, or HERTS, an inland co. of England, situated in the S.E. part of the island, between 51° 36′ and 52° 5′ N. lat., and 0° 13′ E. and 0° 45′ W. long. It is very irregular in form, and of small extent, being only the thirty-fifth shire in England for size, including an area of about 630 square miles, or 393,951 acres. In its greatest length, from Royston in the N.E. to Rickmansworth in the S.W., it extends for near 40 miles, and in its greatest breadth, from Hitchin to Waltham Cross, 26 miles. It is bounded on the N. by Cambridgeshire, E. by Essex, S. by Middlesex, W. by Buckingham, and N.W. by Bedfordshire. Before the Roman invasion, it was inhabited by a British tribe called the Catyeuchlani, mentioned by Ptolemy and Dion, and perhaps partly by the Cassii, whose name Camden identifies with that of the hund. of Cashio. After the subjugation of Britain it formed part of the Roman province of Flavia Cæsariensis, and contained the municipium of Verolamium, and the post, or town ad fines, besides numerous camps and villages where Roman antiquities are frequently turned up. It was crossed in various directions by the three great British ways, Watling, Ermine, and Icknield Streets. The two first, being converted into military roads by the Romans, have continued to the present day, not varying much from the line of the modern roads from London to Dunstable, and from London to Royston. Upon the Saxon conquest of this island, part of the county was appropriated by the East Saxons and part by Mercia. It was several times devastated by the Danes, and in the reign of Alfred they brought their vessels up the Lea to Hertford, but Alfred diverting the course of the river, obliged them to abandon their ships and march across the island to the Severn. More effectually to check the incursions of the Danes, Edward the Elder, the son of Alfred, built Hertford Castle, about 905, and probably also the castle at Bishop Stortford for the same purpose. After his victory at Hastings, William the Conqueror marched northwards, and was met near Berkhampstead by Frederic, Abbot of St. Alban's, whose influence with the Saxon nobles and clergy was such that the Conqueror found it necessary to come to terms by taking an oath before the witenagemote, assembled at Berkhampstead, to govern according to the laws of the realm, as revised by Edward the Confessor. In the reign of John the castle of Hertford was defended for the king against Prince Louis and the barons, but surrendered after a brave defence. In 1312 the nobles confederated against Gaveston and Edward II., and assembled their troops at Wheathampstead, near St. Alban's, at which latter town many ringleaders in the revolt of the peasantry, under Wat Tyler and Jack Straw, were executed. In 1455 St. Alban's was stormed by Richard Duke of York, and the Earls of Salisbury and Warwick, who took the king prisoner. Six years afterwards, the second battle of St. Alban's was fought, in which the Earl of Warwick was slain, and the king restored to his own party. In the civil war of Charles I. Hertford formed one of the associated counties; and it was here that Cromwell, while yet only captain of a troop of horse, captured the high sheriff of Hertfordshire as he was proceeding to St. Alban's to publish the king's proclamation declaring all the parliamentary leaders traitors.—The geographical configuration of the county gives it many natural advantages, both of soil and climate. Being situated on the N. edge of the chalk basin which forms the valley of the Thames, its soil is of various qualities. In the S. part the London clay prevails, succeeded by the plastic clay, and further N., the chalk crops out, forming the continuation of the Chiltern hills. Some of these downs, as Kensworth Hill, on the border of Bedfordshire, rise 908 feet above the sea-level, but on the whole the shire is level, or rather wavy, and being well wooded and tilled, presents a variety of scenery. It is adorned with numerous mansions and thriving plantations, which are generally situated in the higher and drier parts. The climate is mild, and well suited to the growth of fruit and flowers. Apple and cherry orchards and market gardens are met with in sheltered spots, for supply of the London markets, and the florists carry off most of the prizes for roses at the metropolitan flower shows. Although situated within 20 miles of London the county does not partake of the metropolitan character, but is almost wholly agricultural. The chief crops are wheat—the best white being extensively grown—turnips, vegetables, and hay. Cattle, sheep, pigs, and poultry are also reared for the London market. The richest lands occur on the Essex border, along the road from London to Bedford, where the mixture of the chalk, clay, and gravel forms a rich loam; but in the more hilly districts the soil is a cold clay, only recently brought under tillage.—The rivers for the most part belong to the basin of the Thames, except those in the N. part of the county, which flow towards the Ouse. The chief of those falling into the Thames are the Lea, Stort, and Colne, with their affluents, the Maran, or Mimram, Beane, Rib, Quin, Ash, Verlam, or Muse, Gade, and Chess; besides several headsprings of the Thame, another affluent of the Thames, which take their rise in the north-western part of the county, near Tring. The Lea, which rises at Leagrave, in Bedfordshire, traverses the county from W. to E., becoming navigable at Hertford, and after a course of 50 miles joins the Thames at Bromley, near London. The Stort, which is a branch of the Lea, rises in Essex, and for a considerable distance forms the S.E. boundary of the county, being navigable from Bishop Stortford: its whole length is about 21 miles. The Colne rises between Barnet and Elstree, near Hatfield, and pursues a very circuitous course, partly through and partly on the border of the county, sometimes crossing into Middlesex, and finally quits Hertfordshire to form the boundary between Buckinghamshire and Middlesex. Of the smaller streams above mentioned few are navigable, but in their course turn a great number of mills, and several of them afford good sport to the angler. The streams which fall into the Ouse are the Hiz, Oughton, and Pirral. These, rising on the northern slope of the chalk downs, have but a short course in this county, and then enter Bedfordshire. The only other stream of any considerable length is the Rhee, which, rising near Ashwell, joins the Cam. The New River, which is brought to London from springs near Ware, is an artificial cut formed in 1608. Part of its course is through Herts, nearly parallel to the river Lea, from which it has a feeder. The only navigable canal is the Grand Junction, which enters the county on the N., and proceeding in a southerly direction, passes near the towns of Tring, Berkhampstead, Hemel Hempstead, Watford, and Rickmanstead, where it enters Middlesex, following the valley of the Lower Colne till it joins the Thames. There are cuts from the main line to Aylesbury, Wendover, and Watford.—The county is intersected by the main N. road, which passes through the towns of Chipping Barnet, Hatfield, Stevenage, and Baldock, and sends off a branch through St. Alban's and Dunstable, known as the Liverpool road. There is also a main line of road to Cambridge, passing by Waltham Cross and Ware to Puckeridge, where it separates into two branches, one going to Royston, and the other continuing in a straight line. The three great lines of railway, the London and North-Western, Great Northern, and Cambridge section of the Great Eastern, also traverse the county. The North-Western proceeds through the western part of the county, nearly in the line of the Grand Junction canal, throwing off branch lines to Rickmansworth and Uxbridge to join the Great Western (not yet completed), to Aylesbury, to St. Alban's, and to Dunstable, which last only touches the northern border; the Great Northern passes through the centre of the county, and has stations at all the principal towns, with branch lines to Hertford and Hitchin; the Cambridge section of the Great Eastern passes through the eastern part of the county, and has branch lines to Hertford and Buntingford. The three Grand Trunk lines are connected by the Hertford, Luton, and Dunstable line, which joins the Great Eastern at Hertford, the Great Northern at Welwyn, and the London and North-Western at Luton.—Although furnished with such abundant means of communication, both with London and all parts of the country, Hertfordshire is not a manufacturing county—the only manufactures of any importance are straw-plait, silk, and paper. In the first about 5,000 persons are employed, including bleachers, cleaners, Brazilian hat makers, and dealers; in the second about 500; and in the third—viz. paper—about 350. There are a large number of millers, and a considerable business is done in malting, brewing, tanning, currying, brick and tile making, parchment bleaching, type-founding, pipe and chimney-pot making, sail-weaving, and coach-building. The amount of savings by the working classes, as tested by the returns of the savings-banks made to parliament in 1862, was but small compared with the population, being only £138,759; yet there can be no doubt of the general prosperity of the county, chiefly owing to the number of resident gentry. The population are principally of English extraction.—The county returns three members to parliament for the shire, and two for the borough of Hertford, which is the county town and place of election. It formerly returned two for St. Alban's, but this latter town was disfranchised for bribery at the late elections. The polling-places are Hertford, Stevenage, Buntingford, Bishop Stortford, Hatfield, Hemel Hempstead, and Hoddesdon. The county is governed by a lord-lieutenant, and a body of deputy-lieutenants and county magistrates. It is included in the Home circuit, and within the London bankruptcy jurisdiction. The assizes and quarter sessions are held at Hertford, except for the hund. of Cashio and liberty of St. Alban's, which has a separate commission of peace. Besides the boroughs of Hertford and St. Alban's, the county contains 15 market towns—viz. Ashwell, Baldock, Barnet, Berkhampstead, Bishop Stortford, Hatfield, Hemel Hempstead, Hitchin, Hoddesdon, Royston, Tring, Ware, Watford, with Buntingford and Rickmansworth; but the markets of these two last have fallen into disuse. The other considerable towns are—Cheshunt, Welwyn, Stevenage, King's Langley, Braughing, Offley, Sawbridgeworth, and Hadham. For civil purposes the county is divided into 8 hundreds, comprising 130 parishes and townships, and into 13 Poor-law Unions, parts of which extend into other adjoining counties. There are four coroners for the county, with separate divisions—viz. Hertford, Hitchin, Hemel Hempstead, and St. Alban's. County courts are held in Barnet, Bishop Stortford, Hertford, Hitchin, Waltham, and Watford. For ecclesiastical purposes it forms the archdeaconry of St. Alban's, in the bishopric of Rochester and province of Canterbury, and is divided into 12 rural deaneries. The county constabulary consists of a chief constable, 3 superintendents, 9 inspectors, and 78 constables, maintained at an annual cost of about £8,000.—Some of the principal seats are—Cashiobury Park, of the Earl of Essex; Brocket Hall, of Viscount Palmerston; Hatfield House, of the Marquis of Salisbury; Ashridge House, of Earl Brownlow; Ball's Park, of Marquis Townshend; Camfield, of Baron Dimsdale; Gorhambury House, of the Earl of Verulam; Great Hyde Hall, of the Earl of Rowden; Grove Park, of the Earl of Clarendon; Knebworth House, of Sir Edward Lytton Bulwer-Lytton, Bart.; Marchmont House, of the Dowager Lady Cooper; Oakhill, of Lord Faversham; Aspenden Hall, of Henry Lushington, Esq.; Bedwell Park, of Sir Culling E. Eardley, Bart.; Beechwood, of Sir Thomas G. S. Sebright, Bart.; Broxbourne Bury, G. J. Bosanquet, Esq., besides numerous other seats of gentlemen and wealthy merchants, which greatly enhance the beauty of the scenery of this county. The Roman and British antiquities of Hertfordshire are numerous. Besides the sites of Verulamium and Ad Fines, already mentioned, there is a large camp on Wilbury Hill, near Baldock, covering 7 acres, and surrounded by a rampart and ditch, which is 5 feet high on the W. side. In the same part of the county, at Caldecote and Ashwell, numerous Roman antiquities have been found, including funereal urns filled with charred bones, glass lacrymatories, pateræ of fine red earthenware, fibulæ, rings, and a great variety of silver coins. At Rockley Wood, near Royston, a small bronze figure of Mars, and some thin plates with figures and inscriptions upon them, have been dug up. Coins have also been found at Braughing, Cheshunt, Bishop Stortford, and Hemel Hempstead. The most interesting of the ancient buildings are St. Alban's and Waltham abbeys, recently restored; the priories of Hitchin and Ware, of which there are some remains; the palaces of Hatfield and King's Langley, the latter built by Henry III.; and the castles of Hertford, Berkhampstead, Bishop Stortford, and the Anstie, of which last the earthworks alone remain.

HERTINGFORDBURY, a par. in the hund. and co. of Hertford, 2 miles S.W. of Hertford by the Hertford and Dunstable section of the Great Northern railway. It is situated on the river Maran, and was given by William the Conqueror to Philip De Valoines. The manor was subsequently held as part of the duchy of Lancaster from the reign of Edward III. to that of Charles I. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture and woodland. The village is small and the inhabitants engaged in agriculture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £555. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £473, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with tombs of the Cowpers of Panshanger and Hertingfordbury House. The charities produce about £100 per annum, distributed to the poor.

HESKETH, a par. in the hund. of Leyland, co. Lancaster, 9 miles N.E. of Ormskirk. It is joined with Becconsall, and includes the port of Hesketh Bank, being a subport to Preston. The vil. is situated near the junction of the rivers Douglas and Ribble. In 1720 the sea broke in between Hesketh and Cockerham, overwhelming a large tract of land. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £275. The charities consist of a share of those belonging to Croxton.

HESKET-IN-THE-FOREST, a par. in the ward of Leath, co. Cumberland, 9 miles S.E. of Carlisle, its post town, and 9 N.W. of Penrith. It is situated on the river Eden, and is intersected by the Lancaster and Carlisle railway. The par., which is of large extent, comprising above 10,000 acres, contains the vil. of Armathwaite, and the tnshps. of Itonfield, Petteril-Crooks, Plumpton-street, with Nether and Upper Hesket, in Inglewood Forest, and the hmlt. of Calthwaite. It is a polling place for the eastern division of the county. At Barrock in this parish is a fine variety of clay well adapted for the manufacture of porcelain. The living is a perpet cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £150. There is also a district church at Armathwaite, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £50. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a modern structure, with an open turret containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum, chiefly endowment of the parochial schools. Here is a lake called Tarn Wadling, famed for its production of the finest carp.

HESKET NEWMARKET, a market town in the tnshp. of Caldbeck-Haltcliffe, par. of Caldbeck, and ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 12 miles S.W. of Carlisle, and 297 N.N.W. of London. It is a small town of modern date, near the Lancashire railway, situated in a secluded spot among the mountains, on the bank of the river Caldew, which here dashes over the Caldbeck Falls. The surrounding district is rich in mineral wealth, especially lead, copper, molybenda, and manganese, and at Carrickbeck are smelting works for the lead ore. Here is an old hall, the seat of the Lawsons, and a chapel belonging to the Society of Friends. Near the town is a petrifying spring, issuing from the rock. Market day is Friday. Fairs for cattle are held on every Friday from the 1st May till Whitsuntide, and for sheep on the last Thursday in August, and the second in October.

HESKET, UPPER AND NETHER, a tnshp. in the par. of Hesket-in-the-Forest, Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 7½ miles S.E. of Carlisle. It includes the two considerable villages of Upper and Nether Hesket, situated on the road from Penrith to Carlisle, and is within the limits of Inglewood Forest. The Lancaster and Carlisle railway passes in the vicinity.

HESKIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Eccleston, hund. of Leyland, co. Lancaster, 5 miles S.W. of Chorley. The village is small and chiefly agricultural.

HESLE, a vil. in the par. of Harworth, co. Notts, 1 mile N.E. of Blyth, and 2 miles N.W. of Bawtry, on the river Idle.

HESLEDEN, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Halton-Gill, par. of Arncliffe, West Riding co. York, 4 miles E. of Skipton, and 9 N.E. of Settle, near the river Wharfe.

HESLERTON, EAST, a tnshp. in the par. of Heslerton, wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Sherburn station, and 10 N.E. of Malton, its post town. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of West Heslerton, in the dioc. of York, The chapel-of-ease is a small ancient structure, with a turret and bell. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Sir Tatton Sykes, Bart., is lord of the manor, and principal landowner. A new burial-ground has recently been formed.

HESLERTON, a par. in the wap. of Buckrose, East Riding of co. York, 9 miles N.E. of New Malton, and 1½ mile from the station on the Malton and Scarborough railway. It is a small agricultural par., and contains the tnshps. of East and West Heslerton. The tithes have been commuted for land and a money payment. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of East Heslerton annexed, val. £465, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone structure, with a turret containing two bells. The interior of the church contains a font of Caen stone, and an oaken canopy presented in 1855 by Lord Downe; there are some marble tablets of the Foulis family, also a marble monument of Sir Christopher Sykes, Bart. There is a National school for both sexes, supported by voluntary contributions, also a Sunday-school. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship. Heslerton House is the principal residence. Viscount Downe is lord of the manor.

HESLETON, MONK. See MONK HESLETON, co. Durham.

HESLEY-HURST, a tnshp. in the par. of Rothbury, W. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 3½ miles S.E. of Rothbury. Coal and ironstone are found here. The land is chiefly pasture, and the soil clayey.

HESLEY THORPE, a vil. in the par. of Ecclesfield, West Riding of co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Rotherham.

HESLINGTON ST. LAWRENCE, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Lawrence, wap. of Ouse, East Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of York. It adjoins the par. of Heslington St. Paul.

HESLINGTON ST. PAUL, a par. in the wap. of Ouse and Derwent, East Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of York, its post town. It is a small village situated on the E. side of the vale of the Ouse. In 1855 several relics of great antiquity were found in a gravel pit a short distance from the village, consisting of bracelets, gold rings, and two stone coffins. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £63, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a small structure, with a tower containing two bells. The charities consist of a hospital for 8 aged men and one woman, founded by Sir Thomas Hesketh, Knight, in 1608. Here is school for both sexes, erected in memory of the late Yarburgh Yarburgh, Esq. The Wesleyans and Independents have each a place of worship. The principal residence is Heslington Hall, formerly the seat of the Hesketh family, and built in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. Mrs. Lloyd is lady of the manor.

HESSAY, a tnshp. in the par. of Monkton-Moor, co. York, 2½ miles from Monkton-Moor, and 5 N.W. of York. It is a station on the York and Harrogate section of the North-Eastern railway. Here is a parochial school and a chapel for Wesleyans.

HESSENFORD, a vil. in the par. of St. Germans, hund. of East, co. Cornwall, 3 miles W. of St. Germans, and 18 S. of Launceston. It is situated on the river Seaton, near Lynher-creek, and is chiefly inhabited by fishermen. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £100, in the patron. of the Incumbent of St. Germans.

HESSETT, or HEDGESSET, a par. in the hund. of Thedwestry, co. Suffolk, 5½ miles S.E. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town, 8 N.W. of Stowmarket, and 2½ S.E. of Thurston railway station. It was given by Earl Ulfketel to Bury Abbey, and subsequently belonged to the family of Bacon, ancestors of the celebrated Lord Bacon. The land is chiefly arable, and the surface level. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £344 12*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £255. The church, dedicated to St. Ethelbert, has a tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains some stained windows, and a small chapel in the N. aisle containing a monument to Colonel Aldrich; it also contains tombs of the Bacons, who built the church. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum.

HESSLE, a par. in the hund. of Kingston-upon-Hull, East Riding co. York, 5 miles W. of Hull, and 6 from Brough. It is a station on the Selby, Hull, and Leeds branch of the North-Eastern railway. The village is situated on the river Humber, at the ferry to Barton, and was formerly held by the Stutvilles, Wakes, &c. There are two whiting manufactories. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £303, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £126, of which £8 goes to Chamberlayne's hospital and school. There is a National school for both sexes, and a chapel for Wesleyans.

HESSLE. See HASLE, co. York.

HESTERCOMBE, a tythg. in the par. of Kingston, hund. of Taunton, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N. of Taunton. There is no village.

HESTHOLME, a hmlt. in the par. of Muncaster, co. Cumberland, 3 miles N.E. of Ravenglass, and 44 S.W. of Carlisle, near the river Eske.

HESTON, a par. and suburban vil. in the hund. of Isleworth, co. Middlesex, 1½ mile N. of Hounslow, its post town and railway station. The par., which is of considerable extent, contains the hmlts. of Cranford, Lampton, Sutton, Scrattage, North Hyde, and part of the town of Hounslow. It has long been famed for its production of wheat, the soil being extremely fertile. The village is irregularly built, but contains many good houses and villas. In the vicinity are several brick-fields, and a manufactory for oil of vitriol. The tithes were commuted for land, under an Enclosure Act, in 1813. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of London, val. £654, in the patron. of the bishop. In addition to the parish church there are two district churches—viz. at Hounslow, and St. Mary's at Spring Grove, the livings of both which are perpet. curs. The parish church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is a very antique flint-built structure, and has been recently enlarged. It has an octagonal font, and a tomb of Sir J. Banks; also a brass, bearing date 1560. Here is a commodious National school, capable of accommodating 120 boys and 130 girls; also a chapel schoolroom for 200. At North Hyde there is a Roman Catholic chapel and Orphanage. The principal residence is Osterley House, the seat of the Dowager Countess of Jersey. It is a square red brick building, situated in a park, and was built by Sir Thomas Gresham, founder of the Royal Exchange, to whom the manor was given by Queen Elizabeth. A fair is held on the 1st May.

HEST-WITH-SLYNE, a tnshp. in the par. of Bolton-le-Sands, hund. of Lonsdale, co. Lancaster, 3 miles N. of Lancaster. The Lancaster and Carlisle railway has a station at Hest Bank, a little watering place commanding extensive views. The distance across the quicksands to Kent's Bank is 11 miles, fordable at low water.

HESWALL, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 3½ miles from Great Neston, its post town, and 5 W. of the Spital railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Dee, and commands a view of the estuary of that river, and of the Flintshire coast. The par. contains the tnshps. of Heswall-cum-Oldfield and Gayton. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture. About half the land is in cultivation, producing good crops of wheat; the remainder is common and waste. Heswall Common rises to the height of 475 feet above the level of the sea. The substratum is red sandstone, which is quarried for building purposes. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £294. The church is an ancient structure, with a tower containing three bells. In the interior of the church are several monuments to the Glegg family. The chancel and tower of the church are of greater antiquity than the body of it. Here is a parochial school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school. Arthur Devonport and William Lloyd, Esqs., are lords of the manor and chief landowners.

HESWALL-WITH-OLDFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Heswall, lower div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 6 miles S.W. of Birkenhead.

HETHE. See HEATH, co. Oxford.

HETHEL, a par. in the hund. of Humbleyard, co. Norfolk, 4 miles E. of Wymondham, its post town, 7 S.W. of Norwich, and 3 W. of Swainsthorpe railway station. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated near the Norwich and Brandon railway. The houses present a straggling appearance, but the land is well cultivated. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £405. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small structure, with a square embattled tower containing one bell. In the chancel is a monument to Myles Branthwaite. There is a National school, supported by weekly payments of the children and voluntary contributions. A short distance from the church is "Hethel Thorn," which is said to have existed since the reign of King John.

HETHERSETT, a par. in the hund. of Humbleyard, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N.E. of Wymondham, and 6½ from Norwich, by the Norwich and Wells section of the Great Eastern railway, on which it is a section. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the road from London to Norwich, through Newmarket. Petty sessions are held here on the first Monday in each month. The land is chiefly arable, with a very small proportion of pasture and woodland. It includes the manor of Castle Cantelose, or Canteloff, which formerly constituted a distinct parish, with its own church, dedicated to All Saints, the site of which is still called the old churchyard. The living is a rect.* with that of Canteloff, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £651, in the patron. of Caius College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Remigius, is an ancient structure, with a lofty embattled tower, surmounted by a small spire. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have places of worship. There is a National school, with a small endowment.

HETHERSGILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk Linton, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 6 miles E. of Longton, on a branch of the river Line.

HETT, a tnshp. in the par. of Merrington, S.E. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 4 miles S. of Durham, near the river Wear. In the vicinity is a paper-mill, and a freestone quarry at Broom Hill.

HETTON-LE-HOLE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Houghton-le-Spring, N.W. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 6 miles N.E. of Durham, and 8 S.W. of Sunderland. It is a station on the Hartlepool and Sunderland section of the North-Eastern line. It contains the vils. of Lyons and Easington, with the tnshps. of Great and Little Eppleton. Here are some extensive collieries belonging to the Hetton Coal Company. The village is a polling-place for the northern division of the county. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £280, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which was built in 1832, is a stone edifice, with a campanile turret. Here is a National school for both sexes, chiefly supported by the Hetton Coal Company. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and the Wesleyan New Connexion, have each a chapel. There is a reading-room, with library attached. Hetton Hall is the principal residence. Near the road from Eppleton to Hetton is a tumulus, formed of small stones, at the top of which is a small oblong cavity, called the Fairies' Cradle.

HETTON-WITH-BOARDLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Burnsall, E. div. of the wap of Staincliff, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N. of Skipton. It is situated on the river Aire. The lands are principally rich pasture.

HEUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Stamfordham, N.E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 11 miles N.E. of Hexham, and 1 mile N.E. of Stamfordham. The soil is loamy. The village is considerable. Sir John Edward Swinburne, Bart., is lord of the manor.

HEUGHHEAD, a hmlt. in the par. of Strathdon, co. Aberdeen, Scotland.

HEUGH TOWN, in St. Mary's, Scilly Islands, of which it is the capital, co. Cornwall. It is situated on a sandy peninsula between St. Mary's Pool and Port Cressa, and has a small pier, about 400 feet long. The town is small, consisting chiefly of one crooked street of stone houses, roughly built. It contains a prison, court-house, steward's house, with several shops and inns. The church stands at Old Town. On Heugh Hill, a short distance from the town, stands Star Castle Fort and the barracks. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter.

HEVENINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 7 miles N.W. of Yoxford, its post town, 6 N.E. of Framlingham, and 5 S.W. of Halesworth. The village is situated near the river Blythe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £550, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is an ancient structure, with an embattled tower and an elaborately carved roof, and is dedicated to St. Margaret. The parochial charities produce about £76 per annum. There is a daily school, endowed with an annuity of £10 from the parish feoffment funds, and which is also supported by Lady Huntingfield and the rector. Heveningham Hall, the seat of Lord Huntingfield, who is lord of the manor, is a large mansion, situated in the midst of a well-wooded and extensive park. The hall has a Grecian front upwards of 300 feet in length, the centre of which is adorned with Corinthian columns. The interior is fitted up in a costly manner, and contains a fine collection of pictures, chiefly of the Dutch and Flemish schools. Here are the remains of Lord Hunsdon's seat, with an oak upwards of 30 feet in diameter, where Queen Elizabeth visited to enjoy the chase.

HEVER, a par. in the hund. of Somerden, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 3 miles S.E. of Edenbridge, its railway station and post town, and 9 S.W. of Sevenoaks. It is situated on the river Eden, and formerly belonged to William-de-Hever, who built the castle in the reign of Edward III.; it afterwards passed to the Cobhams, and was purchased by Sir Geoffrey Boleyn, a wealthy mercer of London, and at one time lord mayor of that city, and grandfather of the unfortunate Anne Boleyn, wife of Henry VIII. The castle was the birthplace of Anne; and it was here that the king passed some of his happiest days. The estate subsequently became a possession of the crown, and was granted, after her divorce, to Anne of Cleves, who made the castle almost constantly her home, and died here in 1557. The castle, although built in the 14th century, is still in a very excellent state of preservation, and is surrounded by a moat. The inner buildings form a quadrangle, comprising the recess used by Henry VIII. for a council-room, Anne Boleyn's room, and an extensive staircase leading to the various apartments of the castle. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £600. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £372. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a spired tower, containing five bells. In the interior of the church is a tomb to Sir Thomas Boleyn; also brasses, bearing date from 1399, and tombs of the Cobham and Waldo families. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. There is a free school.

HEVERSHAM, a par. and tnshp. in the ward and bar. of Kendal, co. Westmoreland. The parish consists of 18,804 acres, measured over a very diversified surface of hill and dale, limestone being the prevailing rock, and supplying quarries both for building stone and quicklime. It rises, in the mountainous mass of Whitbarrow, to 700 feet above the sea. In the lower part are extensive peat-mosses, which a general enclosure made about sixty years ago has been rapidly reducing to good tillage land. Oats and green crops form the general produce. The air is remarkably pure, and the climate temperate, although rainy from the influence of the sea and mountains. The population amounts to 4,000, quite agricultural, except a small part employed in mills for bobbins, gunpowder, and sacking, on the streams of the Kent, Peasy, and Bela. These, together with the Pool, form the principal waters, of which the Pool and Kent are subject to tides, running up the latter as far as Leven's bridge. The inhabitants are much scattered in solitary houses or small hamlets, with the exception of Milnthorpe, a small town which contains about 1,000 inhabitants. It was formerly a seaport, but its importance having much declined, was nearly destroyed by the formation of the Lancaster and Kendal canal, which runs a winding course through 4 miles of the parish, and was finally ruined by the construction of the Lancaster and Carlisle railway, which takes nearly a parallel direction, having a second-class station about 1 mile distant E. from Milnthorpe. There are some remains of antiquity in barrows near Sedgwick, and a camp, seemingly Danish, at Hincaster, and another Roman one upon the crest of the hill called Helm. There are seven tnshps., namely, Heversham-cum-Milnthorpe, Crossthwaite-with-Lyth, Levens, Preston Richard, Stainton, Hincaster Sedgwick, contributing altogether six churchwardens to the parish church at Heversham. Of these the greater part of Heversham-cum-Milnthorpe, Preston Richard, and Hincaster form the district of the Vicar of Heversham; Crossthwaite and Lyth the chapelry of Crossthwaite; Levens the chapelry of Levens; Stainton and Sedgwick the chapelry of Crosscrake, and the remainder of Heversham-cum-Milnthorpe the chapelry of Milnthorpe. All are well provided with schools for boys and girls, and their average endowment is about £150 per annum. The principal residences are, Levens Hall, a specimen of later Tudor architecture, Heaves, Eversley, Summerlands, Sedgwick House, besides some interesting old halls now become farmhouses, as Lower Levens Hall, Heversham Hall, Cowmire Hall, Hincaster Hall. The township contains the parish church, amid the small cluster of houses forming the hamlet of Heversham. Its acreage is 2,297, and population 1,500, of which about 500 are in the vicar's district. The church, containing a tower, porch, nave and aisles, and chancel and aisles, is an ancient structure, exhibiting specimens of Norman, perpendicular, and early. In the latter style is an E. window filled with stained glass by Warrington. It has been much improved during the last twenty years, and has received a new pulpit, font, reredos, and organ. There is some uncertainty as to whether it be dedicated to St. Peter or St. Mary. The benefice is a vic.,* of which the income is derived from land commuted for tithes at the time of the fore-mentioned enclosure in 1803. Its present net amount (including estimated value of the house) is £625. Belonging to the parish are several charities, amounting in the whole to £104 annually. There is also a grammar school, founded by the Wilsons of Dallam Tower in 1613. It has exhibitions to Oxford and Cambridge, and shares in others with some other schools. The master's stipend (including the estimated rent of his house) is about £90 per annum. Bishop Watson was educated there by his father, the master, and in conjunction with another schoolfellow, Preston, Bishop of Ferns, helped to restore the school building, which has since also been much improved. It has produced one senior and two second wranglers, besides lower prizemen.

HEVINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of South Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 8 miles N. of Norwich, its post town, and 3 S. of Aylsham. The village is extensive but irregularly built, being situated near the Great Eastern railway. It was anciently the site of a palace belonging to the bishops of Norwich, no trace of which now remains. The land is chiefly arable, but there is a considerable extent of wood and plantation, and about 300 acres of heath. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £540. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £459. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, has a fine porch and a square embattled tower. The interior, which has been restored, contains an antique font. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum, with 159 acres of land, of which five acres belong to a free school founded in 1715 by John Hall, for ten children. Here is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. Rippon Hall is the principal residence. — Scott, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HEWBY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Weeton, and par. of Harewood, West Riding co. York, 4 miles E. of Otley. It is situated on the river Wharfe.

HEWELSFIELD, a par. in the hund. of St. Briavel's, co. Gloucester, 7 miles from Coleford, its post town, 6 N.E. of Chepstow, and 2½ from Woolaston station on the South Wales railway. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The parish is bounded on the W. by the river Wye, which separates it from the county of Monmouth. It includes the extra-parochial place of Brockwear Common. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £131 1s. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £131. The church is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing eight bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. Henry Peele, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HEWICK-BRIDGE and HEWICK-COPT, tnshps. in the par. and lib. of Ripon, West Riding co. York, 2 miles E. of Ripon.

HEWISH, a hmlt. in the par. of Yatton, co. Somerset, 6 miles N. of Axbridge, near the river Yeo.

HEWISH, a tythg. in the par. of Crewkerne, co. Somerset, 2 miles from Crewkerne.

HEWISH, or HUISH, a par. in the hund. of Swanborough, co. Wilts, 3 miles N.W. of Pewsey, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Marlborough. The par. is of small extent and wholly agricultural. It originally formed part of the possessions of the Somerset family, but was given by Sarah, Duchess of Somerset, in 1690, for the endowment of a college at Froxfield, for the residence and maintenance of 20 widows of clergymen, and 30 widows of laymen. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £185. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £178. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a plain edifice. There is a day school. In the vicinity are numerous barrows, also an ancient camp. The trustees of Froxfield College are lords of the manor.

HEWORTH, a parochial chplry. in the par. of Jarrow, E. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 3 miles S.W. of Jarrow, 2 S.E. of Gateshead, its post town, 3 S.E. of Newcastle, and half a mile W. of the Pelaw railway station. It is situated near the river Tyne, and on the Darlington and Brandling Junction railway. Heworth was made a separate ecclesiastical par. by an order in Council in 1843. There are several shipyards, wherein are constructed vessels of large burthen; also copperas works and paper mills. The inhabitants are chiefly employed as shipbuilders, potters, colliers, glass-blowers, &c. The soil is clay, and the land is chiefly arable. The neighbourhood abounds in coal-pits. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £148. The church, which was erected in 1822, is a stone edifice, with a square embattled tower containing one bell. The interior of the church contains a monument to 92 persons killed by the explosion of Felling colliery in 1812. Here is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. There is a mechanics' institution. The Dean and Chapter of Durham are lords of the manor, and principal landowners.

HEWORTH, a vil. and tnshp. in the pars. of St. Cuthbert and St. Giles, wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 1 mile N.E. of York. The village is small, and a portion of the inhabitants are employed in market-gardening. Here is a bed of excellent clay, which is used in the productions of bricks, tiles, &c. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Heworth Retreat, a private lunatic asylum, is in this neighbourhood. George Hornby, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HEWSON, a hmlt. in the par. of Cotheridge, co. Worcester, 4 miles W. of Worcester.

HEXGREAVE, a hmlt. in the par. of Southwell, co. Nottingham, 4 miles N.W. of Southwell. It was formerly held by the archbishops of York, who had a palace in the adjoining tnshp. of Southwell. On a hill in this tnshp. are traces of a Roman camp, covering an area of 40 acres, where military implements, coins, &c., have been found.

HEXHAM, a par., post, and market town in the S. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 40 miles E. of Carlisle, 20 W. of Newcastle, and 283 N.N.W. of London. It is a station on the Carlisle and Newcastle railway. There is also a branch line of the Border Counties railway, extending 26 miles up the valley of the North Tyne to the Belling, where it joins the Edinburgh and Hawick railway. This extensive parish is situated near the southern bank of the river Tyne, which is crossed about half a mile distant from Hexham by a stone bridge spanned by nine arches, with two additional ones in reserve on the S. side in case of flood. A suspension bridge was also constructed in 1826 over the South Tyne, near the western ferry, at an expense of £5,000; and a bridge of two arches has been recently erected at Gilligate, where the Cowgarth and Cockshaw burns unite their streams. Hexham contains the tnshps. of High Quarter, Lower Quarter, Middle Quarter, West Quarter, and Hexham. It was called Halgustald and Hextoldesham by the Saxons, from the neighbouring streams Halgut and Hextol, from the latter of which its present name is derived. It was made the seat of a bishopric in 674 by St. Wilfrid, and being united to Lindisfarne in 883, eventually became a part of the see of Durham. Tilferth, the last bishop, was expelled from his bishopric in 821 by the Danes, who, about fifty years afterwards, again plundered the town and destroyed the monastery of Hexham, which, according to Richard of Hexham, was the most beautiful and magnificent ecclesiastical edifice at that time in England. In addition to the Abbey church there are said to have formerly been two parish churches—viz. St. Peter's and St. Mary's; of the latter considerable remains were brought to light a few years ago, on the rebuilding of some houses. The priory was refounded in 1113 by Archbishop Thomas of York, for Augustine canons, and Hexham, together with Holme, was appropriated to the endowment of a prebendal stall in the cathedral of York. The town and monastery were several times plundered by the Scots under David I. and David II., on one of which occasions the latter monarch was taken prisoner by Sir John Copeland, then sheriff of Northumberland, at the battle of Nevill's Cross. In 1463 the decisive battle of Hexham was fought on the plains near the town between the Yorkists and Lancastrians. In the reign of Henry VIII., the last Prior of Hexham, having been involved in the insurrection called the Pilgrimage of Grace, was hanged at the gate of the monastery. In the reign of Elizabeth, Hexhamshire was transferred to the crown by the Archbishop of York in exchange for other lands, and was then annexed to the county of Northumberland, having previously possessed all the rights and privileges of a county palatine, which, with the jura regalia, had been confirmed by Edward I. In 1761 a fearful riot took place here, which was not quelled until 48 persons had been killed and 300 wounded.—The Vale of the Tyne, in which Hexham is situated, is diversified with well cultivated fields, shrubberies, and pleasure grounds, and is remarkable for producing earlier crops than the surrounding district. A considerable portion of the land belongs to the Commissioners of Greenwich Hospital. The greater part of the inhabitants reside in the town, and are chiefly engaged in the manufactures of stuffs, shoes, hats, leather, and gloves—which last was once the staple trade, but has somewhat declined of late years. There are besides a large iron and brass foundry, and two breweries.—The town of Hexham, not being incorporated, is governed by the local magistrates and the rural police. It is a polling-place for the S. division of the county. Petty sessions are held in the court-house the first Tuesday in every month for the Hexham division of Tyndale ward. County courts are held about the middle of each month at the court-house, and the board of guardians meet every alternate Tuesday. Quarter sessions are held at midsummer. Courts baron for minor debts, copyhold claims, &c., are held quarterly.—The town is lighted with gas, partially paved, and well supplied with water conveyed from a considerable distance into two reservoirs. Under direction of the Board of Health, very extensive drainage and water supply for the town are at present being constructed at great expense. A new townhall and covered corn-market are about to be erected to the S.W. of the market-place, and a new street adjoining them is in contemplation. The town comprises several narrow and irregularly built streets—Battle Hill, Hencotes, and Priest Popple forming the principal thoroughfares. The market-place, which is spacious, is situated near the centre of the town. It contains three branch banks, a savings-bank, mechanics' institution, dispensary, and a neat but commodious market-house, with a piazza. In the vicinity of the town are extensive market-gardens, yielding considerable quantities of fruit and vegetables, also some large nursery gardens.—The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, and has lately been increased in value by a gift of tithes from the patron, and a grant from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, making its val. near £200. The church, which is dedicated to St. Andrew, is a spacious cruciform structure, with a tower rising from the intersection to the height of 100 feet. It is part of the conventual church of the monastery, built on the site of St. Wilfred's Cathedral, and partially destroyed by the Scots in 1296. The choir is separated from the transepts by a richly-carved screen, which is ornamented in the upper part with an allegorical painting of the Dance of Death. The church also contains a gallery of oak, beautifully carved, beneath which are three stalls highly enriched with tabernacle work; an oratory, or shrine, exquisitely ornamented with foliated arches, tracery, and figures, supposed to have been built by Prior Richard of Hexham; a "frid stool," or sanctuary seat for criminals; a recumbent figure on an altar-tomb, supposed to be that of Prior Richard, besides numerous other monuments. In the town is a Scotch church, a Roman Catholic chapel, and several places of worship belonging to the Independents, Wesleyans, and Dissenting bodies. There is also a lectureship here, in the patronage of the Mercers' Company, London. John of Hexham, a monkish historian; Bate, a learned friar; Hewson, the anatomist; and Richardson, the poet, were natives of this place. The parochial charities produce about £100 16*s.* 3*d.*, a portion of which goes to the apprenticing of poor boys. Queen Elizabeth's Grammar School is situated at Bank Head, and is regulated by a decree of the High Court of Chancery, passed in 1827. It is endowed with an annuity of £25, and with a residence for the master. It is for the instruction of all boys born in this parish, at a fixed charge of 7*s.* 6*d.* per quarter. The subscription school, formerly held in a building at Skinnersburn, has been removed to a range of buildings on the Seal, at the W. side of the town. This is an extensive open space of ground, intersected by public walks affording a view of the surrounding scenery. Wentworth Blackett Beaumont, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Market day is Tuesday, and a cattle mart is held on alternate Tuesdays from October to Christmas. Fairs are held on the 6th August for cattle, lambs, &c., and on the 9th November for horses, cattle, &c.

HEXHAMSHIRE, now South Tindale ward, co. Northumberland.

HEXTELLS, a hmlt. in the par. of Ronton, co. Stafford, 4 miles W. of Stafford.

HEXTHORPE. See BALBY, co. York.

HEXTON, a par. in the hund. of Cashio and lib. of St. Alban's, co. Herts, 5 miles N.W. of Hitchin. It was given by Sexi, the Dane, to St. Alban's Abbey, and is mentioned in Domesday Survey as Hegastanestone. After the Dissolution it was given by Henry VIII. to the Lees. The surface is hilly and the land chiefly arable. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The ancient road Icknield Street passes through the parish, and at Ravensburgh Castle is a large Danish encampment covering 12 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £90. The church, dedicated to St. Faith, was almost entirely rebuilt, at the cost of £3,000, by Mr. Lantour, and has a chapel with tombs. There is a small village school. Many gold and silver coins of the Romans, Saxons, and Danes have been found here.

HEYBRIDGE, a par. in the hund. of Thurstable, co. Essex, 1 mile N.E. of Maldon, its post town. The village is situated on the N. bank of the river Blackwater, near its junction with the Chelmer, and is connected with Maldon, of which it forms a suburb, by a raised causeway constructed prior to the reign of Henry II. In the Saxon times it was called Tidwaldintune, and was given by King Athelstane to St. Paul's Cathedral, in London. Its present name appears to have been derived from the construction of the five-arched bridge over the Blackwater, in the reign of Henry VI. Since the construction of the Chelmer navigation, which passes through this parish, the village has greatly increased in trade and extent of population. Malting is largely carried on, and there are extensive iron-foundries and factories for the manufacture of agricultural implements. Salt-works were established here by a company some years ago, at an expense of £20,000. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £159, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, London, who are impropriators. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a plain ancient structure situated on the strand opposite Maldon, and at high tides is washed by the sea. There are places of worship for Baptists and Independents. The parochial charities produce about £33 per annum. A fair is held on Whit-Tuesday.

HEYDON, a par. in the hund. of South Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 14 miles N.W. of Norwich, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Aylsham. The village is small, but pleasantly situated on a branch of the river Wensum. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The road from Norwich to Holt runs through the eastern part of the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £303 10*s*. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Irmingland, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £290. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a noble structure, with a lofty embattled tower surmounted with pinnacles at the angles, and containing six bells. It contains an altar-tomb of black marble to the memory of Erasmus Earle, serjeant-at-law to the Protector Cromwell. There is a National school. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. Headon Hall, the principal residence, is an Elizabethan mansion erected in 1584. It has been restored and much improved of late, and is situated in the midst of a wooded park of 400 acres. W. E. L. Bulwer, Esq., is lord of the manor, and possesses nearly the whole of the parish. On the exterior of the S. wall of the church a peculiar variety of fern grows.

HEYDON. See HEDON, co. York.

HEYFORD, LOWER, or AT-BRIDGE, a par. in the hund. of Ploughley, co. Oxford, 6 miles N. of Woodstock, and 6 N.W. of Bicester. It is situated on the Oxford canal and the river Cherwell, which bounds the parish on the W. It includes the hmlt. of Calcutt. The land is chiefly arable. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under an Act of Enclosure in 1801. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £496, in the patron. of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is a school with a small endowment.

HEYFORD, NETHER, a par. in the hund. of Nobottle Grove, co. Northampton, 2¼ miles S.E. of the Weedon railway station, its post town, 6 S.E. of Daventry, and 6 S.W. of Northampton. It is situated on the river Nen and the Grand Junction canal. The North-Western railway and the ancient Watling Street pass in the vicinity. There are some extensive smelting-works belonging to the Northampton Iron Works. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £152. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has a square tower containing a clock and four bells. The interior of the church contains the tomb of Judge Morgan, who pronounced sentence on Lady Jane Grey, and the brass of a Mauntill, bearing date 1497. The parochial charities produce about £145 per annum, of which £105 goes to Bliss's school. There are places of worship for the Primitive Methodists and Baptists. Sir Charles Knightley, Bart., of Fawsley, is lord of the manor. Dr. John Preston, known as the Patriarch of the Puritans, was born here.

HEYFORD, UPPER, a par. in the hund. of Nobottle Grove, co. Northampton, 5 miles W. of Northampton, 6½ S.E. of Daventry, and 2½ E. of the Weedon station, on the London and North-Western railway. The village is inconsiderable, and wholly agricultural. The land is divided betwixt arable and pasture, and the soil is various. An Enclosure Act was passed in 1841. The inhabitants frequent the church of Nether Heyford, as there is no church here. The endowed school is also frequented by the children of this parish. There are charities to the amount of £20 per annum. Sir Charles Knightley, Bart., of Fawsley, is lord of the manor.

HEYFORD, UPPER, or WARREN, a par. in the hund. of Ploughley, co. Oxford, 7 miles N.E. of Woodstock. It is a station on the Oxford and Birmingham branch of the Great Western railway. The parish is situated on the river Cherwell, by which it is bounded on the W., and the Oxford and Birmingham canal passes through it. The village is small and wholly agricultural. An Enclosure Act was obtained in 1841. There are quarries of good building stone. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, valued in the king's books at £13 16*s*. 0½*d*., in the patron. of New College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a tower strengthened with buttresses, and bearing the arms of William of Wykeham, the founder of New College. Heyford House is the old seat of the Myrry family. In the vicinity is an ancient encampment.

HEYHOUSES, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S.E. of Clitheroe.

HEYOP, a par. in the hund. of Knighton, co. Radnor, 3 miles from Knighton, and 10 from New Radnor. This parish is included within the liberty of Knuckles, one of the contributory boroughs to New Radnor. The village is very small, consisting of a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £118, in the patron. of the bishop. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. Doleyvelin is the principal residence.

HEYSHAM, a par. in the hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 5 miles W. of Lancaster, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Poulton-le-Sands. The village, which is small, is situated on the coast between Lancaster and Morecambe bays, and is a favourite watering place during the summer season. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture, with about 170 acres of moss. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £470. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £504. The church is situated on a rock, and is dedicated to St. Peter. It is an ancient stone structure with an open turret containing two bells. There is an endowed school for the free education of eight boys and a similar number of girls. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Near to the church are the ruins of a small oratory or chapel, and several excavations in the rocks resembling the shape of coffins.

HEYSHOTT, a par. in the hund. of Eastbourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 2 miles S.E. of Midhurst, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Rother, and is within the parliamentary borough of Midhurst. The manor having passed through several families of distinction, became the property of the Earl of Egremont in 1761. Lord Leconfield is the present owner. The land is partly in common. From the Downs a view is obtained over a wooded tract of country, terminating with the Lea and the Isle of Wight in the distance. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £308. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Stedham, in the dioc. of Chichester. The church, which has been recently repaired, is a small plain edifice. The register commences in 1690. Durnford House is the principal residence. On the Downs are traces of an ancient fortified camp.

HEYTESBURY, a hund. in the co. Wilts, contains the pars. of Boyton, Brixton-Deverill, Chiltern, Codford, Heytesbury, Hill-Deverill, Horningsham, Knook, Orcheston St. George, Tytheringtom, Upton-Lovell, and part of Imber, comprising an area of 32,370 acres.

HEYTESBURY-CUM-TYTHERINGTON, a par. and post town in the above hund., co. Wilts, 4 miles S.E. of Warminster, and 18 N.W. of Salisbury. It is a station on the Wilts and Somerset railway, in connection with the Great Western railway. The parish is situated on the banks of the river Wiley, near Salisbury Plain, and was formerly a market town and a borough by prescription, returning two members to parliament from the reign of Henry VI. until it was disfranchised by the Reform Act. The town, which is small, and irregularly built, consists chiefly of one street. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of woollen cloths, but this industry has recently much declined. Near the town are Bowles-Burrow, Golden Barrow, Scratchbury Camp, Cotley Hill, and Knook Castle, where Roman and other remains have been found. A court-leet is held at Michaelmas, at which two constables and two tythingmen for the town are chosen, also similar officers for the hundred, which is co-extensive with the manor. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Knook, in the dioc. of Sarum, joint val. £350, in the patron of the Bishop of Salisbury. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, was made collegiate in 1165 by Bishop Joseline, and was rebuilt by the Hungerfords in 1404. It is of a cruciform construction, with a tower containing six bells. The charity called Lady Hungerford's hospital was founded in 1470, and rebuilt in 1769. It is designed for a custos, twelve males, and one female. There is a National school, also a place of worship for the Independents. A short distance from the town is Heytesbury House, the seat of Lord Heytesbury, a title conferred on Sir William A'Court in 1828. A fair is held annually on the 14th May.

HEYTHROP, a par. in the hund. of Wootton, co. Oxford, 3 miles E. of Chipping-Norton. It contains the hmlt. of Dunthrop. Here was anciently a Carthusian monastery, founded in 1222 by William Longespée, Earl of Salisbury, but subsequently removed to Hinton, in Somersetshire. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £150. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £130. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a small ancient edifice, in part Norman, with fragments of sculpture outside the walls. The Heythrop hounds are kennelled here.

HEYWOOD, a chplry. in the par. of Bury, co. Lancaster, 3 miles E. of Bury, and 39¼ from Liverpool by the W. section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, on which it is a station. The Manchester and Bury branch has also a station here. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the cotton and woollen mills. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £400, in the patron. of the Rector of Bury. The church, dedicated to St. Luke, is a modern structure. There are places of worship for Independents, Wesleyans, and Swedenborgians, also a National school.

HEYWOOD, a vil. and ecclesiastical district in the par. and hund. of Westbury, co. Wilts, 1 mile N. of Westbury, within the limits of which borough it is situated, and 22 miles N.W. of Salisbury. The inhabitants are partly engaged in agriculture and the malt trade, and partly in the woollen manufactures of Westbury. Here is a mineral spring. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £100. The church is comparatively modern. The principal residence is Heywood House, built in the reign of James I., and formerly the seat of the Leys and Phippses.

HIBALDSTOW, a par. in the wap. of East Manley, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles S.W. of Glandford-Brigg, and 88¼ from Manchester by the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway, which has a station near the village. It is situated near the river Ancholme and the line of the ancient Ermine Street, where numerous Roman coins and relics have been found. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1796. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £328, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Hibald, is an ancient structure with a tower. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a National school.

HICKLETON, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Doncaster, its post town, 9 from Rotherham, and 12 from Pontefract. The village is situated on the Doncaster and Barnsley road, near the river Dearne. The land is chiefly arable and very fertile. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £53. The church, dedicated to St. Denis, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing a clock and three bells. The interior of the church contains an ancient font and tombs of the Wentworth family. The register dates from 1694. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. Hickleton Hall, the principal residence, is the seat of the Right Hon. Sir Charles Wood, who is lord of the manor.

HICKLING, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Bingham, co. Nottingham, 8 miles N.W. of Melton Mowbray, its post town, and 12 S. E. of Nottingham. It is situated on the Grantham canal, near the ancient Fosse Way from Lincoln, which passes through the parish. The land is in general fertile, and the substratum limestone, in which many fossils are embedded. On the enclosure of the common, 490 acres of land were allotted in lieu of tithes; much of it, however, is of inferior quality. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £400, in the patron. of the Queen's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Luke, is an ancient structure, with a lofty square tower. In the chancel the lid of a stone coffin was several years ago discovered, inscribed with Runic characters. The charities produce about £68 per annum, £9 of which goes to Well's school. Here is a National school, also a place of worship for the Wesleyans. At the rectory is a mineral spring. Many Roman coins of the reign of Vespasian have been found on Standard Hill.

HICKLING, a par. in the hund. of Happing, and incorporation of Tunstead and Happing, co. Norfolk, 3 miles S.E. of Stalham, and 9. S.E. of North Walsham. A priory for Black Canons was founded here in 1185 by Theobald de Valentia, or Valoins. Its revenue at the Dissolution was returned at £137 0*s.* 1*d.*, when the site was given to the Woodhouses. In this parish there is a lake, called Hickling Broad, upwards of 3 miles in circumference, navigable for small craft to the Thurne and Bure rivers. The greater part of the land is marshy, and was enclosed in 1805. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £253. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a lofty embattled tower. There are places of worship for Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists, and a National school with a small endowment. The parish lands produce about £50 per annum, distributed to the poor.

HIDCOTE-BARTRIM, a hmlt. in the par. of Mickleton, upper div. of the hund. of Kiftsgate, co. Gloucester, 2 miles N.E. of Chipping Campden.

HIDCOTE-BOYCE, a hmlt. in the par. of Ebrington, upper div. of the hund. of Kiftsgate, co. Gloucester, 1½ mile N. of Ebrington.

HIDDEN, a tythg. in the par. of Hungerford, co. Berks, 1 mile N.E. of Hungerford. It is joined to Edington.

HIDDLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Barwick-in-Elmet, wap. of Skyrack, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Leeds.

HIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of Leominster, co. Hereford, 3 miles S.W. of Leominster. It is joined to Wintercott.

HIDE, WEST, a parochial chplry. in the par. of Stoke Edith, co. Hereford, 5 miles N.E. of Hereford. The vil. is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to Stoke.

HIENDLEY, COLD, a tnshp. in the par. of Felkirk, wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.E. of Wakefield. It is united with Havercroft.

HIENDLEY, SOUTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Felkirk, wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 7 miles S.E. of Wakefield, and 6 N.E. of Barnsley. The village, which is small, is situated on rising ground. The tnshp. contains the hmlt. of Upper Hiendley. The land is chiefly arable, and the soil various. G. S. Foljambe, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner. Hodroyd Hall, the ancient seat of the viscounts Galway, is now a farmhouse.

HIGH ABBOTSIDE, co. York. See ABBOTSIDE, HIGH; and all places having a similar distinguishing prefix, not occurring in their alphabetical order, will be found under the proper name.

HIGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Shamwell, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 4 miles N.W. of Rochester, and 5 E. of Gravesend. It is a station on the North Kent railway. The par., which is bounded on the N. by the Thames, is mentioned in Domesday Book as Heckham. It has the remains of a Benedictine nunnery, or abbey, founded in 1151 by King Stephen, and subsequently given to St. John's College, Cambridge. There is a barrow near the railway station, and an ancient causeway across the marshes to the Thames. Here are numerous market gardens and orchards, and about 20 acres of hop-grounds. Gad's Hill, mentioned by Shakspeare in his play of "Henry IV.," is in this parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £518, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient flint structure, with a tower containing two bells. A few years back it was thoroughly restored. In the interior are an old font, some singular tiles, and the tomb of the prioress, Joan, bearing date 1328. A new church has recently been erected. The charities produce about £4 per annum. Here is a National school for both sexes.

HIGHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Shirland, hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 3 miles N.W. of Alfreton, 7½ from Chesterfield, and 1½ mile from Stretton railway station. It is a large ancient village, situated on the Roman Icknield Street, and was formerly a market town, but has considerably decreased of late. Many of the inhabitants are employed in stocking weaving and in the adjoining bleach-grounds. There is an old cross in the centre of the market-place. The Wesleyans have a chapel with an infant school attached. A fair is held on the first Wednesday after New-Year's Day.

HIGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Samford, co. Suffolk, 4 miles E. of Nayland, 8 N.N.E. of Colchester, and 22 from Cambridge by the Cambridge and Bury branch of the Great Eastern Railway, on which it is a station. It is situated at the junction of the rivers Bret and Stour; over the former is a bridge built in 1837. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £206. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £238, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is situated near the junction of the two rivers. There is a parochial school.

HIGHAM, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Barugh, par. of Darton, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Barnsley. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the neighbouring factories.

HIGHAM. See HEIGHAM, co. Norfolk.

HIGHAM-BOOTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, higher div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.W. of Burnley railway station. There is a cotton manufactory in the neighbourhood. The soil is clay and subsoil rock. The inhabitants frequent the church of Fence. The Wesleyans have a chapel at Higham, also a National school. The Duke of Buccleuch is lord of the manor.

HIGHAM, COLD. See COLD HIGHAM, co. Northampton.

HIGHAM-DYKES, a tnshp. in the par. of Ponteland, W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 3 miles N.W. of Ponteland, and 6 S.W. of Morpeth. Here are day and Sunday schools, erected at the expense of Miss Mary Cook Bell, who is owner of the township and resides at Higham House.

HIGHAM-FERRERS, a hund. in co. Northampton, contains the pars. of Bozeat, Chelveston, Easton Maudit, Hargrave, Higham-Ferrers, Irchester, Newton Bromshold, Raunds, Ringstead, Rushden, Stanwick, Strixton, Wollaston, and part of Farndish, with the ext par. place of Higham Park, comprising about 30,430 acres. It gives names to a deanery in the archdeac. of Northampton, and dioc. of Peterborough.

HIGHAM-FERRERS, a par., but formerly a representative borough and market town, exercising separate jurisdiction, though locally in the hund. of Higham-Ferrers, co. Northampton, 14 miles E.N.E. of Northampton, and 65 N.N.W. of London. It is a station on the Peterborough and Blisworth branch of the London and North-Western railway. The town derives its distinguishing appellation from the ancient family of Ferrers, who were its lords, and had a castle here, some traces of which remain. It is built on a rocky eminence, abounding with springs, about half a mile from the north-eastern bank of the navigable river Nen, and was anciently of more importance than at present, returning one member to parliament till disfranchised by the Reform Act. It was originally a borough by prescription, and its privileges were confirmed by a charter granted by Charles II., under which it is nominally governed by a mayor, recorder, 7 aldermen, and 13 burgesses. The greater part of the town is ancient, consisting of two streets and a market stead, where stands the old market cross and the townhall, rebuilt by the corporation in 1812. The tithes have been commuted for land and money payments under an Enclosure Act. The chief business of the town consists in making boots, shoes, and bobbin-lace. The living is a vic.* with Chelveston, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £365. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a spacious structure, with a lofty embattled tower, from which rises an hexagonal crocketed spire of 99 feet, rebuilt in 1632. The W. porch is much ornamented with basreliefs, and in the interior is a richly carved screen and ten stalls decorated with curious emblematical devices. The church contains ten ancient brasses, the earliest a large one of a priest, canopied, bearing date 1337, and several ancient monuments. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans, also a school founded by Archbishop Chichele in 1420, who left an endowment of £10 per annum. The parochial charities produce about £72 per annum. Archbishop Chichele, founder of All Souls' College, Oxford, and patron of learning in the reign of Henry V., and Mr. Britton, the musical small-coal man, were born here. The Hon. G. Fitzwilliam is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on the 7th March, 28th June, Thursday before 5th August, 11th October and 6th December.

HIGHAM-GOBION, a par. in the hund. of Flitt, co. Beds, 6 miles S.E. of Ampthill, and 7 W. of Hitchin. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £300. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £350. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. It contains a monument to Dr. E. Castell, the Orientalist, and author of the "Lexicon Heptaglotton." There is a village school.

HIGHAM-GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Gazeley, hund. of Risbridge, co. Suffolk, 7 miles N.E. of Newmarket, and the same distance W. of Bury St. Edmund's, The principal residence is Higham Hall, the ancient seat of the Heigham family, from whom the hamlet took its name.

HIGHAM-ON-THE-HILL, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 3 miles N.W. of Hinckley, its post town, 6 S.W. of Market Bosworth, and 2½ from the Nuneaton station on the Trent Valley railway. It is situated near the ancient Watling Street, and the Ashby-de-la-Zouch canal passes through the parish, which contains the hmlts. of Lindley and Rowden. The surface, though elevated, is generally flat but well wooded. The soil is chiefly a stiff clay alternated with marl. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Act of Enclosure in 1806. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £552. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a modern structure, with a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a National school. Lindley Hall is the principal residence. The Rev. J. Fisher is lord of the manor. At the intersection of Watling Street with the road from Coventry, many coins of Henry III. were discovered in the 17th century; and subsequently a gold ring with a ruby, another with an agate, and a third of silver with an Arabic inscription, were found near the spot.

HIGHAM PARK, an ext. par. place, in the hund. of Higham Ferrers, co. Northampton, 3 miles S.E. of Higham Ferrers.

HIGHBEACH WARREN, a tnshp. in the par. of Balcombe, hund. of Buttinghill, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 3 miles N. of Cuckfield.

HIGHBEECH GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Waltham, co. Essex, 2 miles S.E. of Waltham Abbey, and 12 N.N.E. of St. Paul's, London, or 15 by the Great Eastern railway. It is situated on an elevated spot in Epping Forest, commanding an extensive view over the valleys of the Lea and Thames. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the patron. of the Bishop of Rochester. The church is a modern structure, dedicated to St. Paul.

HIGH BRAY. See BRAY, HIGH, co. Devon.

HIGHBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Burnham, co. Somerset, 6 miles N.E. of Bridgwater. It is situated on the river Brue, and is a station on the Bristol and Exeter railway.

HIGHBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Decuman, co. Somerset, 2 miles from Watchet, and 5 S.E. of Dunster.

HIGHBROOKS, a hmlt. in the par. of Somerton, co. Somerset, 2 miles from Somerton.

HIGHBURY, a suburban district of London, formerly a hmlt. in the par. of Islington, 3 miles N. of St. Paul's, London. It is a station on the North London railway, and has communication with the City and West End every five minutes by omnibus. It is supposed to derive its name from a small Roman camp, or bury, which occupied the site nearly opposite Highbury Barn Tavern. It was formerly the property of the priors of St. John, Clerkenwell, who had a moated house here called Little St. John's Wood. After the dissolution of monasteries this manor, in which the custom of gavelkind prevails, passed successively to Thomas Cromwell, the crown, the Apsleys, and finally to the Colebrooke family, to whom it at present belongs. In 1381 Jack Straw, one of the followers of Wat Tyler, did considerable damage here. The greater part of the vale of Highbury is now built over, with the exception of the park and the grounds attaching to Highbury Barn Tavern. Highbury terrace and crescent are handsome ranges of buildings, the last being the largest crescent about London. The principal residences are Highbury Park and Highbury House, adjoining which is Mr. Aubert's observatory. At a little distance is Highbury College, built in 1826 at a cost of £22,000, and now occupied as a Church of England training school, though originally built for the Dissenters' college. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of London, in the patron. of trustees. The church, called Christ Church, is a cruciform structure, built in 1848 at a cost of £6,000. There are schools in connection with the church. The S division of the metropolitan police has a station here.

HIGH-CALLERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ponteland, W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles S. of Ponteland.

HIGH-CHURCH AND TRANWELL, a joint tnshp. in the par. of Morpeth, W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, half a mile from Morpeth.

HIGHCLERE, a par. in the lower half of the hund. of Evingar, Kingsclere div. of co. Hants, 5 miles S. of Newbury, its post town. This place is described in Domesday Survey as belonging to the bishops of Winchester, who had a palace here in which they occasionally resided, until the bailiwick held by them was transferred to the crown in the reign of Edward VI. It was subsequently given to the Fitz Williams, from whom it passed to the Herberts. The present mansion, called Highclere Castle, was erected on the site of the original edifice by the Hon. Robert Herbert, the ancestor of the earls of Carnarvon, its present proprietors. The castle stands on elevated ground, 587 feet above sea-level, in the midst of an extensive and wooded park, above 13 miles in circumference. The building is a stately pile of great antiquity, but has recently been modernised and considerably enlarged. The elevated portions, with the pinnacles and perforated work, have a very imposing appearance, each angle being flanked by a tower. A magnificent and massive tower also rises on the western side. A few years ago a gigantic fireplace was discovered in the hall—the most ancient part of the building, where in feudal times the retainers were in the habit of congregating together; and traces of massive walls with secret passages have also been discovered. On many parts of the building are the arms in stone of the Herberts. In the interior are paintings by Vandyck, Reynolds, Gainsborough, &c. Within the park is Siddown Hill, rising 943 feet above the sea-level, and producing many rare plants. On the neighbouring hill, called Beacon Hill, are traces of a Roman camp, and in the vicinity are several barrows, in which a gold clasp, jet necklace, spear-heads, &c., have been found. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was rebuilt by the Attorney-General Sir Robert Sawyer in the reign of Charles II. It contains several interesting monuments. The charities produce £11 per annum. There is a National school, supported by the Earl of Carnarvon. Dr. Jeremiah Millar, the antiquary, was a native of this place.

HIGH-CROSS, a hmlt. in the par. of Standon, co. Herts, 3 miles N. of Ware. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £150. The church is modern.

HIGH-CROSS, a vil. in the par. of Rowington, co. Warwick, 5 miles W.N.W. of Warwick. It is situated near the Birmingham canal.

HIGH-CROSS, a hmlt. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 5 miles N.W. of Lutterworth, and 13 S. of Leicester. It is supposed to occupy the site of the Roman station Bononæ, where the Watling Street crosses the Fosse Way. The Cross is a meet for the Atherstone hounds.

HIGH-EDGE. See EDGE, HIGH, co. Derby.

HIGH-FIELD, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Ecclesall-Bierlow, par. and borough of Sheffield, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Sheffield. There are numerous seats and small places of this name in almost every county of England, but not of sufficient importance to require separate notice.

HIGH-FLATTS, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Denby, and par. of Peniston, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Peniston, and 7 from Barnsley.

HIGHGATE, a chplry. and suburban vil. in the pars. of St. Pancras and Hornsey, Holborn and Finsbury divs. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, 5 miles N.W. of the General Post-Office, and 4½ N of Charing Cross. It is situated on the summit. and slopes of one of the highest hills in the county of Middlesex, rising to the height of the top of St. Paul's Cathedral. Its immediate neighbourhood is particularly charming, abounding in walks and drives, and commanding views of the metropolis and Surrey hills on the S., of the undulating grounds of Essex and the course of the Thames as far as Gravesend on the E., and of the well-wooded country of Hendon, Finchley, and Barnet, as far as the hills of Hertfordshire, on the N. The village of Highgate lies to the N. and E., and contains many good shops, a literary institution, and savings-bank. It is partially paved, lighted with gas, and well supplied with water by the New River Company, which has a spacious reservoir on the very summit of the hill. There are omnibuses to the City and West End, both from the Holloway and Kentish Town sides of the hill; and two railway stations—one the Kentish Town station, at the S. foot of the hill, on the Blackwall, Kew, and Kingston line, and another in the Archway-road, on the N.E. side of the hill, on the new line from Edgeware to King's Cross. "In ancient times," says Tanner, "upon the top of this hill was a hermitage, one of the hermits whereof caused to be made the causeway between Highgate and Islington," which afterwards was extended with great public advantage as far as Clerkenwell, and at the beginning of the present century was continued northwards under the name of the New North Road, along which upwards of eighty four-horsed stage-coaches carrying the mail-bags passed daily before the introduction of railways. In order to avoid the steep acclivity of the hill, which rises 1 in 7 at some parts, in 1809 a plan was devised by Vazie of cutting a tunnel through it; but in 1812, when the work had reached to a considerable state of advancement, the earth fell in, and the original plan was abandoned, and an open road formed on the line of the tunnel, with a lofty arch thrown over it to connect Highgate with Hornsey and the country E. of it. This cutting discloses the character of the geological formation of Hampstead and Highgate hills, which consist of blue clay, containing fossil copal, &c., with superimposed deposits of sand, nearly identical with that on the sea-shore, pointing directly to the very remote period at which they must have been formed, when a large portion of the present county of Middlesex formed the bed of an estuary of the sea. At the time of the Roman invasion, these hills appear to have been covered with a vast uncultivated forest, called the Forest of Middlesex, which was not disafforested till 1218, and portions of which still are preserved in the natural woods of Caen Wood and South Wood. In 1387 Hornsey Park, which occupied the site of the present Highgate, was the place, as related by Norden, where "the nobles met in hostile manner to rid the king (Richard II.) of those traitors he had about him." In 1483 the Duke of Gloucester and the youthful king, Edward V., were here met by the citizens of London, who conducted them with great pomp to the metropolis. In like manner the victorious Henry VII., after the battle of Bosworth Field, was here received by the corporation and citizens of London, on his way to the capital. In 1531 the hermitage and chapel were granted by Bishop Stokesley, of London, to William Forte, who was probably the last hermit. In 1589 the hamlet was visited by Queen Elizabeth, and in the same reign Mary Queen of Scots was detained for a short time at the house of the Earl of Arundel, on the Holloway Hill. In 1624 James I. slept here on the night before hunting a stag in St. John's Wood, in the neighbourhood; besides whom most of the sovereigns and illustrious personages have either stayed in or passed through the village, it being the first stage on the main road to Scotland and the North. In 1769 was removed the old gatehouse from which the village is supposed to derive its name, and which was one of the first buildings on the spot, having been erected about 500 years ago by the bishops of London, who had a seat here, and to whom the toll-bar on the crown of the height still belongs. From some ancient custom of hospitality attaching to the manor is supposed to have originated the burlesque oath in vogue till the commencement of the present century, by which the traveller pledged himself over a pair of stag's horns, when alighting at the inn, "never to eat brown when he could get white bread, nor drink small when he could obtain strong beer, with many similar engagements, but with the proviso, 'except he liked the other better.'" In 1833 the old chapel was removed, and a new church, dedicated to St. Michael, erected on the site of the old manor house. It has a finely-proportioned tower and spire, visible from a great distance to vessels coming up the river Thames. The interior of the church contains monuments removed from the old chapel; among them a tablet inscribed to the memory of the poet Coleridge, who for many years resided in the Grove, at Highgate, and died there in 1834. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of London, val. £550, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two other churches recently built—St. Anne's, at the foot of West Hill, built and endowed by the late Miss Barnett; and a small church recently built on the N. hill. There are also a Congregational chapel at South Grove, erected in 1859, a Baptist chapel in Southwood-lane, two Roman Catholic establishments, and a Jew's school and synagogue. The Highgate Cemetery was consecrated in May, 1839, and originally enclosed a space of 21 acres on the S. side of the hill, facing London; but the grounds have recently been much enlarged by the addition of another portion of land on the opposite side of Swain's-lane, where is the entrance lodge. The free grammar school was founded in 1562 by Sir Roger Cholmeley, Knight, who procured for its better establishment two charters from Queen Elizabeth, and a grant from Bishop Grindall, of London, "the lord and proprietor of the chapel at Highgate," of the chapel and premises, with two acres of land adjoining. The schoolhouse has recently been much enlarged, and a residence built for the head master. The revenue is now about £800, besides which there is an annual exhibition to either of the universities of £50, tenable for four years. There are also spacious National, industrial, and infant schools, besides numerous private and denominational schools. A Magdalene institution has been recently founded. The charities produce about £1,058, including the endowments of Wollaston's and Pauncefort's almshouses for twelve poor women. A hospital for lepers was founded on the lower part of Highgate Hill by William Poole in the reign of Edward IV., and occupied a site now called Lazarets or Lazarcot Field, near Whittington Stone. The original stone has been removed, where the thrice lord-mayor of London heard the sound of Bow bells. Near is the Whittington College, or almshouses, and also the small-pox hospital, removed from King's Cross in 1850. [See HOLLOWAY.] From an early period this village has been the residence of various characters of note, including Sir Richard Baker, author of the "Chronicle of the Kings of England;" the illustrious philosopher Lord Bacon, who died at the Earl of Arundel's house on the 9th of April, 1626, after a few days' illness caused by a cold caught in trying the experiment of preserving a dead fowl with snow; Dr. Sacheverell, who died here in June, 1724; Nell Gwynne, who is said to have resided at Lauderdale House, late the residence of Sir Richard Bethel, the present lord chancellor; Andrew Marvell, the poet, and secretary to the Commonwealth; Sir Thomas Cornwallis, Comptroller of the Household to Queen Mary; Chief Justice Pemberton; and the Protector Cromwell, who has left his name to Cromwell House (now a school), but then the residence of his son-in-law General Ireton. The principal residences in the vicinity are too numerous to particularise, but mention ought to be made of Caen Wood, the domain of the Earl of Mansfield, attached to which is a mansion, of which the central part was built by the celebrated Lord Chief Justice Mansfield. On the West Hill is Holly Lodge, the residence of Miss Burdett Coutts.

HIGHGATE LANE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Lepton, and par. of Kirk-Heaton, West Riding co. York, 3 miles E. of Huddersfield. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the manufacture of woollen cloth and fancy goods.

HIGHHEAD, or IVEGILL, a chplry. in the par. of Dalston, ward and co. of Cumberland, 4 miles S.W. of Dalston, and 8 S. of Carlisle, its post town. It is situated on the Ive Beck water in Inglewood Forest. On the brow of a rocky eminence are the ruins of Highhead Castle, formerly held by the Harclas, Dacres, and L'Englises, but now the property of Lord Brougham. The principal remains are the Gateway tower and turret, which are now occupied as a farmhouse. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £80, in the patron. of the Vicar of Dalston. The church is a mean building erected by William Englise. Here is a small school. The principal residence is the manor house, called Highhead or Hive-Head.

HIGHLANDS, THE, OF IRELAND, a name sometimes given to the district consisting of Joyce-Country and Connemara proper, in the co. Galway, prov. of Connaught.

HIGHLANDS, THE, OF SCOTLAND, a name applied to the greater and northern half of Scotland, extending as far S. as the Grampian hills, including Sutherland, Ross, Inverness, Argyll, and parts of Banff, Dumbarton, Elgin, Perth, and Stirling. The surface is celebrated for its wildness and the grandeur of its scenery, embracing mountains, lakes, and rivers. The inhabitants are descended from the Celts, or Gaels, who retired to the fastnesses of the mountains before the conquering Saxons, where they still retain the language, dress, and many of the customs of their forefathers.

HIGHLAWS, a tnshp. in the par. of Hartburn, W. div. of the ward of Morpeth, co. Northumberland, 1½ mile W. of Hartburn, and 7 miles S.W. of Morpeth. It is situated on the river Wansbeck.

HIGHLAWS, HIGHER and LOWER, or HEIGHLEY and SPITAL HILL, tnshps. in the par. of Mitford, W. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles N.W. of Morpeth. It contains the vils. of Highlaw-Gate and Espley.

HIGHLEADON, a hmlt. in the par. of Rudford, lower div. of the hund. of Dudstone, co. Gloucester, 5 miles N.W. of Gloucester Cross. Highleadon Green is a meet for the Ledbury hounds.

HIGHLEY, a par. in the Chelmarsh div. of the hund. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 7 miles S.E. of Bridgnorth, its post town, 8 N.W. of Burdley, and 11 N.W. of Kidderminster. The village, which is small, is situated on rising ground on the western bank of the river Severn, and is a station on the Severn Valley railway. Malting is carried on, and stone of excellent quality is quarried to a considerable extent. There are also coal mines, worked in 1825, but at present abandoned. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £109 11s., and the vicarial for £115 10s. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a freestone structure with a square tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum, which goes towards bread, divided among the poor every Sunday. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyan Methodists. William Jordan, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HIGHLEY ST. MARY, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Witheridge, co. Devon.

HIGHLIGHT, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Dinas Powis, co. Glamorgan, 7 miles S.W. of Cardiff.

HIGHLOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Hope, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 4 miles S.E. of Hope, and 3½ N.W. of Stoney Middleton. The Duke of Devonshire is the sole landowner.

HIGHNAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Churcham, hund. of Dudstone, co. Gloucester, 2 miles W. of Gloucester. The principal residence is Highnam Court, built by the Cookes, after a design by Inigo Jones. It contains a picture gallery, with an original portrait of Cromwell, a Madonna by Titian, Algernon Sydney by Lely, &c.

HIGHTAE, a vil. in the par. of Lochmaben, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Lockerby. It is situated near Hightae Loch, a fine piece of water. It is one of the "four towns" of the parish, and has a Reformed Presbytery meeting-house.

HIGHTLEIGH, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Witheridge, co. Devon, 3 miles N.W. of Bampton. It is situated on the river Exe.

HIGHTOWN, or HIETON, a vil. in the par. and co. of Roxburgh, Scotland, 2 miles S. of Kelso.

HIGHTOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Mildenhall St. Andrew, co. Suffolk, 2 miles from Mildenhall, and 35 N.W. of Ipswich.

HIGHWAY, a hmlt. in the par. of Lanteglos, co. Cornwall, 6 miles N.W. of Bodmin. It is situated on a tributary of the river Camel.

HIGHWAY, a par. in the hund. of Potterne, co. Wilts, 4½ miles N.E. of Calne, its post town, and 5 S. of Wootton Basset. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £165. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic.* of Bremhill, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. Augustus Henry Tonge, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HIGHWEEK, a par. in the hund. of Teignbridge, co. Devon, 1 mile N.W. of Newton Bushel, and 14 miles S.W. of Exeter. It is situated near the river Teign and the South Devon railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The Roman Icknield way passed near the village, and crossed the river at Hackneildford. At Milberdown is a treble-ditched camp. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £132 10s., and the vicarial for £245, with a glebe of 9 acres. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic.* of Teignton Regis, in the dioc. of Exeter.

HIGH-WORSALL, a chplry. in the par. and wap. of Northallerton, North Riding co. York, 3 miles from Yarm.

HIGHWORTH, CRICKLADE, AND STAPLE, a hund. in co. Wilts, contains the pars. of Ashton-Keynes, Blunsdon St. Andrew, Castle Eaton, Cricklade SS. Mary and Sampson, Eisey, Hannington, Highworth, Latton, Liddiard Millicent, Marston-Maisey, Poulton, Purton, Rodborne-Cheney, Shorncote, Somerford-Keynes, Stanton-Fitzwarren, Stratton St. Margaret, and parts of Coleshill and Inglesham, comprising an area of 51,520 acres.

HIGHWORTH, a par., post and market town, in the above hund., co. Wilts, 6 miles from Swindon, 6 from Farringdon, and 7½ from Cricklade. It is situated on elevated ground between the Thames and Severn canal, which passes about 4 miles to the N., and the Wilts and Berks canal, about the same distance towards the S. The par. contains the vils. of Broad-Blunsdon, South Marston, Sevenhampton, Bury-Blunsdon, Eastrop, Fresden, and Westrop. It was part of the royal demesne at the time of the Norman Conquest, and was subsequently held by Edmund de Langley and the St. Johns. The town, as its name implies, is situated on high land, commanding extensive prospects. It is a nominal borough, having been summoned to send two members to parliament, but made no return. The market and fairs formerly did a brisk trade, but have considerably declined in consequence of the construction of the Great Western railway. The streets are partially paved, and the houses in general are built of stone. There are a small subscription library, a scientific and literary institute, and a bank. A bailiff and constables are appointed annually at a court held by the steward for the "manor of the borough of Highworth," but the government of the town is virtually under the jurisdiction of the county magistrates. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, with the curs. of South Marston, Sevenhampton, and Broad Blunsdon annexed, val. £555, in the patron. of the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are about to make Broad Blunsdon a separate parish. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was built in the reign of Henry VI., and has lately been restored. It has a square tower, surmounted by an open parapet, and containing eight bells. In the interior of the church, on the S. side, is a chantry, the property and burial-place of the Warnefords of Warneford for several generations. There are chapels-of-ease at Broad Blunsdon, South Marston, and Sevenhampton in this parish. The charities are various, producing about £277 per annum, a portion going towards apprenticing children of the parish. There are National, British, and infant schools, also places of worship for the Wesleyans, Independents, and Primitive Methodists. The Poor-law Union of Highworth and Swindon comprises 16 parishes or places, of which 15 are in the county of Wilts and one in that of Berks. The market is held on Wednesday; there is also a monthly cattle market held on the last Wednesday in each month. The December market is held on the first Wednesday preceding the 8th of the month. Fairs are held on the 13th August for cattle, and 11th October for cattle and hiring of servants.

HILARY, ST., a par. in the hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 5 miles E. of Penzance. This parish is situated in the midst of a mineral district on the coast of Mount's Bay, and contains the market town of Marazion and St. Michael's Mount, which is 231 feet high. The West Cornwall railway passes in the vicinity, and has a station at Marazion Road. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the tin and copper mines at Wheal Fortune, Marazion, and Retallack. The rocks are chiefly granite and slate. On St. Michael's Mount are remains of an old priory belonging to the family of St. Aubyn. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £311. The church of St. Hilary, which is situated on the highest ground in the parish, forms a conspicuous landmark. It contains tombs of the Godolphins of Treveneage, Pennecks of Tregembo, and Milletts of Ennis. The Wesleyans and several other Dissenting congregations have chapels here. There is a school with a small endowment.

HILARY, ST., a par. in the hund. of Cowbridge, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles S.E. of Cowbridge, its post town, and 7 from Llantrissant. In the village, which is a small agricultural place, are the remains of Beaupré, or Bewper, Castle, the old seat of the Sitsyllts. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £44, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Llandaff. There are two residences in the village occupied by the Traherne family.

HILBECK, a tnshp. in the par. of Brough, East ward, co. Westmoreland, 1 mile N. of Brough. It is situated near Hilbeck Fell, and was anciently the seat of the Hilbecks, from whom it passed to the Blenkinsops in the reign of Edward II.. William Wilkinson, Esq., of Warcop, is lord of the manor. Coal has been found here. In the vicinity is Fox Tower, commanding an extensive view.

HILBOROUGH, a par. in the hund. of South Greenhoe, co, Norfolk, 6 miles S. of Swaffham. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Wisey, near the Great Eastern railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £400. The church of All Saints is an ancient flint structure, with a square embattled tower crowned with crocketed pinnacles, and contains a double piscina. At the north-western extremity of the village are the remains of the pilgrims' chapel, once held by Dean Colet, founder of St. Paul's school in London. The principal residence is Hilborough Hall, a mansion of white brick, surrounded by a well wooded park.

HILBRE ISLAND, a small island on the coast of Chester, in the hund. of Lower Wirrall, co. Chester, 3 miles W.N.W. of West Kirby, and 9 W. of Birkenhead. It is the largest of a small group of islands situated near the river Dee's mouth. It is extra parochial, having formerly belonged to Chester Cathedral, but has been subsequently purchased by the corporation of Liverpool.

HILCOMBE, a tythg. in the par. of Ilminster, co. Somerset, 3 miles from Ilminster.

HILCOTT, a tythg. in the par. of North Newnton, hund. of Swanborough, co. Wilts, 7 miles S.E. of Devizes, near the river Avon. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel, and there is a licensed schoolroom for divine service.

HILCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Eccleshall, hund. of North Pirehill, co. Stafford, 1 mile E. of Eccleshall, and 7 miles N.W. of Stafford. It is situated near the river Sow and the line of the North-Western railway. It is a meet for the North Staffordshire hounds. The principal residence is Hilcott Hall.

HILCOTT END, a tythg. in the par. of Ampney-Crucis, co. Gloucester, 2 miles N.E. of Chipping-Campden.

HILDA, ST., a chplry. in the tnshp. of South Shields, par. of Jarrow, co. Durham, 2 miles from Shields, and 17 N.E. of Durham.

HILDENBOROUGH, a parochial chplry. in the par. of Tunbridge, hund. of Tunbridge Lowey, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 2 miles N.W. of Tunbridge, its post town. It is partly in the par. of Leigh, and was formed into an ecclesiastical district in the year 1844. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £170, in the patron. of the Vicar of Tunbridge. The church, which was erected in 1844, has a spired tower containing one bell. Here is a National school for both sexes.

HILDENLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Appleton-le-Street, wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Malton. It is situated near the river Derwent and the York railway.

HILDERSHAM, a par. in the hund. of Chilford, 2 miles N.W. of Linton. The manor anciently belonged to the De Veres, earls of Oxford. The village, which is small, is situated on a small stream, a tributary to the river Granta, or Cam. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £407. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £288. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structure, with a fine E. window. It contains several brasses to the Paris family, and effigies in oak of Sir Robert de Boteller and his lady; also a knight crusader of the 14th century. The Roman road from Cambridge to Colchester skirted the parish. This is supposed to have been the birthplace of Matthew Paris, the chronicler.

HILDERSTONE, a tnshp. and vil. in the par. of Stone, hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 4 miles N.E. of Stone. The village is considerable, and some of the inhabitants are engaged in the manufacture of shoes. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £120. The church is a structure of stone with a tower surmounted by a spire. It was erected in 1833 at the expense of the late J. Bourne, Esq.

HILDERTHORPE - WITH - WILSTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Bridlington, wap. of Dickering, East Riding co. York, 1 mile S. of Bridlington. It is situated on the coast, and has numerous lodging-houses for the accommodation of visitors who resort here for sea-bathing. Harrington Hudson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HILGAY, a par. in the hund. of Clackclose, co. Norfolk, 3 miles S.E. of Downham Market. The Ely and Lynn branch of the Great Eastern railway has a station at Hilgay Fen. Here was formerly a small priory of Black Monks, founded as a cell to Ramsay Abbey. The river Ouse and the road from Lynn to London intersect the parish. Two-thirds of the land, which is fenny, are arable, and the remainder meadow and pasture. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the navigable river Wissey, over which in 1841 an iron bridge of one arch was erected. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,600. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £1,291. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square brick tower, rebuilt in 1794. It contains a monument to Sir J. H. Hawear and his two wives. The living was once held by P. Fletcher, the poet. There are places of worship for Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, also a school with a small endowment. The parochial charities produce £224 per annum.

HILL, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Berkeley, co. Gloucester, 4 miles S. of Berkeley, its post town, and 6½ S. of the Berkeley Road railway station. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated on the river Severn, which is here more than 2 miles wide. The soil is chiefly a rich loam, producing abundant crops, and the pastures are luxuriantly rich. The eastern portion of the parish is undulating, but the western almost level. The living is a don. cur.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £162. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, with a small spired tower containing one bell. The interior is fitted up with open seats fronted with richly-carved oak. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. Herbert Jenner, Esq., is lord of the manor. Adjoining the church is the venerable mansion of Hill Court, supposed to have been originally a monastery founded in the 12th century.

HILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Halesowen, hund. of Brimstree, co. Worcester, formerly in Salop, 2 miles from Halesowen, and 35 S.E. of Shrewsbury. It is situated near the small river Stour and the Netherton canal. The soil is chiefly a rich loam, producing abundant crops.

HILL, a tythg. in the par. of Droxford, co. Hants, 2 miles S.E. of Bishop's Waltham.

HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Milbrook, co. Hants, 2 miles W. of Southampton.

HILL, a tythg. in the par. of Bishop's Lydeard, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.E. of Milverton.

HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Leamington Hastings, co. Warwick, 2 miles N. of Leamington. It is situated on the river Avon.

HILL, a vil. in the par. of Stoneleigh, co. Warwick, 3 miles S. of Coventry.

HILL, a vil. in the par. of Sutton-Coldfield, hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, 6 miles N.E. of Birmingham. It is situated near a branch of the river Tame.

HILL AND MOOR, a hmlt. in the par. of Fladbury, middle div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 3 miles N.E. of Pershore.

HILL, a hund. in the parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, contains the pars. of Ashby Puerorum, Aswardby, Bag Enderby, Brinkhill, Claxby Pluckacre, Fulletby, Greetham, Hagworthingham, Hameringham, Harrington, Langton, South Ormsby, Oxcombe, Salmonby, Sausthorpe, Scrafield, Somersby, Tetford, Walmsgate, Winceby, and Worlaby, comprising about 25,000 acres. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of Lincoln.

HILLAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Monk-Frystone, lower div. of the wap. of Barkstone Ash, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Pontefract, 3 N.E. of Ferry-Bridge, and half a mile from Monk-Frystone. The commons, which were enclosed in 1797, have been brought into cultivation. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The York and North Midland railway passes through this township. Limestone is extensively quarried. Hillam Hall is a fine Elizabethan mansion.

HILLBORO, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Stratford, co. Warwick, 5 miles W. of Stratford. It is in a pleasant spot near the river Avon and the Roman Fosse Way, and is spoken of by Shakspeare as the "Haunted Hillboro."

HILL-BRIDGE, a vil. in the tnshp. of Nether-Hallam, and par. of Sheffield, wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 3 miles W. of Sheffield.

HILLBROOK, a vil. in the bar. of South Ballinacor, co. Wicklow, Ireland, 3 miles S. of Tinehely.

HILL-DEVERILL, a par. in the hund. of Heytesbury, co. Wilts, 3 miles S. of Warminster, its post town, and 4 S.W. of Heytesbury. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £76, in the patron. of the prebendary thereof. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It was rebuilt in 1842 by voluntary contributions. The Duke of Somerset is lord of the manor. General Ludlow was born in this parish.

HILL-END, a tythg. in the par. of Cumnor, hund. of Hormer, co. Berks, 4 miles N. of Abingdon, and 4 S.W. of Oxford.

HILL-END, a hmlt. in the par. of Leigh, co. Worcester, 4 miles S.W. of Worcester.

HILL-END, a hmlt. in the par. of Longdon, co. Worcester, 3 miles S.W. of Upton. There are besides several small places in England of this name, as Hill-End, near St. Alban's, Herts; near Walsall, Stafford; near Bromyard, Hereford, &c.

HILLEND, a post-office vil. in the pars. of Dalgety and Inverkeithing, co. Fife, Scotland, not far from Inverkeithing. Here is Dalgety parish school.

HILLESDEN, a par. in the hund. and co. of Bucks, 4 miles S.W. of Buckingham. It formerly belonged to the Denton family; and Sir Alexander Denton having garrisoned the manor house for Charles I., it was taken by assault and plundered by the parliamentarians under Manchester, in 1644. The village, which is small, is situated on a branch of the river Ouse. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture and lace-making. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £64, in the patron. of Christ Church College, Oxford, in whom are vested the great tithes. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was rebuilt in 1493. In the chancel are several monuments to the Dentons. The manor house, the old seat of the Dentons, is now pulled down.

HILLESLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Hawkesbury, upper div. of the hund. of Grumbalds Ash, co. Gloucester, 5 miles N. of Chipping Sodbury.

HILLFARRANCE, a par. in the hund. of Taunton, co. Somerset, 4 miles W. of Taunton, and 3 N.E. of Wellington. The village is situated near the line of the Great Western railway. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £142 5*s.*, and the curate's for £124 6*s.* The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £153, in the patron. of Trinity College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to the Holy Cross.

HILFIELD, a parochial chplry. in the par. of Sydling St. Nicholas, hund. of Cerne, co. Dorset, 4 miles N.W. of Cerne-Abbas, its post town, 12 N.W. of Dorchester, and 4 from the Evershot railway station. It is a small village of irregular form, and entirely agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £52, in the patron. of the Vicar of Sydling. Charles Cousin, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HILL-FOOT, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Nether Hallam, and par. of Sheffield, West Riding co. York, 2 miles W. of Sheffield.

HILL-GREEN, a vil. in the par. of Stockbury, hund. of Milton, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 4 miles N.E. of Maidstone.

HILL-GREEN, a hmlt. in the hund. of Uttlesford, co. Essex, 5 miles S.W. of Saffron-Walden.

HILLHAMPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Martley, co. Worcester, 7 miles N.W. of Worcester.

HILLHEAD, a vil. in the par. of Cockpen, co. Edinburgh, 6 miles S.E. of Edinburgh.

HILL-HOOKS, a vil. in the par. of Sutton-Coldfie'd, hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, 5½ miles N.E. of Birmingham.

HILLHOUSE, a vil. in the par. of Dunfermline, co. Fife, Scotland, 2 miles from Dunfermline and 16 from Edinburgh.

HILLHOUSEFIELD, a bar. in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, joined to Leith in 1630.

HILLINGDON, a par. in the hund. of Elthorne, co. Middlesex, 1 mile S.E. of Uxbridge, its post town, and 2½ miles N. of the West Drayton station, on the Great Western railway. It is mentioned in Domesday as Hillendone, and was formerly held by Roger de Montgomery, from whom it came to the Salisburys, Lacies, Stranges, Stanleys, and finally to the De Burghs of West Drayton. The par. contains the tnshp. of Uxbridge, with Colham Green, Gowld-Green, and 4 other hmlts. The river Colne and the Grand Junction canal pass through the parish. Here are some brick-kilns. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of London, val. £489, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is situated on rising ground in the centre of the village, is a flint structure dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The interior contains some handsome monuments, and three brasses bearing date 1479, of Lord Strange and others. In addition to the parish church there are two district churches at Uxbridge and Uxbridge Moor, the livings of both which are perpet. curs.,* the former val. £142, the latter £110. The charities produce about £878 per annum. Here are National, British, and ragged schools. Cedar House, formerly the seat of Reynardson the naturalist, derives its name from a huge cedar-tree which grew within its grounds about 1779. This tree was 53 feet in height, 12⅔ to 16 feet in circumference, and extended over a space of from 89 to 96 feet in diameter. Hillingdon Park, or Little London, was formerly the seat of Count de Salis. It is a meet for the royal stag-hounds. The union poorhouse is situated in this parish. John Rich, the comedian, who died here in 1743, lies buried in the churchyard.

HILLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge-Lynn, co. Norfolk. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture and woodland. The soil is of a light nature, with subsoil chiefly chalk. The surface is undulating, and the lower grounds are watered by the river Babingley, which bounds it on one side. The village, which contains a first-class inn, where petty sessions are held the first Monday of every month, is remarkably neat, and most of the cottages surrounded by good gardens. Hillington Hall, the seat of Sir W. H. B. Ffolkes, Bart., who is lord of the manor, is a stately Gothic mansion, originally erected in 1627, but recently much improved and enlarged. In the village there are four ancient crosses. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £450. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone, brick, and flint edifice, with a square embattled tower, which, together with the chancel, are ancient, but the nave has been rebuilt. It contains some stained-glass windows, monuments to the Hovell, Browne, Ffolkes, and West families, and a very old organ by Snetzler. The parish schools, erected in 1855 by the lord of the manor, form a handsome building of red brick and Carr stone.

HILLINGTON, HELLINGTON, or HALAGSTON, a par. in the hund. of Loddon, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N.W. of Loddon, and 7 S.E. of Norwich. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Yare. The village is very small, and wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £120. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £126. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a small ancient structure with a circular tower and enriched Norman arched doorways, one of which has been bricked up. The register dates from 1562. There are several small bequests for the benefit of the poor, producing altogether about £7 per annum.

HILLMARTON, a par. in the hund. of Kingsbridge and Selkley, co. Wilts, 3 miles N.E. of Calne, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Wootton-Bassett. It contains the hmlts. of Catcomb, Beversbrook, Corton, Whitcomb, and Cleaveancy. The surface is level, and the land chiefly pasture. There are several quarries of good building stone and clay for making bricks. The village, which is small, is situated on the Oxford road. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £399, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a noble edifice with a square embattled tower, which was partly rebuilt at the expense of the late Thomas Poynder, Esq., who also thoroughly restored the church, at a great expense, in 1851. The charities produce about £14 per annum, £4 of which goes to a school. The Independents have a place of worship at Goatacre in this parish. Thomas Henry Allen Poynder, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HILLMORTON, a par. in the Rugby div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 3 miles N.E. of Crick, and 2½ E. of Rugby, its post town and railway station on the London and North-Western line. The manor at the time of the Domesday Survey belonged to Sir Thomas de Ashley, by whom it was sold to the Veres of London. The village, which is very irregular, is situated partly on rising ground and partly on the rivulet running to Creek, which is separated from this parish by the ancient Watling Street. The Oxford canal passes through the parish, and rises to a considerable elevation in its progress to Braunston, where it has three double locks. The parish is also intersected by the London and Birmingham railway and the road to Northampton. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £202. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient edifice with a square tower containing five bells. In the interior of the church are several monuments and effigies. The register dates from 1564. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The parochial charities produce about £98 per annum, of which £16 go to a school, and the residue to be distributed to the poor in bread every Sunday. Thomas Townsend, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HILLSBOROUGH, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of Lower Iveagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 18 miles N.W. of Downpatrick, and 89 from Dublin. The parish is 5½ miles long by 2½ broad. The surface is varied, and the soil good and well cultivated. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Down, val. £335, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a cruciform structure, erected in 1774 by the late Marquis of Downshire. It has a fine organ, rich stained glass, and contains a monument to Archdeacon Leslie. There are also a chapel-of-ease, Roman Catholic chapel, Presbyterian, Moravian, and Society of Friends meeting-houses in the parish. There are charity, National, and Sunday schools, also several others. Hillborough Castle is the seat of the Marquis of Downshire, to whom the place gives title of earl. The town was formerly a parliamentary borough called Crumlin. It is situated within a short distance of the Lagan canal, and has a station on the Banbridge branch of the Ulster and Portadown and Armagh Junction railway. It is a chief police station and a general and petty sessions town. It contains a market-house, sessions-house, police station, gas-works, stamp-office, savings-bank, brewery, distillery, dispensary, and fever hospital. The head-quarters of the South Down militia are here. The Maze racecourse is just on the outskirts of the town. The linen trade is carried on vigorously. Hillsborough was founded by Sir A. Hill in the time of Charles I., and constituted a parliamentary borough by charter of Charles II. The corporation consists of a sovereign, 12 burgesses, &c. The town is much indebted to its late owner, the Marquis of Down, for numerous improvements. Courts leet and baron are held here. The castle, which was built in the time of Charles I., was a place of great strength, and a royal garrison. William III. encamped beneath its walls at the Revolution. Wednesday is market day. Fairs are held on the 19th February, 20th May, 19th August, and 18th November.

HILLSDALE, a hmlt. in the par. of Grindon, co. Stafford, 9 miles N.E. of Cheadle.

HILLSEA, a hmlt. in the par. of Wymering, co. Hants, 3 miles N.E. of Portsmouth. Here is a lunatic asylum.

HILLSIDE, a tythg. in the par. of Odiham, co. Hants, 2 miles from Odiham, and 21 N.E. of Winchester. It is situated near the Basingstoke canal.

HILLSIDE, a vil. and post-office station in the par. of Montrose, co. Forfar, Scotland, near Montrose. There is also a post-office station of this name in the co. Aberdeen.

HILL SOUTH, a hmlt. in the hund. of Leyland, co. Lancaster, 2 miles from Chorley. It is situated near the river Yarrow and the Leeds canal.

HILLSTREET, a vil. in the pars. of Aughrim and Kilmore, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Elphin.

HILLSWICK, a postal vil. and minor seaport, in the par. of Northmaven, N.W. Shetland islands, N.E. coast of Scotland, 23 miles N.W. of Lerwick. It stands on a creek indenting the bay of St. Magnus, and forms a very excellent harbour.

HILL-TOP, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of North Bierley, par. of Bradford, West Riding co. York, 2 miles from Bradford.

HILL-TOP, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Lindley, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Huddersfield.

HILL-TOP, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Kimberworth, par. of Rotherham, West Riding co. York, 2 miles W. of Rotherham.

HILL-TOP, a hmlt. in the par. of Sheffield, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Sheffield.

HILL-TOP, a tnshp. in the par. of Wragby, upper div. of the wap. of Osgoldcross, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Pontefract. This township comprises several scattered hamlets forming part of the town of Wragby.

HILLTOWN, a post-office vil. in the par. of Clonduff, bar. of Upper Iveagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles S.S.E. of Rathfryland. It is situated beneath the Eagle Mountain, near the banks of the river Bann. The Marquis of Downshire is the proprietor. It is a chief police station, and contains the parish church of Clonduff and two chapels. A market is held on Saturday, and fairs on the second Tuesday in every month.

HILLTOWN, or HALLTON, a vil. in the par. of Fearn, co. Ross, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Tain. It is situated on the Moray Frith.

HILL-UPON-COTT, a tnshp. in the par. of Bitterley, co. Salop, 5 miles W. of Cleobury Mortimer.

HILLWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Longdon, co. Worcester, 2 miles S.W. of Upton-on-Severn.

HILLYLAND, a vil. in the par. of Tibbermore, co. Perth, Scotland, 4 miles W. of Perth.

HILPERTON, a par. in the hund. of Melksham, co. Wilts, 1½ mile N.E. of the Trowbridge railway station, its post town, 2 miles S.E. of Bradford, and 4 S.W. of Melksham. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Avon and Avon and Kennet canal. There is a good wharf on its banks, partly in this parish and partly in that of Trowbridge. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the cloth trade. The manufacture of fine broadcloth and kerseymeres was formerly carried on. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £360. The living is a rect.* with that of Whaddon annexed, in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £259. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a tower containing four bells. Here is a National school for both sexes, also places of worship for the Wesleyans and Baptists. Walter Long, Esq., is lord of the manor, and principal landowner.

HILSTON, a par. in the middle div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 9 miles N.E. of Hedon, and 14 N.E. of Hull, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the coast. The inhabitants are employed in agriculture. The soil is various and the land chiefly arable. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, val. £70. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a small edifice with a wooden turret containing one bell.

HILTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Staindrop, S.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 5 miles S.W. of Bishop Auckland.

HILTON, a par. in the hund. of Whiteway, co. Dorset, 7½ miles S.W. of Blandford, its post town. It is a small agricultural parish, situated under Bulbarrow Camp, and contains the hmlts. of Aller, Anstey, and Hartsfoot Lane. Bog iron and bituminous schist, or slate coal, are found in abundance. There are numerous mineral springs in the neighbourhood. Roman and early English coins have been found, also geological remains, consisting of oyster shells nine inches in diameter, large scallop and mussel shells, cornua amononis, mineralised wood, and a quantity of pyrites. The soil is heavy, producing excellent wheat, and is in some parts chalk alternated with gravel. There is a considerable extent of orchard and garden ground, and some waste specimens of iron ore, dug at Belchalwel, have been found to contain four grains of gold in the pound weight. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £273, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square embattled tower. There is a parochial school for both sexes.

HILTON, a par. in the W. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Yarm, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Stokesley. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Tees. It is wholly agricultural, and the houses are of a straggling form. The soil is clay intermixed with gravel, and the land is chiefly arable. The parish derived its name from the family of Hilton, to whom the estate belonged in the reign of Henry III. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £12 12*s*. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £50. The church is situated in the centre of the village, and is a small structure, with a tower containing two bells.

HILTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wolverhampton, E. div. of the hund. of Cuttlestone, co. Stafford, 5 miles N.E. of Wolverhampton. It formerly had a small Cistercian Abbey, founded in 1223, which was given to the Astons of Tixal at the Dissolution. Here was anciently a chapel, dedicated to St. John the Baptist.

HILTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Marston-upon-Dove, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 3 miles N.W. of Egginton station, 5 from Burton, and 8½ S.W. of Derby. It contains the ext. par. place of Hargate. Here is a school for the education of children above seven years old, erected in 1655 by Arthur and Thomas Harison, which is endowed with about 14 acres of land. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. The executors of the late William Mousley, Esq., are lords of the manor.

HILTON, a vil. in the par. and co. of Inverness, Scotland, not far from the town of Inverness.

HILTON, a par. in the hund. of Toseland, co. Huntingdon, 3 miles S. of St. Ives. The Roman road, Ermine Street, passed near this place. The surface is flat, and the soil clay, alternated with gravel. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Fen-Stanton. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is an ancient structure. The charities produce about £30 per annum.

HILTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Worfield, co. Salop, 5 miles N.E. of Bridgnorth.

HILTON, or HELTON-BACON, a tnshp. in the par. of Appleby St. Michael, East ward, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles E. of Appleby, its post town and nearest railway station. It is situated immediately at the foot of Roman Fell, and on a branch of the river Eden, near Hilton Fell, and formerly belonged to the Viponts, Bacons, Heltons, &c. Here are some rich lead mines, worked by the London Lead Company, who have smelting works here. There is a church for the villages of Hilton and Murton, the living of which is a perpet. cur., in the patron. of the Vicar of St. Michael's, Appleby. It is dedicated to St. John, and situated at a bleak place midway between the two villages. There is also an endorsed school for the villages of Hilton and Murton. Hilton was the birthplace of Christopher Bainbridge, who attained the dignity of Cardinal of St. Praxis, at Rome, where he died in 1514. The land is very hilly, and a large portion of it moor. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor.

HILTOWN, an old par., now incorporated with Whitsome, in co. Berwick, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Chirnside.

HIMBLETON, a par. in the middle div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 7 miles N.E. of Worcester, its post town, 5 S.E. of Droitwich, and 2 E. of the Dunhampstead railway station. The parish is situated on a branch of the river Avon, and contains the hmlt. of Shell. Dean's brook runs near the village. It is a meet for the Worcestershire hounds. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1779. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £110, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, has a wooden tower containing four bells. The parochial charities, formerly of great value, are lost, with the exception of Andrew Baker's £1 per annum, which is distributed in bread every Easter. The Dean and Chapter of Worcester are lords of the manor.

HIMLEY, a par. in the N. div. of the hund. of Seisdon, co. Stafford, 4 miles W. of Dudley, its post town, and 3 N. of the Brierley railway station. It is a small village situated near the river Stour, and the Stafford and Birmingham canal. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of blade, mill, and edge tools. Courts leet and baron are held annually, and there is a copyhold court. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £312. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £315. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was erected in 1764, by the first Lord Dudley and Ward. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. Himley Hall is the principal seat.

HINCASTER, a tnshp. in the par. of Heversham, ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 2 miles N.E. of Milnthorpe railway station, and 4 S. of Kendal. It is situated on the Lancaster canal and railway. Hincaster was formerly a Roman station. Lady Howard is lady of the manor.

HINCHINBROOK, an ext. par. place, principally within the hund. of Hurstingstone, but partly in the borough of Huntingdon, co. Huntingdon, half a mile W. of Huntingdon. It was given by William the Conqueror to the nuns of Eltesley, in Cambridgeshire, and was valued at the Dissolution at £19 9*s.* 2*d.* The site was subsequently given to the Cromwell family, who built Hinchinbrook House, where Sir Henry, the "Golden knight," entertained Queen Elizabeth, and his son, Sir Oliver (uncle of the Protector), received James I., with his whole court, on his arrival from Scotland. The mansion subsequently came to the Montagues, and now belongs to the Earl of Sandwich, who takes from it the title of viscount. There is a noble bay window in the hall, and a gallery of portraits, but the decorations have sustained considerable injury from a fire which occurred in the present century.

HINCKFORD, a hund. in co. Essex, contains the pars. of Alphamstone, Ashen, Ballingdon, Belchamp-Otton, Belchamp St. Paul, Belchamp Walter, Belchamp-North-Wood, Belchamp-North-End, Birdbrook, Bocking, Borley, Braintree, Bulmer, Bumpstead-Steeple, Felstead, Finchingfield, Foxearth, Gestingthorpe, Gosfield, Halstead, Hedingham (Castle and Sible), Great and Little Henny, Lamarsh, Liston, Great and Little Maplestead, Middleton, Ovington, Panfield, Pebmarsh, Pentlow, Rayne, Ridgwell, Great Saling, Shalford, Stambourne, Stebbing, Stisted, Sturmere, Tilbury, Toppesfield, Twinstead, Wethersfield, Wickham St. Paul, Great and Little Yeldham, and parts of Bures St. Mary and Kedington, comprising an area of 109,610 acres.

HINCKLEY, a par., post and market town, in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 13 miles N.E. of Coventry, 14 S.W. of Leicester, and 5 E. of Nuneaton. It is a station on the Hinckley and Nuneaton branch of the South Leicestershire railway. The town is situated near the Ashby-de-la-Zouch canal, in the southern division of Leicestershire, for which it is a polling-place. It contains the hmlts. of Hydes Pastures and Wykin, and was formerly a borough and assize town. Hinckley parish lies about 2 miles N. of the Roman Watling Street, and formerly belonged to Hugh-de-Grentemaisnel, who built a castle here, and a small priory as a cell to Lira Abbey, in France. The manor of Hinckley is now held as a feoffment for the town, the value being very inconsiderable. Most of the inhabitants are engaged in malting, basket-making, rope-making, needle-making, framesmithing, and coarse stocking-making—the latter being carried on to a considerable extent, there being above 2,000 frames and looms at work in the parish. The town of Hinckley is governed by a mayor, 5 headboroughs, and 2 constables, chosen at the annual court-leet of the lord of the manor. It consists of two liberties —viz. the borough and bond—and is situated on a lofty eminence. It contains some good streets, and is well paved and lighted with gas. It contains two banks, savings-bank, townhall, union poorhouse, mechanics' institution, gasworks, fire-brigade engine-house, and police station. Petty sessions are held every alternate Monday in the townhall. The steam corn-mill, erected in 1846 at an outlay of £10,000, has been converted into the Great Midland Sewing-Mill. Hinckley is the head of a Poor-law Union comprising 11 parishes or townships, of which 9 are in the county of Leicester and 2 in that of Warwick. The living is a vic.* with the rect. of Stoke Golding and the cur. of Dadlington annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £545, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, was built in the reign of Edward I. It is a commodious structure, with a tower crowned with a lofty spire, containing a quarter-chime clock and peal of eight bells. The roof is of richly-carved oak, and the interior is furnished with a beautiful organ, value upwards of £500. There is also a chapel-of-ease, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £100. The parochial charities produce about £713 per annum. The Independents, Primitive Methodists, Wesleyans, General Baptists, and Roman Catholics have each a chapel. There are National, Sunday, and infant schools, besides Alderman Newton's free school for 25 boys. There are several mineral springs in this parish; one of them being on the property of Mr. Hollier, who has built some baths. Monday is market day. Fairs are held on the first, second, and third Mondays after Epiphany, on Whit-Monday, and the Monday prior to the 26th August; also the first Monday in November for cattle, horses, sheep, &c.

HINDERCLAY, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourn, co. Suffolk, 2 miles N.W. of Botesdale, and 11 N. of Stowmarket. The parish is bounded on the N. by the lesser Ouse, which separates it from the county of Norfolk. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £408. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square embattled tower. The charities produce about £25 per annum.

HINDERWELL, a par. in the E. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 9 miles N.W. of Whitby, its railway station and post town. It is situated on the coast, and contains the vils. of Roxby, Runswick, and Staithes. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries. Ironstone is worked. In 1603 an Algerine ship infected with the plague was wrecked upon this coast, and communicated the disease to the inhabitants of the village, many of whom died. The living is a rect.* annexed to the cur. of Roxby, in the dioc. of York, val. £494. The church is a stone structure erected in 1817, and has a square tower containing two bells. It is dedicated to St. Hilda, and in the churchyard is a holy well called St. Hilda's, which has given name to the parish. The parochial charities produce about £5 12*s.* 6*d.* per annum. The Marquis of Normanby is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

HINDFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Whittington, co. Salop, 3 miles N.E. of Oswestry. It is situated on the Ellesmere canal.

HINDLETHWAITE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Carlton Highdale, and par. of Coverham, North Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Middleham. It is situated near the river Cover.

HINDLEY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Wigan, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S.E. of Wigan, its post town, 7 from Bolton, and 17¾ from Manchester. It is a station on the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The village, which is very considerable, is situated on the old road from Wigan to Bolton. There are some extensive collieries and cotton-mills. In the vicinity is a burning well of cold water, produced by the decomposition of water acting upon metallic ores and sulphate of iron, &c. It is similar to that at Petoa Mila, near Fierenzota, in Italy, except that the flame of the Italian spring is perpetual in the absence of heavy rain, and consists of sulphuric gas. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £250. The church, which was rebuilt in 1766, is dedicated to All Saints. It is a brick structure, with a tower containing one bell. In the interior of the church are brasses and several mural monuments. The register is ancient. The parochial charities produce about £85, of which £10 go to the endowed grammar school founded by Mrs. Abram. There is also a National school for both sexes, and three infant schools. Hindley Hall is the principal residence. An annual fair is held on the first Thursday in August.

HINDOLVESTON, a par. in the hund. of Eynsford, co. Norfolk, 3 miles N. of Foulsham. The land is chiefly arable, with some meadow and pasture. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the river Bure. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £434, and the vicarial for £50. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £76, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. George, has a square embattled tower. The Independents and Wesleyans have places of worship, and there is a National school. The parochial charities produce £53 per annum.

HINDON, a par., post and market town in the hund. of Downton, co. Wilts, 9 miles S. of Warminster, and 16 W. of Salisbury. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the slope of one of the Wiltshire downs, near the high road from Salisbury to Taunton, and about 2 miles from the ruins of Fonthill Abbey. Hindon formerly belonged to the Beauchamps and the Hydes, to whom it gave title of baron. It was a prescriptive borough returning two members to parliament from the reign of Henry VI., until it was disfranchised by the Reform Act. A great portion of the town was destroyed by fire in 1752. A considerable trade was done in silk twist and kerseymeres, but both these manufactures have now become extinct. Petty sessions are held fortnightly at the Sessions Hall. Hindon is a polling-place for the southern division of the county. The houses are principally built of stone. To the N.W. of the town, on the old Roman road leading to Old Sarum, are the remains of an ancient British settlement called Stockton Works. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £75. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing six bells. The church was thoroughly restored and enlarged in 1836. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have places of worship. The charities produce about £104, of which £93 goes to the support of a free school.

HINDRINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of North Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 3 miles E. of New Walsingham. The land is extremely fertile and chiefly arable. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the river Stiffkey. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £800, and the vicarial for £322. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £136, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, has a lofty square embattled tower. At the E. end of the N. aisle is a small chapel with remains of ancient stained glass in the windows. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have places of worship, and there is a National school. The parochial charities produce about £60 per annum.

HINGHAM, a par. and decayed market town in the hund. of Forehoe, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N.W. of Attleborough, and 14 W. by S. of Norwich. This place, formerly called Hincham, is situated near the source of the river Yare. It anciently belonged to the earls of Pembroke, from whom it passed to the Morleys and Wodehouses. The houses in the village are modern, the greater part of the town having been consumed by fire in the middle of the last century. The inhabitants are exempt from serving on juries at the assizes and sessions, the manor forming part of the ancient demesne of the crown. Courts baron and customary courts for the manors of Hingham and Hingham-Gurney are held on the 25th of October. The market, which was formerly held on Saturday, has long been discontinued. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £920, in the patron. of Lord Wodehouse of Kimberley. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a lofty tower of flint and stone, erected in the reign of Edward III. It had anciently seven chantry chapels, and as many guilds, and was richly decorated in the interior; but in 1605 was barbarously mutilated by Robert Peak, then rector, being a violent schismatic. In 1812 Lord Wodehouse presented the E. window of the chancel, which is 36 feet high by 18 wide, and is divided into seven compartments filled with ancient stained glass representing the history of the Saviour, and brought from a nunnery in the Netherlands. The parochial charities produce about £70 per annum, exclusive of the endowment of the free grammar school founded by William Parlett in 1727, which has an income from endowment of £170. There are also National and Sunday schools. This place gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of Norwich.

HINKSEY, NORTH, or FERRY, a par. in the hund. of Hormer, co. Berks, 2 miles W. of Oxford, and 5 N. of Abingdon. This place was anciently called Hengestseigge, and was given in 955 to Abingdon Abbey. It includes part of the tything of Botley, and until recently formed a chapelry in the parish of Cumnor. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated on the western bank of the Isis. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1776. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £92. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, has two Norman doorways.

HINKSEY, SOUTH, a par. as above, 1 mile S.E. of North Hinksey. This parish, which is of small extent, contains the waterworks for the supply of Oxford. The tithes were commuted for land and corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1814. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. with Wootton annexed, £183. The church is dedicated to St. John.

HINLIP, or HINDLIP, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 4 miles N.E. of Worcester, its post town, 4 S.W. of Droitwich, and close to the Fearnall railway station. It is a small village, situated near the Worcester and Birmingham canal, at an intermediate distance between the Worcester and Droitwich roads. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £202. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower containing two bells. Hinlip House is the principal residence, and is the seat of Lord Southwell, who is lord of the manor.

HINSTOCK, a par. in the Drayton div., hund. of North Bradford, co. Salop, 5 miles S. of Market Drayton, its post town, and 6½ of the Newport railway station. It is situated near the Birmingham Junction canal, and on the turnpike road from Newport to Whitchurch and Chester. Stone for building is quarried. There is a mineral spring in the neighbourhood. The soil is various, but chiefly light and sandy, and the surface is diversified with hills. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £527 17*s.* 6*d.* The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £504. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, is a stone structure, with a tower containing a clock and four bells. It was enlarged in 1851. There is a National school for children of both sexes, also a place of worship for the Wesleyans. Hinstock Hall is the principal residence, situated in the midst of considerable plantations, about 1 mile N.W. of the village. Richard Corbet, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HINTLESHAM, a par. in the hund. of Samford, co. Suffolk, 4 miles E. of Hadleigh, and 5½ W. of. Ipswich. It is situated on a tributary of the river Orwell. The surface is level, and the soil a mixed loam. Here is a meet for the Essex and Suffolk hounds. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £582. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £477. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a brass of the 14th century, and tombs of the Timperleys, who formerly resided at the Hall, subsequently the seat of the Lloyds and Anstruthers. The parochial charities produce £20 per annum, including a small school endowment.

HINTON, a tythg. in the par. of Berkeley, upper div. of the hund. of Berkeley, co. Gloucester, 2 miles from Berkeley. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the ship canal.

HINTON, a tythg. in the par. of Steeple-Ashton, hund. of Whorwelsdown, co. Wilts, 3 miles S. of Melksham.

HINTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Dyrham, lower div. of the hund. of Grumbolds Ash, co. Gloucester, 1 mile N. of Dyrham, and 3 miles S. of Chipping Sodbury. Until recently it formed a distinct parish.

HINTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Woodford, co. Northampton, 8 miles S.W. of Daventry. There is a mineral spring.

HINTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Whitchurch, hund. of North Bradford, co. Salop, 1 mile N.E. of Whitchurch.

HINTON, or HINTON ADMIRAL, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Christchurch, co. Hants, 4 miles N.E. of Christchurch.

HINTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Pontesbury, co. Salop, 6 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury.

HINTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 4 miles N.W. of Cleobury Mortimer.

HINTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Mudford, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.E. of Yeovil.

HINTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Blythburgh, co. Suffolk, 4 miles S.E. of Halesworth.

HINTON AMPNER, a par. in the upper half of the hund. of Fawley, Winchester and N. divs. of co. Hants, 9 miles S.E. of the Winchester station, and 4 S.E. of New Alresford, its post town. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £453. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £402, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a small pointed tower containing three bells. In 1738, William Blake founded and endowed a school for the instruction of upwards of fifty boys and girls. It has an endowment of £140 per annum.

HINTON-BLEWETT, a par. in the hund. of Chewton, co. Somerset, 8 miles N.E. of Wells, and 9 S. of Bristol. It contains the hmlt. of South Widcombe. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £155. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £238. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

HINTON, BROAD. See BROAD HINTON, co. Wilts.

HINTON, CHARTERHOUSE. See CHARTERHOUSE-HINTON, co. Somerset.

HINTON, CHERRY. See CHERRY HINTON, co. Cambridge.

HINTON, GREAT, a tythg. in the par. of Steeple-Ashton, hund. of Whorwelsdown, co. Wilts, 3 miles N.E. of Trowbridge.

HINTON-IN-THE-HEDGES, a par. in the hund. of King's Sutton, co. Northampton, 2 miles W. of Brackley. The surface, which is undulating, is well wooded, chiefly with oak and beech. The land is divided between arable, pasture, and meadow. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act obtained in 1766. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val., with Stean annexed, £343. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structure, containing a monument, with the recumbent effigies of a knight and his lady. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum, chiefly the endowment of Lord Crewe's almshouses. Near the village are the remains of the family mansion of the Lovells.

HINTON, LITTLE, or HINTON PARVA, a par. in the hund. of Elstub and Everley, co. Wilts, 6 miles E. of Swindon, and 4 S.W. of Shrivenham railway station. Farringdon is its post town. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £520. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £444, in the patron. of the Bishop of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Swithin, has a tower containing four bells. The charities produce about £14 per annum.

HINTON-MARTELL, a par. in the hund. of Badbury, co. Dorset, 4 miles N.W. of Wimborne, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Cranborne. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable, and the uplands embellished with wood, the prevailing timber being oak and ash. The soil is a strong clay alternated with chalk, which forms the substratum. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £360. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £331. The church is an ancient edifice, dedicated to St. John. There is a National school for both sexes. The Earl of Shaftesbury is lord of the manor.

HINTON-ON-THE-GREEN, a par. in the hund. of Tibaldstone, co. Gloucester, 3 miles S.W. of Evesham, its post town. It is a station on the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton railway. The village, which is of small extent, and wholly agricultural, is situated on the river Isborne. It was anciently called Hynetune, and was given to Gloucester Abbey in 981. It was formerly a market town. Two-thirds of the rectorial tithes belong to the Bishop of Gloucester, and one-third to the rector. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing five bells. John Addison B. Cresswell, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HINTON-PARVA, or STANBRIDGE, a par. in the hund. of Badbury, co. Dorset, 2½ miles N.W. of Wimborne, its post town, and 7½ S.W. of Cranborne. The river Allen flows by the parish on the W. The soil is a rich loam, alternated with sand, on a substratum of chalk. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £77. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £80. The church, dedicated to St. Kenelm, is an ancient structure, and has been thoroughly restored. Sir C. Glyn, Bart., is lord of the manor.

HINTON ST. GEORGE, a par. in the hund. of Crewkerne, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.W. of Crewkerne, and 4 from Ilminster, its post town. It anciently belonged to the Powtnels and Denebands, from whom it came to the Pouletts. From the higher lands is a view of both channels. The village, which is considerable, is chiefly agricultural. Hinton Park is the seat of Earl Poulett, who takes hence the title of viscount. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £197. The church, dedicated to St. George, is a fine structure, containing several interesting monuments of the Poulett family. The parochial charities produce about £68 per annum, including the endowment of the almshouses. There is a village school. Earl Poulett is lord of the manor.

HINTON ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of Sturminster-Newton-Castle, Sturminster div. of co. Dorset, 1½ mile N. of Sturminster, and 8 miles S.W. of Shaftesbury. Blandford is its post town. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Stour, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Iwerne-Minster, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square tower. The register dates from 1534. The church contains some very antique monuments. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes; also a place of worship for the Primitive Methodists.

HINTON, TARRANT. See TARRANT HINTON, co. Dorset.

HINTON-WALDRIDGE, or WALDRIST, a par. in the hund. of Ganfield, co. Berks, 6 miles N.E. of Farringdon, and 8 N.W. of Abingdon. The par., which is bounded on the N. by the river Isis, contains the hmlt. of Duxford. The village, which is now an insignificant place, was anciently a market town, under the St. Valerys, to whom the manor belonged. The land is chiefly arable, and from the higher grounds are extensive views, embracing Blenheim and Witney. There are quarries of good freestone for building purposes. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1761. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £370. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient structure. There is a National school. Near Windmill Hill is an old camp.

HINTS, a par. in the S. div. of the hund. of Offlow, co. Stafford, 4 miles S.W. of Tamworth, its post town, 6 S.E. of Lichfield, and 3 N.W. of the Wilnecote railway station. It was formerly called Hendon, and was an old town of the Saxons, on Watling Street. The par. includes the ext. par. lib. of Canwell, where was formerly a priory, founded by Gever Riddle in 1142, for Benedictine monks, and which was one of those assigned to Cardinal Wolsey towards the erection and endowment of his proposed colleges. The surface is diversified with hills clothed with oak and ash. The soil is generally a rich loam, producing good crops of barley and turnips. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of meadow and pasture. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Weeford, in the dioc. of Lichfield, joint val. £300. The church, which is built on the site of an older one, contains several monuments of the Floyers of Hints Hall, and the Lawleys of Canwell. Here is a free school, erected in 1859. Hints Hall is the principal residence. A Roman pig of lead, 150 lbs. in weight, was found near a tumulus on Hints Common in 1792. It bore the inscription in bas relief, "Imp. Vesp. VII. T. imp. V. cos." John Floyer, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HINWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Puddington, hund. of Willey, co. Bedford, 4 miles N.W. of Harrold. The principal residence is Hinwick Hall, built about 1710 by General Livesay.

HINXHILL, a par. in the hund. of Chart, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 3 miles S.E. of Ashford, its railway station and post town. It is a small village, situated near the Canterbury railway, and was anciently called Hengestelle. In the year 1727 a subterraneous fire occurred in the valley between Godcheap in this parish and that of Wye, consuming 3 acres of land, and lasting six weeks. The land is partly in hops. The parish is of small extent, and the village comprises only a few farmhouses. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £195 10*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £187. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from 1570. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum.

HINXTON, a par. in the hund. of Whittlesford, co. Cambridge, 4 miles S.W. of Linton, and 9 S.E. of Cambridge. The Cambridge section of the Great Eastern railway passes near the village. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and some of the women in the working of muslin. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1820. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £150, in the patron. of Jesus College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains a brass of Sir T. Skelton, bearing date 1416. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum.

HINXWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Odsey, co. Herts, 5 miles N. of Baldock, its railway station and post town, and 9 from Royston. The village, which is small, is situated on the borders of Cambridgeshire and Bedfordshire. Roman remains have been found here. The land is chiefly arable, and the soil a strong clay, producing good wheat crops. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1802. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a low embattled tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The ancient manor houses, known as Hinxworth Place and Hinxworth House, are now occupied as farmhouses. In the neighbourhood have been discovered urns containing burned bones; also a tribulus, lachrymatories of glass, cisterns of red earthenware, and two beautiful and very scarce Grecian coins, one of Mithridates, King of Pontus, the other of Perseus, King of Macedonia.

HIPPENSCOMBE, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Kinwardstone, co. Wilts, 2½ miles N.E. of Chute, and 4 N.E. of Ludgershall.

HIPPERHOLME, a tnshp. in the par. of Halifax, lower div. of the wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Halifax, its post town, 2 N.W. of Brighouse, and 4 W. of Low-Moor. It is a station on the branch line of the Manchester and Leeds railway, which passes along the S. bank of the river Calder. Facilities for water-carriage are afforded by the Calder and Hebble navigation. The village, which is very considerable, is situated on the old London road between Leeds and Halifax. This place takes its name from its elevated situation, overlooking the fertile valley of the Calder. The tnshp. comprises the hmlts. of Lightcliffe and Coleys. The cotton and silk manufactures are extensively carried on. There are also stone quarries, collieries, and a tannery. The land is principally in pasture. The soils are light and sandy, with a substratum abounding in coal and freestone. The township is comprised within the manor of Wakefield, for which a court leet and baron is held half-yearly. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the vicar. The church, dedicated to St. John, which was rebuilt in 1800, has a square tower containing one bell. The parochial charities produce about £155 per annum, of which £119 goes to Broadley's free grammar school. The Wesleyans and Independents have each a place of worship. There is a National school, also a Sunday-school.

HIPSWELL, a chplry. in the par. of Catterick, wap. of East Hang, North Riding co. York, 2½ miles S.E. of Richmond, and 3 N.W. of Catterick, its post town. It is situated near the river Swale, and contains the tnshps. of Colburn and Scotton. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Catterick. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a modern stone structure, with a tower containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There is a National school supported by voluntary contributions. The Hon. Charles Wandesford is lord of the manor.

HIR, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanarth, co. Cardigan, 4 miles S.W. of Aberayron.

HIRAEL, a vil. in the par. of Bangor, co. Carnarvon, 2 miles from Bangor.

HIRAETHOG, a mountain range of co. Denbigh, running from Darwen to Aberconway.

HIRCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. and borough of Kidderminster, co. Worcester, 1 mile N.E. of Kidderminster.

HIRNANT, a par. in the hund. of Llanfyllin, co. Montgomery, 6 miles N.W. of Llanfyllin, and 3 from Llanganog. Oswestry is its post town. The par. contains the tnshps. of Cwmmwr, Fedw, and Llan. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a rect.* in the archdeac. and dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £135, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Illog. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. In the vicinity are some earthworks.

HIRST, a vil. in the par. of Ecclesfield, wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N. of Sheffield. Coal and iron are worked. The inhabitants are engaged in the cutlery and hardware manufactures.

HIRST, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Longwood, and par. of Huddersfield, West Riding co. York, 3 miles W. of Huddersfield.

HIRWAIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Merthyr-Tydfil, hund. of Caerphilly, co. Glamorgan, 7 miles from Merthyr-Tydfil, and 22 N.W. of Cardiff. It is a station on the Vale of Neath railway.

HISLAND, a tnshp. in the par. of Oswestry, co. Salop, 2 miles S.E. of Oswestry.

HISTON, a par. in the hund. of Chesterton, co. Cambridge, 5 miles N. of Cambridge by the Cambridge and Wisbeach section of the Great Eastern railway, on which it is a station. The village is considerable. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1806. The living consists of the vics.* of St. Andrew and St. Etheldreda united, in the dioc. of Ely, val. £400. The church of St. Andrew is a cruciform structure, with a square embattled tower. The church of St. Etheldreda has long since been demolished. The Wesleyans have a place of worship and there is a National school. The parochial charities produce £80 per annum, of which £38 is the endowment to March's free school.

HITCHAM, a par. in the hund. of Cosford, co. Suffolk, 2 miles N.W. of Bildeston, and 6 N.W. of Hadleigh. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the river Bret. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,150. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £865, in the patron. of the crown. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The charities produce £55 per annum. There are a National school and almshouses.

HITCHAM, a par. in the hund. of Burnham, co. Bucks, 2 miles N.E. of Maidenhead, its post town. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated near the Thames. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £364, in the patron. of the Provost and Fellows of Eton College. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Mary. It contains two brasses, dating from 1560, and some stained-glass windows in the chancel. Hitcham House, the old seat of the Clarkes, was visited by Queen Elizabeth in 1602.

HITCHAM. See HEACHAM, co. Norfolk.

HITCHENDEN, or HUGHENDON, a par. in the hund. of Desborough, co. Bucks, 1½ mile N. of High Wycombe. The par. which is of large extent, contains the chplry. of Prestwood and the lib. of Brands-Fee. It is supposed to have been a Roman settlement from the number of coins of Hadrian and Trajan which were found in 1795. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £280. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient Norman structure, with a square tower. The exterior has recently been beautified, and several windows of ancient stained glass inserted. It contains a curious antique font, and monuments to the family of Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester, who retired here after the death of the Earl at the battle of Evesham; also a white marble monument, by Garrard, to Ellen Countess of Conyngham. The charities produce £165 per annum, including an endowment, left by Ellen Countess of Conyngham, for poor clergy and their widows. The mansion of Rockhall, once occupied by the Montforts, has recently been rebuilt. The Right Hon. B. Disraeli is lord of the manor.

HITCHIN, a hund. in the co. Herts, contains the pars. of Hitchin, Ickleford, Ippollitts, Kimpton, King's Walden, Lilley, Offley, and Pirton, comprising an area of 27,280 acres. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of St. Alban's and dioc. of Rochester.

HITCHIN, a par., post and market town, in the above hund., co. Herts, 13½ miles from Royston, 15 N.W. of Hertford, and 32 from London by the Great Northern railway, on which it is a station. It is also connected with the Great Eastern and Midland lines. It is a thriving place, situated near the river Hiz, and is a polling and petty sessions town. The par. contains the hmlts. of Langley, Walsworth, and Preston, and is the head of a Poor-law Union, comprising 28 pars. This place anciently formed part of the royal demesne of the Mercian kings, and was given by Edward the Confessor to Harold, after whose death, at the battle of Hastings, it was retained by William the Conqueror, and is entered in Domesday Book as Hiz. It was given by William Rufus to the Baliols, who founded a preceptory of Knights Templars at Temple-Dinsley, and subsequently reverted to the crown. The town of Hitchin is situated in a valley about 1 mile distant from the railway station. It comprises twelve streets, which are well lighted with gas, and partially paved. The houses are in general built of brick. It has an extensive market-place, corn exchange, two banks, and a savings-bank. At the townhall petty sessions are held every Tuesday, also the board of guardians meet every Tuesday. A county court is held every alternate month. The mechanics' institute, containing an excellent library, is held at the townhall. The town is divided into Bancroft, Tilehouse, and Bridge wards, for each of which two constables and two head-boroughs are appointed at the court-leet of the lord of the manor, held at Michaelmas. There are several benefit societies, and a burial board under the Burial Act. The new cemetery is situated on Kershaw's Hill. The woollen manufacture has become extinct, but a brisk trade is now done in corn, flour, malt, and brewing. The straw-plait trade is also carried on. In the vicinity are several barrows, and at Wilbury Hill, on Icknield Street, is a Roman camp. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £650, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is situated near the centre of the town. It is a noble structure, built in the reign of Henry VI., and recently restored at great expense. It has a tower crowned with a small octagonal spire, and containing eight bells. The whole fabric is embattled and beautified with pinnacles. The interior of the church contains an old font, altar-piece by Rubens, six brasses bearing date 1440, and monuments of the Baliols, Kendales, Abbots, Skynners, and Radcliffes, of Hitchin Priory. The register dates from 1562. A district church is now building near the railway station. The charities produce about £825 per annum, which are devoted towards apprenticing poor children, maintaining several almshouses, &c. There are National and other schools. The union poorhouse and the North Herts and South Beds infirmary are situated in this parish. The principal residences are, Hitchin Priory, with traces of the Carmelite Priory, founded in the reign of Edward II., Mount Pleasant, and New England. The newspapers published in the town are, the Hertfordshire Express, and the Herts and Beds Gazette, both of which are weekly papers, also the Monthly Advertiser. Market day is Tuesday. Cattle and pleasure fairs are held on Tuesdays and Wednesdays in Easter and Whitsun weeks. Large cattle sales also take place every market day.

HITTISLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Wonford, co. Devon, 7 miles S.W. of Crediton, its post town, 11 E. of Okehampton, and 5 S.W. of Coplestone railway station. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Yew, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is rather heavy, lying on a tenacious clay, but produces good crops of wheat, barley, and potatoes. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £85. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £68. The church is an ancient stone edifice, with a tower containing three bells, and is dedicated to St. Andrew. Here is a place of worship for the Wesleyans, and a Church school supported by voluntary contributions. C. B. Calmady, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HIVE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Gilberdike, par. of Eastrington, East Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Howden.

HIXON, a tnshp. in the pars. of Colwich and Stowe, co. Stafford, 6 miles N.E. of Stafford. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the river Trent. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £60, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is modern.

HOARCROSS, a hmlt. in the pars. of Yoxhall and Hanbury, co. Stafford, 4 miles S.E. of Abbots Bromley.

HOARSTONE, a hmlt. in the par. and borough of Kidderminster, hund. of Halfshire, co. Worcester, 2 miles from Kidderminster.

HOATH, a par. in the hund. of Bleangate, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 6 miles N.E. of Canterbury, its post town, and 3 N.E. of the Sturry railway station. The village is small, and the land partly in hops. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £105. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Reculver, in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing three bells. The Archbishop of Canterbury is lord of the manor.

HOATHLY, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Shiplake, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 5 miles S.E. of Uckfield, and 8 N.E. of Lewes. Hurst Green is its post-office. The village is situated on the road from London to Eastbourne, and contains several good houses. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £261. The church is a modern structure, except the tower, which is ancient, and contains a clock and five bells. The Earl of Chichester is lord of the manor and principal owner of the soil.

HOATHLY, WEST, or WESTHOTHLY, a par. in the hund. of Buttinghill, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 4 miles S.W. of East Grinstead. The village, which is considerable, is situated on an eminence commanding extensive views of the South Downs, and near the London and Brighton road. On Selsfield Common was once a beacon. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £150. The church is an ancient structure with a tower surmounted by a shingled spire, which is conspicuous for many miles round. There is also a chapel-of-ease at Bush Grove. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there are National and Sunday schools. The charities produce £11 per annum.

HOBBERLOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Alnwick, co. Northumberland, 2 miles from Alnwick.

HOBKIRK, or HOPEKIRK, a par. and post-office vil. in the district of Jedburgh, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 8 miles S.W. of Jedburgh, and 53 from Edinburgh. It is 12 miles long by 3 broad, and is bounded by Cavers, Bedrule, Southdean, Castleton, Teviothead, and Kirkton. The surface is mountainous, consisting of extensive sheep-walks, with a small proportion of good arable soil. The river Rule rises in several small streams in the S. of the parish, and pursues its course through a great part of the interior. The principal summits are, Winbrough, Fanna, Rubberslaw, and Bonchester. This par. is in the presb. of Jedburgh and synod of Merse and Teviotdale, in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £241. The church was built about 1700. Here is a Free church, a parish and two non-parochial schools. Stobbs is the seat of Sir William Elliot, Bart., and the birthplace of Elliot, Lord Heathfield, Gibraltar's hero. Freestone and limestone, and a very beautiful species of jasper, are obtained. There are traces of forts on some of the hills.

HOB LINCH. See ABBOT'S LINCH, co. Worcester.

HOBY, a par. in the hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 6 miles S.W. of Melton, its post town, 9½ from Leicester, and near the Brooksby station on the Syston and Peterborough railway. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Wreak. The parish was enclosed in 1760, and the soil consists of gravel and clay. The living is a rect.* with that of Rotherby annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, joint val. £800. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing a clock and four bells. The church was restored in 1842. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. Here is an endowed National and infant school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Thomas Paget, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HOCCOM, a tnshp. in the par. of Worfield, co. Salop, 3 miles N.E. of Bridgnorth.

HOCKENHULL-STAPLEFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Tarvin, second div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, co. Chester, 5 miles E. of Chester.

HOCKERING, a par. in the hund. of Mitford, co. Norfolk, 5 miles E. of East Dereham, its post town, and 10 from Norwich. It is a small agricultural village situated on a bank of the river Trent. Here are the ruins of a castle. The land is chiefly arable and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £525. The living is a rect.* with that of Burgh-Mattishall united, in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £569. The church, which has been restored, is dedicated to St. Michael. It has a lofty embattled tower, and contains in the chancel three stone stalls. The seats are of carved oak, and the font, which is octagonal, is richly carved. The parochial charities produce about £37 per annum. Here is a free school, and in the adjacent wood are traces of an ancient castle.

HOCKERTON, a par. in the Southwell div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, co. Nottingham, 2 miles N. of Southwell, its railway station and post town, and 6 N.W. of Newark. It is situated on a branch of the river Trent. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £244. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a small stone structure, with a square tower containing three bells. There is a free school erected by the late Major-General Whetham.

HOCKHAM, a par. in the hund. of Shropham, co. Norfolk, 7 miles N.E. of Thetford, its post town, and 4 N.W. of the Harling Road railway station. Little Hockham, originally a separate parish, is now a hamlet. The inhabitants are entirely supported by agriculture. The land is chiefly arable, with some meadow and pasture and about 600 acres of fen, sands, and heath. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £275. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £275. The church, which is situated in the park, is a small edifice, dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The parochial charities produce about £27 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes recently erected at the expense of Henry S. Partridge, Esq. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. Hockham Hall, a brick mansion situated in a finely timbered park abounding in game, is the seat of H. S. Partridge, Esq., who is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

HOCKLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Chirbury, co. Salop, 4 miles N.E. of Montgomery.

HOCKLEY, or HOCKLIE, a par. in the hund. of Rochford, co. Essex, 2 miles N.E. of Rayleigh, 4 N.W. of Rochford, and 9 S.W. of Southend. Ingatestone is its post town. The village, which is small, is of ancient date and wholly agricultural. It is situated on rising ground near the navigable river Crouch, which bounds the parish on the N., and over which is a ferry at Hull-bridge. The remains of the old bridge are still to be seen. A large barrow exists in the neighbourhood. The land is chiefly arable, and the soil very fertile though heavy. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £163, in the patron. of Wadham College, Oxford. The church, which is very ancient, and partly in a ruined state, is supposed to have been built by Canute in commemoration of his victory over Edmund "Ironside" at Ashingdon. It has a very fine octagonal tower, which has been restored. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. The Baptists have a place of worship, originally built as an hotel and bath-room.

HOCKLIFFE, a par. in the hund. of Manshead, co. Beds, 3 miles N.E. of Leighton-Buzzard, and 5 S. of Woburn. It is a small village, extending near a mile long. Here was anciently an hospital founded in the reign of John. It is a meet for Baron Rothschild's hounds, whose scent is said to be spoiled by the beans grown here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £302. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower containing three bells. The Wesleyans and Independents have places of worship, and there is a National school for children of both sexes. The Grange is the principal residence. Millard Adams, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HOCKMOOR, a hmlt. in the par. of Iffley, co. Oxford, 2 miles S.E. of Oxford.

HOCKWOLD-CUM-WILTON, a par. in the hund. of Grimshoe, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N.W. of Brandon-Ferry, its post town, and 1 mile N. of Lakenhead railway station. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Brandon, a branch of the Ouse, here crossed by a suspension bridge. The par. contains the hmlt. of Redmore, and is traversed by the road from Mildenhall to Lynn. The inhabitants are chiefly supported by agriculture. In the centre of the village is a stone cross 15 feet high, supported by a ground work of brick 4 feet in height; the cross is said to be 600 years old. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £162. The living is a rect.* with the vic. of Wilton united, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. together £530, in the patron. of Caius College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a rude structure, with a square tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains some stone stalls and a piscina. Wilton church, dedicated to St. James, is a stone and flint structure, with a square tower crowned with a spire, and contains six bells. The incumbent performs divine service in each church alternately, morning and afternoon. The charities produce about £45 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, and places of worship for the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. Hockwold Hall is the principal residence.

HOCKWORTHY, a par. in the hund. of Bampton, co. Devon., 7 miles S.W. of Wellington, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Tiverton. The village, which is small, is situated on the Taunton and Exeter road, near the borders of Somersetshire. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil varies from a moderate degree of fertility to absolute sterility, the subsoil being limestone with rock. The surface is diversified with hills commanding extensive views over Dartmoor and the county of Somerset. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £271. The church, which is situated on rising ground, has a square embattled tower containing three bells. It was thoroughly restored in 1853. The parochial charities produce £1 14s. per annum out of the Thornland estate. There is a school for children of both sexes, chiefly supported by the scholars.

HODDAM, or HEADHOLM, a par. in the district of Annandale, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 4 miles N. of Annan. It contains Ecclefechan, a post town and railway station. It is 5 miles long by 2½ broad, and is bounded by Tundergarth, Middlebie, Annan, Cummertrees, and St. Mungo. The surface is hilly, but the soil in general rich and well cultivated. Brunswark Hill is the most remarkable summit, rising to an altitude of 740 feet above sea level. It has two encampments of great antiquity, and commands a most magnificent view. The river Annan traces a considerable part of the S. and S.W. border, and receives the tribute of the streams Milk and Mien. This par. is in the presb. of Annan and synod of Dumfries. The minister has a stipend of £259. The church was built in 1817. There are Free and United Presbyterian churches at Ecclefechan, and also three private and one parish school. The parish of Hoddam is made up of the old parishes of Hoddam, Ecclefechan, and Luce, united in 1609. In records of the 12th century the name is found spelt Hod-holm—Anglo-Saxon words, meaning the "head of the holm." The ancient church and hamlet of Hoddamtown belonged to the Bishop of Glasgow, and stood on the E. bank of the Annan. The ancient castle of Hoddam stood at a spot called Hallguards; it was replaced by another commenced by Lord Herries in 1437, on the opposite side of the Annan, so that Hoddam Castle is really without the parish limits. Sand and limestone prevail, and there is an abundance of clayslate and ironstone-clay.

HODDESDON, a chplry., town, and polling place, partly in the par. of Great Amwell, but chiefly in that of Broxbourne, hund. and co. of Hertford, 4 miles S.E. of Hertford, and a mile from the Broxbourne station of the Great Eastern railway. The New River and the River Lea, which is here joined by the Stort, flow through the parish. It was formerly a market town, held under the Bassingbournes, Says, and Bourchiers, and was given by Queen Elizabeth to the Cecils. The market, which was on Tuesday, has long been discontinued. The town, which adjoins the village of Broxbourne, consists principally of one street, extending along the road from London to Ware and Hertford. It contains a small townhall and police station, with a clock tower of modern date, an extensive brewery, and two flour-mills. The old carved market-house was pulled down in 1834. In the centre of the town is a conduit of soft water, the gift of Sir Marmaduke Rawdon, in the 17th century, and commemorated by the poet, Matthew Prior. Here is a first-class seminary for young ladies, known as Rawdon House, an old Elizabethan mansion, recently restored. The town is well lighted, and celebrated for its excellent angling in the Lea, which so much charmed Izaak Walton before taking his morning cup of ale with his friend, Sir Henry Wootton, at the "Old Thatched House." The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £150, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, is a commodious structure with a gable belfry. It was built in 1732, and made a district church in 1843. It is now being considerably enlarged. The Independents and Society of Friends have places of worship, and there is a Young Men's Mutual Instruction Society. There are National, British, and infant schools, partially endowed. In the vicinity are Rye House, the scene of Rumbold's plot against Charles II., and the ruin of Nether Hall, the seat of Sir Henry Colt in the reign of Henry VIII. A pleasure fair is held on the 29th June.

HODDINGTON, a tythg. in the par. of Upton Gray, hund. of Bermondspit, co. Hants, 3 miles S.W. of Odiham.

HODGESTON, a par. in the hund. of Castlemartin, co. Pembroke, 4 miles S.E. of Pembroke, its post town, and 7 from Tenby. It is situated near the coast. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £105, in the patron. of Sir Hugh Owen, Bart. Archbishop Young was born here.

HODGSON-FOLD, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Bolton, and par. of Calverley, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N. of Bradford. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the neighbouring woollen factories.

HODNET, a par. in the Drayton div. of the hund. of North Bradford, co. Salop, 6 miles S.W. of Market Drayton, its post town, 7 from Wem, and 12 N. of Wellington. It is situated on the river Tern, and on the road from Shrewsbury to Market Drayton. The par. is of large extent, containing the chplry. and tnshp. of Weston, with 12 other tnshps. It was formerly a market town, and is mentioned in Domesday Book as Odenett, whence it gave name to the hundred. It was held by Roger Montgomery, and afterwards came to the Ludlows, Vernons, &c. The greater part of the land is arable, the remainder pasture and woodland, with a small extent of common. The soil is rich, and the land well cultivated. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £1,884. The church, dedicated to St. Luke, is an ancient stone structure, with an octagon tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains some stained windows, and monuments to the Vernons, Hills of Hawkstone, and a tablet to Bishop Heber, who was rector of this parish above fifteen years. There are also two chapels-of-case—one at Weston-under-Red-Castle, and the other at Peplow. The parochial charities produce about £138 per annum. The Independents have a place of worship. There is a National school, also an endowed school. A. C. Heber Percy, Esq., is lord of the manor, and he and Lord Hill are the chief landowners. Lord Clive and Bishop Heber were both natives of this parish. Fairs are held on the Monday prior to the second Wednesday in March, 4th May, and the Monday prior to 24th October for cattle.

HODNET, UPPER AND LOWER, an ext. par. place in the Southam div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 3 miles S.E. of Southam. Here was formerly a chapel dedicated to St. Helen, now in ruins.

HODSOCK, a lordship in the par. of Blyth, Hatfield div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 2 miles S.W. of Blyth. It contains the hmlt. of Goldthorp. The land is chiefly arable. Hodsock Priory and Hodsock Park are the principal residences—the former is situated on a lofty eminence, commanding extensive views; the latter is a handsome mansion, and contains a private Roman Catholic chapel. Mrs. Ann Chambers is lady of the manor.

HODSOL-STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of Ash, hund. of Axton, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 7 miles S. of Gravesend.

HODSON, a tythg. in the par. of Chisledon, co. Wilts, 2 miles S.E. of Swindon.

HOE, a par. in the hund. of Launditch, co. Norfolk, 2½ miles N.E. of East Dereham, its railway station and post town. The village is inconsiderable, and purely agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of East Dereham, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church has a square tower. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum, with an allotment of land. Charles Lambe, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

HOE-BENHAM, a tythg. in the par. of Welford, co. Berks, 4 miles W. of Newbury.

HOE, EAST and WEST, tythgs. in the par. of Soberton, co. Hants, 4 miles E. of Bishop Waltham.

HOFFE-ROW, a tnshp. in the par. of Appleby St. Lawrence, East ward, co. Westmoreland, 2¼ miles S.W. of Appleby, 6 N.E. of Orton, and 10¼ W. of Brough. Barwise Hall, formerly the seat of the Berewyse family, is now a farmhouse. A great portion of the land is marshy. Sir Richard Tufton is lord of the manor.

HOFFLET-STOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Wigtoft, co. Lincoln, 1 mile S. of Swineshead.

HOGGESTON, or HOGSTON, a par. in the hund. of Cottesloe, co. Bucks, 3 miles S.E. of Winslow. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £280, in the patron. of Worcester College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul.

HOGHTON, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Leyland, co. Lancaster, 6 miles E. of Preston, its post town, 4 S.W. of Blackburn, and 6 N. of Chorley. It is a station on the East Lancashire railway. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the W. bank of the river Darwin, a feeder of the Dove, and near the Blackburn canal. On a lofty ridge of hills are the ruined gateway, &c., of the old tower of the Hoghtons, now a farmhouse. During the civil war of the 17th century, part of this massive pile was accidentally blown up by the garrison. Stone is quarried here. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in handloom-weaving. The soil consists chiefly of clay and sand, on a substratum of limestone. Two-thirds of the land is in meadow and pasture. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a stone structure erected by a grant of the Parliamentary Commissioners in 1833. There is a National school for both sexes, endowed by the late Sir Charles Hoghton with £26 per annum; also a place of worship for Wesleyans. Sir Henry Hoghton, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

HOG ISLANDS, or MAGHERIES, a group of small islands lying on the S. side of Ballinskellig Bay, in the bar. of Dunkerrin, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Lamb Head. Scariff and the Little Hog are the largest of the cluster.

HOGNASTON, a par. in the hund. of Wirksworth, co. Derby, 5 miles N.E. of Ashbourne, its railway station and post town, and 5 S.W. of Wirksworth. The village, which is small, is situated on a branch of the river Dove. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £55. The church is an ancient structure with a square tower, and has a Norman doorway. The parochial charities produce about £5 10s. per annum, laid out in woollen cloth for the poor. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship, and there is a Sunday-school. The executors of Philip Gill, Esq., are lords of the manor.

HOGSHAW, a par. in the hund. of Ashendon, co. Bucks, 3 miles S.W. of Winslow. It contains the hmlt. of Fulbrook. Here was a preceptory of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, founded in the reign of Henry II. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The church has long been out of use, the inhabitants attending that of Quainton.

HOGSTHORPE, a par. in the hund. of Calceworth, co. Lincoln, 6 miles S.E. of Alford, and 9 N.E. of Spilsby. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the sea-coast. There is a coach manufactory, and bricks are extensively made. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1804. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a square tower. The charities produce £91 per annum, £26 of which belongs to the minister, and £5 for repairs of the church. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a National school.

HOGSTON. See HOGGESTON, co. Bucks.

HOLBEACH, a par., market and post town, in the wap. of Elloe, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, 8 miles from Spalding, and 12 S. of Boston. It has a station on the Spalding and Sutton Bridge branch of the Great Northern railway. The par., which is very considerable, being one of the most extensive in England, comprises three manors, and is about 21 miles from N. to S. The grazing and rearing of cattle forms the chief employment of the people. It contains, besides the town of Holbeach, the vils. of Holbeach-Drove, Fox's-Low, Holbeach-Hurn, Holbeach-Clough, Holbeach-Bank, and Penny Hill. The town of Holbeach is of ancient date, and formerly had a hospital, founded in 1351 by Sir John de Kirton. It is situated on the road leading from Spalding to Wisbeach, and consists of one principal street, with smaller ones of irregular form. It is well paved and lighted with gas. It contains a county court, bank, savings-bank, market-house, local board of health, and cemetery, &c. Petty sessions are held here every two months, and it is a polling-place for the S. division of the county. The union poorhouse, which was erected in 1837, is situated in the parish of Fleet. There was formerly an old cross, and Roman urns, coins, &c., have been found. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £702, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a noble structure, with a square tower, crowned with an octagonal spire, and contains a chime clock and eight bells. The interior of the church presents a grand appearance, with its fine pillars and arches. The windows are numerous, and of great richness. There are several ancient monuments, including those of Holbeach, or De Rands, one of the compilers of the Church of England liturgy, who was a native of this parish; of Holbeck, a learned monk; also of the Irbys and Littleburys, and the brass of a man in armour, bearing date 1420, supposed to represent Sir Humphry Littlebury, who fell in the civil war in the reign of Edward VI. There is also a district church in that part of the parish called the Fen, though now well drained. The parochial charities produce about £254, of which £171 goes to Farmer's free school, founded in 1671. There are also National and infant schools. The Wesleyans, Reformed Wesleyans, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists have places of worship. Market day is Thursday. Fairs are held on the 17th May, 17th September, and 11th October.

HOLBECK, a chplry. in the par. and borough of Leeds, West Riding co. York. [See LEEDS.] It gives name to the Holbeck Junction station, where the Great Northern, the Midland, the North-Eastern, and the Lancashire and Yorkshire railways join.

HOLBECK, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Hill, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N.E. of Horncastle.

HOLBECK, a tnshp. in the par. of Norton-Cuckney, Hatfield div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 4 miles S.W. of Worksop.

HOLBETON, a par. in the hund. of Ermington, co. Devon, 4½ miles S.W. of Modbury, its post town, and 9 S.E. of Plymouth. It is an extensive scattered village, situated near Bigbury Bay, on the river Erme, and contains the hmlts. of Mothecombe, Ford, Creacombe, and Membland. The inhabitants are principally engaged in agriculture. The soil is clay. It is a meet for Mr. Roe's harriers. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £494 5s., and the vicarial for £340. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £300, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient cruciform structure, with a square tower containing six bells. In the interior of the church is a very antique font, also monuments of the Bulteel and Perring families. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. Here is a place of worship for the Wesleyans, also National schools for both sexes. The principal residences are the Flete House and Membland Hall. The former is an old mansion, commanding an extensive view of the sea. This mansion was greatly improved in 1836 by the late J. C.

Bulteel, Esq., and has a picture gallery. It is the seat of Elizabeth Bulteel, who is lady of the manor.

HOLBORN ST. ANDREW, a par. in the hund. of Ossulstone, and borough of Finsbury, co. Middlesex. See LONDON.

HOLBROOK, a par. in the hund. of Samford, co. Suffolk, 6 miles S. of Ipswich its post town, and 3 from the Bentley station on the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is small, is situated near Holbrook Bay, on the river Stour, which at flood-tide is 2 miles in breadth at this place. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The soil is a sandy loam. The surface rises gradually from the bank of the river to an elevation of 100 feet, forming an elevated plain. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £488. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £424. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a square tower. In the interior are monuments of the Clenches, who held the manor, and a brass bearing date 1470. The register dates from Queen Elizabeth's reign. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. Here is a National school for both sexes, and a boarding-school in the village. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. John Berners, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

HOLBROOK, a chplry. in the par. of Duffield, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 5½ miles N.E. of Derby, 3 S.E. of Belper, and 2 N.E. of the Duffield railway station. The village is situated near the Derby railway. There are extensive stone quarries. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in framework knitting. The parish is bounded on the E. by the river Stour, which at flood-tide is 2 miles in breadth at this place. The surface rises gradually from the bank of the river to an elevation of 100 feet. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £488. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £123. The church was rebuilt in place of the old one in 1841. It is a plain structure, and contains a monument to Judge Clinch. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans. The principal residences are Holbrook Hall and Coxbench Hall.

HOLBROOK, a hmlt. in the par. of Abson, co. Gloucester, 4 miles W. of Marshfield.

HOLBURN, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Old Machar, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 2 miles from Aberdeen.

HOLBURY, a hmlt. in the par. of Fawley, co. Hants, 4 miles S. of Southampton.

HOLCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Kilmersdon, co. Somerset, 6 miles N.E. of Shepton Mallet, its post town and railway station, and 12 S.W. of Bath. The village is of small extent, and the land is chiefly in pasture. The soil is various. There is a large brewery; and coal and ironstone are abundant, but are not at present worked. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £60. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £70. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing two bells, and a Norman porch. The register dates from the end of the 17th century. There is a National school for both sexes, also a Wesleyan day school. The Primitive Methodists and the Wesleyans have places of worship. James Eyre Salmon, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HOLCOMBE, a tythg. in the par. of Newington, hund. of Ewelme, co. Oxford, 5 miles N.E. of Wallingford.

HOLCOMBE, a hmlt. in the par. of Minchinhampton, hund. of Longtree, co. Gloucester, 12 miles S.E. of Gloucester.

HOLCOMBE-BURNELL, a par. in the hund. of Wonford, co. Devon, 3¼ miles W. of Exeter, its post town, and 8 S.E. of Moreton Hampstead. The village, which is small, is situated on the main road from Exeter to Moreton Hampstead. It is wholly agricultural. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £195, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a modern edifice, with an antique tower containing five bells. The church was rebuilt in 1844, at a cost of £600, by voluntary contributions. There is a school for children of both sexes. Holcombe House, an old residence, built in the reign of Henry VIII., is now converted into a farmhouse. Culver House is the principal residence. James S. Pitman, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HOLCOMBE-NEXT-BURY, a vil. and district par. in the tnshp. of Tottington Lower End, and par. of Bury, co. Lancaster, 3 miles W. of Bury, and 4 S. of Haslingden. This place, which is of recent growth, now forms a separate parish for ecclesiastical purposes, under Lord Blandford's Act. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the extensive cotton factories and calico-printing works. On Holcombe Common is a column to the memory of Sir Robert Peel. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £175, in the patron. of the Rector of Bury. The church, dedicated to Emmanuel, is a modern structure with a tower surmounted by a spire.

HOLCOMBE-ROGUS, a par. in the hund of Bampton, co. Devon, 6 miles S.W. of Wellington, its post town, 6 N.E. of Bampton, and 8½ N.E. of Tiverton. It was formerly a market town, but is now only a small village, situated near the Great Western railway, and a branch of the Grand Western canal, which pass through the parish. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £320, and the vicarial for £204. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £195. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square tower containing five bells. In the interior of the church are several monuments, some to the family of Bluett, of Holcombe Court. Here is a school for children of both sexes, and the parish has the privilege of sending one boy to Uffculme free grammar school. Holcombe Court is the principal residence. Peter Frederick Bluett, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

HOLCOMBE WATER, a hmlt. in the par. of Nettlecombe, co. Somerset, 6 miles S. of Watchet.

HOLCOT, a par. in the hund. of Hamfordshoe, co. Northampton, 7 miles N.E. of Northampton, its post town, and 8 W. of Wellingborough, situated on a branch of the river Nen. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under the Enclosure Act of 1777. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £345. The church, dedicated to St. Mary and All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing a clock and three bells. A new vestry has been recently erected. The parochial charities produce about £27 per annum. There are places of worship for Wesleyans and Baptists.

HOLCUTT, or HOLCOTE, a par. in the hund. of Manshead, co. Bedford, 4 miles N. of Woburn, its post town. It is a small village, situated on Crawley brook. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The living is a rect.* united with the vic. of Salford, in the dioc. of Ely, joint val. £245. The parish church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure, and has some monuments of the Charnocke family.

HOLDENBY, a par. in the hund. of Nobottle-Grove, co. Northampton, 6½ miles N.W. of Northampton, its post town, and 10 S. of Welford. The village is of small extent, and is situated on a rising ground commanding the two main roads from Northampton to Rugby and Leicester. The inhabitants are wholly employed in agriculture. The land is betwixt arable and pasture, and the soil red sand and clay. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £565, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has an embattled tower. Here are the remains of an old castle, where Charles I. was confined in 1647, and which was given by Charles II., with the title of baron, to the French Marquis of Blancfort. On the site of the old castle a mansion has been erected, belonging to Lord Clifden, and is now converted into a farmhouse. Lord Clifden is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

HOLDENCLOUGH, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Gomersall and par. of Birstall, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.E. of Dewsbury, and 8 S.W. of Leeds. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the woollen and worsted manufactures, and in the neighbouring collieries.

HOLDENHURST, a par. in the lib. of Westover, Ringwood div. of co. Hants, 7 miles S. of Ringwood railway station, and 3 miles W. of Christchurch. The village is situated on the river Stour, which abounds with excellent salmon. The par. comprises the tythgs. of Maccleshell, Muscliffe, and Throop. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Christchurch, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church was built in 1834. There is a place of worship for the Independents. The National school is supported by voluntary contributions.

HOLDERNESS, a wap. in the East Riding co. York. The middle wap. contains the pars. of Burton-Pidsea, Drypool, Garton, Heydon, Hilston, Humbleton, Marfleet, Preston, Roos, Sproatley, Sutton, Tunstall, Waghen, and parts of Aldbrough, Owthorne, and Swine, comprising an area of 54,300 acres.

HOLDERNESS, NORTH, a wap. as above, contains the pars. of Atwick, Barmston, Beeford, Brandesburton, Catwick, North Frodingham, Goxhill, Hornsea, Leven, Mappleton, Rise, Long-Riston, Routh, Sigglesthorne, Skipsea, Withernwick, and parts of Aldbrough, Beverley St. John, and Swine, comprising an area of 56,870 acres.

HOLDERNESS, SOUTH, a wap. as above, contains the pars. of Burstwick, Easington, Halsham, Hollym, Holmpton, Keyingham, Kilnsea, Otteringham, Patrington, Paul, Skeffling, Sunk-Island, Welwick, Winestead, and parts of Owthorne, comprising an area of 49,300 acres.

HOLDFAST, a hmlt. in the par. of Ripple, lower div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 1 mile S.E. of Upton. Here was formerly a chapel.

HOLDGATE, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Munslow, co. Salop, 1 mile from Much Wenlock, its post town, and 9 N.E. of Ludlow. It is a small par. situated near the river Corve, and contains the tnshps. of Bouldon and Brookhampton. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil consists of clay and sandstone, the subsoil partly quarrystone. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £276, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, has a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. The Rev. Henry Thursby is lord of the manor.

HOLDGATE, or HOLGATE, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Mary Bishophill-Junior, ainsty and co. York, 1 mile S.W. of York. The village is small. Lindley Murray, the grammarian, who was a native of Pennsylvania, in North America, died here in 1826, at the age of 81 years.

HOLDINGHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of New Sleaford, wap. of Flaxwell, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 1 mile N.W. of Sleaford, and is situated near the canal.

HOLDSHOT, a tythg. in the par. of Heckfield, hund. of Upper Holdshot, co. Hants, 4 miles W. of Hartford-Bridge, and 5 N.W. of Odiham.

HOLDSHOT, LOWER, a hund. in the Basingstoke div. of co. Hants, containing the pars. of Hartley Westpall, Silchester, Stratfield-Mortimer, Stratfield-Turgis, North Waltham, Stratfield-Saye, and part of Woodmancott, comprising 12,330 acres.

HOLDSHOT, UPPER, a hund. in the Odiham div. of co. Hants, containing the par. of Heckfield and part of Eversley, comprising 11,190 acres.

HOLDSWORTH, a vil. in the chplry. of Bradfield and par. of Ecclesfield, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Sheffield.

HOLDSWORTH, a vil. in the tnshp. of Ovenden, and par. of Halifax, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Halifax.

HOLEKETTLE BRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Kettle, co. Fife, Scotland, 4 miles E. of Falkland.

HOLE OF MURROES, a hmlt. in the par. of Murroes, co. Forfar, Scotland, 8 miles S. of Forfar.

HOLFORD, a par. in the hund. of Whitley, co. Somerset, 10¼ miles W. of Bridgwater, and 6 E. of the Williton station, on the West Somerset railway. The village, which is inconsiderable, is entirely agricultural. The turnpike road leading from Bridgwater to Minehead passes through the village. The soil is barren, consisting of stone brash. Stone is quarried for building purposes. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £148. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £202, in the patron. of Eton College. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small edifice, with a tower containing three bells. The charities produce £1 per annum. There is a parochial school, partly supported by subscriptions. Sir P. Acland is lord of the manor.

HOLGATE. See HOLDGATE, co. York.

HOLKER, LOWER and UPPER, tnshps. in the par. of Cartmel, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 2 miles W. of Cartmel. They are situated on the river Leven, near Morecambe Bay. Lower Holker comprises the extensive vil. of Flookburgh. There are many villa residences, and several extensive iron forges. Holker Hall is the seat of the Marquis of Hartington, who is lord of both manors. The Hall is a noble building, situated in an extensive and well-wooded park. The interior of the hall contains a choice collection of paintings, among which may be mentioned the Duchess of Cleveland, by Lely, Lord R. Cavendish, by Reynolds, a landscape by Rubens, Vandyck, by himself, Sir J. Lowther or "Farthing Jemmy," Admiral Penn, &c. The upper tnshp. contains the hmlts. of Beckside, Bigland Hall, and the Low Wood gunpowder-mills, with several scattered farmhouses and cottages.

HOLKHAM, a par. in the hund. of North Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 2 miles W. of Wells, its railway station and post town, 3½ E. of Burnham Market, and 4 N.W. of New Walsingham. This place is said to have been anciently of considerable importance, having been selected by Anna, king of the East Angles, for one of his country seats. It was charged by Edward II., in conjunction with the port of Burnham Deepdale, with the expense of finding one ship to assist in conveying his troops from Dublin to Scotland. The village, which is small, is situated on the coast, near Holkham Bay. It was formerly a small port and market town under the Boleyns, but had declined previously to 1659, when the whole of the property was purchased by John Coke, Esq., fourth son of the celebrated Lord Chief Justice Sir Edward Coke. The property still continues in the same family, and is now held by the Earl of Leicester, whose father, the great agriculturist of his day, succeeded to the estate in 1778, at which time it brought in a rental of £2,200 per annum, but, after a period of forty-one years, he realised £22,700 per annum. There was not a grain of wheat sown between this place and Lynn prior to the earl's possession, whereas at present above 50,000 quarters are annually exported. Holkham is famed for its scenery and walks, and has a commodious sea-beach, which is much frequented during the summer months. Queen Victoria, with the Duchess of Kent, visited it in 1835. A large tumulus exists, in which human bones have been found, with pieces of armour, &c. There are extensive brick and tile kilns at Peterstone, also limestone quarries and sandpits. Nearly half the parish, which comprises about 4,300 acres, is occupied by the lawns and plantations surrounding Holkham Hall, the seat of the earls of Leicester. This magnificent structure, erected by the first earl of Leicester between the years 1734-60, from designs of Lord Burlington and Kent, comprises a centre 345 feet by 180, with two fronts and wings. The picture-gallery has a choice collection of paintings, of which may be mentioned Vandyck's "Duke d'Aremberg," and several of Poussin's, Da Vinci's "Head of Christ," Guido's "Joseph and Potiphar's Wife," Domenichino's "Abraham offering up Isaac," and many Claudes, including "Apollo slaying Marsyas;" and in the statue gallery are many fine productions, as Diana, and Venus in wet drapery, &c. This noble mansion is situated within its extensive and splendidly-wooded park and pleasure garden, watered by a lake of 1,056 yards in length. The hall and grounds are open to the public every Tuesday. A pillar has recently been erected within the grounds, by voluntary contributions, to the great agriculturist abovomentioned. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for £400, and the vicarial for £199 12*s*. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. in the king's books £8 13*s*. 4*d*., in the patron. of the Earl of Leicester, who is impropriator of the great tithes. The church, which is situated on an artificial eminence to the N. of the town, is dedicated to St. Withburga. It is an ancient structure, with a lofty embattled tower containing four bells. It serves as a landmark to mariners, and was thoroughly repaired in 1767 at the cost of £1,000 by the Countess Dowager of Leicester. The interior of the church contains several old monuments, including one to William Wheatley, with figures of himself and his wife, and John Coke and his wife, kneeling, with desks before them. Here are the Countess of Leicester's almshouses, founded and endowed in 1755, also National and infant schools.

HOLLACOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Black Torrington, co. Devon, 2¼ miles S.E. of Holsworthy, its post town. It is situated on the river Claw. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £73. The church, dedicated to St. Petrock, is a small ancient building containing three bells.

HOLLAND, a vil. in the tnshp. of Upholland, and par. of Wigan, co. Lancaster, 4 miles W. of Wigan.

HOLLAND, DOWN, a tnshp. in the par. of Halsall, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S.W. of Ormskirk. It is intersected by the Leeds and Liverpool canal. The village, which consists of a few scattered houses, is situated on the high road between Ormskirk and Formby. The soil is sandy, and the land chiefly arable. The old hall of Down Holland is now a farm-house. There is a National school for children of both sexes. Charles Scarisbrick, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HOLLAND FEN, an ecclesiastical district in the wap. of Elloe, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, 8 miles N.W. of Boston. It comprises portions of 11 different pars. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £80. The church was built in 1812.

HOLLAND, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Tendring, co. Essex, 3½ miles S.E. of Thorpe, 4 S.W. of Walton steamboat pier, and 9 miles S.S.E. of Harwich. The parish is situated on the coast of the North Sea, near Holland Creek, which is a subport to Harwich. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture and woodland. The soil is in some parts heavy and wet, but in others a pale loam producing abundant crops. The village, which is a small agricultural place, existed at the time of Edward the Confessor. Along the banks of the Holland Brook, which comes down from Tendring, are some marshes. The Poor Knights of Windsor and the Dennis family are the chief landowners. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £750. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £700, with 75 acres of glebe, in the patron. of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing three bells. The register dates from the year 1543. There is a National school for children of both sexes. Mrs. G. Dennis is lady of the manor.

HOLLAND, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Tendring, co. Essex, 2 miles S.E. of Great Holland, and 16 S.E. by E. of Colchester. The parish, which is of small extent, is bounded on the S.E. by the North Sea, the coast here rising in cliffs. It is separated from Great Holland by the Holland Brook, over which is a bridge. The soil is light and fertile, producing good crops of wheat and turnips. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £164, and the vicarial for £57 10*s*. The living is a don. cur. united to the vic.* of Great Clackton. The church has long been demolished, the inhabitants attending that of Great Clackton.

HOLLAND HOUSE. See KENSINGTON, co. Middlesex.

HOLLAND, NEW, on the river Humber, opposite Hull, co. Lincoln, 2 miles N.E. of Barton. Here is an iron pontoon, or landing-stage, 400 feet by 50, and trams to Barton, Great Grimsby, &c.

HOLLAND, PARTS OF, a div. of co. Lincoln, comprising the waps. of Elloe, Kirton, and Skirbeck, with the towns of Boston, Crowland, Donnington, Holbeach, St. Mary Sutton, and Swineshead. It takes its name from the South Holland Dyke, by which, with numerous other canals, it is drained into the Wash, and from which it has been reclaimed. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of Lincoln.

HOLLAND, UP. See UPHOLLAND, co. Lancaster.

HOLLANDEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Leigh, co. Kent, 3 miles S.E. of Sevenoaks.

HOLLAWAY, a vil. in the par. of Munslow, co. Salop, 8 miles N. of Ludlow.

HOLLEE and FAIRYHALL, two vils. nearly connected, in the par. of Kilpatrick Fleming, co. Dumfries, Scotland.

HOLLESLEY, or HOSELEY, a par. in the hund. of Wilford, co. Suffolk, 7½ S.E. of Woodbridge, its post town. It is situated on the North Sea, near Hollesley Bay, which has from 6 to 8 fathoms water, and where two curious old cannons were found in 1804. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture. The river Ore bounds the parish on the E., and here falls into Hollesley Bay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £800. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone structure with a flint tower. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum, distributed in coals.

HOLLETH, a tnshp. chiefly in the par. of Garstang, but partly in that of Cockerham, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N. of Garstang, its post town. It is situated on the Preston and Lancashire canal.

HOLLIN, a constablewick in the par. of Rock, co. Worcester, 6 miles S.W. of Bewdley.

HOLLINGBOURNE, a par. in the hund. of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 5 miles E. of Maidstone, its railway station and post town. It is called Hoilingeborde in Domesday Survey, and was then held, as now, by the archbishops of Canterbury. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture, with a considerable extent of woodland. The soil is particularly favourable to the growth of corn and hops. The union poorhouse is situated a short distance from the turnpike road leading from Maidstone to Ashford. The union comprises 23 parishes. Here are flour-mills and brick and tile kilns. A portion of the land is in hop-grounds. The rectorial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £647 10*s*., and the vicarial for £325. The living is a vic.* with that of Huckinge annexed, in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. together £430, in the patron. of the Archbishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice with a low square tower containing a clock and one bell. The charities produce about £122, of which £100 goes to the relief of the poor. Here is an endowed National school for both sexes. The Dean and Chapter of Canterbury are lords of the manor.

HOLLINGDON, a hmlt. in the par. of Soulbury, co. Bucks, 4 miles S. of Fenny Stratford.

HOLLINGHILL. See HELLINGHILL, co. Northumberland.

HOLLINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Checkley, co. Stafford, 4 miles S.E. of Cheadle. Here are several quarries of greystone, of which Drayton manor house was built.

HOLLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Baldslow, rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, 3 miles S.E. of Battle, and 2½ N.W. of Hastings, its post town. It is supposed to have been the scene of the commencement of the battle which took place between Harold and William Duke of Normandy, in 1066. The village, which is very small, is situated on the road from London to Hastings and St. Leonard's. The soil is fertile, and part of the land is in hop-grounds. Ironstone is abundant, and formerly there were furnaces for smelting the ore, but they have been long discontinued. Limestone and freestone are extensively quarried. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £206. The church, which is situated in a wood, has a square embattled tower, and is dedicated to St. Leonard. It is distant at least half a mile in every direction from any dwelling-house.

There is a place of worship for Wesleyans, also a parochial school.

HOLLINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Longford, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 5 miles S.E. of Ashborne.

HOLLINGWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Prestwich-cum-Oldham, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 3 miles N.W. of Manchester.

HOLLINGWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Mottram, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 3 miles S.E. of Staleybridge, 4 E. of Ashton-under-Lyne, and 2 N.W. of the Hadfield railway station. The cotton manufactories are the chief support of this township, giving employment to a large number of its inhabitants. The land is principally in pasture, and the soil various. The parish church is at Mottram. There is a National school, besides Sunday and day schools. The Wesleyans, Independents, and New Connexion Methodists have each a place of worship. The principal residences are Holyngworthe Hall and Old Hall—the former, a very ancient mansion, is the seat of Robert-de-Holyngworthe, in whose family it has remained for several centuries; the latter is a modern mansion situated in a small park. John Tolemache, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HOLLINS, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Upper Warley and par. of Halifax, West Riding co. York, 3 miles W. of Halifax.

HOLLINS-CLOUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Allstonefield, N. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 7 miles S.W. of Buxton, its post town, and 2 N.W. of Longnor. It is a small inconsiderable village situated on the river Dove. Here is a chapel-of-case annexed to that of Longnor. It is a small edifice, the roof of which is crowned with an open stone turret containing one bell. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. Sir John Hurpur Crewe is lord of the manor.

HOLLOWAY, a suburban district of London, in the par. and union of Islington, Finsbury div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, 4 miles N.N.W. of St. Paul's. It consists of Upper and Lower Holloway, and includes the whole district lying in the hollow beyond Islington towards Highgate Hill, the southern spur of which forms part of Upper Holloway. It has direct communication with the City and West End every five minutes by omnibus, besides two stations on the Great Northern railway, and the Highbury station on the North London railway. Here, on the rise of Highgate Hill, is the Small Pox and Vaccination Hospital, originally founded in 1746, but removed from King's Cross in 1850; and in Park Road, on the left of the Holloway-road, towards Camden-Town, is the new city prison, capable of receiving 400 prisoners, with a chapel in the centre, and a circular tower. Between this spot and Highgate Hill was the Whittington stone, now replaced by another, where the thrice Lord Mayor of London heard the sound of Bow bells; and a little further E. is the Whittington College, on the Archway-road, founded for the maintenance of the widows of decayed tradesmen, and under the patronage of the Mercers' Company. It has at present 28 pensioners, superintended by a clerical tutor and a matron. The district is under the jurisdiction of the Central criminal court, Clerkenwell police court, and the metropolitan police. For ecclesiastical purposes it forms seven districts, the livings of all which are perpet. curs. in the dioc. of London, varying in val. from £350 to £450. The old church, built in 1811, is a heavy brick building, erected at the cost of £30,000; St. James's church, Lower Holloway, was rebuilt and enlarged in 1850; St. John's, Upper Holloway, was built by Barry, and has a good tower surmounted by pinnacles. The Independents have a chapel in the Camden-road, and the Wesleyans one in Hornsey-road, besides numerous other ones. There are National and infant schools attached to most of the churches, also ragged and free schools in the Hornsey-road.

HOLLOWAY, a hmlt. in the par. of Ashover, hund. of Wirksworth, co. Derby, 3 miles N.E. of Wirksworth, and 1½ mile N.W. of Whatstandwell-bridge railway station. It is situated on rising ground near the Cromford canal. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel.

HOLLOWELL, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Guilsborough, co. Northampton, 9 miles N.W. of Northampton.

HOLLOW-WOOD. See How-wood, co. Renfrew, Scotland.

HOLLYBUSH, a station on the Dalmellington branch of the Glasgow and South-West of Scotland railway, 7 miles from Ayr.

HOLLYHURST, a tnshp. in the par. of Whitchurch, co. Salop, 2 miles from Whitchurch.

HOLLYM, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Patrington, its nearest money-order office. The village, which is small, and irregularly built, is situated near the coast. The Hull and Holderness section of the North-Eastern railway passes through the parish, stopping at Hollym Gate on Tuesdays, and having its terminus at Withernsea. The par. contains the tnshps. of Withernsea and Rysome. The land is chiefly arable, and the soil a strong clay. The German Ocean has made considerable encroachments on this shore. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Act of Enclosure in 1793. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £420. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a modern white brick structure with a tower containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum, of which £14 goes to Pape's free school. The Rev. Christopher Sykes is lord of the manor.

HOLLYMOUNT, a post-office vil. in the par. of Kilcommon, in the bar. of Kilmaine, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 16 miles S. of Castlebar, and 159 from Dublin. It stands on the banks of the river Robe and the road from Dublin to Westport. It contains a police station, parish church, and schoolhouse. Here is a dispensary within the Ballinrobe Poor-law Union. Petty sessions are held in the village. Hollymount, Clooncormac, Bloomfield, and Lehinch, are the neighbouring seats.

HOLLYWELL, a vil. in the bar. of Clanawley, co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 10 miles S.W. of Enniskillen. It is situated on the road from Enniskillen to Manor Hamilton, and in the vicinity of Upper Lough Macnean. Here is a dispensary within the Enniskillen Poor-law Union. Gardenhill demesne stands on the outskirts of the village.

HOLLYWOOD, a par., post town, and small seaport, in the bar. of Lower Castlereagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Belfast. The par. is 6 miles long by 2 broad, and contains the vils. of Ballyhackmore, Newbridge, and Strandtown. The surface, which lies along the coast of Belfast Lough, is hilly on the inland border. The principal heights are Standard Hill and Barbadoes Hill. Conn's brook, tracing part of the western boundary, is the principal stream. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Down, val. £132. The church, which stands in the town, is of very ancient foundation, and is supposed to have been the priory church. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel and two Presbyterian meeting-houses. There are seven day and two Sunday schools. This parish was formed in 1626 by the union of the ancient pars. of Columbkill and Craigavad. The County Down railway traverses the parish. The town is situated on the road from Belfast to Bangor, and on the eastern shore of Carrickfergus Bay. It consists chiefly of one street, presenting a cheerful and cleanly appearance, and is a favourite bathing resort of the citizens of Belfast, for whom it has excellent accommodation. Here are police and coastguard stations, and a dispensary within the Belfast Poor-law Union, also a small pier. A fixed light has been put up at Hollywood Head. A Franciscan friary is alleged to have been founded here in 1200, and the site was granted to the Hamiltons by James I. One of the Presbyterian meeting-houses is a Gothic cruciform structure. In 1644 the Presbyterians of Ireland signed the Covenant in Hollywood. Chalybeate springs occur near the town, and at Cultra and Ballymahon. Fairs are held quarterly.

HOLLYWOOD, a par. in the bar. of West Balrothery, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Naul. Balbriggan is its post town. It is 2½ miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface becomes elevated in the E. and N.E. It consists of a fair soil. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Naul and another, £111. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Naul. The adjacent demesnes are Damastown and Mallohow.

HOLLYWOOD, a par. in the bar. of Lower Talbotstown, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Blessington, its post town. The surface is mountainous and boggy. The King's river rises in the E., and the Liffey flows through the parish. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £86, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is a small building of unknown foundation. Grove House and Rathattin are the principal residences. In the Roman Catholic arrangements the parish belongs to the Ballymore Eustace district, and has a chapel, erected in 1831. Here are a parish school, and three or four non-parochial establishments. In 1798 the rebels overran the parish, and burnt Tyrone Lodge, belonging to Lord William Beresford. The famous waterfall of Poul-a-Phuca is in this parish. Fairs are held on the 1st February, 3rd May, 1st August, and 1st November.

HOLM, and HOLMS, a name given to numbers of the small islands of the Orkney group, Scotland, as the Holm of Fara, of Grimbister, of Houton, of Anskerry, of Balfron, &c., but they will be described with their larger neighbours or the parishes to which they belong.

HOLM AND PAPLAY, a par. in Mainland Orkney, coast of Scotland, 5 miles S.E. of Kirkwall, its post town. It contains the village of St. Mary, and consists of the S.E. part of the island of Pomona and the island of Lamholm. The Pomona district is bounded inland by Kirkwall and St. Andrew's. It lies in the Holm Sound between the headlands of Howquoy and Roseness. Its size is 5 miles long by 2 broad. The coast is rocky, but the interior consists of a tolerably good soil. This par. is in the presb. of Kirkwall, and synod of Orkney. The minister has a stipend of £159. The church, standing on the S. side of the island, was built in 1818, and there is an United Presbyterian church. The ancient districts of Holm and Paply form the present parish. Captain Graham, of Gream Hall, is the principal proprietor.

HOLMCOTE, a hmlt. in the par. of Selworthy, co. Somerset, 4 miles W. of Minehead.

HOLME, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Biggleswade, co. Bedford, 1 mile S. of Biggleswade.

HOLME, a tnshp. in the par. of Pickhill, wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 5 miles W. of Thirsk, 6 S.E. of Bedale, and 9 N.E. of Ripon. It is united with Howgrave to form a tnshp.

HOLME, a tnshp. in the par. of Bakewell, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, a quarter of a mile N. of Bakewell. In conjunction with the chplry. of Great Longstone it forms a tnshp.

HOLME, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, co. Nottingham, 3½ miles N. of Newark, its railway station and post town. It is a small agricultural village, situated on the eastern side of the river Trent. It formerly belonged to the Barton and Bellasis families, and Archbishop Secker had a residence here. The Trent navigation passes through the village. The tithes have been commuted for land. The living is a vic. with the perpet. cur. of Longford annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £44, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, has a spired tower containing three bells. The chancel contains escutcheons to the Barton family, also one of Lord and Lady Bellasis. Nan Scott's chamber is over the church porch, where she took refuge to avoid the infection of the great plague. The Duke of Newcastle is lord of the manor.

HOLME, a tnshp. in the par. of Bottesford, E. div. of the hund. of Manley, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles W. of Brigg. Samuel Hall Egginton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HOLME, a hmlt. in the par. of Owston, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N. of Doncaster.

HOLME, a chplry. in the par. of Glatton, co. Huntingdon, 3 miles S.E. of Stilton, and 6 S. of Peterborough. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The country, which is fenny, is traversed by the Holme Brook. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1809. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. 195. The church is dedicated to St. Giles. The charities produce £86, of which £60 is the endowment of the free school. The principal residence is Holme Wood.

HOLME, a chplry in the tnshp. of Cliviger, and par. of Whalley, hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S.E. of Burnley by the Rose Grove, Burnley, and Todmorden branch of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, on which it is a station. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £101. There is a National school. Holme House was once the seat of Dr. Whitaker, the historian of Whalley.

HOLME, a tnshp. in the par. of Burton-in-Kendal, ward of Lonsdale, co. Westmoreland, 1 mile N.E. of the Burton and Holme railway station, and 1½ N. of Burton-in-Kendal, its post town. It is situated on the Kendal and Lancaster canal, near Holme Fell, under Farleton Knot. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the flax mills and linen factory. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £120, in the patron. of the Vicar of Burton. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a stone structure, with a tower containing one bell. Here is a National school for both sexes, and places of worship for the Independents.

HOLME, a tnshp. in the par. of Almondbury, upper div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 9 miles S.W. of Huddersfield, its post town, 7½ S.W. of Almondbury, and 3 S.W. of Holmfirth. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Holme, under Holme Edge, which is 1,859 feet in height. This township is within the graveship of Holme, in the manor of Wakefield. The population is chiefly employed in the woollen manufacture, which is carried on to a considerable extent. The surface is exceedingly hilly, and the chief portion of the land consists of moor. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150. There is an endowed school for both sexes, in which divine service is performed every alternate Sunday.

HOLME BEACON, a div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, so named from the beacon which anciently stood on Spalding Moor to direct travellers. It contains the pars. of Aughton, Brindleys, Bubwith, Ellerton Priory, Everingham, Harswell, Hayton, Holme-on-Spalding-Moor, Seaton Ross, Market Weighton, Wressell, and parts of Nun Burnholme and Thornton, comprising about 61,330 acres.

HOLME-CULTRAM, or ABBEY HOLME, a par. in the ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 6 miles N.W. of Wigton, 9 N.E. of Aspatria, and 15 E. of Maryport. Abbey Holme is its post town. It is a station on the Carlisle and Silloth Bay railway. The par. is bounded on the W. by the Irish Sea, and on the N. by the estuaries of the Wampool and the Waver. It is very extensive, comprising above 22,000 acres, and includes the tnshps. of Holme Abbey, Holme East Waver, Holme Low, and Holme St. Cuthbert. The village, which is situated on the W. bank of the river Waver, was formerly a market town and has the ruins of a Cistercian mitred abbey, founded in 1150 by Prince Henry of Scotland. Here are brick and tile kilns, also a steam mill. The soil is various, but well cultivated, with the exception of about 3,000 acres of moss. The lower grounds are well drained, and there are some quarries of excellent freestone. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £160, in the patron. of the University of Oxford. In addition to the parish church there are three district churches, viz. at Holme-Low, Newton-Arlosh, and St. Cuthbert's, the livings of all which are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £106 to £100. The parish church of St. Mary is situated on the site of the ancient monastery, and includes a portion of it. Here are National schools for both sexes, also the Abbey Holme reading and news rooms.

HOLME, EAST, an ext. par. lib. in the hund. of Hasilor, co. Dorset, 2 miles S.W. of Wareham, its post town and nearest railway station on the London and South-Western line. It is situated on the river Frome. A small priory of Cluniac monks was founded here in the reign of Edward I., which, in the 16th century, became the property of Edward Duke of Somerset, and afterwards passed to John Hornham. There is no church. The Rev. Nathaniel Bond is lord of the manor. Holme House is the principal residence.

HOLME-HALE, a par in the hund. of South Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 5 miles S.E. of Swaffham, its railway station and post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Blackwater. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. The soil is various, and three parts of the land arable, the remainder pasture and meadow. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £571 14*s.* 8*d.* The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £715. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains several brasses and an epitaph in old English, bearing date 1404. There are places of worship for Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Baptists, and a National school. The charities produce about £49 per annum, chiefly the produce of the town estate, consisting of 46 acres; part is appropriated for repairing the church and other parochial uses, and the remainder for poor widows. Holme Hall is the principal residence. Captain Adlington is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

HOLME-LACY, HOLM-LACEY, or HOM-LACY, a par. in the hund. of Webtree, co. Hereford, 4½ miles S.E. of Hereford, its post town, and 8 N.W. of Ross. It is a station on the Hereford, Ross, and Gloucester railway, which intersects the parish. The village, which is irregularly built, is situated on the Wye. It formerly had a small Premonstratentian abbey, founded in the reign of Henry III. by William Fitz-Warine, the site of which after the Dissolution passed from the Lacies to the Scudamores. There is a ferry in the neighbourhood which crosses the river to the village of Fawnhope. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £515. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Boulstone annexed, in the dioc, of Hereford, val. £543. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a stone structure, with a tower containing eight bells. The interior of the church contains several monuments of the Scudamore family, also one of the late Duchess of Norfolk. The parochial charities produce about £133 per annum, with a bull val. £20, to be divided among the poor annually. Here is a free school for both sexes, and a boys' Sunday-school, founded in 1833 by Lady Stanhope, of Holme House, which is the principal residence. It is a very ancient mansion, rebuilt by the last Viscount Scudamore, the friend of Pope, who wrote his "Man of Ross" here. It is situated in a secluded spot, and has a wooded park, with extensive pleasure-grounds, part of the latter being formed after Hampton Court Palace gardens. The interior of Holme House contains several rare paintings by Vandyck, Jansen, and Holbein; also one of Sir James Scudamore of Elizabeth's time—the "Sir Scudamore" of Spenser. It also has carvings by Gibbons, Hamilton's "Solomon and Queen of Sheba," Le Brun's Louis XIII., and Pope's copy of the Earl of Strafford. There is a venerable pear-tree near the parsonage house covering a quarter of an acre of land. Some time since the wind forced a branch to the ground; the upper part not being entirely detached from the trunk, it eventually became rooted, a process which has subsequently been imitated with other branches, which likewise have now become fruittul, and yield altogether from 12 to 16 hogsheads of perry. Sir Edwin Francis Scudamore Stanhope, Bart., of Holme House, is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

HOLME, LOW, or HOLME ST. PAUL'S, a tnshp. in the par. of Holme-Cultram, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland. This township, which is nearly surrounded by the sea and the estuary of the Waver and Wampool, extends from 2 to 6 miles from the Abbey town. It comprises the hmlts. of Blitter Lees, East Coate, Calvo, Black-Dyke, Wolsty, Wath, Silloth, Hayrigg, Soaville, Skinburness, Green-Row, and Causeway-Head. The Carlisle and Silloth railway passes through the tnshp. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £100. The church, which was erected in 1845, is a stone structure dedicated to St. Paul.

HOLME-NEXT-RUNCTON, a par. in the hund. of Clackclose, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N. of Downham Market, its post town, and 8 S. of Lynn. It is a small agricultural village situated near the river Ouse and Lynn railway, which has a station at Watlington. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £320. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of South Runcton, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a small edifice with a square tower containing three bells. A vestry was erected at the expense of the rector in 1856. There is a memorial window of stained glass. The register dates from 1562. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There is a National school, built in 1840, for children of the parishes of Holme and South Runcton. Lady Harland is lady of the manor.

HOLME-NEXT-THE-SEA, a par. in the hund. of Smithdon, co. Norfolk, 18 miles N.E. of Lynn, its post town, and 13 from Wells, its nearest railway station. It is a small agricultural village, situated on the coast of the German Ocean, between Hunstanton and Thornham. The coast road from Wells to Lynn passes through the parish. It is also in connection with Castleacre and the Peddar's Way. The soil is very fertile, and the subsoil chalk. About half the land is arable, the remainder pasture, salt marsh, and common. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £290, and the vicarial for £170. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Thornham, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1778. The register dates from 1704. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. There is a school in the churchyard for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. Mr. Blyth is lord of the manor.

HOLME, NORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Edstone, wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 3 miles S. of Kirby Moorside. It is situated near the river Rye.

HOLME-ON-SPALDING-MOOR, a par. in the Holme Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 4½ miles S.W. of Market Weighton. It is a station on the Selby and Market Weighton railway. The village, which is considerable, is situated under the Beacon Hill, from which this division of the wapentake derives its name. It formerly belonged to the Constables and Langdales, of whom was the royalist general, Sir Marmaduke. The shock of an earthquake was felt here on the night of the 18th of January, 1822. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The soil consists of sand, clay, and peat, with subsoil marl and clay. There is also a bed of gypsum containing ammonitæ. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £600, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a tower containing three bells. The eminence on which it stands commands a fine prospect, in which York Minster is a prominent object. The parochial charities produce about £80 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel, and there is a Roman Catholic chapel attached to the Hall. On a site presented by Sir Edward Vavasour, of Haslewood, about 2½ miles E. of the village, stands the reformatory school for juvenile offenders. Holme Hall is the principal residence.

HOLME-ON-THE-WOLDS, a par. in the Bainton-

Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Beverley, its post town. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments, under an Act of Enclosure in 1795. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £58, in the patron. of Lord Hotham. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small edifice, with a low tower containing one bell. The Bishop of Ripon is lord of the manor. The Roman Catholics have a chapel, and there is a National school.

HOLME-PIERREPONT, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Bingham, co. Nottingham, 5 miles E. of Nottingham, its post town, and 2 from Radcliffe railway station. The par., which is small, is situated in a secluded spot on the S. side of the river Trent, and contains the hmlts. of Adbolton and Bassingfield. The inhabitants are principally engaged in agriculture. The land is chiefly arable, and the soil a rich alluvial loam resting upon gravel. The Grantham canal passes through the southern portion of the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £748 16*s.* 3*d., besides a rent-charge of £124 paid to the Rector of West Bridgeford. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Adbolton, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £747, in the patron. of Earl Manvers. The church, dedicated to St. Edmund, is an ancient structure, with a square tower crowned with a lofty spire. The interior of the church contains monuments of the dukes of Kingston. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. Holme-Pierrepont House is the principal residence.

HOLMER, a par. in the hund. of Grimsworth, co. Hereford, 2 miles N. of Hereford, its post town and railway station. The parish, which is considerable, is situated on the turnpike road leading from Hereford to Leominster. It comprises the tnshps. of Holmer and Shelwick. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £256, and the vicarial for £220; there is also a rent-charge of £20 to the impropriator. The living is a vic.* with the perpet. cur. of Huntington annexed, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £220, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is an ancient structure, with a detached tower containing five bells, and is dedicated to St. Bartholomew. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. The Copelands and Westfield House are the principal residences. Richard Hereford, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

HOLMESCALES, a hmlt. in the par. and ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 5 miles S.E. of Kendal. It is joined with Old Hutton to form a township. There is a bobbin factory.

HOLMES-CHAPEL. See CHURCH-HULME, co. Chester.

HOLMESFIELD, a chplry. in the par. of Dronfield, hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 2 miles W. of Dronfield, Chesterfield is its post town. It includes a large tract of uncultivated land. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £97. The church was rebuilt in 1826, at the cost of £550, and for every omission of divine service in this church, whether from illness or otherwise, the sum of 10*s.* is to be paid to the poor of the place. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a school endowed with £18 per annum.

HOLMESLEY ENCLOSURE COTTAGE, an ext. par. place in the lower half of the hund. of Fordingbridge, co. Hants, 2 miles S. of Burley.

HOLMESLEY LODGE, an ext. par. place in the lower half of the hund. of Fordingbridge, co. Hants, 5 miles S.E. of Ringwood.

HOLME, SOUTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Hovingham, wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 6 miles N.E. of Helmsley, and 7 N.W. of New Malton.

HOLME ST. BENET, or COWHOLME, a hmlt. in the par. of Horning, hund. of Tunstead, co. Norfolk, 5½ miles N.W. of Acle. Here was a hermitage founded in 800, but destroyed by the Danes in 870. It was refounded by Canute in 1020, who raised it to the dignity of a mitred abbey; its revenue at the Dissolution was £677 9*s.* 8*d.*, but not being dissolved, only transferred by Act of Parliament to Bishop Rugge and his successors, the Bishop of Norwich still sits by right in the House of Lords as holder of the barony. There are traces of the gate and walls of the abbey still remaining.

HOLME ST. CUTHBERT, a tnshp. in the par. of Holme Cultram, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland. This tnshp., which is considerable, contains the hmlts. of Beckfoot, Goody Hills, Newtown, Mawbray, Cooper, Pelutho, Sarns, and Etherside, with several straggling farms. R. E. W. P. Standish, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HOLME, WEST, a tythg. in the par. of East Stoke, hund. of Hasilor, co. Dorset, 3 miles W. of Wareham. It is situated near the river Froom.

HOLMFIRTH, a chplry. and town, partly in the par. of Almondbury, but chiefly in that of Kirkburton, wap. of Upper Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 6 miles S. of Huddersfield. It is a station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. It is a large manufacturing village, and polling place for the West Riding, situated in a vale watered by the river Holm, over which are two stone bridges, and sheltered by lofty hills. The town, which is of modern growth, is irregularly built, but is well paved and lighted. The inhabitants are principally engaged in the manufacture of woollen cloth, for which the numerous springs of clear soft water in the vicinity render it particularly well adapted. The machinery of the mills is impelled by the powerful streams which descend from the hills, and by water collected in three reservoirs formed at the cost of £30,000. Many of the inhabitants are also engaged in the extensive collieries, and some in business at Huddersfield. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kirkburton. There are places of worship for Wesleyans, Roman Catholics, and Baptists, and several schools. Fairs are held on the Saturday following 27th March, and 28th October, and before Old May Day.

HOLM-LACEY. See HOLME-LACY, co. Hereford.

HOLMPATRICK, a par. in the bar. of East Balrothery, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, contains Skerries its post town. It is 4 miles long by 3 broad. The parish is situated on the coast, and has several outlying islands known as the Skerries, besides St. Patrick's, Shenick's, Red, and Colt islands. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Dublin. The church was built in 1719. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, a National, and two or three other schools in this parish. Hacketstown is the seat of J. H. Hamilton, Esq., M.P., who is lord of the manor. An abbey is said to have been founded on St. Patrick's Island, by M'Murchard, in the 9th century, which in 1228 was removed to the mainland, and gave name to the parish. This abbey was granted, in the reign of Elizabeth, to Sir Thomas Fitzwilliam. Its ruins are observed near the town of Skerries. Limestone, granite, slate, and greenstone enter into the rock formation of this locality.

HOLMPTON, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 4 miles E. of Patrington its post town. It is situated near the coast of the North Sea, and is wholly agricultural. During the period of half a century the sea has encroached upon upwards of 70 yards of land. The tithes have been commuted for land and money payments. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £152. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a small structure, with a tower of more recent erection containing one bell. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There are day and Sunday schools, the former supported by voluntary contributions. Holmpton Lodge is the principal residence, situated near the cliffs, and built in the reign of Queen Anne. The Rev. William Potchett is lord of the manor.

HOLMSDALE, an extensive valley or weald on the borders of Surrey and Sussex, formerly covered with wood, and famed for its deer and strawberries. The greater part of the wood has since been cleared, and the land enclosed for cultivation, producing good crops of wheat and turnips. Earl Amherst takes from this place the title of viscount.

HOLMSIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of Lanchester, W. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 3 miles E. of Lanchester, and 7 N.W. of Durham. The village is considerable.

HOLMSTROW, a hund. in the co. of Sussex, contains the pars. of Newhaven, Piddinghoe, Rodmell, Southease, and Telscombe, comprising an area of 6,720 acres.

HOLNE, a par. in the hund. of Stanborough, co. Devon, 4 miles W. of Ashburton, its post town, and 10 N.W. of Totnes. It is a small village situated on the river Dart, which passes through a wooded dell. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. Holne Chase, consisting of extensive woods and moorland, is about half a mile N.E. of the village, and extends over a large portion of Dartmoor. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £233. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and has a square embattled tower containing five bells. In the interior of the church is an ancient font and screen. The parochial charities produce about £7 17*s.* per annum, with the rent of a house and plot of land for church repairs. Here is a National school in which a Sunday-school is also held. Holne Park is the principal residence. Sir Bourchier Palk Wrey, Bart., is lord of the manor.

HOLNEST, a par. in the hund. of Sherborne, co. Dorset, 4 miles S. of Sherborne, its post town. It is a meet for the Charborough hounds. The village, which is very small, is situated on the road from Bath to Weymouth. Most of the women are employed in glove making. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic.* of Long-Burton, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church has a square embattled tower, and is dedicated to St. Mary. There is a National school.

HOLSET, a hmlt. in the par. of East Portlemouth, co. Devon, 4 miles S. of Kingsbridge.

HOLSWORTHY, a par., post and market town, in the hund. of Black Torrington, co. Devon, 8 miles E. of Stratton, 14 W. of Hatherleigh, and 18 S.W. of Bideford. The parish is situated between two branches of the river Tamar, or Dur, and is intersected by the Bude canal. The town, approached at its S. entrance by a bridge erected in 1832, is at present of little importance, except for its markets and fairs, chiefly for agricultural produce. It is a polling-place for the N. division of the county. A portgreve, with other officers, are elected annually at the court leet and baron. Petty sessions are held on the third Thursday of every month, and special sessions for larceny, &c., on every Wednesday; also a county court on Friday. The commissioners of the land, assessed, and income taxes hold their meetings at the White Hart hotel. The workhouse is a new building. The Poor-law Union comprises 19 parishes, 17 being in the county of Devon. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £1,000. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has a lofty tower containing eight bells. There are several charities, one of them being £25 for five poor persons who have not received parochial relief. There is a National school, also one for the Wesleyans. The Bible Christians, Independents, and Wesleyans, have places of worship, the last body having four chapels within the parish. The Right Hon. Earl Stanhope is lord of the manor. The weekly market for corn and cattle is held every Wednesday, and the general markets on the Wednesday after Candlemas-Day, and the first Wednesday in November. Fairs are held on the 27th April, 9th and two following days of July, and on the 2nd October.

HOLT, a hund. in co. Norfolk, contains the pars. of Bayfield, Blakeney with Little Langham, Bale with Gunthorpe, Bodham, Briningham, Brinton with Thornage, Briston, Cley-next-the-Sea, Edgefield, Glandford, Gunthorpe, Hempstead, Holt, Hunworth with Stody, Kelling, Langham, Letheringsett, Melton Constable, Morston, Salthouse, Saxlingham with Sharrington, Stody, Swanton Novers, Thornage, Weybourn, and Wiveton, comprising about 42,290 acres. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of Norwich.

HOLT, a par. and market town in the above hund., co. Norfolk, 4 miles S.E. of Blakeney, and 10 S.W. of Cromer. It is situated on rising ground at the conjunction of several public roads, and formed part of the royal demesne in the reign of Edward the Confessor, and after the Conquest belonged to the family of De Vaux. In 1708 the greater part of the town was destroyed by fire, but was rebuilt, and since that period has made rapid progress. It now consists of several well-formed streets. It is paved and lighted with gas, and well supplied with water from a spring on Spout Common, and from several wells in the vicinity. The houses are generally built of brick and stone. The principal buildings are the county hall, police station, bank, literary institute, corn exchange, &c. Petty sessions are held once a month; and there is a court-leet of the lord of the manor held on the 21st of December. In 1810 the commons and heaths that surrounded the town were enclosed for cultivation, and 120 acres allotted to householders under £10 for the supply of fuel. The richness of the soil is such, that this district has been thought worthy of the name of "The Garden of Norfolk." On the E. side of the parish, towards Cromer, are thriving plantations of forest-trees, interspersed with dwelling-houses. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £585, including the tithes on the glebe, which contains upwards of 57 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £563, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, with a tower, which formerly had a lofty spire, useful to mariners as a landmark. The interior of the church contains several monuments—one to John Holmes, author of a Greek grammar, and upwards of thirty years master of the grammar school. The register dates from 1557. There are places of worship for Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists; also National schools for both sexes, and British schools. The free grammar school was founded in 1548 by Sir John, brother to the famous merchant, Sir Thomas Gresham. It has an endowment, producing £428 per annum, with an exhibition of £20 to either University, and one of £12 to Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge. Sir Thomas Gresham, Thomas Girdlestone, the physician, and William Withers, the writer on horticulture, were natives. Market day is Friday for corn. Fairs, principally for stock, are held on 25th April and 25th November; and a statute fair for servants at Michaelmas.

HOLT, a par., borough, and corporate town, in the hund. of Bromfield, co. Denbigh, 5 miles N.E. of Wrexham, and opposite Farndon, in Cheshire. It is situated on the bank of the river Dee, which here separates England from Wales, and across which there is a stone tenarched bridge, built in the 14th century. The par. includes the tnshps. of Duton-Cacca, Duton-Diffreth, Duton-y-Bran, Holt, Ridley, and Sutton. Roman antiquities have frequently been found; hence Camden supposed it to have been the site of the Castrum Legionis of the Romans, or Castell Lleon of the Welsh. Subsequent to the Norman Conquest it became the property of the Warrens, who erected a strong castle, which passed in succession to the Fitz-alans, Beauchamps, Stanleys, &c., and was garrisoned in 1643 for Charles I., but was besieged and entirely razed by the parliamentary forces in 1645. The town was formerly a place of some consequence, and had a market. It obtained a charter in 1410, and is still governed by a mayor, two bailiffs, and a coroner. It unites with Denbigh, Ruthin, and Wrexham, in returning a member to parliament. The bounds, as fixed by the Reform Bill, coincide with those of the township. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £101, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Chad, is an ancient structure. There is also a chapel and a free school, the latter with an income from endowment of £52 per annum. The parochial charities produce about £130 per annum.

HOLT, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 6½ miles N.W. of Worcester, its post town, and 6 W. of Droitwich railway station. It is a small par., situated near Holt Fleet Bridge, on the river Severn, and contains the chplry. of Little Witley. Here are the remains of a castle, built by Urso d'Abitot in the reign of William the Conqueror, which was afterwards rebuilt by Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, and for some time continued to be the residence of that family. The land is partly in hops, and good building-stone is quarried. The road from Worcester to Ludlow passes through the village. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Little Witley annexed, in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £579. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing four bells, and has been lately restored. The font is embellished with grotesque ornaments. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. There is a National school. The Earl of Dudley is lord of the manor.

HOLT, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Great Bradford, co. Wilts, 2½ miles N. of Trowbridge, its post town, 2 N.E. of Bradford, and 3 S.W. of Melksham. It has a station at Holt Junction, on the Devizes branch of the Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth section of the Great Western railway. It is a small village situated on the river Avon, near the Kennet and Avon canal. A considerable business is done in the woollen trade. In the neighbourhood is a mineral spring, which formerly belonged to Arnot, the antiquary, and author of the "Commercial Tables." The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £105, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Bristol. The church is an ancient edifice, with a square tower containing five bells, and is dedicated to St. Catherine. Colonel Foster Bowen, who weighed 34 st. 4 lbs., and resided at Holt House, died here in 1763. Here is a National school, and a place of worship for the Independents. Burton Foster, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HOLT, a tythg. in the par. of Kintbury, co. Berks, 5 miles W. of Newbury.

HOLT, a tythg. in the par. of Wimborne-Minster, hund. of Badbury, co. Dorset, 3 miles N.E. of Wimborne. It contains the hmlt. of Petersham. Here was anciently a forest, chase, and park. The chapel, dedicated to St. James, has been rebuilt.

HOLT, or NEVILL HOLT, a chplry. in the par. of Medbourne, hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 6 miles S.W. of Uppingham, its post town, 8 N.E. of Market Harborough, and 3 N.of Medbourne railway station. It is a small village, situated near the river Welland. Here is a mineral spring, which is considered useful in glandular complaints. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Medbourne, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is a stone structure, with an embattled tower, crowned with a spire, and contains one bell. The interior contains tombs of the Neville family. Holt Hall is the principal residence, situated on an eminence commanding a view of the surrounding country. There is a Roman Catholic chapel adjoining the Hall. Cosmore Nevill, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

HOLTBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Hornby, wap. of East Hang, North Riding co. York, 2 miles N. of Bedale. It is connected with the tnshp. of Ainderby-Myers.

HOLTBY, a par. in the wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of York, its post town, and 2 S.W. of Gate Helmsley railway station, on the York and Market Weighton branch of the North-Eastern line. The village, which is small, is situated W. of the York and Hull turnpike road, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is sandy, and two-thirds of the land arable, the remainder meadow and pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £184. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £248. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a small brick structure, rebuilt in 1792. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. John Agar, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HOLTON, a par. in the hund. of Whitley, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Wincanton, its post town, and 3 from the station of the South-Western railway. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of clay and stone brash, with sand in parts. The land is chiefly in pasture, and orchard and dairy farming is extensively carried on. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. A Sunday-school is held at the clerk's house. Messrs. Plucknett are lords of the manor.

HOLTON, a par. in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 1 mile E. of Halesworth, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Blyth, and on the road from Halesworth to Beccles. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is fertile, producing good corn crops. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £310, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice, with a Norman tower. There is a free school, also places of worship for Primitive Methodists and Baptists.

HOLTON, a par. in the hund. of Bullingdon, co. Oxford, 1 mile N.E. of Wheatley, its post town, and 5 miles E. of Oxford. The village, which is small, and wholly agricultural, is situated on the river Thame. The soil is generally a rich loam, resting upon clay, and in the hills upon oolitic rock. About two-thirds of the land is in meadow and pasture, the remainder arable, producing excellent crops. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £390. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a cruciform structure, with two chapels attached on the N. and S. sides. In the register is an entry recording the marriage of General Ireton with Bridget, daughter of Oliver Cromwell. Holton House, rebuilt in 1804, is surrounded by a park of 150 acres. The charities produce £13 per annum, chiefly the endowment of a school built in 1790.

HOLTON-BECKERING, a par. in the W. div. of the hund. of Wraggoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2½ miles N.W. of Wragby, its post town, and 6 S. of Market Rasen. It is a station on the Hull and Lincoln railway. The village, which is inconsiderable, is entirely agricultural. The principal seats are Holton House and Holton Lodge. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £334. The church of All Saints, which was rebuilt, with the exception of its tower, in 1859, is a small edifice, with tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1695. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a Church school. Christopher Turner, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

HOLTON-LE-CLAY, a par. in the hund. of Bradley Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles S. of Great Grimsby, its post town, and 9 N.W. of Louth. It is a station on the East Lincolnshire railway. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £4, and the vicarial for £6 5s. 8d. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £92. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, was restored and partly rebuilt in 1850. The edifice is small, with a tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1640. The Humbleton free school is open to children of this parish. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans and Methodists. The manor is held by Sir Montague J. Cholmeley of the duchy of Lancaster.

HOLTON-LE-MOOR, a chplry. in the par. of Caistor, N. div. of the hund. of Walshcroft, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles S.W. of Caistor, its post town, and 1 mile from the Holton-le-Moor station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The soil is sand and clay loam. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Caistor, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The chapel is a small edifice, with a turret containing two bells. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The charities produce about £1 per annum, which goes to Dixon's Sunday-school. Thomas John Dixon, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

HOLTON ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of Samford, co. Suffolk, 4½ miles S.E. of Hadleigh, 9 S.W. of Ipswich, and 5 N.W. of Manningtree railway station. It is a small agricultural parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £310. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £257. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square tower. The register dates from 1568. The parochial charities produce about £54 per annum, £30 of which go to White's school.

HOLTON-SQUARE, a vil. in the par. of Alloa, co. Clackmannan, Scotland, not far from Clackmannan. It is principally occupied by colliers.

HOLT-PREEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Cardington, co. Salop, 4 miles E. of Church-Stretton.

HOLTY-COMMON, a hmlt. in the par. of Hartfield, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 3½ miles N. of Hartfield.

HOLVERSTONE, or HOLVESTON, a par. in the hund. of Henstead, co. Norfolk, 5 miles S.E. of Norwich, its post town. The parish is inconsiderable, and the greater part of it belongs to the executors of the late John Marcon, Esq. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Burgh Apton, in the dioc. of Norwich. There are no traces left of the church. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum.

HOLWAY-EXTRA-PORTAM, a tythg. in the par. and borough of Taunton, co. Somerset, in Taunton.

HOLWELL, a par. in the hund. of Clifton, co. Bedford, 3½ miles N.W. of Hitchin, its post town, and 4½ S. of Shefford. The parish is of small extent, and is situated near the river Hiz. The tithes were commuted for 120 acres of land under an Enclosure Act in 1802. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £120. The church, which was repaired in 1845, is a stone edifice dedicated to St. Peter. The charities produce about £105 per annum, chiefly the proceeds of a property at East Greenwich, bequeathed to the parish by Mr. Rand in 1706. By order of the Court of Chancery, the accumulations of this fund were applied in 1831 to the building of a school, and a house for the incumbent. Here are almshouses for six inmates. Frederick Delme Radcliffe, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HOLWELL, a par. in the hund. of Horethorne, co. Dorset, formerly in Somerset, 6 miles S.E. of Sherborne, its post town. The hmlt. of Buckshaw is included in this par. This parish anciently formed part of the forest of Blackmore. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. Limestone is quarried for manure. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £450. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £456, in the patron. of Queen's College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, and there is a National school.

HOLWELL, a chplry. and tnshp. in the par. of Ab-Kettleby, hund. of Framland, co. Leicester, 3½ miles N.W. of Melton-Mowbray. Here is a mineral spring called "Holwell Mouth." The chapel is a small edifice with a turret containing one bell. There is a chapel for the Wesleyans. The Earl of Dysart is lord of the manor.

HOLWELL, a tythg. in the par. of Cranborne, co. Dorset, 1 mile S.W. of Cranborne.

HOLWELL, a chplry. in the par. of Broadwell, hund. of Bampton, co. Oxford, 2 miles S.W. of Burford, its post town. The land is chiefly arable. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £100. The church is a small edifice, rebuilt at the expense of William Harvey, Esq., the lord of the manor.

HOLWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Ronald-Kirk, wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 11 miles N.E. of Brough, and 4 from the parish church of Ronald-Kirk. It is situated on the river Tees, near the High Force Fall, and contains the hmlts. of Lonton and Unthank. In this township is Winch Bridge, which divides the counties of York and Durham. It is suspended from rock to rock by a chain. About 6 miles to the W. is the famed Caldron Snout waterfall. The Duke of Cleveland's shooting-box is situated in this neighbourhood. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1811.

HOLWOOD-HILL, the site of the Roman Noviomagus, co. Kent, on the road from Bromley to Pevensey.

HOLWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Milton-Abbas, co. Dorset, 5 miles S.W. of Blandford.

HOLYBOURNE, a par. in the upper half of the hund. of Alton, co. Hants, 1 mile N.E. of Alton. It is situated on the river Wey, and contains the tythg. of Neatham. The living is a vic. not in charge, annexed to that of Alton, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to the Holy Rood, is an ancient structure, and has been enlarged. There is a free school in the parish, founded and endowed by Thomas Andrews in 1719. It has an annual income of about £200 per annum, a portion of which is appropriated to the apprenticing of boys. Lord Sherbourne is lord of the manor. The principal residence is Holybourne Lodge.

HOLYCONDANE, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Lawrence, hund. of Ringslow, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 2 miles from Ramsgate.

HOLYCROSS, a par. and post-office vil. in the bars. of Eliogarty and Middlethird, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Thurles. It is 2½ miles long by 1½ mile broad. The parish lies in the valley of the river Suir, and is well cultivated. The road from Thurles to Cashel traverses the interior The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with two others, £173, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1821, by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballycahill. There is a parish school, and two or three private schools. The principal residences are, Holycross House, Beakstown, Raheen, Prior Lodge, Farney, Whitefort, and Springfield. The village is a poor place, situated in the Middlethird division of the parish. It contains a large distillery, and the Suir is crossed by a bridge here. Holycross Abbey is one of the most interesting ruins in Ireland. It was founded for Cistercians in 1182 by Donald More O'Brien, King of Limerick, on receiving from Pope Pascal a pretended fragment of the true cross. The abbey is still very perfect. It is a cruciform structure, and contains two chapels and a double row of arches with twisted columns, generally supposed to mark the place of sepulture of the monks. The arches supporting the steeple are groined. The entire structure is built of black marble of a durable character. Here is a monument traditionally assigned to the founder of the abbey, but more probably raised over the remains of some of the Desmonds, to which family the abbey was granted at the Dissolution. Fairs are held in the village on the 11th May, 24th September, and 18th October.

HOLY-CROSS, a par. in the town of Pershore, co. Worcester. See PERSHORE.

HOLY-CROSS. See WALTHAM ABBEY, co. Essex.

HOLY-CROSS, a hmlt. in the par. of Clent, co. Stafford, 3 miles S.E. of Stourbridge. Cattle fairs are held on the 11th April and 12th September.

HOLY-CROSS AND ST. GILES, a par. in the borough of Shrewsbury, co. Salop. See SHREWSBURY.

HOLY-CROSS-WESTGATE-WITHIN, a par. in the city of Canterbury, hund. of Westgate, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent. See CANTERBURY.

HOLY-CROSS-WESTGATE-WITHOUT, a par. in the hund. of Westgate, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, forming part of the western suburbs of Canterbury, adjoining St. Dunstan, and now within the parliamentary boundary of that city.

HOLYFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Waltham-Abbey, hund. of Waltham, co. Essex, 2 miles N.E. of Waltham Abbey. The hamlet is within the northern metropolitan postal district. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture.

HOLY HATCH ENCLOSURE COTTAGE, an ext. par. place in the lower half of the hund. of Fordingbridge, Ringwood div. of co. Hants.

HOLYHEAD, a par., market town, seaport, and parliamentary borough, on Holy Island, in the hunds. of Llyfon and Tal-y-Bolion, co. Anglesey, 24 miles W. by N. of Beaumaris, and 260 from London by road, or 264½ by the London and North-Western and the Chester and Holyhead railways, which latter has an extensive terminus here. The distance from the station to the pier is about a mile, although the rails are carried, for the convenience of the mails and through traffic for Ireland, to the very end of the pier, near the side of the harbour, where the Dublin Company's mail steamers lie, which leave Holyhead twice, and sometimes oftener, every day for Kingston, doing the distance of 63 miles in less than four hours, and thus reducing the time between London and Dublin to eleven hours by the mail train.—The town, which appears to have been an important post from the earliest times, as being the nearest spot of English ground to Ireland, appears to have been a Roman station from the discovery of numerous Roman coins and relics in the island at different times. The most remarkable of these remains is probably the Roman wall surrounding the churchyard, which appears to have been a portion of an ancient fortification. The Hamlet copper mine was also worked by this people. It is the Caer Gybi of the Welsh historians, and was occupied for a time by some Irish pirates in the 5th century. It has been the chief mail packet station for Ireland since the time of William III., but it is only of late years that its admirable site has been made the most of as a postal station and harbour of refuge. The great Holyhead road was laid out by Telford in 1815 as durably as a Roman way, and the first steamer, the Talbot, of 120 tons; with Napier's engines, went to Dublin in 1818. The old harbour was formed by Rennie at the cost of £142,000. The island and pier are connected with the main land of Holy Island by an iron bridge, across which the road and railway are carried. At the pierhead is a lighthouse displaying a white light, and on the land side is an arch of Mona marble, to commemorate the landing of George IV. on his way to Ireland in 1821. On the opposite rock side of the estuary is an obelisk to Captain Skinner, commander of one of the Dublin mail steamers, who was washed overboard in 1833, off the North Stack rocks. In the bay outside the harbour are the Platters, Peibio, Stag, and Nimrod rocks, and at the western extremity of the island are the South Stack rocks and lighthouse, which last is connected with the main island by a suspension bridge. Outside the harbour is Holyhead Bay, which since the construction of the new harbour is never used. It has the Skerries light on the N. Within the bay is a colossal breakwater, running from Soldier's Point N.E. by E., then E.S.E., and then E.N.E. It was originally intended to be of the form of a crescent, but was subsequently enlarged, having been first undertaken by government in 1848, under the superintendence of Mr. Rendel. The grants already made for it by government amount to nearly £2,000,000. The greater portion of its length has been formed in seven and eight fathoms of water. It affords partial shelter to a roadstead of 350 acres, and complete protection to a harbour of 260 acres. It is 1½ mile long, and has almost attained its intended length. Notwithstanding the Cyclopean character of these works, a great portion of the end of the wood scaffolding was carried away in the gale of October, 1859, the same in which the Royal Charter was wrecked. A ship telegraph formerly communicated the arrival of vessels in the offing to Liverpool in three minutes, but it has latterly been superseded by the electric telegraph wires, which are carried along the turnpike road, to the South Stack Lighthouse.—The greater part of the town is built immediately adjoining the harbour, and presents a peculiar appearance from the steepness of the streets, which run somewhat abruptly up from the water's edge. The long rows of new built houses between the town and harbour of refuge are extremely ugly, but the ancient part of the town, adjoining the old church, has a primitive and even picturesque appearance. It contains a custom-house, two banks, savings-bank, hotels, landing pier, and graving docks. The only manufactures carried on are shipbuilding and ropemaking, but on a very small scale.—The population has of late years rapidly increased, chiefly owing to the influx of engineers, mechanics, labourers, and others employed upon the harbour works, so that it has nearly quadrupled since the beginning of the century, when it was a little over 2,000; in 1851 the parliamentary borough contained 5,622, which had increased at the census of 1861 to 6,193. The permanent population are chiefly engaged in the coasting and shipping trade, and as fishermen or pilots. It unites with Amlwch, Beaumaris, and Llangefni, in returning one member to the imperial parliament, and is a polling place for the county of Anglesey.—The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £287, in the patron. of Jesus College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Gybi, stands in a camp or fort 221 feet by 130, surrounded by Roman walls. It was made collegiate by Hwfa-ap-Cynddelw about 1140, and having been rebuilt is now a fine cruciform structure of the time of Edward III. Others assert that St. Gybi founded a small monastery here about the year A.D. 380; and Maclgwyn Gwynedd built a college at the close of the 6th century. The head of the college was called Penclas or Pencolas, and was one of the spiritual lords of Anglesey, the archdeacon of the isle being another, and the Abbot of Penmon the other; the number of prebendaries was at least twelve. The exterior of the church is remarkable for its sculpture, a good deal of which has nearly mouldered away, except on the S. transept, which has an embattled parapet, and under the S. porch, which contains a figure of St. Gybi under a canopy. Besides the parish church, there is a new church recently erected at a cost of nearly £5,000. The Wesleyan and Calvinistic Methodists, Independents, and Baptists have chapels. There are National and British schools, with accommodation for 1000 children, the former having been rebuilt in 1860 at an expense of £2,000. The charities produce about £75 per annum, including the endowment of Wynne's school and almshouses.—In the vicinity are many remains of antiquity. On the summit of the Holyhead mountain, or Caer Gybi, 790 feet high, are traces of early fortifications, together with a ruddy built circular tower, supposed to have answered the purpose of a pharos or watch tower. On Caer Twr Hill are remains of a camp, and at Towyn y Capel is a mound, supposed to have been the site of an ancient church. At a little distance are two cromlechs; and at various places coins of Constantine, spear-heads, bronze rings, &c., have been found. At the telegraph station is a magnificent panorama, embracing, towards the W., the Irish coast and the Wicklow mountains, to the S. the whole of Holyhead island and a large part of Anglesey, with the mountains of Snowdonia in the distance, while to the N.E. are the Skerries islands, with a lighthouse 117 feet above high water. Market day is Saturday.

HOLY ISLAND, or HOLYHEAD ISLAND, called by the Welsh Ynys Gybi, lies on the W. side of Anglesey, from which it is divided by a strait, or traeth, which dries at low water, and is crossed by the embankment and bridges of the great Irish coast road and the Chester and Holyhead railway, and also by an ordinary stone bridge, which spans the arm of the sea at its narrowest point. It lies N.W. and S.E., being about 7 miles long by 3 broad, but narrowing in the middle. It is divided into the parishes of Holyhead and Rhoscolyn. The general character of the island is hilly and barren, but it includes some good pasture for sheep, and a proportion of fair arable soil. The rocks belong to the Silurian slates and grits of Caernarvon and Merioneth, but have been altered by geologic changes into chlorite and mica schists, and in other spots into quartz rock, accompanied by flexures of the beds. Variegated marble is found, as also verd antique and soapstone. In many places along the coast, as at the South Stack rocks, these hard chloritic schists have been perforated by the action of the waves into vast caverns, frequented by innumerable quantities of seabirds, including gulls, cormorants, razor-bills, guillemots, and even peregrine falcons, which here breed in security, as they are prohibited to be shot, on account of the services that they render to vessels in foggy weather, by surrounding them with loud cries immediately a gun is fired. In the precipitous face of the cliffs of the mainland 380 steps have been cut, leading to a suspension bridge which spans the chasm separating the South Stack rock with its lighthouse from the main island. The lighthouse was erected in 1809, and is 212 feet above high water, yet so awful is the violence of the sea here in S.W. gales, that it frequently dashes over the whole rock and the dwellings of the keepers. On the North Stack on the other side of the island is also a lighthouse 117 feet above high water, which was lately purchased by the Trinity Board of M. Jones, Esq., for £450,000, as compensation for taking the light into their own hands. See HOLYHEAD and RHOSCOLYN.

HOLY ISLAND, or LINDISFARNE, a par. in the hund. of Islandshire, co. Northumberland, formerly in Durham, 12 miles from Berwick, its post town, 5 from Belford, and 3½ from the Beal station on the North-Eastern railway. Besides the principal island, the par. comprises the Farn islands and the hmlts. of Fenham and Goswick-on-the-Mainland, which are separated by Fenham Flats. Holy Island is situated in the North Sea, about 1½ mile from the Northumbrian coast, and is about 9 miles in circumference, and 2 from E. to W. across. It is connected with the mainland by a narrow isthmus, which can be traversed by horses and carriages at the ebb of the tide, but at other times is entirely submerged. Lately, strong posts have been sunk along the sands as a safeguard to travellers. It derives its name from an abbey, founded by Oswald, the Saxon king of Northumbria, in 635, which subsequently became the seat of a bishop's see; but after a succession of fourteen prelates, the cathedral was destroyed by the Danes in 893, and the bishopric was removed to Chester-le-Street, and, subsequently, to Durham. After the Norman Conquest, the abbey was rebuilt and converted into a Benedictine cell to Durham Abbey, by William De Carilepho. The island was invaded and plundered in 941 by Malcolm I. of Scotland. In the great civil war it was garrisoned for the parliament, and in 1715 was seized for the Pretender, but was speedily recaptured by a detachment of the king's troops at Berwick. The old castle, situated at the S.E. part of the island, adjoining Heugh Hill, stands on a cliff, 108 feet in height; it is now occupied by the coastguard men. There are several springs, producing water of excellent quality; also a lake, covering an area of 6 acres. The rocks on its northern shore are limestone, and are worn by the sea into singular caverns. In this part of the island are a small seam of coal, and a stratum of slate, the latter containing a considerable quantity of iron ore, with which are found the entrochi, or fossils, popularly termed St. Cuthbert's beads. At the south-western corner of the island is situated the village, distinguished for the ruins of the monastery. It is a place of considerable resort for sea-bathing, and as a fair harbour, being a subport to Berwick. In the market-place are a sun-dial and stone cross, 12 feet in height, rebuilt by H. C. Selby, Esq., in 1828. A great portion of the inhabitants are fishermen and pilots. The principal fish caught are cod, ling, haddock, and lobsters, which last are very abundant in the neighbouring seas. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £183, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing one bell. The church has the old original roof, over the nave, which is supported by three arches on each side, the S. side having octagonal pillars with pointed arches, while those on the N. are round, with Norman arches. The pulpit is of carved oak, bearing date 1646. The communion table, supposed to have belonged to the original church, is very handsome, and is in a good state of preservation. The font is of stone, not very large; and there are several ancient piscinas in various parts of the church. The S. aisle contains a stained window; and in the N. aisle is a marble tablet to Sir Carnaby Haggerston, Bart. There are also several marble tablets. Near to the church are the ruins of the old cathedral, a stately pile, with Saxon arches and pillars. There are also traces of the priory, with the stump of the cross, or "Pettingstone," which all brides attempt to stride the length of. These ruins have recently been restored at a considerable expense. John Strangeways Donaldson Selby is lord of the manor, and chief landowner.

HOLY ISLAND, a small island lying in the channel which joins the upper and middle lakes of Killarney, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland.

HOLY ISLE, an island lying in the entrance to Lamlash Bay, on the S.E. side of the Isle of Arran, coast of Scotland. It is about 1 mile long. The interior is very picturesque, and rises in the centre to an altitude of 1,008 feet. It is said to have had a church, built by a Culdee hermit, whose cave and holy well are pointed out on the W. side of the island.

HOLY OAKES, a lib. in the par. of Stoke Dry, hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 3 miles N.W. of Rockingham. It is situated near the river Wye.

HOLY ROOD, a par. in the town of Southampton, co. Hants. See SOUTHAMPTON.

HOLYROOD ABBEY. See EDINBURGH.

HOLY-SEPULCHRE, a par. in the borough of Cambridge, which see.

HOLYSTONE, or HALLYSTONE, a parochial chplry. in the par. of Alwinton, W. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 3 miles S.E. of Alwinton, and 7 W. of Rothbury. The village, which is small, is situated on the S. side of the river Coquet. The chplry. consists of five tnshps., viz. Holystone, Harbottle, Barrow, Dueshill, and Linsheels, and is surrounded on the N. and E. by Alwinton, and on the S. and W. by Elsdon par. There is a large proportion of moorland, and the cultivated land is a light gravelly soil. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, united with Alwinton, and in the gift of the Duke of Northumberland. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone structure, and was thoroughly repaired and the chancel rebuilt in 1849. Two memorial windows to the Dawson family were inserted in 1857. The parochial charities produce £1 10*s.* per annum. There are parochial and Sunday schools. In this township, near the Mill House, are the remains of a Benedictine nunnery, founded about 1254; and near it is Our Lady's well, shaded by trees, where Paulinus is said to have baptized his early converts. The principal residence is Campville, about half a mile W. of Holystone, occupying the site of a Roman encampment.

HOLYTOWN, a post vil. and quoad sacra par. in the par. of Bothwell, co. Lanark, Scotland, 4 miles S.W. of Ardrie. It is a station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway, and is situated on the coach road from Glasgow to Edinburgh. Here are a chapel-of-ease and Free church. This place derives its importance from its central position in the great Lanark mineral district.

HOLY TRINITY, the name of several parishes. See CAMBRIDGE, COLCHESTER, DORCHESTER, EXETER, GUILDFORD, HASTINGS, HULL, SHAFTESBURY, &c.

HOLY-TRINITY-GOODRAMGATE, a par. in the city of York, which see.

HOLY TRINITY KING'S COURT, a par. in the city of York, which see.

HOLY TRINITY MICKLEGATE, a par. in the city and ainsty of York, co. York. See YORK.

HOLY TRINITY MINORIES, a par. in the city of London, co. Middlesex.

HOLY-TRINITY-THE-LESS, a par. in the city of London, co. Middlesex.

HOLYWELL, a ward in the par. of St. Clement Danes, in the city and lib. of Westminster, co. Middlesex.

HOLYWELL, or TREFYNNON, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Coleshill, co. Flint, 10 miles S. of St. Asaph, and 67¾ from Holyhead by the Chester and Holyhead section of the London and North-Western railway, which has a station about 1½ mile from the town. The par. contains the tnshps. and hmlts. of Bagillt-fawr, Bagillt-fechan, Brynford, Calcot, Coleshill-fawr, Coleshill-fechan, Greenfield, where is the railway station, and Welstone.—The town is situated on a hill by the southern shore of the estuary of the Dee. It was until the middle of the last century an inconsiderable town, chiefly dependent on visitors to the well of St. Wenefrede, from which it derives both its English and Welsh names; but, from its position in the centre of an immensely valuable mineral district, and from the manufactures carried on in the neighbourhood, it has become one of the most important and flourishing towns in North Wales. It is a straggling, though rather well-built place, containing numerous establishments for smelting lead and copper, desilverising lead, making shot, &c. The first copper-mill was started by a company from Warrington in 1766, soon after which the Holywell Level mining concern was commenced, and speedily produced large quantities of lead and silver ore. In the vicinity are extensive collieries and lead mines, large quarries of Aberdaw limestone, also calamine and black-jack, and a Roman cement manufactory.—Under the Reform Act it is a parliamentary borough, being contributory to Flint in returning one member to parliament. Its population in 1851 was 11,302, which had declined in 1861 to 10,301. Its trade is still very active, though not equal to what it was some few years since. It is lighted with gas and paved, and has a copious water supply from St. Wenefrede's spring, which discharges at the rate of 21 tons a minute, and rushes down in an impetuous torrent to the river, turning in its course of 1½ mile, copper, cotton, corn, and paper mills. The waters of this spring have been long famed for their healing qualities, having been visited by William the Conqueror, Henry VI., Edward I., James II., and in recent times by the King of the Belgians. Its peculiarities are that it never freezes, although intensely cold, and scarcely ever varies in the supply of water, the only difference after wet weather being a considerable discoloration. The sweet-scented moss, or Jungermannia asplenioides, still flourishes on the banks, but the minute plant called by Linnæus Byssus iolithus, which used in ancient times to grow upon the stones, giving them a red tint, attributed by the superstitious to the blood of St. Winifred, which gave to the well several miraculous properties, is no longer found, the constant bathing having disturbed the natural character of the basin. The chapel over the well is of the later perpendicular style of architecture, and was erected by Margaret, Countess of Richmond, and mother of Henry VII. The building contains two baths, which are for public use at certain times and under certain regulations. In the groin work of the roof are suspended numerous sticks, crutches, and handbarrows, as the votive offerings of those who have been cured. The chapel above is now used as a Sunday-school, for divine service on Wednesday evenings, and for occasional meetings. A tram rail runs into the mines under the hill on which the town stands.—Holywell is the head of a Poor-law Union comprising 14 parishes, and of superintendent registry and County Court districts.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £250, in the patron. of Jesus College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Wenefrede, is an ancient structure, with a tower rising directly above the chapel of the well, and is situated below the rest of the town. It was partly rebuilt in 1769, and contains a headless effigy of a priest in his sacerdotal robes, with a chalice in his hand. Besides the parish church there are two district churches, one at Bagillt, consecrated in 1839, the other at Brynford, consecrated in 1853, and a room licensed for Divine service at Greenfield. There are places of worship belonging to the Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, Wesleyan Reformers, Welsh Methodists, and Roman Catholics, besides Dissenting places of worship at Greenfield, Bagillt, and other places within the parish. There are three National schools, also British and Roman Catholic schools.—In the vicinity of the town are the ruins of Basingwerk Abbey, contrasting strangely with the modern factories, tram roads, and chimneys by which they are surrounded; also traces of the old British fortification of Dinas Basing, or "fort in the bottom," and of Wat's Dyke, which had its northern termination at the seacoast in this neighbourhood. Market day is on Friday. Fairs, or wakes, are held on the 22nd June and 3rd November.

HOLYWELL, or HALLIWELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Earsdon, E. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 4 miles S. of Blyth, and 5 N.W. of North Shields. It is a station on the Blyth and Tyne railway. The village is situated on the Shields turnpike road. There are several collieries, and a medicinal spring called St. Mary's Well. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

HOLYWELL, a district in the par. of St. Leonard, Shoreditch, London, so named from a well in Holywell-street, near the Benedictine nunnery of St. John Baptist.

HOLYWELL. See ST. CROSS, co. Oxford.

HOLYWELL-CUM-AUNBY, a chplry. in the par. of Castle Bytham, wap. of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 6 miles S.W. of Bourne, and 7 N.W. of Stamford, its post town, and is situated near the river Glen. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Careby, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The chapel-of-ease is an ancient structure dedicated to St. Wilfred.

HOLYWELL-CUM-NEEDINGWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Hurstingtone, co. Huntingdon, 1¾ mile E. of St. Ives, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Ouse. Fragments of Roman pottery have been discovered here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £528. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure with a square tower. The churchyard commands an extensive view of the river Ouse. Near the church is a holy well, from which the village derived its name. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans and Baptists.

HOLYWELL-GREEN, a vil. in the tnshp. of Stainland, and par. of Halifax, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S. of Halifax. It is a large manufacturing village, the inhabitants being chiefly engaged in the cotton and woollen mills.

HOLYWELL HAUGH, a place in the co. Berwick, near the ford of the Tweed to Norham Castle, where a conference was held in 1291 between Edward II. and the Scots relative to the Scottish succession.

HOLYWELL LAKE, a hmlt. in the par. of Wellington, co. Somerset, 2 miles from Wellington.

HOLYWELL-ROW, a hmlt. in the par. of Mildenhall, hund. of Lackford, co. Suffolk, 2 miles N.W. of Mildenhall. It is situated on the road to Lakenheath, near the Fens.

HOLYWOOD, a par. and post-office vil. in the district of Nithsdale, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 2½ miles N.W. of Dumfries. It is a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. Its boundaries are formed by the co. Kirkcudbright and the pars. of Dunscore, Kirkmahoe, and Dumfries. It is 10 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface is flat, and the soil good. The interior is traversed by the rivers Nith and Cluden, with their several tributary burns. The Glasgow and Dumfries road passes through the parish, and upon it stands the village. This par. is in the presb. and synod of Dumfries. The minister has a stipend of £235. The church was built in 1779. Here are three parochial schools and a subscription library. The chief residences are, Newton-airds, Gribton House, Broomrig House, Cowhill House, and Portract House. Remains of Holywood Abbey existed as late as 1779, but they were subsequently used to furnish building material for the present church. It was a cruciform structure, supposed to have been founded in the 12th century by one of the Maxwell family. It was restored, and had a hospital added in 1372 by Archibald Douglas, Lord Galloway. Its site was that of the present burial-ground. The old bells now hang in the parish church. Here are remains of a Druidical oak grove and circle. The rivers abound in salmon and trout. Dr. Irvine, who invented the apparatus for rendering salt water fresh, was born here. Dr. Bryce Johnston was minister for many years.

HOLYWOOD, a small watering-place in the co. Antrim, Ireland, forming a marine suburb of Belfast, with which town it is connected by a short line of railway.

HOME, a hmlt. in the par. of Ystradyfodwg, hund. of Miskin, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles S. of Merthyr-Tydfil.

HOME, or HUME, an ancient par. now joined to Stichell, co. Roxburgh, Scotland. From this place the Dunbars take the title of earl.

HOME, a tnshp. in the par. of Wentnor, co. Salop, 3 miles N.E. of Bishop's Castle.

HOMER, a tnshp. in the par. of Much Wenlock, co. Salop, 1 mile N. of Wenlock. It is united with Harley.

HOMERSFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Wangford, co. Suffolk, 3½ miles N.E. of Harleston, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Bungay. The Great Eastern railway has a station here. The village, which is small, and wholly agricultural, is situated on the S. bank of the river Waveney. The soil consists of loam and clay. In the reign of Henry III. the Bishop of Norwich, who had an episcopal residence here, obtained the grant of a market and fair. The former has long been discontinued. The living is a rect. annexed to that of South Elmham, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £360. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small edifice with an ivy-covered tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1558. There is an annuity of £2 10*s.* derived from the poor's land. Sir R. S. Adair, Bart., is lord of the manor.

HOMERTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Hackney, Tower div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, 3 miles N.E. of St. Paul's, London. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of London, val. £150, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Barnabas. There are three chapels, Robinson's almshouses for 12 ministers' widows, and the Protestant Dissenters' College, for 20 students, founded soon after the Revolution, and rebuilt in 1823.

HOMILDON. See HUMBLETON, co. Northumberland.

HOMINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Cawden, co. Wilts, 4 miles S.W. of Salisbury, its post town. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is situated on a branch of the river Avon. Much of the land is unenclosed. The soil is chalky, producing good crops of wheat and other grain. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under an Enclosure Act in 1783. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £57, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury, who are impropriators.

HOM-LACY. See HOLME-LACY, co. Hereford.

HOMLET, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanrhaiadr-yn-Mochnant, co. Denbigh, 4 miles N. of Llanfyllin.

HONEYBOROUGH, GREAT and LITTLE, vils. in the par. of Llanstadwell, co. Pembroke, 3 miles E. of Milford.

HONEYBOURNE, CHURCH. See CHURCH HONEYBOURNE, co. Worcester.

HONEYBOURNE, COW. See COW HONEYBOURNE, co. Gloucester.

HONEYCHURCH, a par. in the hund. of Black Torrington, co. Devon, 2 miles from North Tawton, its post town, 7 N.E. of Okehampton, and 7 S.E. of Hatherleigh. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated near the river Taw, about 1 mile N. of the road from Exbourne to North Tawton. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £48. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £93. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a tower containing three bells. The Earl of Portsmouth is lord of the manor.

HONEYPARK, a vil. in the par. of Monkstown, in the bar. of Rathdown, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of Dublin.

HONILY, a par. in the Snitterfield div. of the hund. of Barlichway, co. Warwick, 2½ miles W. of Kenilworth, its post town and railway station, and 6 N.W. from Warwick. It belonged to Francis Lord Carrington in 1686. There is no village, only a few scattered farmhouses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £150. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. Mrs. Willes is lady of the manor and chief landowner.

HONING, a par. in the hund. of Tunstead, co. Norfolk, 4 miles S.E. of North Walsham, its post town, and 13 from Norwich. It is a small agricultural village, situated to the E. of the Ant navigation, which runs through the parish. There is a tract of common land on which the poor have the privilege of turning their cattle. The living is a vic. united with that of Dilham, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is situated on rising ground, and was rebuilt above half a century back. It contains a brass of R. Parker, bearing date 1419. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum, of which £15 goes to the free school. There is also an infant school. The principal residence is Honing Hall, the seat of George Edward Cubitt, Esq., who is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

HONINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Forehoe, co. Norfolk, 8 miles W. of Norwich, its post town, and 6 N. of Wymondham. It is situated on a branch of the river Wensum. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a vic. with that of East Tuddenham annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £502. The church of St. Andrew, which is situated 1 mile E. of the village, is a small flint and stone edifice, with a square tower containing one bell. The register dates from 1561. The tithes were commuted in 1840. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum, exclusive of several cottages for the poor. Honingham Hall is the seat of Lord Bayning, who is lord of the manor. The National school is at East Tuddenham.

HONINGTON, a par. in the wap. of Winnibriggs, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.E. of Grantham, its post town. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The village, which is small, is situated near the ancient Ermine Street, and on the roads from Grantham to Lincoln, and also to Sleaford. Here are a tumulus, and the site of a double-ditched Roman camp, where coins, urns, &c., were found in 1691. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £200. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £214. The church is an ancient structure dedicated to St. Wilfrid, and has monuments of the Hussey family. The charities produce about £34 per annum.

HONINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourn, co. Suffolk, 3 miles N.W. of Ixworth, its post town, and 8 from Bury. The village is of small extent, and is situated on a branch of the river Waveney. It was the birthplace of Robert Bloomfield, the poet. The tithes, a portion of which is paid to the Rector of Great Fakenham, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £336. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £332, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is of brick, with a thatched roof and a tower of stone. An allotment of 25 acres of land was awarded to the poor in lieu of the right of cutting furze, which now produces about £40 per annum.

HONINGTON, a par. in the Brailes div. of the hund. of Kington, co. Warwick, 2 miles N. of Shipston-on-Stour, its post town, and 8 from the Mereton railway station. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the river Stour, and formerly belonged to the monastery of Coventry. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £130. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was rebuilt at the expense of the late Sir Henry Parker, Bart.

HONITON, a par., post and market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Axminster, co. Devon, 9 miles N.E. of Sidmouth, 11 S.E. of Cullompton, and 16 E. of Exeter. It is a station on the Yeovil and Exeter branch of the London and South-Western railway. The town, which has somewhat decreased, is situated in a valley near the S. side of the river Otter, and on the Great Western road from Exeter to London. It was formerly held by Drogo, the Saxon, and by Robert Earl of Montaigne, from whom it passed to the Riverses, thence to the Courtenays of Powderham. Honiton gives its name to the fine lace extensively manufactured here. The houses have been mostly rebuilt since the fires in 1745 and 1765. Here are flour-mills, maltings, tanneries, two breweries, and an iron foundry. The town is governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councilmen. It consists principally of one street, less than a mile in length, well paved, and lighted with gas, and contains many good shops, two banks, literary and scientific institution, market-house, &c. The town is much improved by a stream of water constantly flowing through it. Petty sessions, poor-law guardians, county courts, and manor courts, are held here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £760. The parish church, which is situated in the centre of the town, was erected in 1838 by subscription, and made the parish church by an Act of Parliament passed in 1835. It is dedicated to St. Paul, and has a lofty tower. From some error in its construction it had to be re-roofed and repaired in 1849. The old parish church of St. Michael is situated on a hill out of the town, and was formerly a friary chapel, built by Bishop Courtenay in 1484. It has a tower containing five bells. The interior of this church contains several ancient monuments, among which is that of Marwood, Queen Elizabeth's physician. Humphrey, the miniature painter, was a native of this place. Here are St. Margaret's almshouses, nine in number, for the same number of poor aged persons. They are endowed with upwards of 18 acres of land, let at the annual rent of £60. The inmates receive pensions varying in amount. The Independents, Wesleyans, Baptists, and Unitarians have each a chapel. New buildings for the National schools, of considerable size and good architectural design, were erected by subscription in 1862, at a cost of £1,400. There are also British schools. Fley's grammar school, called also Allhallows school, is endowed with £12 per annum, besides a house for the master, for which he has to teach four boys of this town gratuitously. The Poor-law Union of Honiton consists of 18 parishes. The union poorhouse was erected in 1836. At Dumdown Hill, about 2 miles to the N.E. of the town, are traces of extensive entrenched camps, supposed to have been the Moridunum of Antoninus. The land lies extremely high, and is the first sighted on nearing the adjoining coast. On Honiton Hill stands a tower 80 feet in height erected by the late Lord Bishop of Llandaff. A weekly market is held on Saturday for butter, cheese, &c., also two great markets for cattle annually on the second Saturday in April, and on the Saturday prior to the 18th October. A fair is held on the Wednesday and Thursday after the 19th July for cattle and horses. The borough returns two members to parliament.

HONITON, CLIST. See CLIST-HONITON, co. Devon.

HONLEY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Almondbury, upper div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 3½ miles S. of Huddersfield, its post town, and 1 mile from the Honley station on the Huddersfield and Sheffield railway. It is a populous village situated in the vale of the Holme, which joins the Colne below Hapton. This tnshp. contains Shady Row, and 7 other hmlts. There are some woollen manufactories, giving employment to a large portion of the inhabitants. Building-stone is quarried at Scott Gate Head; and coal of inferior quality is obtained in large quantities. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £160, in the patron. of the Vicar of Almondbury. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1843. It is a stone structure, with a square tower containing a clock and one bell. The interior of the church contains monuments to the Brook family. There is also a chapel-of-ease at Brockholes. Here are National and infant schools for both sexes. The Independents, Wesleyan Free Church, and Primitive Methodists, have each a chapel, and the Wesleyans and New Connexion have two chapels each. A new union poorhouse has been recently erected at Deanhouse for the accommodation of the southern townships of the Huddersfield union. The Earl of Dartmouth is lord of the manor.

HONOR, a tythg. in the par. of Portbury, co. Somerset, 5 miles W. of Bristol.

HOO, a hund. in the lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, contains the pars. of Allhallows, Isle of Grain, High Halstow, Hoo, Hoo St. Mary, and Stoke, comprising an area of 17,760 acres.

HOO, or HOO ST. WERBURGH, a par. in the above hund., lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 5 miles from Rochester, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Chatham. It is situated on the river Medway, and formerly belonged to Earl Godwin and the bishops of Bayeux. The Earl of Jersey, to whom the parish belongs, takes hence the title of baron. There are salt marshes, intersected by creeks; also a quay for the landing of coals. There are tile-works, and a pottery. The union poorhouse is situated in this parish, which is the head of a Poor-law Union, comprising 7 parishes. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £395, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Werburgh, is an ancient edifice, with a spired tower containing six bells. In the interior of the church are seven brasses of priests, bearing date from 1412. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes.

HOO, a par. in the hund. of Loes, co. Suffolk, 4 miles N.W. of Wickham Market, its post town, 4 S.W. of Framlingham, and 7 from Woodbridge. It is a small village situated on the river Deben. The land is chiefly arable. There are some clay and sand pits. There were anciently five guilds, called the Holy Trinity, St. Mary, St. Peter, St. Andrew, and St. John. The living is a perpet. cur.* with that of Letheringham annexed, val. £110, in the patron. of trustees. The church is dedicated to SS. Andrew and Eustachius. There is a National school. The Duke of Hamilton is lord of the manor.

HOO ALLHALLOWS. See ALLHALLOWS, co. Kent.

HOO, or HOO ST. MARY, a par. in the lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 5 miles N.E. of Rochester. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for rent-charges, the moiety of £74 13*s.* payable to the Dean and Chapter of Rochester, and of £602 to the rector. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £502, in the patron. of the rector.

HOOBER, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Brampton Bierlow, par. of Wath-upon-Dearne, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N. of Rotherham, and 5 S.E. of Barnsley.

HOOD-GRANGE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Kilburn, North Riding co. York, 5 miles S.E. of Thirsk.

HOOD-GREEN, a vil. in the tnshp. of Stainbrough, and par. of Silkstone, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Barnesley.

HOOD-HILL, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Wentworth, and par. of Wath-on-Dearne, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Rotherham.

HOOE, a par. in the hund. of Ninfield, rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, 5 miles E. of Hailsham, and 8 S.W. of Battle, its post town. The village, situated on the road from Eastbourne to Battle, is small and agricultural. Nearly half the land is in common and marsh, the remainder arable and meadow, with about 30 acres of hop-grounds. It formerly had an alien priory, built as a cell to Bec Abbey, in France, but subsequently given to Eton and Ashford colleges. The foundations only of the buildings are remaining. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £215, and the vicarial for £317 10*s.* The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £235. The church, with square embattled tower, is dedicated to St. James.

HOOK, a par. in the hund. of Eggerton, Bridport div. of the co. of Dorset, 4 miles S.E. of Beaminster, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Bridport. It is a small village situated on the river Froom, which is here joined by the Owke or Hook stream. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in flax spinning. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £41. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £100. The church, which was repaired in 1844, is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Giles. There is a National school, also a Sunday-school attached to the church. The Duke of Cleveland is lord of the manor.

HOOK, a hmlt. in the par. of Titchfield, co. Hants, 5 miles W. of Fareham. It is situated near Southampton Water. The principal residence is Hook House.

HOOK, a hmlt. in the Odiham div. of co. Hants, 2 miles N.W. of Odiham, and 21 N.E. of Winchester. 1 is situated near the Basingstoke canal and the South-Western railway.

HOOK, a hmlt. in the par. of Kingston-on-Thames, first div. of the hund. of Kingston, co. Surrey, 3 miles S. of Kingston, its post town, 3½ N.W. of Epsom, and 2 S. of the Kingston railway station. Hook, formerly called La Hoke, is of ancient date; it is situated on the Dorking road, and was made an ecclesiastical district under the Marquis of Blandford's Act. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £80, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which was erected in 1838, is a small structure, with a gable belfry, and is dedicated to St. Paul. There is a National school erected in 1859 by voluntary contributions. Barwell Court, situated about 1 mile S.W., is the principal residence.

HOOK, a par. in the bar. of Shelburne, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Fethard, its post town. It is 2 miles long by half a mile broad, and contains the vils. of Churchtown and Slade. The parish extends along the S. side of of the peninsula which forms the eastern screen of Waterford Harbour. The soil is fertile. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Templeton, £91. Loftus Hall is the occasional residence of the Marquis of Ely, where the two-handed sword of Strongbow is preserved. Slade Castle, near the village of Slade, is said to have been founded by one of the Hay family. Hook Tower, from its lofty and prominent position, is now converted into a lighthouse. The light was put up in 1791; it is fixed and is visible for 16 miles. Limestone is extensively quarried in this parish.

HOOK, a chplry. and tnshp. in the par. of Snaith, lower div. of the wap. of Osgoldcross, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S. of Howden, its post town, and 1½ mile N.E. of Goole. It is situated on the bank of the river Ouse, which is here of considerable breadth. At Hook Moor there is a meet for the Bramham Moor hounds. The parish includes a small portion of the town of New Goole. The soil, originally poor, has been much improved by cultivation. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £150. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The charities consist of feoffee lands producing £67 per annum. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans, and a church school.

HOOK-GATE, a hmlt in the pars. of Ashley and Drayton-in-Hales, co. Stafford, 7 mile N.W. of Eccleshall.

HOOK-GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Southfleet, hund. of Axton, and lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, half a mile S.W. of Southfleet.

HOOKHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Cleeve, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Watchet.

HOOK-NORTON WITH SOUTHROP, a par. in the hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 5 miles N.E. of Chipping-Norton, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Banbury. It is situated on the borders of Warwickshire, and was given by William the Conqueror to Robert de Oily, and in 1285 belonged to Ela, Countess of Warwick. Near Hook-Norton Lodge are the remains of a Saxon camp. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £180, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is situated on rising ground in the centre of the village, is an ancient structure with a tower, dedicated to St. Peter, and has been thoroughly restored at great expense. The interior contains an antique Norman font. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Baptists, and Society of Friends, have each a chapel. There are National and British schools.

HOOLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Plemonstall, lower div. of the hund. of Broxton, co. Chester, 2¾ miles N. of Chester. It is situated on the high road from Chester to Frodsham. It was allotted to the Welsh chiefs who came to Hugh Lupus's standard.

HOOLE, a par. in the hund. of Leyland, co. Lancaster, 8 miles S.W. of Preston, its post town, 11 N.E. of Ormskirk, and 2 from the Cockerbar railway station on the East Lancashire line. It is situated on the river Douglas or Astland, and on the old turnpike road between Preston and Liverpool. This par. was separated in 1642 from that of Croston, and contains the tnshps. of Much and Little Hoole. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is partly a marly loam, alternated with peat-moss and marsh. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £280. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £280. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was formerly a chapel-of-ease to Croston. It is a small edifice with a low tower containing one bell. The interior of late has undergone thorough repair. There is an endowed National school for both sexes. A commodious brick building has recently been erected as a schoolhouse, in which a Sunday-school is held. The parochial charities produce about £29 per annum. George Anthony Leigh Keck, Esq., Rev. Richard Renshaw Rothwell, and R. R. Rothwell, Esq., are lords of the manor and chief landowners.

HOOLE, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Hoole, hund. of Leyland, co. Lancaster, 6 miles from Preston, and 2 from the parish church of Hoole. Here are some extensive brick and tile works, also a considerable trade is done in the manufacturing of cotton, giving employment to a large portion of the inhabitants. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship.

HOOLE, MUCH, a tnshp. as above.

HOOLEYHILL, a vil. in the district of Audenshaw, co. Lancaster, 3 miles from Ashton-under-Lyne.

HOON, a tnshp. in the par. of Marston-upon-Dove, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 5 miles N. of Burton, 9½ S.W. of Derby, and 3 N.E. of Tutbury railway station.

HOOSE, or HOYLAKE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of West Kirby, lower div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 8 miles N.W. of Birkenhead. It is a watering-place at the river Dee's mouth. Off it lie the Hoyle sands and the passage to Liverpool, with two lights visible for 9 miles. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop.

HOOTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Eastham, higher div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 7 miles S. of Birkenhead, and 8 N. of Chester. It is a station on the Lancashire and Cheshire Junction railway. It is situated on the river Mersey. Hooton Hall is the principal residence. There is a small chapel for Roman Catholics.

HOOTON-LEVETT, a tnshp. in the par. of Maltby, S. div. of the wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, half a mile from Maltby, and 6 miles S.E. of Rotherham.

HOOTON PAGNELL, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 6½ miles N.W. of Doncaster, its railway station and post town. The village, which is small is situated on rising ground, and has an ancient cross in good preservation. The par. contains the tnshps. of Bilham and Moorhouse, and is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable. The soil is limestone and clay. From Belle Vue is an extensive view, embracing York and Lincoln cathedrals, and, in clear weather, Southwell Minster. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £350. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. The register dates from the reign of Henry VIII. The parochial charities produce about £19 per annum. Bilham House is the principal residence.

HOOTON ROBERTS, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 4½ miles N.E. of Rotherham, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Doncaster. The village, is small, and is situated on the road from Rotherham to Doncaster. Here are some excellent freestone quarries, which supplied the material for Wentworth House. The soil consists of loam and clay, with subsoil limestone. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £255. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £340. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient stone structure, with a square tower containing a clock and three bells. In the interior of the church is a painted window. This is the burial-place of Lady Strafford, whose interment took place by torchlight, it being her wish that no monument should be erected to her memory, nor funeral sermon preached. The countess had resided in this parish several years after the decapitation of her husband in the reign of Charles I. The register dates from 1702. There is a school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. Earl Fitzwilliam is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

HOPE, a par. in the hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 1 mile E. of Castleton, 12 miles N.W. of Bakewell, its post town, and 15 S.W. of Sheffield. It is situated on the river Noe, and contains Bradwell, Brough, Fairfield, and 15 other tnshps. Hope was formerly a market town under the Fitzwarrens, who had a castle here. The inhabitants are engaged in the cotton, rope, hat, and lace manufactures. The larger part of the land is in moorland. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £380, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. There is a district church at Fairfield, the living of which is a don. cur.,* val. £79. The parish church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower crowned with a spire, and contains six bells. The parochial charities produce about £73 per annum, of which £7 goes to a free school. Here is a place of worship for the Methodists. The bodies of two persons buried in the moors in 1674 were found twenty years after in an undecayed state, the skin being soft, and resembling tanned leather. Joseph Hall, Esq., is lord of the manor. A market for cattle is held on the last Wednesday in every month.

HOPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Buttington, borough of Pool, co. Montgomery, 2 miles N.E. of Welshpool.

HOPE, or ESTYN, a par. and vil. in the hund. of Maylor, co. Flint, 11 miles S. of Flint, and 186 miles from London. It is a station on the Mold branch of the Chester and Holyhead railway. The par. lies to the W. of the river Alen, a branch of the Dee, and comprises eight tnshps., including the tnshp., vil., and borough of Caergwrle. This last is a place of considerable importance, being a municipal borough incorporated under a charter of the Black Prince, and a contributory with six other towns to the borough of Flint in returning one member to parliament. Hope, formerly called Hopedale, was held by Gislebert at the time of the Domesday Survey, and afterwards by the earls of Chester, the Stanleys, &c. Here are the remains of the old castle where Eleanor, Queen of Edward I., rested on her way to Caernarvon. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the lime-kilns. In the vicinity are several mineral springs. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £291, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Cynfarch, has a tomb to an ancestor of the Trevors of Plas Têg. There is a chapel-of-ease at Llanfynydd. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. Roman coins and roads have been met with, and there are traces of several British camps or earthworks. Wat's Dyke also crosses the parish.

HOPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Barningham, wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 3 miles from Barningham, and 6 N. of Reeth. The land is marshy. The trustees of the late G. Brown, Esq., are lords of the manor.

HOPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Worthen, co. Salop, 8 miles N. of Bishop's Castle.

HOPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Stoke-upon-Trent, hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 2 miles from Stoke-upon-Trent, and 15 N. of Stafford.

HOPE ALL SAINTS, a par. in the lib. of Romney-Marsh, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 1½ mile N.W. of New Romney, its post town. There is no village, only a few scattered cottages. It is situated in the midst of Romney-Marsh. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £173. The church is in ruins, and the inhabitants frequent the church at New Romney.

HOPE BAGGOT, a par. in the Cleobury div. of the hund. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 6 miles S.E. of Ludlow, its post town, and 4½ N. of Tenbury. The village, which is small, contains some valuable stone quarries, both for building purposes and for grindstones. The soil is sandy, subsoil gravel. The living is a rest * in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £111. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient edifice with a tower containing two bells. A stained window has been recently inserted in the chancel, also one in the tower. The Duke of Cleveland is lord of the manor.

HOPEBENDRID, a tnshp. in the par. of Clun, co. Salop, 4 miles S. of Clun, and 4 S.E. of Bishop's Castle.

HOPE BOWDLER, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Munslow, co. Salop. 1½ mile S.E. of Church Stretton, its post town. The par., which is inconsiderable, contains the small tnshps of Chelmick and Ragdon. There are several limestone hills in the parish, the slopes of which are used for depasturing sheep. The village stands on the road from Church Stretton to Wenlock. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £228, in the patron. of certain trustees. The church is a small ancient edifice, with a low square tower, dedicated to St. Andrew. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum.

HOPE COVE, a hmlt. in the par. of South Huish, co. Devon, 4 miles S.W. of Kingsbridge. It is situated on Bigbury Bay.

HOPEFIELD, a station on the Fife and Kinross railway, Scotland, three-quarters of a mile from Kinross.

HOPEMAN, a postal vil. and small port in the par. of Duffus, co. Elgin, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Elgin. It is situated at a small harbour bearing its name on the Firth of Moray. It is a place of modern growth, and owned by Admiral Duff. There is a Free church. Some curious caverns have been discovered in the vicinity.

HOPE MANSELL, a par. in the hund. of Greytree, co. Hereford, 6 miles S.E. of Ross, 14 from Gloucester, and 3 W. of Mitcheldean Road railway station. The village, which is small, is situated in a valley surrounded by hills, the summits of which are well wooded. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture. The soil is red loam, with clay and rock for subsoil. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £194. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £197. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, with a small tower containing two bells. The Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol is lord of the manor.

HOPESAY, a par. in the Stow div. of the hund. of Purslow, co. Salop. 7½ miles S.E. of Bishop's Castle, and 4 E. of the Craven Arms railway station. It is a small village situated near the river Clun, and 1 mile off the road from Bishop's Castle to Ludlow. The par. contains the tnshps. of Ashton, Barlow, Little Brampton, Broom, and Carwood. The soil is of various qualities, some very sterile. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £502. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £603. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a small tower containing 4 bells. Here is a National school for both sexes, founded by Miss Beddoes in 1853. Near the church are the remains of a Roman encampment. The Earl of Powis is lord of the manor.

HOPETOUN, the seat of the earls of Hopetoun, co. Linlithgow, Scotland, 6 miles N.E. of Linlithgow. It is an old mansion, overlooking the Forth, surrounded by a cedar grove and deer park. It has a picture gallery and library.

HOPE-UNDER-DINMORE, a par. in the hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 4 miles S. of Leominster, its post town, 9 from Hereford, and 2 S. of the Ford Bridge station on the Shrewsbury and Hereford railway. The parish extends from the turnpike road between Leominster and Hereford, and near the river Lugg, across to Upper Hill. It formerly had a preceptory of the Knights Templars on Dinmore Hill, the ruins of which are still to be seen. The principal tunnel of the Shrewsbury and Hereford railway passes under Dinmore Hill, and is upwards of 1,100 yards long. There are some springs in the neighbourhood, of a petrifying quality. The land is partly in hop grounds and apple orchards. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a modern edifice, with a tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains tombs of the Coningsbys of Hampton Court, ancestors of the Earl of Essex. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a free school, and a National school at the Upper Hill end of the parish. The principal residence is Hampton Court, built under the auspices of Henry IV., by Sir Rowland Lenthall, who distinguished himself at Agincourt, where he had a command, and took so many prisoners that with their ransom he completed the building. It is a noble structure surrounding a quadrangular court, with a square entrance tower in the centre of the N. front, also a smaller one at each extremity. It is situated on an extensive lawn, which is watered by the river Lugg, and sheltered on the N.E. by rising ground. The park, which is 8 miles in circumference, is well wooded and stocked with deer. The mansion has undergone many repairs and alterations of late years, with the exception of one state apartment occupied by William III. during his visit here. There are some valuable old paintings and other relics. This mansion was formerly the seat of the earls of Essex, from whom it passed to Richard Arkwright, in whose family it still remains, and is the seat of John Arkwright, lord of the manor.

HOPE-WOODLAND, a hmlt. in the par. of Hope, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 6 miles N.E. of Tideswell.

HOPLEYS GREEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Almeley. co. Hereford, 3 miles S.E. of Kington.

HOPPEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Bambrough, N. div. of Bambrough ward, co. Northumberland, 4 miles S.E. of Belford. William Pawson, Esq., is owner of all the land.

HOPPERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Allerton, upper div. of the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 1 mile S.E. of Allerton Mauleverer, and 5 miles E. of Knaresborough.

HOPSFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Withybrook, Kirby div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 6 miles N.E. of Warwick, and 7 N.W. of Rugby. It is situated near the Oxford canal, and the river Tow.

HOPSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Claverley, co. Salop, 4 miles E. of Bridgnorth.

HOPTON, a par. in the hund. of Mutford, co. Suffolk, 4 miles N. of Lowestoft, its post town, and 5 S. of Yarmouth. The par., which is inconsiderable, is situated on the coast of the North Sea, and comprises the hmlt. of Brotherton. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £150, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a thatched roofed structure, with a square tower containing one bell. The interior of the church contains a fine font. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. The register dates from 1675. There is a parochial school, and about a mile distant from the village is a chapel for Independents.

HOPTON, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourn, co. Suffolk, 8 miles S.E. of Thetford, 7 N.E. of Ixworth, and 6 S. of East Harling, its post town. The parish is bounded on the N.E. by the Lesser Ouse, which separates it from the county of Norfolk. There is a portion of fen land. The village, which is small, is situated on the road from Bury to Norwich. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £284, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square embattled tower, and was thoroughly repaired and repewed in 1830. The charities produce about £25, arising from the rents of the town lands. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Thomas Thornhill, Esq. is lord of the manor.

HOPTON, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Wirksworth, co. Derby, 2 miles S.W. of Wirksworth, 7 N.E. of Ashbourne, and 4½ S.W. of Cromford railway station. Hopton formerly belonged to Sir John Gell, Bart., the parliamentary commander, and who resided at Hopton Hall. Here are almshouses for four poor persons, endowed by Sir Philip Gell, Bart., in 1719, with an annuity of £22 6s. derived from his manor called Griff Grange. A Roman inscription, urns, &c., have been found here. Stone of excellent quality is quarried to a considerable extent, and some of the inhabitants are employed in the lead mines.

HOPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Stanton-Lacy, co. Salop, 3 miles N. of Ludlow.

HOPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Ness, co. Salop, 8 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury.

HOPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Hodnet, co. Salop, 5 miles S.E. of Wem.

HOPTON AND COTON, a tnshp. in the par. of SS. Mary and Chad, S. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 3 miles N.E. of Stafford. It is a small decreasing tnshp. containing the hmlts. of Littleworth and St. Thomas.

HOPTON CASTLE, a par. in the Stow div. of the hund. of Purslow, co. Salop, 12 miles N.W. of Ludlow, and 7 S.E. of Bishop's Castle. This village, which is small, is situated on a branch of the river Clun. There are some traces of the Cliffords' Castle, which was dismantled during the civil wars of Charles I. The soil is various but light, producing chiefly barley and turnips. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture, with a considerable tract of common, and about 300 acres of woodland. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £238. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with a small belfry. The interior of the church contains a font and several monuments. Here is a school supported by voluntary contributions. Salwey Beale, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HOPTON CANGEFORD, or HOPTON-IN-THE-HOLE, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Munslow, co. Salop, 4 miles N.E. of Ludlow, its post town. It is a small village, consisting of only a few farmhouses. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £90. The church is a brick edifice of recent construction, and contains three bells.

HOPTON, LOWER and UPPER, tnshps. in the par. of Church Stoke, hunds. of Cawrse and Montgomery, co. Montgomery, 3 miles S.E. of Montgomery. They are situated near the river Camlet, a branch of the Severn.

HOPTON MONK, a par. in the lib. of the borough of Wenlock, co. Salop, 7 miles W. of Bridgnorth. The surface is undulating and well wooded. The soil is a retentive red clay, and the chief produce wheat and barley. The village, which is small, is situated on the new road from Bridgnorth to Ludlow. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £56. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, was lately rebuilt by Sir F. Lawley.

HOPTON-WAFERS, a par. in the Cleobury div. of the hund. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 2 miles W. of Cleobury Mortimer, its post town, 5 N.E. of Tenbury, and 9 E. of Ludlow. It is a small village situated in a valley at the foot of Cleo Hill, on the Ludlow and Cleobury Mortimer turnpike road. There is a station at Hopton Heath, on the Knighton branch of the Shrewsbury and Hereford railway. The castle, which was of great strength, was garrisoned for the king in 1643 against the parliament. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £174. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £248. The church, which was rebuilt in 1827, is a freestone edifice dedicated to St. Michael. It has a square pinnacled tower, containing a clock and three bells. The interior of the church contains a stained-glass window, recently presented by Mrs. Botfield. Here is a free school for a limited number of children of both sexes, entirely supported by Mrs. Botfield, the lady of the manor and chief landowner. There is a place of worship for Primitive Methodists.

HOPWAS, a hmlt. in the par. of Tamworth, S. div. of the hund. of Offlow, co. Stafford, 2 miles N.W. of Tamworth. It is situated near the junction of the rivers Tame and Anker, and near the Trent Valley railway.

HOPWAS-HAYES, an ext. par. place in the par. of Tamworth, S. div. of the hund. of Offlow, co. Stafford, 2 miles W. of Tamworth. It is situated near the Coventry canal and the river Tame, over which is a bridge. There is a chapel-of-ease, and an endowed school founded in 1724 by Thomas Barnes.

HOPWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Wilne, hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 7 miles E. of Derby, and a short distance from the Sawley railway station. The principal residence is Hopwell Hall, the seat of Thomas Pares, Esq., who is sole landowner.

HOPWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Middleton, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 4 miles S.E. of Bury, and 1 mile from Middleton. It is situated on the Rochdale canal. The township produces a good supply of excellent coal. Hopwood Hall, an ancient mansion, situated in a well wooded park, is the principal residence.

HOPWOOD, a district in the par. of Alvechurch, co. Worcester, 5 miles N.E. of Bromesgrove.

HORBLING, a par. in the wap. of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 3½ miles N.E. of Falkingham, its post town, and 6½ N. of the Heckington station, on the Grantham and Boston railway. The vil. is situated near Carr Dyke, and contains the hmlt. of Bridge End. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £271, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a cruciform construction containing a tower with five bells. The church contains a very old font, and a stained window inserted in 1854. The parochial charities produce about £36 per annum, of which £31 goes to Brown's free school. Colonel Henry Brown is lord of the manor.

HORBURY, a chplry. in the par. of Wakefield, lower div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Wakefield, its post town, 4 S.E. of Dewsbury, and 11 N.E. of Huddersfield. It is a station on the Manchester and Leeds railway. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the road from Wakefield to Huddersfield. Worsted, yarns, flannels, and woollen cloth are extensively manufactured. Here are stone-quarries and fulling mills. The land is chiefly arable. The soil is loamy, and subsoil partly rock and clay. The Calder and Hebble navigation affords facility of water carriage, and has several extensive coal wharves at Horbury Bridge. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £225, in the patron. of the Vicar of Wakefield. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a stone structure rebuilt in 1794, and has a spired tower containing six bells. The interior of the church has a painted window. The register dates from 1598. Here is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held. There are also infant and day schools, also three Dissenters' schools. The Wesleyans, Independents, Primitive and Reformed Methodists have each a chapel. Here is a female penitentiary, with an infirmary for three aged females, founded by the Sisters of Mercy in 1858, and supported by voluntary contributions. Sackville Lane Fox, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HORCUTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Kempsford, co. Gloucester, 2 miles S. of Fairford.

HORDA, a small island of the South Orkneys, Scotland, in Pentland Frith, between South Ronaldsay and Swinnay Islands.

HORDERLEY-HALL, an ext. par. place in the Stow div. of the hund. of Purslow, co. Salop, 6 miles S.E. of Bishop's Castle, and near the tnshp. of Horderley, which is 5 miles S.W. of Church Stretton. It is situated on the river Onny.

HORDLE, or HORDWELL, a par. in the hund. of Christchurch, Lymington div. of co. Hants, 6 miles S.E. of Brockenhurst railway station, and 4 S.W. of Lymington, its post town. The village is situated on a lofty eminence near the coast of the English Channel, commanding a view of the Needles and the Isle of Wight. Many rare fossils, shells, &c., are found in the cliffs along the shore, which are composed of layers of blueish clay alternated with gravel. It is mentioned in Domesday as having salt-works. The land is divided between arable and pasture, with about 120 acres of garden ground. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act obtained in 1811. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £90, in the patron. of Queen's College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a modern structure erected in 1831, with square tower containing three bells. The Baptists have a chapel, and there is a National school. Hurst Castle is situated in this parish. The principal residences are Horle House, Downton, and Arnewood.

HORDLEY, a par. in the Ellesmere div. of the hund. of Pimhill, co. Salop, 3 miles S. of Ellesmere, its post town, and 9 E. of Oswestry. The village, which is small, is situated on the Llanymynech canal, near the river Perry, which passes through the parish. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil consists of sand and loam, and there is a large extent of moorland, which affords excellent pasture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £330. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, is an ancient stone edifice, with a turret containing two bells. The interior of the church contains tablets to the family of the Kynastons. There is a National school for children of both sexes, supported by voluntary contributions, erected in 1844. There is a place of worship for the Primitive Methodists at Bagley. Sir J. R. Kynaston, Bart., is lord of the manor.

HORE-ABBEY, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, near Cashel, its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface consists of a fair soil. The living is a suspended rect. in the dioc. of Cashel and patron. of the bishop. There is a day school. The principal residences are Beerpark, Ballinamona, Castle-Lake Cottage, and Marvill. This parish takes its name from a Benedictine monastery which was founded here in 1272 by Archbishop David Mac Carvill. The ruins are in good preservation, and lie beneath the rock of Cashel. The abbey was frequently described as St. Mary's of the Rock of Cashel. After the Dissolution it was granted to the Ratcliffs, and subsequently to the Butlers.

HORETHORNE, a hund. in co. Somerset, contains the pars. of Abbas Combe, Charlton Horethorne, North Cheriton, Corton-Denham, Goathill, Henstridge, Horsington, Marston Magna, Milborne Port, Pointington, Sandford Orcas, Stowell, and Trent, comprising an area of 26,370 acres.

HORETOWN, a par. in the bar. of West Shelmalier, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Taghmon, its post town. It is 3½ miles long by 2½ broad. The surface consists of a medium soil, and is traversed by the road from Taghmon to Ballyhack. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £362, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a small building. The Roman Catholic chapel is united with those of Adamstown and Newbawn. There are a Sunday and two or three day schools. Horetown House and Tottenham Green are among the principal residences. A Carmelite monastery was founded here in the 14th century by a member of the Furlong family, the ancient proprietors of Horetown. It was granted after the suppression to Sir John Davis, and afterwards to the Talbots and Goffs. Its remains afforded material for the erection of the present parish church.

HORFIELD, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Berkeley, co. Gloucester, 2 miles N.E. of Bristol, its post town. It is a small agricultural village situated on the Great Northern road. There are some mineral springs in the neighbourhood, and stone-quarries, also a barrack for infantry. The land is chiefly pasture, with some arable and common. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £186, formerly held by Bishop Seyer. The church, which has been rebuilt, is a small edifice, with a tower containing five bells. There is a village school.

HORHAM, a par. in the hund. of Hoxne, co. Suffolk, 2 miles S.W. of Stradbrook, and 5 S.E. of Eye. Woodbridge is its post town. It is a small village, but is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £445. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £445. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square embattled tower containing eight bells. The interior of the church contains an ancient oak pulpit, stone font with ancient oak cover, and a painted E. window. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. The Baptists have a place of worship. A National school was erected here in 1857 for both sexes. Sir E. C. Kerrison is lord of the manor.

HORISDALE, an island in the par. of Gairloch, co. Ross, coast of Scotland. It is of small extent, and has only five houses on it.

HORKSLEY, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Lexden, co. Essex, 2 miles S.W. of Nayland. The village is situated near the river Stour. Part of the land is in common. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £989 17*s.* 6*d.* The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £1,005. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to All Saints. The charities produce about £86 per annum.

HORKSLEY, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Lexden, co. Essex, 1½ mile S. of Nayland. The parish is bounded on the N. by the navigable river Stour. The land is chiefly arable, the remainder meadow and pasture. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £70. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure containing four brasses and several monuments. There is a National school. Here was a priory of Cluniac monks, founded in the reign of Henry I., by Robert Fitzgodebold, and subordinate to the monastery of Thetford, in Norfolk.

HORKSTOW, a par. in the hund. of Yarborough, co. Lincoln, 4 miles S.W. of Barton, its post town, and 9 N. of the Brigg railway station. The village is within a short distance of the river Ancholm, which is here crossed by a suspension bridge. The employment of the inhabitants is chiefly in agriculture. The country is wooded, and the village is sheltered on the N.E. and by the Wold Hill. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £228, and the vicarial for £255. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £201. The church is of ancient construction, with a small tower containing three bells. Here is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. The Earl of Yarborough is lord of the manor.

HORLEY, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Reigate, co. Surrey, 5 miles N. of Crawley, its post town, 4¾ S. of Reigate, and 15½ from Croydon. It is a station on the London, Brighton, and South Coast railway. The village is situated on the river Mole, and the inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £325, in the patron. of Christ's Hospital, London. The parish church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is an ancient structure, with a spired tower containing eight bells. The church contains several brasses, effigies of a knight, &c. In the churchyard are several old yew-trees. There is also a district church, dedicated to Emanuel, at Sidlow Bridge, consecrated in 1861, with accommodation for 200 persons. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum. The Baptists have a place of worship here. There are National schools for both sexes.

HORLEY, a par. in the hund. of Bloxham, co. Oxford, 4 miles N.W. of Banbury, its post town, and 27 N. of Oxford. The village, which is small, is situated on the borders of Warwickshire. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The living is a vic.* annexed to that of Hornton, in the dioc. of Oxford, joint val. £388, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is an ancient structure, with a square tower, and is dedicated to St. Ethelreda. It was restored and enlarged in 1841. Here is a National school, also a place of worship for the Wesleyans. The parochial charities produce about £62, of which £49 goes to the school.

HORMEAD, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Edwinstree, co. Herts, 2 miles E. of Buntingford. The parish was enclosed in 1823, and contains the village of Hare Street, situated on the river Quin. The manor was once held by Edgar Atheling, and subsequently by the Sandfords and De Veres. The land is almost entirely arable. The surface is hilly, and the soil chiefly clay and marl. Amygdaloid and fossil shells and bones are found in large quantities. There are quarries of sandstone and granite. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1814. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £121, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Nicholas. There is a National school. The principal residence is Hormead Bury.

HORMEAD, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Edwinstree, co. Herts, 2 miles S.E. of Buntinford. This parish adjoins that of Great Hormead. The river Quin flows along the western boundary. The soil consists of several varieties of clay, gravel, and chalk, producing good crops of wheat. Granite, sandstone, and jasper are met with. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £260. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £311, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a very ancient building with Saxon tower. The charities produce about £60, including the endowment of Porter's school. Near the turnpike road is a large block of granite, supposed to have served as a Roman milestone on the Ermine Street, which passed near this village.

HORMER, a hund. in co. Berks, contains the pars. of Abingdon, Bagley-Wood, Besselsleigh, Cumnor, North and South Hinksey, Radley, Seacourt, Sunningwell, Wootton, Wytham, and parts of St. Helen, comprising an area of 21,550 acres.

HORN, a tythg. in the par. of Crewkerne, co. Somerset, 2 miles from Crewkerne. It is joined with Laymore.

HORN, a par. in the hund. of Alstoe, co. Rutland, 5 miles N.W. of Stamford. It was in part held by the bishops of Durham at the time of the Domesday Survey. Nearly half the parish is included within the grounds of Exton Park. A battle was fought here in 1470, in which Edward IV. defeated the Lancastrians, who pulled off their coats to run away the faster, from which circumstance it is known in history as the battle of "Loose-coat." The Roman road, Ermine Street, here called Horn Lane, passes near the village, which consists of a few farmhouses. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £77. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, united to the vic.* of Exton. There is no church, but the inhabitants attend Exton church.

HORNBLOTTON, a par. in the hund. of Whitstone, co. Somerset, 5 miles from Castle Carey, its post town and railway station, and 7½ from Shepton Mallet. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the Fosse Way, and bounded on the S.E. by the river Brue. Hornblotton, anciently called Hornblawerton, was given in Ethelwolf's time to the monastery of Glastonbury. The soil is a strong clay, alternating with marl, admirably adapted for the manufacture of draining tiles; a great portion of the land is in pasture. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Alford, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The church is a small edifice, with a wooden tower containing three bells. It has a very old font. The register dates from 1763. The Rev. John Gale Dalton Thring, is lord of the manor.

HORNBY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Melling, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 9 miles N.E. of Lancaster, its post town. It is a station on the North-Western railway. The parish, which is wholly agricultural, is situated at the bridge on the rivers Lune and Welling. It was formerly a market town, and had a Premonstratensian priory founded as a cell to Croxton Abbey. At the Dissolution the site was given to Lord Monteagle, of Hornby Castle. Petty sessions are held at the Castle Inn every alternate Tuesday. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £92. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient structure with an octagonal tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains a tablet to Dr. Lingard, the historian. Hornby Castle is the principal residence. It was formerly the seat of the Marsdens, but is now the seat of Pudsey Dawson, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum. Here is a Church school for both sexes, supported by Pudsey Dawson, Esq. A market for cattle is held every alternate Tuesday.

HORNBY, a par. in the wap. of East Hang, North Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Catterick, its post town, 5 N.W. of Bedale, and 9 S.E. of Richmond. It contains the tnshps. of Hackforth and Ainderby-Myers with Holtby. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £135. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure with a square tower containing four bells. The interior of the church contains a carved oak screen, two marble effigies of unknown date, and a monument to the Darcy family bearing date 1572, also numerous brasses to the Conyers family. The register dates from 1582. The parochial charities produce about £8 1s. Hornby Castle is the seat of the Duke of Leeds, who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The interior of the castle contains a choice collection of paintings, and the adjacent grounds and park are very extensive. This noble residence was formerly the seat of the St. Quintins, by whom it was built.

HORNBY, a par. in the wap. of Great Smeaton, North Riding co. York, 8 miles N. of Allerton, and 3 from the Cowton station on the North-Eastern line of railway. It is situated near the river Tees. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Hornby Grange is the principal residence.

HORNBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Great Brougham, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles E. of Penrith. It is situated on the river Eamont.

HORNCASTLE, a soke in the parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, contains the pars. of West Ashby, Coningsby, Haltham-upon-Bain, Horncastle, Langrick Ville, Mareham-le-Fen, Mareham-on-the-Hill, Moorby, Roughton, Thimbleby, Thornton-le-Fen, Toynton (High and Low), Wilksby, and Wood Enderby, comprising about 24,780 acres. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of Lincoln.

HORNCASTLE, a deanery, par., and market town in the soke of Horncastle, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 21 miles E. of Lincoln, and 136 N. of London by road, or 130 by the Great Northern railway, on which it is a station. The Horncastle and Kirkstead railway joins the Lincoln and Boston line at Kirkstead, thus opening a communication with most parts of England. The river Bain in 1801 was rendered navigable, at the cost of £35,000, by the cutting of a canal to join the Witham at Tattershall. The town is situated in a valley at the foot of the Wolds, and bears traces of having been a Roman station. At the point formed by the junction of the rivers Waring and Bain, where now stands the modern town, is an intricate circle known as Julian's Bower, and at a little distance are traces yet visible of a fortification. At the time of the Domesday Survey it was in the possession of William the Norman, and is spoken of in Saxon documents as Hyrn-Ceastre, or the "castle at the angle." It had several privileges conferred on it by charter of Henry III., and has recently been much improved. Its population in 1851 was 4,921, which had declined in 1861 to 4,846. It contains many well-built houses and shops, and is lighted with gas and well paved. There are a corn exchange, erected in 1856, where the mechanics' institute is also held, a magistrates' office, and county court, subscription library, clerical library, savings-bank, dispensary, established in 1789, and the union workhouse, situated in Foundry-street; also a new butter market, erected at the expense of J. B. Stanhope, Esq., in 1853. The Horncastle Agricultural Society hold their meetings annually at the Bull and Red Lion hotels alternately. A considerable trade is carried on in corn, wool, coals, malting, and brewing. Special and petty sessions for the Horncastle division of the parts of Lindsey are held every Saturday, and the Board of Guardians for Horncastle Poor-law Union meet every alternate Tuesday. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £612, in the patron. of the Bishop of Carlisle. The bishops of Carlisle were lords of the manor from 1218 to 1858, when the property of the see was transferred to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a structure of the time of Henry VII., with a square tower, surmounted by a spire at the W. end, and containing a peal of six bells. The South chapel was rebuilt in 1821, and the whole fabric has just undergone a thorough restoration, at the cost of £4,000. The chancel, restored at the sole cost of the lay rector, is laid with Minton's encaustic tiles, and contains several monuments and an old brass to the Dymoke family. The register dates from 1559. Besides the parish church, there is a chapel-of-ease, built in 1848, dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, have places of worship. There is a free grammar school, founded in the reign of Elizabeth by Edward Lord Clinton, and Saye, Lord High Admiral of England, which is open to the sons of residents of the town and soke, and has an income from endowment of about £400, with two exhibitions to either of the universities. There are also National, British, and infant schools. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on the fifth Thursday in Lent for cattle and sheep, on the 21st and 22nd June for horses and cattle, on the first Monday after the 8th August, and week following, being one of the largest horse fairs in England, in the middle of September for foals and sheep, and on the 28th and 29th October for cattle, horses, sheep, and pedlery.

HORNCHURCH, a par. in the lib. of Havering-atte-Bower, co. Essex, 2 miles S.E. of Romford railway station, and 14 E.N.E. of London. The parish is situated to the N. of the Thames, near the small river Ingerburr, and is crossed in its northern part by the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is considerable, extends along the main road from Romford to Upminster, and is included in the eastern postal district of the metropolis. A priory was founded here in the reign of Henry II. as a cell to the hospital of Monte Jovis, in Savoy, which, with the Savoy chapel in the Strand, recently destroyed by fire, was given by William of Wykeham to New College, Oxon. There are brick and tile kilns, an extensive foundry, and agricultural implement works, breweries, &c. An ancient custom is still indulged in on Christmas day, consisting in wrestling for a boar's head. The land is divided betwixt arable, marsh, and pasture. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £740, in the patron. of New College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone structure, with a lofty spired and embattled tower containing a clock and six bells. The church contains some ancient brasses. There are numerous charities, and two sets of almshouses. In this parish are Hornchurch Hall, and several other residences. David M'Intosh, Esq., is lord of the liberty.

HORNCLIFFE, a tnshp. in the par. of Norham, hund. of Norhamshire, co. Northumberland, formerly in Durham, 5 miles S.W. of Berwick. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Tweed, here crossed by a suspension-bridge. This bridge, which was the first of its kind erected in Great Britain, has a noble arch, the span of which is 45 feet by 27 feet in height. It was built at an expense of £5,000, and opened in 1820: the inventor, Sir Samuel Brown, R.N., being presented with a thousand guineas above the stipulated sum. From the higher grounds a view is commanded over the extensive plain of Merse and the banks of the Tweed. Here is a place of worship for the Presbyterians. Horncliffe Hall has not been occupied for some years.

HORNDEAN, a post-office vil. in the par. of Ladykirk, co. Berwick, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Chirnside. An United Presbyterian church stands here.

HORNDON, EAST, or THORNDON, a par. in the hund. of Barstable, co. Essex, 3 miles S.E. of Brentwood, its post town and railway station, and 4 S.W. of Bille-ricay. A part of this and Ingrave parishes is called Heron Gate, about 1 mile to the N. There are two barns, the only remains of a seat belonging to the Tyrrells, called Heron Hall. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The parish is well wooded, and the land chiefly arable. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £336. The church is a small brick structure, rather ancient, dedicated to All Saints. There is a National school. George Allan Lowndes, Esq., is lord of the manor of Fowcher's Heron. Lord Petre's manor extends partly into this parish.

HORNDON-ON-THE-HILL, a par. in the hund. of Barstable, co. Essex, 2 miles E. of Orsett, 6 N.E. of Grays, and 12 S.E. of Romford, its post town. The parish is in the E. metropolitan postal district. The village, which is small, is situated near the Great Eastern railway, and on the road from Chelmsford to Tilbury and Grays. It is of ancient date, and was formerly a market town. There is a farm in the neighbourhood named "Saffron Garden," from that plant having been originally grown there. The land is chiefly arable. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £390, and the vicarial for £180. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £210, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, London. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is situated in the centre of the town, and has a tower surmounted with a wooden spire. The charities produce about £10 per annum, exclusive of Paley's almshouses. There is a National school. A fair is held annually on the 29th June for wool.

HORNDON, or THORNDON, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Barstable, co. Essex, 3½ miles S.E. of Brentwood. There is no village, and only a few farmhouses, the greater part of the parish being occupied by the park belonging to Thorndon Hall, the seat of Lord Petre. This mansion stands on an eminence, the former site of the manor house, which was burnt in the reign of Henry VII. In this conflagration Fitz-Lewis, then lord of the manor and last of his house, lost his life as well as his bride on his wedding night. The tithes were commuted in 1776 for land and a corn-rent under an Enclosure Act. The living is a rect.* with that of Ingrave united, in the dioc. of Rochester, joint val. £344. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a plain brick structure rebuilt in 1734, at the expense of Lord Petre. It contains a brass to one of the family of Fitz-Lewis. At Thorndon Hall is a private Roman Catholic chapel.

HORNE, or HOURNE, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Tandridge, co. Surrey, 6 miles N.W. of East Grimstead, 6 S.E. of Reigate, and 3 S.W. of the Godstone railway station, its post town. It is a small agricultural village, containing Harrowsby borough, near which is the site of Thunderfield Castle, supposed to have been the palace of King Athelstan. Previously to 1705 it was a chapelry to Bletchingley. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £450. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a spired tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum. There is a school entirely supported by the Rev. H. Poynder, M.A.

HORNER, a hmlt. in the par. of Luckham, co. Somerset, 5 miles W. of Minehead.

HORNET, a hmlt. in the par. of Rumbolds-Wyke, hund. of Box, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 2 miles from Chichester. It is situated near the South Coast railway and Arundel canal.

HORNING, a par. in the hund. of Tunstead, co. Norfolk, 9 miles N.E. of Norwich, its post town. The parish is situated between the navigable rivers Ant and Bure, along the banks of which are several wharves. Here are remains of Holme Abbey, founded before 800, but not raised into a mitred abbey till 1020, by Canute, who strongly fortified it. It held out for a considerable time against William the Conqueror, but was at last betrayed by one of the monks, on condition of his being made abbot, and who, after being invested according to promise with the abbacy, was immediately hanged as a traitor. At the Dissolution, its revenues were valued at £677 9*s.* 8*d., and its site given to the see of Norwich, in exchange for other lands surrendered to the crown. Abbot Daniel founded St. James's Hospital here about 1154. The village consists of two long and straggling streets, called the Upper and Lower streets, and contains many respectable houses. The land is low and moory, and becomes entirely inundated at certain periods of the year, but is again freed from the water by the numerous windmills in the neighbourhood. About half the land is arable, the rest marsh and meadows. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £175, and the vicarial for £160. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £174, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is situated on rising ground about 1 mile S.E. of the village, is an ancient structure with a lofty square tower. The interior of the church contains a mural monument to the Rev. Anthony Barwick, vicar of this parish for 56 years. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. At the enclosure of the common, in 1807, about 30 acres of land were allotted to the poor for fuel.

HORNINGHOLD, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 4 miles W. of Uppingham, its post town, 9 N.E. of Market Harborough, and 16 S.E. of Leicester. It is a small agricultural village situated in a valley, and formerly belonged to Robert de Todeni, who gave it to Belvoir priory. The land is chiefly in pasture, and the soil a stiff clay with whitstone. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £80. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone edifice with a tower and spire containing three bells. The church has a sculptured Norman doorway, and an eight-sided font supported on pillars. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum, arising from land. Here is a Sunday-school. T. Chamberlayne, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HORNINGLOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Burton-on-Trent, N. div. of the hund. of Offlow, co. Stafford, 2 miles N.W. of Burton-on-Trent, its post town. It is a little village situated on rising ground, overlooking the Vale of the Trent. The Grand Trunk canal and the Derby railway pass through the township. It contains the union poorhouse of Burton. Here is a school erected in 1846. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The Marquis of Anglesey is lord of the manor.

HORNINGSEA, or HORNSEA, a par. in the hund. of Flendish, co. Cambridge, 3¾ mile N.E. of Cambridge, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the E. bank of the river Cam. In former times it belonged to the see of Ely. Here are the ruins of a priory called Biggin Abbey, which was destroyed by the Danes in 870, and afterwards given to the Hospital of St. John. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture. On the enclosure of the parish in 1802, an allotment of land was given instead of tithes. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ely, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with a tower containing four bells. The register dates from 1628. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, supported by voluntary contributions.

HORNINGSHAM, a par. in the hund. of Heytesbury, co. Wilts, 4½ miles S.W. of Warminster, its post town, and 5½ S.E. of Frome. The parish, which is small, is situated on the borders of Somersetshire. From one of the hills a view is obtained over portions of the counties of Wilts, Dorset, and Somerset. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £215, in the patron. of the Bishop of Salisbury. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, was rebuilt in 1845 at the expense of the Marchioness of Bath, and has an oak roof and old tower. The charities produce about £41 per annum, of which £31 goes to Cray's schools. The Independents have a chapel. There is a National school, and a school supported by the Marquis of Bath. Longleat House, the principal residence, in an extensive park, is chiefly situated in the parish of Longbridge Deverill.

It is the seat of the Marquis of Bath, who is lord of the manor.

HORNINGSHEATH, or HORRINGER, a par. in the hund. of Thingoe, co. Suffolk, 2 miles S.W. of Bury St. Edmund's, its railway station and post town. It is a small agricultural par., and contains the hmlt. of Horsecroft. It formerly belonged to the abbots of Bury, who resided here. Previous to 1528 it formed two parishes, distinguished as Great and Little Horningsheath. The land is chiefly arable. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £575. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £459, in the patron. of the Marquis of Bristol. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is a small edifice with a tower containing six bells. The interior of the church was repaired in 1818, and contains a painted window. The parochial charities produce about £24 per annum, £9 of which goes to the free school built by the Marquis of Bristol. Horringer House and Brooke House are the principal residences. The Marquis of Bristol is lord of the manor and principal landowner. A fair for lambs is held on Sheep Green on the 4th September.

HORNINGTOFT, a par. in the hund. of Launditch, co. Norfolk, 5 miles S.E. of Fakenham, its post town, and 3 N.W. of the Elmham railway station. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £335. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Whissonsett, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated to St. Edmund. The register dates from 1541. Mrs. Anne Talbot is lady of the manor.

HORNS CROSS, a hmlt. in the par. of Parkham, co. Devon, 6 miles S.W. of Bideford.

HORNSEA-WITH-BURTON, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 16 miles N.E. of Hull, and 13 from Beverley. It is situated near the York and North Midland branch railway, and was formerly a market town. In this parish is Hornsea-Mere, a fresh-water lake covering about 430 acres, and well stocked with fish. The town, which stands about half a mile from the sea, consists principally of four well-built streets. It is a coastguard station and watering place. There is an hotel and several inns and lodging-houses. The land is chiefly arable, and the soil clay and gravel. The village of Hornsea Beck was a few years ago entirely washed away by the sea, which is still progressively advancing. The living is a vic.* with the rect. of Long Riston annexed, in the dioc. of York, val. £382, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas, and formerly had a spire, which was blown down in 1710. The church has a crypt and Lady chapel. The charities produce about £119, of which £111 belongs to the Church estate. The National school for both sexes was erected in 1845; there is also an infant school supported by Lady Strickland. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. Lord Westbury is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on the 13th August and 17th December for the sale of horses and cattle, and a statute fair on the first Monday after Martinmas.

HORNSEY, a par. and suburban district of London, in the Finsbury div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, 5 miles N. by W. of St. Paul's, London. It has a station on the Great Northern railway near the church, with an hotel adjoining. The manor of Hornsey, anciently called Harringay or Haringe, has from a remote period belonged to the see of London, and the bishops had formerly a park at Lodge Hill, memorable as the place where, in 1386, Thomas Duke of Gloucester and other noblemen assembled to form a league against the favourites of Richard II., and where Edward V. and Henry VII. were met by deputations from the citizens of London. The custom of gavelkind still prevails, so that lands held under the lord of the manor descend in common to all the sons and daughters of a customary tenant. The parish is within the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court and metropolitan police, and forms part of the N. postal district. It contains, besides the village of Hornsey, lying on the New River, the populous hamlets of Muswell Hill and Fortis Green to the N., Crouch End and Stroud Green to the S., and part of Highgate, which last now forms a distinct chapelry. At the foot of this hill is the residence of the poet Moore, who here penned the greater part of his "Lalla Rookh," and whose daughter Barbara is buried in the churchyard at Hornsey. On the N. side of the hill several feeders of the Colne have their source, and near the top of the hill, close to the Great Northern line of railway, is the newly formed Alexandra Park, to which part of the Exhibition building of 1862 has been removed. At Crouch End and Stroud Green many streets of houses have recently been erected. Near the latter place are Dale House and Hornsey Wood House. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of London, val. £400, in the patron. of the bishop. The church of St. Mary stands near the old channel of the New River, and was rebuilt in 1833, except the ancient tower, which is constructed of the stones of Lodge House, and has a corner turret. The interior contains a brass of a child, and several monuments; among them one to the memory of Samuel Rogers, the author of "The Pleasures of Memory," who was buried here in 1855. The register dates from 1655. Besides the parish church there are the district church of St. James at Muswell Hill, and Christ Church, recently built on Crouch Hill, also a handsome chapel belonging to Protestant Dissenters. There are three separate schools for boys, girls, and infants at Hornsey, and a school for girls and infants at Muswell Hill. The charities produce about £147 per annum, exclusive of Highgate. The living was once held by Bishop Westfield, and Dr. Lewis Atterbury, and Lightfoot, the Hebrew scholar, resided here.

HORNTON, a par. in the hund. of Bloxham, co. Oxford, 5½ miles N.W. of Banbury, its post town, and 28½ N.W. of Oxford. It is a small agricultural village situated on the borders of Warwickshire. The land is nearly equally divided between arable and pasture. Freestone is quarried. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Horley, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is of considerable antiquity, and is in a very decayed condition. There is a National school. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel.

HORRINGTON, EAST and WEST, tythgs. in the city of Wells, co. Somerset, 2 miles E. of Wells.

HORSECROFT, a hmlt. in the pars. of Horningsheath and Newton, co. Suffolk, 2 miles S.W. of Bury St. Edmund's.

HORSEFORD, a par. in the hund. of Taverham, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N.W. of Norwich, its post town. The village, which is wide and irregular, is situated on a branch of the river Bure, and on the road from Holt to Norwich. Here are the ruins of an old moated castle of the Fitzwalters-de-Cadomo. The land is chiefly arable, with some meadow and pasture, and about 1,500 acres of flat sterile heath. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £127 7*s.* 6*d., and the vicarial for £100. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £220. The church is an ancient edifice, dedicated to All Saints. The register dates from 1597. Sir Thomas B. Lennard is lord of the manor. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans. The charities comprise about 200 acres of heath, allotted to the poor for fuel on the enclosure of the parish in 1802.

HORSEHEATH, a par. in the hund. of Chilford, co. Cambridge, 3 miles from Linton, its post town, 5 from Haverhill, and 14 from Cambridge. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. It is a small agricultural village situated on the river Granta, and on the old Cambridge road. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £450. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £400, in the patron. of the Charter House at London. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains a brass of Sir John de Argenteine, bearing date 1360, and a mural tablet to the late Lord Montfort. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. Horseheath Lodge, which is the principal residence, is situated about 1½ mile W. of the village, and was formerly the seat of the Allingtons and Bromleys. There is a small chapel for Independents; also a National school.

HORSEHOUSE, a chplry. in the par. of Coverham, wap. of West Hang, North Riding co. York, 6 miles S.W. of Middleham. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £40.

HORSE ISLAND, an islet lying a little N.W. of the town of Ardrossan, co. Ayr, Scotland. A beacon tower has been erected on the island.

HORSE ISLAND, in the par. of Small Isles, co. Argyle, Scotland, near Muck.

HORSE ISLAND, an islet off Copinshay, S.E. Orkneys, Scotland.

HORSE ISLAND, an islet situated at the entrance to Castlehaven Harbour, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Has a tower which serves as a landmark for vessels.

HORSE ISLAND, an islet lying in Roaring-water Bay, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1¼ mile W.N.W. of Ringcove. It contains a valuable copper mine belonging to Lord Audley.

HORSELEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Eccleshall, in the N. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 1 mile S.W. of Eccleshall. It contains the hmlts. of Pershall, Walton, and Wooton. The principal residences are Walton Hall and Johnson Hall. The latter is situated in a park. Cotmere is a considerable lake, well stocked with fish, and covering an area of 40 acres.

HORSELEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Wolverley, co. Worcester, 3 miles N.W. of Kidderminster.

HORSELEY HEATH, a hmlt. in the par. of Tipton, co. Stafford, 2 miles from Dudley.

HORSELL, or HORSHILL, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Godley, co. Surrey, 6 miles S. of Chertsey, 7 N. of Guildford, and 1 mile from the Woking station on the South-Western railway. Ripley is its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the Basingstoke canal. Here are nursery grounds, famed for the growth of American plants. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £83. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, has an embattled tower containing six bells. The church contains numerous brasses, and two monuments to James Fenn, Esq., and Sir John William Rose. The register dates from 1656. There is a National school for both sexes. Fairs are held at Knaphill on the Saturday in Whitsuntide week, and on the 10th November.

HORSEMONDEN, a par. in the hund. of Brenchley, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 5 miles S.W. of the Paddock Wood railway station, 3 N.E. of Lamberhurst, and 10 from Tunbridge Wells. It is situated near the river Rother and the Teise millstream, and contains the hmlts. of Ram's Hill, Caple Cross, and Sherenden. It was formerly a seat of the Bathursts. The soil is extremely fertile, producing hops, fruit, &c. There are some brick-kilns. A pyramid to Sir Walter Scott, the interior containing many of his works, was erected here in 1856 by the rector of the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £971. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £596. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, has a tower containing six bells. The church has some stained windows, and monuments to the Austen family; also two brasses, one of which is of a priest, bearing date 1331. The register dates from Elizabeth's reign. The charities produce about £184, of which £53 goes to Sir C. Booth's school. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. A cattle fair is held on the 26th July.

HORSENDON, a par. in the hund. of Aylesford, co. Bucks, 2 miles W. of Prince's Risborough, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Great Missenden. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the old Roman road Icknield Way. There is no village, only a few scattered farmhouses. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £148 13*s*. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £132. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There is a Sunday-school.

HORSEPASSBRIDGE, a vil. in the bar. of Talbotstown, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Blessington.

HORSEPATH, a par. in the hund. of Bullingdon, co. Oxford, 4 miles S.E. of Oxford. It is situated under Shotover Hill, and contains the hmlt. of Littleworth. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £91, in the patron. of the President and Fellows of Magdalen College, Oxford, who are impropriators. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient cruciform structure, with a central tower. It contains an altar-tomb of blue marble, on which is the effigy of a mitred abbot. The charities produce about £1 per annum. The Earl of Macclesfield is lord of the manor.

HORSEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Bridgwater, co. Somerset, 2 miles N.E. of Bridgwater. It is situated near the river Parrett.

HORSEY, a small island near the Naze, co. Essex, 5 miles S.S.W. of Harwich.

HORSEY-NEXT-THE-SEA, a par. in the hund. of Happing, co. Norfolk, 11 miles N.W. of Yarmouth, its post town. It is a small village, situated near the river North. The greater part of the parish consisted of moorland, until it became the property of the late R. Rising, Esq., by whom the sea-bank was repaired, and a new road formed to Somerton. It is now well drained, and brought into a rich state of cultivation. In the neighbourhood is Horsey Mere, a lake comprising 100 acres. The great tithes were commuted for land and a rent-charge of £70, and the vicarial for a rent-charge of £83. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £135, in the patron. of the governors of North Walsham school. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a thatched roof and round tower. The charities consist in a fuel allotment.

HORSFORTH, a chplry. in the par. of Guiseley, upper div. of the wap. of Skyrack, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Leeds, its post town. It is a station on the Leeds, Harrogate, Thirsk, and Stockton section of the North-Eastern railway. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the river Aire, which is crossed by an iron bridge, erected in 1819, at the expense of £1,500, by J. Pollard, Esq. The inhabitants are principally employed in the cloth trade. Here is a mechanics' institute, also several stone-quarries. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £158. The church is a stone structure, and has one bell. There are places of worship for Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, Primitive and Reformed Methodists. There are two Church schools for both sexes, also Sunday-schools. Horsforth Hall is the principal residence. John Spencer Stanhope, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HORSHAM, a par., market town, and parliamentary borough in the hund. of Singlecross, rape of Bramber, co. Sussex, 22 miles N. of Brighton, and 35 S.S.W. of London by road, or 37½ by the London, Brighton, and South Coast railway, which sends off a branch to this town from the main line at Three Bridges. Numerous other branch lines connect it with Brighton and South Coast, and South-Western systems, as the Mid-Sussex; the Horsham and Shoreham; the Horsham and Guildford, joining the South-Western at Shalford; the Little Hampton, connecting Horsham with Arundel and the port of Little Hampton; and the proposed line from Horsham to Dorking.—The town, which is supposed to derive its name from the two Saxon words hurst and ham, signifying the village in the wood, is situated on a branch of the river Arun, in the midst of a well-wooded country. It consists of two principal streets, crossing each other at right angles, one of which is adorned with rows of trees, and several smaller streets branching off to the right and left. Some of the houses are built of sandstone, but the greater number of timber faced with brick. The streets are clean, broad, and well paved with large flat stones from the neighbouring quarries, and are lighted by gas. In the vicinity much new building has recently been going on; and the population of the borough, which is not incorporated, rose from 5,947 in 1851 to 6,747 in 1861. At the N. end of the town is the station for the Brighton railway. The principal hotels are the Anchor and the King's Head hotel, near the centre of the town, with a music-hall and assembly-room attached, capable of seating 500 persons, and erected in 1858 from the designs of Mr. E. Burstow. In the town there are several public buildings, including a court-house, union poorhouse, two banks, savings-bank, post-office savings-bank, literary and scientific institution; also several corn-mills, malting houses, two ale and porter breweries, an extensive tanyard, iron foundry, engineering and agricultural implement manufactory, extensive nursery grounds, and a cricket club.—There are no manufactures in the town, but a great amount of trade is done in corn and timber, and a large retail trade for the supply of the surrounding country.—Horsham is a borough by prescription, and returned two members to parliament from the 23rd Edward I. till the passing of the Reform Bill. It now returns one member to parliament, and is a polling-place for West Sussex. Its boundaries are co-extensive with the parish. The Midsummer quarter sessions for West Sussex are held here, as also petty sessions. It is the seat of a County Court, and head of a Poor-law Union embracing 13 parishes and townships.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £750, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The vicar is his own rural dean. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a large ancient structure, of the time of King John, with a lofty tower surmounted by a spire, and containing a peal of eight bells. It contains a sculptured font of Sussex marble, and several monuments. Being very much out of repair, it is now (1864) being restored by public subscription. The register dates from 1540. There is also the chapel-of-ease, dedicated to St. Mark, of which the stipend from pew-rents is £100, in the patron. of the vicar. The Roman Catholics, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Independents, Baptists, Society of Friends, and Plymouth Brethren, have places of worship. There is a grammar school, founded by Richard Collier in 1532, who endowed it with property situate in Cheapside and Queen-street, London, now producing upwards of £400 per annum. The school-house was rebuilt in 1840, adjoining which are houses for the head master and usher. It was originally designed for the education of 60 free scholars, and was placed under the direction of the Mercers' Company as trustees, who have recently added 20 additional scholars. There are, besides, National schools for boys and girls, a British and infant school, and an almshouse for 16 women and four married couples, founded and partially endowed in 1842 by the Rev. Jarvis Kenrick. There are besides several minor charities.—In the vicinity of the town are Denne House and Cheesworth, ancient seats of the Braose family. In the latter, Thomas Duke of Norfolk was arrested in 1571 by command of Queen Elizabeth, and the papers which led to his conviction were found hidden in the roof of this mansion, which is now converted into a farmhouse. Denne House, which is situated in an extensive park well stocked with deer, is still kept up as a gentleman's seat; and from Denne Hill is a view over the surrounding country. A corn market, which is well attended, is held on Wednesday, and a poultry market on Monday. Fairs are held on 5th April, 18th July, 17th and 27th November, and the Monday before Whitsuntide.

HORSHAM, ST. FAITH, a par. in the hund. of Taverham, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N.W. of Norwich, its railway station and post town, and 7 S. of Aylsham. It is situated on a branch of the river Bure, and was formerly a market town under Hugh de Cressi. A Benedictine priory was founded here in 1105 by Robert Fitzwalter, as a cell to the Abbey de Conches, in Normandy. A hospital belonging to the Knights Templars was also established here prior to 1163. The par. contains the hmlt. of Newton St. Faith, and the union poorhouse of Horsham, which latter is situated about 1 mile N.E. of the church. Weaving was carried on to a considerable extent, but has greatly declined of late years. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £711 12*s.* 6*d.* The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £101. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient structure with an embattled tower. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, also one at Newton St. Faith. Viscount Ranelagh is lord of the manor. Here is an extensive cattle fair, held for three weeks, and commencing on 17th October.

HORSINGTON, a par. in the S. div. of the hund. of Gartree, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles W. of Horncastle, its post town, and 4 N.E. of the Stixwould station, on the Great Northern railway. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Witham, and is wholly agricultural. The land was enclosed in 1775. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £222, in the patron. of Magdalen College, Oxford. The church of All Saints, erected in 1860 on the site of the old one, has stone facings and a spired tower. The register dates from 1558. The Independents, Wesleyans, Methodists, and Baptists have each a chapel.

HORSINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Horethorne, co. Somerset, 4 miles S. of Wincanton, its post town, and 1 mile from the Templecombe railway station, on the South-Western and Central Dorset lines. The par. is situated on the road from Wincanton to Blandford, and contains the hmlts. of South Cheriton and Wilkenthrop. A great portion of the land is in pasture. The soil is various, on sandstone subsoil. There are some brick and tile kilns. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £895. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £729. The church, dedicated to St. John, has a tower containing a clock and five bells. It was rebuilt, with the exception of its chancel and tower, in 181[illegible]. The register dates from 1858. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. Near the church is an ancient cross. Here is a school for both sexes, also places of worship for the Independents, Wesleyans, and Baptists. The Manor House is the principal residence. John Boulward, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HORSLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Ovingham, co. Northumberland, 2½ miles N.W. of Wylam, 1 mile N. of Ovingham, and 2 miles from the Prudhoe railway station. It is a small township, situated on the N. side of the river Tyne, and on the road from Newcastle to Hexham. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a chapel.

HORSLEY, a par. in the hund. of Longtree, co. Gloucester, 5 miles S. of Stroud railway station, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Tetbury. It is situated near the Great Western railway, and on the Stroud road to Dursley and Wotton-under-Edge. The par., which is of large extent, contains Chavenage and Nailsworth, with 7 other hmlts. Horsley was formerly a market town, and contains the house of correction, also the old gate of a priory, founded as a cell to St. Martin-du-Tours, but afterwards transferred to Bruton Abbey. At the dissolution of monasteries the site came to the Dennys, from whom it passed to the Stephenses of Chavenage. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the cloth-mills, which are set in motion by the numerous streams which intersect this parish. The soil consists of sand and loam on a subsoil of oolite. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, has a tower containing a clock and five bells. There is also a district church at Chavenage, the living of which is a cur., val. £30. The parochial charities produce about £100 per annum. There is a National and an infant school, the former endowed with £50 per annum. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a chapel. Chavenage House is an old mansion of the reign of Queen Elizabeth. Townsend Stephens, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HORSLEY, a par. in the hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 6 miles N.E. of Derby, its post town, and 2 N.E.

of Duffield railway station. The parish, which is considerable, is situated near the river Derwent, and on the Derby and Alfreton road. It contains the vils. of Horsley, Horsley Woodhouse, and Kilburne. Here formerly stood a castle, built by Ralph-de-Burun. The surface is diversified with hill and dale, and the soil is in general light. The Little Eaton railway passes through the parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £210. The church, which stands on a lofty eminence, is dedicated to St. Clement. It has a lofty tower and spire containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £15 10*s.* per annum, of which £5 10*s.* is distributed to the poor in cloth and flannel. Here is a National school for both sexes. E. D. Sitwell, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner. On the summit of a hill, about 1 mile from the church, are the ruins of the ancient baronial castle of Horeston, built in the 12th century, and formerly held by the Stanhope family.

HORSLEY, EAST, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Woking, co. Surrey, 5 miles S.W. of Leatherhead, 6 N.E. of Guildford, and 2½ S.E. of Ripley, its post town. The northern part of the parish is flat and clayey, but the S. hilly, with a chalk subsoil. The higher lands abound in beech timber, and there is a considerable extent of wood and waste land. The arable and pasture are in nearly equal proportions. The main road from Leatherhead to Guildford crosses the interior of the parish. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £257, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is a structure of the 12th century, in the Norman style of architecture, with embattled tower. It contains a brass with effigy of John Bowthe, Bishop of Exeter. There is a free school. Horsley Place is the seat of the Earl of Lovelace, who is lord of the manor and owner of the whole of the soil.

HORSLEY-LONG, a par. in the W. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 7 miles N.W. of Morpeth, its post town, 5 S.W. of Felton, and 8 S.E. of Rothbury. It is situated on a branch of the river Coquet, and contains Longshaw, Stanton, and 6 other tnshps. It was given by Gospatrick to the Merlays. At the W. end of the parish is an old tower of the Riddells, which is used as a place of worship by the Roman Catholics. The soil consists of clay and sand. Coal and lime are worked. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £336, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is a modern edifice with a turret containing one bell. The communion table and rails were made out of an oak-tree that was found a few years ago buried in a neighbouring moss. The register dates from 1688. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a National school, partly supported by subscription, and partly by a bequest left by Mrs. Ogle for education. Thomas Riddell, Esq., and Henry John Baker, Esq., are lords of the manor.

HORSLEY, WEST, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Woking, co. Surrey, 3 miles S.E. of Ripley. The parish is of considerable extent, and part of the land in common. Here is an old seat which once belonged to Sir Walter Raleigh. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £305. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £317. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with an ivy-mantled tower surmounted by a spire. It contains several antique stalls and tombs of the Berner, Nicholas, and Raleigh families. The head of the illustrious Sir Walter Raleigh was buried here, though his body was laid in St. Margaret's, Westminster.

HORSLEY-WOODHOUSE, a tnshp. in the par. of Horsley, hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 7 miles N. of Derby. The inhabitants are principally employed in framework knitting and in nail making. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Edward D. Sitwell, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

HORSLEYDOWN, co. Surrey. See SOUTHWARK.

HORSTEAD WITH STANNINGHALL, a par. in the hund. of Taverham, co. Norfolk, 6 miles N.E. of Norwich, and half a mile W. of Coltishall, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the S. bank of the river Bure, and on the road from Norwich to North-Walsham. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. Here was once an alien priory, founded as a cell to the abbey of the Holy Trinity at Caen, in Normandy, and subsequently given to King's College, Cambridge. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £580, in the patron. of King's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a square tower. The interior of the church contains an antique font, and monuments of the Hornsell, Ward, and Townsend families. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. Here is a school, supported by subscriptions. Horstead Hall is a mansion erected in 1835, belonging to Lord Sheffield, but is at present the seat of the Dowager Lady Suffield. Thomas Blake, LL.D., is lord of the manor.

HORSTED-KEYNES, a par. in the hund. of Danehill Horsted, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 8 miles S. of East Grinstead, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Hayward's Heath railway station. The parish is small, and wholly agricultural. The soil consists of clay and sand. Nearly half the parish is in woodland, the remainder arable and pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £500. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £342. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient cruciform stone structure, with a spired tower containing a clock and three bells. Leighton, Archbishop of Glasgow, died here in 1684, and was buried in the S. chancel. A new tombstone was erected to his memory in 1857. There are also monuments to the Wyatt family bearing date 1753. The charities produce £3 per annum, which goes to Lightmaker's free school. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents have a place of worship here, and the Baptists one at Danehill. The Hon. H. Brand is lord of the manor. There is a chalybeate spring called the Holy Well about a mile from the village.

HORSTED, LITTLE, a par. in the hunds. of Rushmonden and Loxfield-Dorset, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 2 miles S. of Uckfield, and 5 N.E. of Lewes. Ironsand and lignite are found in considerable quantities. The village, which is small, and wholly agricultural, is situated near the river Ouse. The land is distributed into arable, pasture, hop grounds, meadow, and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £421. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £356. The church, which is situated on an eminence, has a square embattled tower.

HORTON, a par. in the hund. of Stoke, co. Bucks, 3 miles E. of Windsor, 1 mile S. of Colnbrook, its post town, and 3 miles from Langley station on the Great Western railway. The village, which is small, was formerly a market town. It is situated on the river Colne, and contains part of the vil. of Colnbrook, which is separated from the par. by the above-mentioned river. The parents of Milton, the poet, resided here, and some of the earlier poems, as "Comus" and "Arcades," were composed here for the children of the Countess of Derby, whose seat was at Harefield. Milton's house and apple tree still remain, and under the latter he wrote several of his works. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and in the large paper-mills on the Colne. The tithes were commuted for land and a corn-rent under an Enclosure Act in 1799. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £385. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure partly covered with ivy, and is the burial-place of Milton's mother, who died here in 1637. It contains a Norman doorway with a circular arch enriched with mouldings. The charities produce about £420 per annum. Thomas Peers Williams, Esq., is lord of the manor. An old Roman wall surrounds the churchyard.

HORTON, a par. in the hund. of Badbury, co. Dorset, 6 miles N.E. of Wimborne, its post town, and 4½ S.W. of Cranborne. It is a small agricultural village situated in a well-wooded country on the road between Shaftesbury and Ringwood. Here was formerly a Benedictine priory, a cell to Sherborne Abbey, founded in 970 by Earl Orgar. On a hill near the village stands a lofty tower of brick, built by Mr. Sturt about the beginning of the present century, and commanding views of the county and the Isle of Wight. In the vicinity is a circular trench surrounded with several barrows. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £400, and the vicarial for £150. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. Wolfrid, was rebuilt in 1720. It is a singular shaped brick and stone edifice with a spire. There is a free school, supported by the Earl of Shaftesbury, who is lord of the manor.

HORTON, a par. in the hund. of Wymersley, co. Northampton, 6½ miles S.E. of Northampton, its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Nen, and is entirely agricultural. Several noble families have resided here, as those of Salisbury, Parr, Halifax, and Hinchinbroke. Horton House, the ancient mansion where Montague, first earl of Halifax, the friend of Addison and Pope, was born, in 1661, has been modernised and considerably enlarged. The living is a perpet. cur.* annexed to that of Piddington, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £98. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It contains a monument to Lord Parr, uncle of Catherine Parr, Queen of Henry VIII., to whom he was lord chamberlain. Sir Robert Gunning, Bart., is lord of the manor.

HORTON, a par. in the E. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 7 miles S.E. of Morpeth, its post town, 3 N. of Bedlington, and 2 from the Seaton and Delaval railway station. It is situated on the river Blyth, and the Blyth and Tyne railway. The par. contains the tnshps. of Bebside, Cowpen, and East and West Hartford. Horton originally formed part of the par. of Woodhorn, but has since become a parochial chapelry, enjoying the privileges of a distinct parish. There was formerly a strong castle of the Delavals, which was razed to the ground in 1809. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries, which are largely worked. The soil, though various, is generally a strong clay, producing excellent crops of wheat. The rectory was anciently appropriated to the priory of Tynemouth. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone edifice with a tower containing one bell. It was rebuilt in 1827, at an expense of £400, raised by subscription. The register dates from 1642. The Independents, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Presbyterians, and Roman Catholics, have each a chapel. There is a National school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school, which last is held at the church.

HORTON, a par. in the N. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 3 miles N.W. of Leek, its post town, 7 W. of Congleton, and 1½ mile from Rudyard railway station. It is situated near the Caldon canal reservoir, which is 1¾ mile in length, and at a distance from any public road. The par. contains the tnshps. of Horton Hay, Blackwood, and Crowborough. The land is chiefly in pasture, and divided into small farms. A considerable quantity of cheese is made in the neighbourhood. There are several quarries of building stone. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £118. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains monuments of the Crompton, Fowler, and Wedgwood families. The churchyard contains a tombstone to Mary, the wife of George Brooks, who died January 5th, 1787, at the age of 119. There are numerous charities, one of which is that of Timothy Edge's, who bequeathed three annuities out of Horton Hall estate, viz. £5 10s. weekly for bread, £5 annually for apprentice fees, and £20 for the curate. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel at Lark Sedge, and the Wesleyans one at Gratton. Horton Hall and Cliff Park Hall are the principal residences. The latter is situated in the midst of a park and near the reservoir. The interior contains a choice collection of pictures by eminent masters. G. C. Antrobus, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HORTON, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Grumbald's Ash, co. Gloucester, 3 miles N.E. of Chipping Sodbury, its post town, 13 from Bath, and 6½ E. of the Yate railway station. The village, which is small, and wholly agricultural, is situated on the Cotswolds. The higher grounds command views of Bristol, Clifton, and the Severn. The soil is clayey, with sandstone subsoil. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £600. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £657. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower containing four bells. The interior of the church contains several ancient monuments. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a private subscription school for both sexes.

HORTON, a chplry. in the par. of Chartham, hund. of Felborough, co. Kent, 2 miles S.W. of Canterbury. It is situated on the river Stour. At Horton Park is a meet for the East Kent hounds. The chapel has long been in ruins.

HORTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Epsom, first div. of the hund. of Copthorn, co. Surrey, 1¾ mile N. of Epsom. The principal residence is Horton Place, formerly the seat of Lord Baltimore.

HORTON, or LITTLE HORTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Gisburn, W. div. of the wap. of Staincliff, West Riding co. York, 8 miles S.W. of Skipton. It is situated near the river Ribble. Little Horton House is the principal residence.

HORTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wem, hund. of North Bradford, co. Salop, 4 miles N.E. of Wellington, its post town, 2 S. of Halesowen, and 1¼ mile from the Donnington railway station.

HORTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Tarvin, co. Chester, 6 miles N.E. of Chester. It is joined with Peele to form a tnshp.

HORTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Beckley, co. Oxford, 6 miles N.E. of Oxford. It is joined with Studley to form a tnshp.

HORTON, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Chad, co. Salop, 3 miles W. of Shrewsbury. It is joined to Woodcote.

HORTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wellington, co. Salop, 3 miles N.E. of Wellington. It is situated near Shrewsbury canal.

HORTON, a tythg. in the par. of Ilminster, co. Somerset, 1 mile N.W. of Ilminster.

HORTON, a tythg. in the par. of Bishop's Cannings, co. Wilts, 3 miles N.E. of Devizes. It is situated on the Avon and Kennet canal.

HORTON-BY-MALPAS, a tnshp. in the par. of Tilston, higher div. of the hund. of Broxton, co. Chester, three-quarters of a mile S. of Tilston, and 2 N.W. of Malpas. The Rev. J. Y. Dod is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

HORTON CASTLE, a seat of Earl Grey, co. Northumberland, 3 miles N.E. of Wooler.

HORTON-GRANGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Dinnington, W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 1½ mile N.E. of Dinnington, and 6 S. of Morpeth.

HORTON, GREAT, a tnshp. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Bradford, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 2½ miles S.W. of Bradford market-place. It contains the hmlts. of Great Horton, Lidget-Green, and Scholes-Moor. The woollen and cotton manufactures are extensively carried on, giving employment to a large portion of the inhabitants. It is mentioned in Domesday Survey as a berewick of the manor of Bradford, and subsequently formed part of the possessions of the Lacys, earls of Lincoln. In the reign of Henry II. the manor of Horton was granted by Robert de Lacy to the ancestor of the Horton family, and after passing through several families, is now the property of Captain Rhys. The village, which is very populous, forms the southern suburb of Bradford, and is included within that borough. The substratum abounds with coal and freestone, which have been worked for several centuries. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £300, in the patron. of the Vicar of Bradford. The church is of modern date. The parochial charities produce about £53 per annum. Little Horton Hall, an ancient mansion consisting of a square massive tower in the centre and two wings, was for many generations the seat of the family of Sharp, of whom John Sharp, for his services to the Commonwealth in the reign of Charles I., received a gold medal, with the figure of Fairfax on the obverse, and his son Abraham was one of the most eminent mathematicians of his time. A cattle fair is held on 5th September.

HORTON-HAY, a tnshp. in the par. of Horton, N. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 1½ mile W. of Horton, and 5 N.W. of Leek.

HORTON-IN-RIBBLESDALE, a par. in the W. div. of the wap. of Staincliff, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N. of Settle its post town, 22 N.W. of Skipton, and 26 N.E. of Lancaster. It is a small village, situated on the banks of the river Ribble, near the Pennygant and Ingleborough hills. The par., which is very entensive, comprises the hmlts. of Berkworth, Studfield, and Thornes. There are many natural caves in this parish. The inhabitants are chiefly supported by agriculture, the land being almost wholly in meadow and pasture. A blue flagstone quarry is worked. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £108. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, is an ancient stone structure, with a low tower containing three bells. The register dates from the middle of the 15th century. The parochial charities produce about £220 per annum, of which £160 goes to Armitshead's free grammar school. A Sunday-school is held in the village schoolroom.

HORTON-KIRBY, a par. in the hund. of Axton, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 5 miles S.E. of Dartford, its post town, and half a mile from the Farningham Road station. It is a small village situated on the river Darent, and on the London, Chatham, and Dover railway. It contains the hmlts. of Dean-Bottom, Pinder, and part of South Darenth. Here are the ruins of the castle of the Rosses, founded by them at the time of the Conquest, and restored by the Kirkbys, who built Kirkby Court. At South Darenth, in this parish, are extensive paper-mills, giving employment to a large number of persons. The land is chiefly arable and partly in hops. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £265. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £214. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient cruciform structure, with modern tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains monuments of the Bathursts of Franks. The parochial charities produce about £17 per annum, independent of a share with Farningham. Franks is the principal residence, near to which is Reynold's Place, now a farmhouse.

HORTON MONKS, a par. in the hund. of Stouting, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 5 miles N.W. of Hythe. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated near the London, Chatham, and Dover railway. Here are remains of a Cluniac priory, founded in the reign of Henry II., subordinate to the priory of Lewes. Its revenue at the Dissolution was valued at £111 16*s.* 11*d.* The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £137. The living is a discharged rect. consolidated with the vic.* of Brabourne. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure containing several monuments and tombs of the Robinsons of Mount Morris, the seat of Lord Rokeby, where Mrs. Montague spent her youth.

HORWICH, a chplry. in the par. of Dean, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 5 miles N.W. of Bolton, its post town, 5 N.E. of Chorley, and 15 N.W. of Manchester. It is situated on the high road from Bolton to Chorley, and 1 mile from its station on the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. It was formerly a Roman station. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in cotton printing and bleaching, which latter is carried on to a considerable extent. The coal-pits are very productive, also some extensive stone-quarries. The reservoir of the Liverpool water-works, which is of great extent, adjoins the W. end of this district. The soil is various. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £334. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was erected in 1831, at an expense of £5,848 15*s.* It is a stone structure, with a lofty tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains a stained window, also a monument to Joseph Ridgway, Esq. The charities include a bequest of £142 per annum for church purposes by the late Joseph Ridgway, with a further endowment of £100 to the poor, the same amount to the minister, and £40 to the church school, at the decease of his widow. There is a National school. The Independents have two chapels, and the Wesleyans one.

HORWOOD, a par. in the hund. of Fremington, co. Devon, 3½ miles E. of Bideford, its post town and railway station, and 6 S.W. of Barnstaple. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Torridge, and on the old road leading from Bideford to Barnstaple. There are some very ancient farmhouses in the neighbourhood belonging to Thomas Howard Effingham Hogg, Esq. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £157. The church is an ancient stone structure, dedicated to St. Michael. On the ledge of one of the windows is a recumbent figure executed in alabaster.

HORWOOD, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Cottesloe, co. Bucks, 2 miles N. of Winslow. It includes the hamlet of Singleborough. The village, which is small, was formerly a market town. The land is nearly equally divided between arable, pasture, and meadow. It was formerly a large common, but an Enclosure Act was obtained in 1841. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £302, in the patron. of New College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. James, has recently been enlarged. The Independents have a chapel, and there are National schools. The charities produce about £10 per annum.

HORWOOD, LITTLE, a par. as above, 3 miles N.E of Winslow. The parish, which is well wooded, adjoins Great Horwood. It includes besides some arable and pasture land, and about 1,000 acres of unenclosed land, forming Whaddon Chase. The Rothschild hounds meet here. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £111. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act obtained in 1766.

HOSE, a par. in the hund. of Framland, co. Leicester, 7 miles N.W. of Melton Mowbray, its railway station and post town. The village, which is small, is situated in the Vale of Belvoir. The Grantham canal passes through the parish. The surface is level with a clayey soil, and the land chiefly pasture. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Act of Enclosure in 1791. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £105. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, with a square pinnacled and embattled tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £3 12*s.* per annum. There is a National school erected in 1845; also a chapel for the Baptists. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor. There is a Church feast on the Sunday before Michaelmas.

HOSELEY, a lordship in the par. of Gresford, hund. of Mold, co. Flint, 4 miles N.E. of Wrexham. It is joined to Merford, and commands a view of Roft's camp.

HOSELEY. See HOLLESLEY, co. Norfolk.

HOSKETHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirk Andrews, co. Cumberland, 3 miles N.W. of Carlisle. It is situated near the river Eden and the ship canal.

HOSPITAL, a par. and small post town in the bar. of Small County, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Bruff. It is situated on the eastern verge of the county, between the basins of the rivers Shannon and Suir. The soil is generally good. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Emly, val. with Aney, £492, in the patron. of the crown. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel, and a hedge school This parish anciently formed part of Aney, and was the site of a commandery for Knights Hospitallers, founded by Geof. de Marisco, governor of Ireland, in 1215. It was granted by Queen Elizabeth to Sir Valentine Brown, who erected upon its site Kenmare Castle, now in ruins. There are remains of the ancient church, with the tomb of a knight. The village contains a police station. Fairs are held on the 10th May, 9th July, 8th September, and 30th October.

HOSPITAL, tythg. in the par. of Great Farringdon, co. Berks, 2 miles N. of Farringdon. It is situated on the river Isis, and contains the hmlts. of Littleworth and Thrupp.

HOSPITAL-MILL, a vil. in the par. of Cults, co. Fife, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Cupar.

HOTHAM, a par. in the Hunsley Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of South Cave, and 5½ S.E. of Market Weighton. The village, which is small, is situated on the Roman road Ermine Street. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The land is principally arable, and the soil various. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £44. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, val. £328, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, is an ancient structure, with a tower. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is an infant school supported by voluntary contributions. Henry Burton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HOTHERSALL, or HATHERALL, a tnshp. in the par of Ribchester, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 7 miles N.E. of Preston. It is situated on the river Ribble. The principal residence is Hothersall Hall.

HOTHFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Chart, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 3 miles N.W. of Ashford, its post town, and 3 N.E. of the Pluckley railway station, on the South-Eastern line, which runs through the parish. The village, which is small, is bounded on the S. by the river Stour, and formerly belonged to the archbishops of Canterbury. It was given by Henry VIII. to the Tuftons. Jack Cade's field is in this parish, where he was arrested by Sheriff Iden in 1450, whose sword, until lately, was kept in the church. The land is partly in hop grounds. The surface is in general level, and the country open pasture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £243. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small structure with a tower. The church was partly destroyed by fire in 1624. The register dates from 1570. There are several small charities, also Tufton's almshouses. Hothfield Park is the principal residence.

HOTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Theddingworth, hund. of Rothwell, co. Northampton, 4 miles S.W. of Market-Harborough.

HOTON, a chplry. in the par. of Prestwold, hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 3 miles N.E. of Loughborough, its post town. It is situated near the river Soar. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Act of Enclosure in 1759. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Prestwold, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The chapel-of-ease was rebuilt in 1838. The Wesleyans have chapels at Burton and Hoton.

HOTSPUR-PLACE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Whitley, and par. of Tynemouth, co. Northumberland, 3 miles N. of Shields. It is situated near the coast of the North Sea.

HOUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Wybunbury, hund. of Nantwich, co. Chester, 1 mile N.E. of Wybunbury, 3½ miles S.E. of Nantwich, and 1¼ mile W. of the Basford station on the London and North-Western railway. The land is chiefly pasture, and the soil clayey. Hough Hall is the principal residence.

HOUGH, or HOUGH-ON-THE-HILL, a par. in the wap. of Loveden, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 8 miles N. of Grantham, its post town, and 2 N.W. of the Hougham station on the Great Northern railway. The village is situated on rising ground. The par. contains the hmlts. of Brandon and Gelston, both of which maintain their roads separately. Here was formerly an alien priory, a cell to the abbey of St. Mary de Voto at Cherbourg, in France, founded in 1164, and given by Richard II. to the Chartreuse at Coventry. There are some excellent springs of water in the neighbourhood, from the source of the Brant. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £99. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a pinnacled tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains a very old font, several tablets, and two marble monuments of the Payne family. It was thoroughly restored in 1845. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum, derived from land, and divided among the poor in coals. There is a parochial school, liberally endowed. Near the church at Castle Hill is an artificial mound. Earl Brownlow is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

HOUGHAM, a par. partly in the hund. of Bewsborough, lathe of St. Augustine, and partly within the jurisdiction of the Cinque-Port lib. of Dover, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 2 miles S.W. of Dover, its post town. It is a small agricultural par. containing the hmlts. of Church and West Hougham. It is bounded on the E. by the high range of chalk cliffs forming the continuation of Shakspeare's Cliff, and from the summit of which is a view of the hills of Boulogne, across the Channel. The South-Eastern railway and the river Stour pass through the parish. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £175 6*s*. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £185, in the patron. of the archbishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, has been enlarged and restored. It has tombs of the Houghams, Malmaines, Fynens, &c. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. Besides the parish church, there is a district church called Christ Church. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Many persons who died of the plague in 1665 were buried here at a spot still known as "The Graves."

HOUGHAM, or HAUGHAM, a par. in the wap. of Loveden, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 6½ miles N.W. of Grantham, its post town, and 8½ S.E. of Newark. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Witham. The parish is separated from that of Marston by the Foston brook. It was formerly held by the Brudenell family, but the remains of the manor house are now occupied as a farmhouse. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture. The soils are various, being in parts a strong clay, and in others a light sand. A great portion of the land is in pasture. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Marston, in the dioc. of Lincoln, joint val. £559. The church, dedicated to All Saints, with a tower containing four bells, has been thoroughly restored in a costly manner, and contains some fine windows, a screen, and several ancient monuments; among these last is one to Sir Hugh de Bussey, a Knight Templar, who possessed the manor of Hougham, and was probably the founder of the church. The charities produce about £1 per annum. Sir John Charles Thorold is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

HOUGHTON, a par. in the hund. of Bury, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 4 miles N. of Arundel, its post town. It is a small village situated on the river Arun, near Houghton Hill, from which may be obtained a view of the sea. On the downs to the W. of the village are several barrows. Over the Arun is a very ancient bridge, adjoining which is a causeway. The roads from Chichester to Storrington, and from London to Arundel and Bognor, pass through this parish. The land is very fertile, the soil being chalk, alternated with alluvial clay. The living is a vic.* annexed to that of Amberley, in the dioc. of Chichester. The Duke of Norfolk is impropriator of all the tithes. A new church has recently been erected. It is constructed of flint, at an expense of £693.

HOUGHTON, a par. in the hunds. of King's-Somborn and Buddlesgate, Romsey div. of co. Hants, 4½ miles from Dunbridge railway station, and 2 S. of Stockbridge. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Test, near the Andover canal. The chief part of the land is fit for agricultural purposes. It is a meet for Mr. Farquharson's hounds. The old racecourse was broken up, and the land is now under cultivation, but a new course has been formed on the same down, at a short distance from the former one. Courts leet and baron are held annually. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £438, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a wooden tower containing three bells. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The Rev. Richard Townsend is lord of the manor.

HOUGHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Heddon-on-the-Wall, E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 7½ miles W. of Newcastle-on-Tyne, and 3 N.E. of Wylam railway station. It is situated near the Roman Wall, and in conjunction with Close House forms a tnshp. Here is a free school for both sexes, supported by Mrs. Bewick, who is the chief landowner, and resides at Close House.

HOUGHTON, a tnshp. and district par. in the par. of Stanwix, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 2 miles N.E. of Carlisle. It is situated on a branch of the river Eden, and partly on the high road to Scotland. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £40, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to St. John, was built in 1840. It is a white freestone structure with a tower. There is an endowed school. Houghton Hall is the principal residence.

HOUGHTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Sancton, Hunsley Beacon div. of the hund. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Market Weighton, and 4 S.W. of Sancton. It is situated near the Wolds. Houghton Hall, the principal residence, is situated in a finely-wooded park. Near the hall is a Roman Catholic chapel with a school in connection.

HOUGHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Winwick, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 2 miles N. of Warrington. It includes the hmlts. of Middleton and Harbury.

HOUGHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Grantham, hund. of Grantham soke, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 1 mile S.E. of Grantham. It is a joint township with Spittlegate. Here is a paper-mill giving employment to a number of hands.

HOUGHTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Sourton, co. Devon, 4 miles S.W. of Okehampton.

HOUGHTON, a par. in the hund. of Hurstingstone, co. Huntingdon, 2 miles W. of St. Ives. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the river Ouse. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

HOUGHTON, a vil. in the par. of Burton, co. Pembroke, 4 miles N. of Pembroke. It is situated near Milford Haven.

HOUGHTON. See HAUGHTON, co. Nottingham.

HOUGHTON-CHAPEL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Gisburn-Forest and par. of Gisburn, wap. of Staincliff, West Riding co. York, 7 miles N.E. of Clitheroe. It is situated near the river Ribble.

HOUGHTON-CONQUEST, a par. in the hund. of Redbornstoke, co. Bedford, 3 miles N. of Ampthill, its post town, and 6 S. of Bedford. It is a small agricultural village, with some remains of the old seat of the Conquests, in which they received James I. in 1605. The mansion was first erected by Sydney's sister, from a design in the "Arcadia;" it was afterwards altered by Inigo Jones for the Earl of Ailesbury, and subsequently by Chambers for the Duke of Bedford. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Houghton Gildable, in the dioc. of Ely, val. £828, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a tower containing six bells. It was thoroughly restored in 1845, and contains a monument to Dr. Zachary Grey, editor of "Hudibras," and a commentator on Shakspeare. The charities produce about £86 per annum, of which £68 goes to Clarke's school and almshouses. Houghton Park is situated a short distance S.W. of the village, but the famous mansion of the earls of Elgin and Ailesbury is now destroyed. The Duke of Bedford is lord of the manor.

HOUGHTON-GILDABLE, an ancient par. now united with Houghton-Conquest, co. Bedford.

HOUGHTON, GLASS, a tnshp. in the par. of Castleford, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Pontefract.

HOUGHTON, GREAT, a tnshp. in the par. of Darfield, wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 2 miles from Darfield, and 7 E. of Barnsley. It is situated near the North Midland railway. The village, which is well built, is situated on a lofty ridge commanding an extensive view over the surrounding country, which is fertile and well cultivated. Here are the ruins of Houghton Hall, part of which is converted into a public-house. In the ancient chapel adjoining the hall Divine service is performed every Sunday. There is an endowed school; also a place of worship for the Wesleyans. R. M. Milnes, Esq., M.P., is lord of the manor.

HOUGHTON, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Wymersley, co. Northampton, 2 miles S.E. of Northampton. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated near the river Nen. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £538, in the patron. of Magdalen College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a modern structure with a spire. The charities produce about £5 per annum.

HOUGHTON, HANGING, a hmlt. in the par. of Lamport, in the hund. of Orlingbury, co. Northampton, 8 miles N. of Northampton, its post town, and 1 mile S.W. of Lamport. It is situated on a hill, and near the road from Northampton to Market Harborough. Here is situated the free school for boys and girls belonging to Lamport and Houghton, with an endowment for education, and for the apprenticing of the children.

HOUGHTON-IN-THE-HOLE, or LE-DALE, a par. in the hund. of North Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N. of Fakenham, its post town, and 1 mile S.W. of New Walsingham. It is situated on the river Stiffkey, and on the road from Fakenham to Walsingham. On the W. side of the Dale is an ancient chapel, in good condition, supposed to have been an appanage to Walsingham Abbey, but now used as a barn. The land is almost entirely arable. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £148. The church is dedicated to St. Giles. It contains the remains of a carved screen. Henry Lee Warner, Esq., is lord of the manor. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £182 8*s.*, and the vicarial for £134 7*s.*

HOUGHTON-LE-SIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of Gainford, S.E. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 1½ mile N. of Gainford, and 6 miles N.W. of Darlington. It is situated on Whinstone Dyke, and is a meet for the Raby hounds. There is a National school.

HOUGHTON-LE-SPRING, a par. in the N. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 2 miles E. of Fence Houses, its post town and station on the North-Eastern railway, 6 N.E. of Durham, and 6½ S.W. of Sunderland. It comprises the tnshps. of Morton Grange, Newbottle, and East, Middle, and West Herrington. It was formerly the residence of the pious Bernard Gilpin, the Apostle of the North, whose life was written by Bishop Carleton, his pupil. It is the head of a Poor-law Union, comprising 14 tnshps. The board of guardians meet at the union-house. There is a board of health, and the petty sessions are held at the White Lion Inn every alternate Tuesday. The trade of the place arises chiefly from its numerous and extensive mines, producing the finer sorts of coal, which command the highest prices in the London market, and from the extensive quarries of limestone and freestone in the vicinity affording employment to the chief part of the inhabitants. The town has been rapidly improving within the last half century, and contains breweries, two brick kilns, and an iron foundry. A mechanics' institute was erected in 1851 on Quality Hill; it is a stone structure with a square tower. Numerous short lines of railway convey the produce of the mines to the river Wear, and thence by keels and barges it is carried to Sunderland for exportation. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, with the curs. of Herrington and Newbottle annexed, val. £1,600, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a large cruciform structure, with a tower containing a clock and six bells. In the interior of the church are effigies and tombs of the Ballasise family of Morton House; also of Gilpin, and a brass bearing date 1587. The register dates from 1563. The church was formerly held by archbishops Sancroft and Secker, Bishop Lindsell, Heylin, Sir G. Wheler, the antiquary, &c. In the churchyard is the Royal Kepier grammar school, founded in 1574 by the Rev. Bernard Gilpin and John Heath of Kepier. The parochial charities produce above £70 per annum. Here are also the Devonport and Lilburne's almshouses, founded in 1666, which have since been enlarged by the Rev. George Devonport. There is a National school for both sexes; also places of worship for the United Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists, Wesleyans, and Catholics, all of which have Sunday-schools attached.

HOUGHTON, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Darfield, wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 1½ mile from Darfield, 6 miles from Barnsley, and 1 mile from Great Houghton. This township is small, and contains only a few scattered farmhouses. The Rev. G. Wright of Bilham is lord of the manor.

HOUGHTON, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Wymersley, co. Northampton, 3½ miles S.E. of Northampton. The village is considerable, but the inhabitants chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a vic.,* with that of Brafield-on-the-Green annexed, val. £285. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There are National schools with a small endowment.

HOUGHTON, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Long Houghton, ward of Bambrough, co. Northumberland, 4 miles N.E. of Alnwick. It is united with Little Mill. Lead has been found here.

HOUGHTON, LITTLE. a hmlt. in the par. of Worsley, co. Lancaster, 6 miles N.W. of Manchester. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the hat trade and in the collieries.

HOUGHTON, LONG, a par. in the S. div. of Bambrough ward, co. Northumberland, 4 miles E. of Alnwick, its post town. It is situated on the coast, and contains the tnshps. of Long and Little Houghton, Boulmer, and Seaton House. Near here is Ratcheugh Crag, which commands an extensive view of the coast. The soil is various, but generally a strong loam. In this parish is Boulmer Bay, a natural basin, 800 yards in length by 400 in breadth, with a commodious entrance 12 feet deep at low water. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £162. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a stone structure, with a square tower containing one bell. In the interior of the church are two memorial windows. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a National school, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor.

HOUGHTON, NEW, or HOUGHTON-NEXT-HARPLEY, a par. in the hund. of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 12 miles W. of Fakenham, 13 N.W. of Lynn, and 7 N.W. of Rougham, its post town. The village, which is small, is situate near Peddar Way, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is chiefly sandy, with marl and chalk. Half the parish is comprehended within the park and plantations of Houghton Hall, the seat of the Marquis of Cholmondeley, who is lord of the manor, and sole proprietor. This noble mansion has a frontage of 460 feet in length, with a dome at each corner. Its erection was commenced about the year 1722 by Sir Robert Walpole, when prime minister, and occupied a period of 15 years. Before its completion Sir Robert was deprived of his choice collection of pictures, which are now at the Hermitage, St. Petersburg. The hall is situated on low ground, but is surrounded by gardens. The land not included within the park is arable. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £108 17*s*. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £68. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, with a small tower containing one bell, is situated in the park, and was rebuilt by Sir Robert Walpole. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There are two schools for both sexes.

HOUGHTON-ON-THE-HILL, a par. in the hund. of South Grenhoe, co. Norfolk, 4½ miles S.E. of Swaffham, and 4 N.W. of Walton, its post town. The parish, which is inconsiderable, containing but one farm, is situated on the river Wissey. The soils are sand, light loam, and chalk. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of pasture and meadow. The living is a rect. annexed to that of North Pickenham, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is a small stone edifice, with a square tower containing one bell, and is dedicated to St. Mary. E. A. Applewaite, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

HOUGHTON-ON-THE-HILL, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 6 miles S.E. of Leicester, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Soar, and on the Uppingham road. There is a mineral spring in the neighbourhood. The soil is a stiff clay resting upon gravel. The land is chiefly pasture, and is well watered by numerous small streams. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1765. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £262. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains a piscina, a font of large dimensions and wooden screen. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. George A. L. Keck, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HOUGHTON-REGIS, a par. in the hund. of Manshead, co. Bedford, 1 mile N. of Dunstable, its post town, and 5 miles N.W. of Luton. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the Roman road Watling Street. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Bedwell, Puddlehill, Sewell, and Thorn. Houghton-Regis formerly belonged to the crown. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in straw plaiting and in agriculture. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act, in 1796. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £250. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains several monuments, also effigies of a knight, and two brasses of priests. The charities produce about £60 per annum, of which £50 goes to Whitehead's free school. The Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, and Baptists have places of worship. Houghton House, which is situated near the green, is the principal residence. The Duke of Bedford is lord of the manor.

HOUGHTON, WEST, a chplry. in the par. of Dean, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 5 miles E. of Wigan. The village is very considerable, and many of the inhabitants are engaged in the manufactures of muslin and jaconet. The living is a perpet. cur.,* val. £160, in the patron. of the Vicar of Dean. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

HOUGHTON-WINTERBOURNE, or WINTERBOURNE HOUGHTON, a par. in the hund. of Pimperne, North Blandford div. of the co. Dorset, 4 miles S.W. of Blandford, its post town. It belonged to the Despensers. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £180. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing three bells; the register dates from 1558. There is a parochial school.

HOUGHTON WITH CLOSEHOUSE, a tnshp. in the par. of Heddon-on-the-Wall, E. div. of Tindal ward, co. Northumberland, 7½ miles N.W. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and 3 N.E. of Wylam railway station. It is situated near the Roman wall, and has an old tower 100 feet by 44 feet. There is a free school for both sexes. Close House, the principal residence, is a stone mansion commanding a view of the Tyne valley.

HOUNA. See HUNA, co. Caithness.

HOUNAM, a par. and post vil. in the district of Kelso, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 9 miles S.S.E. of Kelso. It is situated on the English border, and is otherwise bounded by the pars. of Oxnam, Jedburgh, Eckford, and Morebattle. It is 9 miles long by 6 broad. The surface is hilly, having some of the principal summits of the Cheviot range on its S. border sending off spurs into the interior. Hounam Law attains an elevation of 1,464 feet. There are extensive sheepwalks, and but a small area of arable soil. The Kale Water traverses the greater part of the parish. The Capehope Burn, a good trout stream, joins the Kale at a small cascade called the Salmon Leap. This par. is in the presb. of Jedburgh, and synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The minister has a stipend of £240. The church was rebuilt in 1844. The ancient church belonged to the monks of Jedburgh from the 12th century till the Reformation. The Roman Watling Street passes to the W. of the parish. Remains of camps are seen among the hills, the most remarkable ones being on Hounam-Law, from which an iron gate was removed to Cessford Castle by the Duke of Roxburgh. The village, which is small, is situated on the E. bank of the Kale. Crystal, jasper, and amethyst are found among the porphyry rocks in this parish.

HOUND, a par. in the hund. of Mainsbridge, Southampton div. of co. Hants, 3¾ miles S.E. of Southampton, its post town. The village is situated on the shore of the Southampton Water. The parish contains Sholing and Netley, a great portion of the village deriving its name from the latter place. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture and woodland, and a large extent of common. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £345 6*s.* 8*d.*, and the vicarial for £172 13*s.* 4*d.* The lands called Netley Grange are tithe free. Here are the ruins of Netley Abbey, founded in 1239 for Cistercian monks. At the Dissolution its revenues were valued at £160 2*s.* 9*d.* Near the abbey, and adjoining Southampton Water, is Netley Castle, originally built by Henry VIII. as a fort, but recently enlarged and converted into a seat. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £215, in the patron. of Winchester College. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is also a district church at Bursledon, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £110. The site of Netley Abbey was granted at the Dissolution to the Marquis of Winchester, and afterwards came to the Earl of Hertford, who entertained Queen Elizabeth here in 1560.

HOUNDSBOROUGH, BARWICK, AND COKER, a hund. in co. Somerset, contains the pars. of Barwick, Chilton Cantelo, Chinnock (East, Middle, and West), Chiselborough, Closeworth, Coker, Hardington-Mandeville, Haselbury Plucknett, Norton-under-Hamdon, Odcombe, Pendomer, North Perrott, and Sutton Bingham, comprising an area of 18,890 acres.

HOUNDSTONE, a hmlt. in the par. of Brimpton, co. Somerset, 2 miles W. of Yeovil.

HOUNDSTREET, a hmlt. in the par. of Marksbury, co. Somerset, 4 miles S. of Keynsham.

HOUNDSWOOD, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Coldingham, co. Berwick, Scotland, 3½ miles S.W. of Coldingham. It is in the presb. of Chirnside, in the patron. of the communicants. The church was built in 1836. There is also a Free church.

HOUNSLOW, a chplry. and populous vil. in the pars. of Heston and Isleworth, hund. of Isleworth, co. Middlesex, 2 miles from Hanworth, 3½ from Richmond, and 12 W.S.W. of London. It is a station on the branch line of the South-Western railway, and is within the London W. postal district. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Hondeslawe, and as giving its name to the hundred, and was formerly a market town. It had a priory for begging friars, founded in the 13th century, and afterwards held under the crown by the Windsors, Bulstrodes, &c. General Roy measured his base line of 27,404 feet for the trigonometrical survey here in 1784. Situated to the W., on Hounslow Heath, formerly called "The Warren of Staines," but disforested in the reign of Henry III., and which contained from 4,200 to 6,500 acres, now mostly enclosed, are extensive cavalry barracks for the London district, with an exercising-ground comprising about 300 acres, also militia quarters and an arsenal; and to the S.W., by the river Crane, are the extensive powder-mills which exploded in 1850, the report being heard from 40 to 60 miles distant. Hounslow Heath was a royal preserve as late as Charles II. Some Celtic or early British coins have been found on the heath. Hounslow is an increasing town, well paved and lighted with gas, has several shops, and an excellent supply of water. The townhall, recently erected, has a library, and a branch of the London and County Bank is held within the building. The T division of the metropolitan police have their station here. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of London, val. £125, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a brick-built structure decorated with twelve stone spires, and has a turret containing a clock and one bell. It was rebuilt in 1829 by Hawley, on the site of the old priory chapel, and was restored and enlarged in 1856. In the interior is a very fine font, and a mural monument of a knight and lady kneeling, and another to Whitelocke Bulstrode, ambassador in Charles II.'s time, son of Sir R. Bulstrode. The Particular Baptists have two chapels, and the Independents one. There is a subscription school for both sexes and an infant school. A newspaper called the Middlesex Chronicle is published every Saturday. After the Revolution, Dr. Tenison removed to Conduit-street the portable wooden chapel which James II. used for his "mass priests." The heath, which till within a century ago was noted for highwaymen, was the spot usually selected for reviews in the reign of George III., and was for ages the encamping ground of armies approaching the metropolis. On the old Roman road to Staines are still traces of Cæsar's camp, and we are informed by history that Gloucester encamped here in 1267, when marching against Henry III.; Charles I. in 1642, before the battle of Brentford; Essex in 1642, and again in 1647; James II. from 1685 to 1688, and Marlborough in 1740. Hounslow was the birthplace of Robert de Hounslow, Grand Provincial of the Brethren of the Holy Trinity, who died in 1340; also of Roan, auditor to Queen Elizabeth; and Henry Elsynge, clerk to the House of Commons in the reign of Charles I. Fairs are held on Trinity Monday and the Monday after Michaelmas Day.

HOUNSLOW, a vil. in the par. of Westruther, co. Berwick, Scotland, 2 miles W. of the town of Westruther.

HOURN (HELL), a sea loch running between the districts of Glenelg and Knoydart, in the par. of Glenelg, co. Inverness, Scotland. It opens out of Sleat Sound, and penetrates inland about 11 miles. The hills at some points attain an immense height, and are clothed with a thick forest. In the neighbourhood is Nevish (Heaven) Lough.

HOUSE, a small island of the Shetland group, Scotland. It is artificially connected to Barra, and belongs to the parish of Bressay.

HOUSE HILL, a hmlt. in the borough of Paisley, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Paisley, and 5 S. of Renfrew.

HOUSE OF MUIR, a hmlt. under the Pentland hills, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 10 miles S. of Edinburgh. This is the place where Dalzell defeated the Covenanters in 1666. A sheep fair is held on the last Monday in March.

HOUSESTEADS, the site of the Roman station Borcovicus, co. Northumberland. It was the seventh station on the wall, and is situated about 4 miles N.W. of Haydon-Bridge. Many Roman ruins still exist, and fifteen stones with inscriptions have been found.

HOUSHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Cadney, S. div. of the hund. of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.W. of Caistor.

HOUSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Uphall, co. Linlithgow, Scotland, 6 miles S.E. of Linlithgow, its post town. It is a station on the Edinburgh, Bathgate, and Cowbridge section of the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway. This place, which is a meet for the Linlithgow and Stirlingshire hounds, is situated near the Union canal and a branch of the river Almond.

HOUSTON AND KILLELLAN, a par. in the co. Renfrew, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Paisley, and 59 from Edinburgh, containing the post-office vils. of Houston and Bridge of Weir, and the vil. of Crosslee. It is a station on the Glasgow and Greenock railway. This parish is 6 miles long by 3 miles broad. It is bounded on the N. and E. by Erskine, on the S. by the river Gryfe, and on the W. by Kilmalcolm. The surface is rocky and heathy, with occasional pasture lands. This par. is in the presb. of Paisley and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The church was built in 1775. It contains several monuments and some curious oil paintings of 1400 of a knight and his lady. There are two Free churches, a Roman Catholic chapel, and four private schools in the parish. The old pars. of Houston and Killellan were united in 1760. Freeland of Gryfe Castle is the only resident landowner. The village, which is situated on the Houston burn, was founded in 1781 by Governor Macrea, who then held the barony, instead of the old village, whose site is a little lower down the stream. Many of the inhabitants are occupied in cotton and silk weaving. This parish, anciently called Kilpeter, i.e. the "cell of Peter," was granted to Hugh of Padvinan during the reign of Malcolm IV., and thence took its name, "Hughstown," or "Houston." The castle of Houston is of great antiquity, and was standing entire up to the year 1780, when it was dismantled, and its masonry used in the building of the village. On the estate of Barochan is a curious stone cross sculptured with a variety of figures. There are several cairns in the parish, where ancient British relics have been discovered. Building stone, limestone, and coal, are found. A fair is held on the second Tuesday in May.

HOUTON HOLM, one of the South Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland, 1 mile S. of Pomona.

HOVE, a par. in the hund. of Preston, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 2 miles W. of Brighton, its post town. It is a station on the London, Brighton, and South Coast railway. The village, which forms a suburb to Brighton, is a coastguard station. Its harbour for more than a century has been choked up, but it has a few fishing boats and bathing machines. A considerable part of Brighton, including Adelaide-crescent and Brunswick-square, are situated in this parish. Hove was formerly of greater extent than at present, having suffered much from the encroachments of the sea. The road from Brighton to Portsmouth, and a section of the Brighton and South Coast railway, pass through the parish. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £220, and the vicarial for £93 10*s*. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Preston, in the dioc. of Chichester. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a very ancient structure, and appears to be only the fragment of a larger edifice. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a National school.

HOVERINGHAM, a par. in the Southwell div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, co. Nottingham, 5 miles S. of Southwell, its post town, 10 N.E. of Nottingham, and 1½ mile E. of the Lowdham railway station. The village, which is small, is situated at the ferry on the river Trent. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in lace work and framework knitting. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £60, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a small ancient structure with a tower containing three bells. The church has a sculptured Norman porch. There are National and Sunday schools, also a place of worship for the Primitive Methodists in connection with a Sunday-school. Sir Richard Sutton, Bart., is lord of the manor.

HOVETON ST. JOHN, a par. in the hund. of Tunstead, co. Norfolk, 8 miles N.E. of Norwich, its railway station and post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Bure, which bounds the parish on the S. There is a lake covering 123 acres. Hoveton House is a brick mansion with Grecian pilasters, situated in a well-wooded park. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £327 16*s*. 6*d*., and there is a rent-charge of £12 3*s*. 6*d*. payable to the Rector of Belaugh. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Hoveton St. Peter, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is situated on rising ground in a field, and is dedicated to St. John. It is a small ancient structure with a brick tower. There are almshouses, four in number, with gardens attached, supported by the Rev. T. G. Blofield, who is lord of the manor.

HOVETON ST. PETER, a par. in the hund. of Tunstead, co. Norfolk, 9 miles N.E. of Norwich, its post town, and 8 from Walsham. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the Norwich road, and is wholly agricultural. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £220, and the vicarial for £120. The living is a vic. with the cur. of Hoveton St. John annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £134, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small edifice of brick, erected in 1624, and situated on the S.W. side of Hoveton Park. Hoveton Hall is situated in the midst of a park watered by a small rivulet flowing southward to the river Bure.

HOVINGHAM, a par. in the wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 7 miles W.N.W. of New Malton. It is a station on the Thirsk, Malton, and Driffield section of the North-Eastern railway. The parish is of large extent, containing Coulton, Scackleton, and six other townships. The village, formerly a market town, is situated in the vale of Ryedale. The surface is generally hilly and wooded. There are three mineral springs, yielding respectively sulphurous, chalybeate, and clear water, near which a Roman bath, tesselated pavement, hypocaust, and coins of Antonine, &c., were found in 1745. On the side of an adjoining hill is a breastwork supposed to be of Roman construction. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £101. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a school with a small endowment. The charities produce £17 per annum. Hovingham Hall, formerly a seat of the Mowbrays, is the principal residence.

HOW, BOUND, a tnshp. in the par. of Castle Sowerby, ward of Leath, co. Cumberland, 3¼ miles S.E. of Hesket Newmarket. The hamlet is considerable. On the summit of How Hill is an enclosure containing several large oaks, surrounded by a mound of earth and stones.

HOWBROOK, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Wortley, and par. of Tankersley, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Peniston, and 5 S.W. of Barnsley. It is situated near the river Don.

HOWBURN, a vil. in the par. of Temple, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 5 miles S.E. of Pennycuick.

HOW-CAPLE, a par. in the hund. of Greytree, co. Hereford, 5 miles N. of Ross, its post town, and 9 S.E. of Hereford. The village, which is small, is situated on rising ground, affording an extensive view of the river Wye. The soil is light and rather sandy, producing good crops of wheat, barley, and turnips. A considerable quantity of cider is made. The living is a rect.* with that of Soller's Hope united, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £344. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a stone edifice, with a square tower crowned with pinnacles and containing two bells. There are a few small charities. Mrs. Coleman and Mrs. Holt are ladies of the manor.

HOWDEN, a par., post and market town, in the wap. of Howdenshire, East Riding co. York, 17 miles S.E. of York, and 180 from London. It is a station on the Hull and Selby railway, and is situated near Howden Dyke, at the ferry over the river Ouse. The par. contains Barmby and Laxton, with 12 other tnshps. Howden, originally called Hovendene, was formerly noted for its secular college, founded in 1266 by Bishop Robert of Durham. There were originally five prebends, to which a sixth was subsequently added. Its revenue at the Dissolution was £101 18*s*. The town is situated about a mile from the N. bank of the river Ouse. The streets are roughly paved, and the houses in general built of brick. It contains the union poorhouse, three banks, a savings-bank, and the townhall: the latter is a stone building opposite the church, in which the county courts are held; also a mechanics' institute, &c. The town is a polling place for the East Riding. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £178. There are also two district churches at Laxton and Barmby-on-the-Marsh, the livings of which are perpet. curs., val. £70 the former, and the latter £30. The parish church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a cruciform structure with a tower 135 feet in height, containing eight bells. The exterior of the church is decorated, the W. point forming four compartments crowned with spires. On the S. side is the chapter-house, an octagonal building, erected by Bishop Skirlow, and inferior only in dimensions to the chapter-house at York. The E. side is entirely in ruins, having been destroyed by the army of Oliver Cromwell when on their way to Wressal Castle. A part of the E. window still remains, also effigies of two Knights Templars, and a brass to P. Dolman, bearing date 1500. There is a stone font. The interior of the church was restored and re-pewed in 1850. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum. There is a grammar school adjoining the church, the vicar acting as head master, also a National school for both sexes. The Roman Catholics, Independents, Primitive Methodists, and Wesleyans, have each a chapel, and the last mentioned a school. In 1803 Robert Jefferson, Esq., endowed the grammar school with an annuity of £20 for the education of 12 poor boys of Howden, and in 1772 Thomas Cutts bequeathed an annuity of £2 8*s.* for the benefit of the same school. The Poor-law Union of Howden comprises 40 parishes. Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held every fortnight on Tuesdays for horses, cattle, and sheep; also two annual horse fairs, the first commencing on the 15th April, and lasting three days, the second commencing on the 25th September, and lasting fourteen days, this being one of the largest horse fairs in England.

HOWDEN, or HOWDEN-PANS, a tnshp. in the par. of Wallsend, E. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles E. of Wallsend, and 2 S.W. of North Shields by the Newcastle and Tynemouth railway, on which it is a station. It is situated on the river Tyne, and takes the suffix to its name from the salt pans once here. Coals are shipped here in large quantities for London and other places. A commodious dock was opened in 1857, called the Northumberland Dock. There are a large brewery, shipbuilding yards, collieries, rope, lampblack, and tar works. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel.

HOWDEN, FEE, a manor in the par. of Walkington, wap. of Howdenshire, East Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Beverley.

HOWDENSHIRE, a wap. in the East Riding co. York, contains the pars. of Blacktoft, Eastrington, Howden, Welton, and parts of Brantingham and Walkington, comprising an area of 31,730 acres.

HOWE, a par. in the hund. of Clavering, co. Norfolk, 7 miles S. of Norwich, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Loddon. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable. The tithes of the united parishes of Howe and Little Poringland have been commuted for a rent-charge of £350 6*s.* The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Little Poringland, in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £400. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small ancient structure, with a round tower containing one bell. The parochial charities produce about £19 per annum, of which £12 goes to a school. The Rev. J. Holmes is lord of the manor.

HOWE, a tnshp. in the par. of Pickhill, wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 7 miles N.E. of Ripon, and 5 S.W. of Thirsk.

HOWELL, a par. in the wap. of Aswardhurn, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 5 miles N.E. of Sleaford, its post town. It is an inconsiderable parish containing but three farmhouses, and is near the Sleaford navigation. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £124. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, contains one bell.

HOWEY, a vil. in the par. of Disserth, co. Radnor, 5 miles N. of Builth. It is situated near the river Ithon.

HOWGATE, a vil. in the par. of Pennycuick, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 10 miles S. of Edinburgh. Here stands an United Presbyterian church.

HOWGILL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Rimmington and par. of Gisburn, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.E. of Clitheroe. It is situated on a branch of the river Ribble.

HOWGILL, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Sedberg, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N. of Sedberg. It is situated under Howgill Fell. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £80, in the patron. of the Vicar of Sedberg. The church has recently been rebuilt.

HOWGRAVE, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirklington, wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 5½ miles N. of Ripon, 8 S.E. of Bedale, and 8 S.W. of Thirsk. It forms a township in conjunction with Sutton.

HOWICK, a par. in the S. div. of the ward of Bambrough, co. Northumberland, 6 miles N.E. of Alnwick. The village, which is small, is situated near the coast of the North Sea, which is here lined with rocks of dreary and rugged aspect. Here are traces of an encampment, supposed from its circular form to have been either Danish or British. Several tombs with ornaments of a decidedly British character have been discovered near it. Coal mines were formerly worked, but the produce was insufficient. The soil is a rich loam on a retentive clay or marl. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £317. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £318, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is situated in the pleasure grounds of Howick Hall. It was rebuilt in 1746 at the expense of Sir Henry Grey, Bart., and restored in the Norman style, by the present Earl Grey, in 1849. In the S. side of the chancel is a tomb to the late Earl Grey. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. Howick Hall, the seat of Earl Grey, is the principal residence. A trout stream, called Howick Burn, over which is a bridge, skirts the lawn in front of the hall, to the E. of which is an artificial lake, covering five acres and well stocked with fish. Earl Grey, who is lord of the manor, takes from this place the title of viscount.

HOWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Penwortham, hund. of Leyland, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S.W. of Preston. The township, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Ribble. Here is a branch school in connection with the Hutton school trust. Howick Hall is the principal residence.

HOWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Itton, upper div. of the hund. of Caldicott, co. Monmouth, 3 miles N.W. of Chepstow.

HOWIESHILL, a vil. in the par. of Cambuslang, co. Lanark, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Glasgow.

HOWLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Chetwynd, co. Salop, 4 miles N.W. of Newport. It is situated on the river Mees.

HOWLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Warrington, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 2 miles from Warrington. It is situated near the river Mersey, and the Sankey and Bridgwater canals.

HOWLEY-HALL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Dewsbury.

HOWMORE, the seat of a post-office in North Uist, Western Isles, coast of Scotland, not far from Loch Maddy.

HOWNAM. See HOUNAM, Roxburghshire, Scotland.

HOWSELL, UPPER and LOWER, hmlts. in the par. of Leigh, co. Worcester, 6 miles S.W. of Worcester.

HOWSHAM, a tnshp. and vil. in the par. of Scrayingham, wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 8 miles S.W. of Malton, and 2 miles from the Barton Hill station on the York and Malton railway. It is also a station on the Lincoln, Market Rasen, and Hull railway. The village is small, and situated on the river Derwent. The river is crossed by a stone bridge at the entrance of the village. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. Here is a school, supported by Colonel George Cholmley. The principal residence is Howsham Hall, a building in the Elizabethan style of architecture, and of quadrangular construction, surmounted by a cornice. Howsham was formerly part of the estate belonging to Kirkham Priory, and was granted to the Eire family at the Reformation, from whom it passed to Thomas Bamburgh, who built the present mansion of the materials of the old priory.

HOW-STRAND, the site of a fishing and coastguard station, in the bar. of Courceys, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland.

HOWTELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk-Newton, W. div. of Glendale ward, co. Northumberland, 6 miles N.W. of Wooler.

HOWTH, a par. and small seaport and post town in the bar. of Coolock, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. The parish is a little over 3 miles in length by 2 broad. Part of the surface consists of a peninsula joined to the mainland by a narrow neck of sandy land. It has a bold and imposing coast, and the hill of Howth is a very prominent object. The islands of Ireland's Eye and Lambay lie off the coast. The surface of the peninsula is well cultivated. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with two others, £173, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church was built in 1815, by loan and gift of the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel, with that of Baldoyle, is united to that of Kinseely. There are several private schools in the parish. The town is seated at the foot of the hill of Howth, 10 miles N.E. of Dublin. It is a station on the Howth branch of the Dublin and Drogheda railway. It consists principally of one main street, and though formerly a place of no small importance, and a chief packet station, is now a subport to Kingstown. Here stand the parish church, Roman Catholic chapel, and a dispensary within the North Dublin Poor-law Union. Howth harbour was constructed by government at a cost of half a million of money, but from the injudicious selection of its site, which is subjected to the constant accumulation of sandbanks, it has proved utterly useless to all intents and purposes. On the E. pier a lighthouse displays a red light, and another occupies an elevated position at the head of the peninsula, visible at a distance of 17 miles. The harbour affords refuge to numerous craft engaged in the fishery, which is very considerable. On the W. side of the hill stands Howth Castle, the seat of the Earl of Howth. It is an ancient building, and contains some ancient paintings and family relics. The ruins known as Howth Abbey stand in the midst of the town. They consist of a collegiate church, said to have been founded in the early part of the 13th century, containing interesting monuments, some remains of the college, and other ecclesiastical edifices. The remains of a cromlech stand near Howth Castle, and on Ireland's Eye are some venerable remains. George IV. visited Howth in August, 1821. Races are sometimes held in the park of Howth Castle.

HOWTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Hovingham, wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 6 miles W. of Malton. It forms in conjunction with Airyholme and Baxtonhowe a township.

HOWTON. See KENDERCHURCH, co. Hereford.

HOW-WOOD, or HOLLOW-WOOD, a vil. in the par. of Lochwinnoch, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 3½ miles N.E. of the town of Lochwinnoch.

HOXNE, a hund. in the co. Suffolk, contains the pars. of Athelington, Badingham, Bedton, Bedingfield, Brundish, Carlton, Denham, Dennington, Fressingfield, Hoxne, Horham, Kelsale, Laxfield, Metfield, Monk-Soham, Saxtead, Southolt, Stradbroke, Syleham, Tannington, Weybread, Wilby, Wingfield, Withersdale, Worlingworth, and part of Mendham, comprising an area of 53,070 acres.

HOXNE, a par. in the above hund., co. Suffolk, 6 miles S.W. of Harleston, 3½ N.E. of Eye, and 5 E. of the Dip railway station. It is an extensive parish, situated on the S. side of the river Waveney, and contains the hmlts. of Hilton and Thorpe Hall. It was here that King Edmund was shot to death with arrows by the Danes after his defeat at Thetford. His remains were buried in a wooden chapel, which was converted into a Benedictine cell to Norwich Abbey, after the removal of his body to Bury. This monastery continued to flourish till the Dissolution, when its revenues were returned at £18 10*s., and the site and demesne were afterwards granted to Sir R. Gresham. The oak tree to which the king is supposed to have been fastened fell in 1848, when an iron arrowhead was found embedded in its wood. Hoxne is a petty sessions town, and head of a Poor-law Union, comprising 24 pars. and tnshps. The living is a vic. with that of Denham annexed, val. £450. The church has a large square tower crowned with pinnacles, and is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. The interior contains an organ presented by Sir Edward Kerrison, Bart., in 1836. There are also several monuments. The parochial charities produce about £141, of which £54 goes to Lord Maynard's free school. Adjoining the churchyard are five almshouses, erected by Sir E. Kerrison, Bart., for the same number of poor parishioners, with an allowance of 7*s.* per week. Oakley Park, the seat of Sir Edward Kerrison, Bart., who is lord of the manor, is situated in a valley watered by the river Dove. The eastern front is adorned with pillars, and has a gallery 80 feet in length. In the park, which is of considerable extent, is a cross erected at the end of the walk, called St. Mary's Cross.

HOXTON, a district par. in the par. of St. Leonard's, Shoreditch, Tower div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, half a mile N.E. of London, of which it forms a populous suburb. It is mentioned in Domesday Survey as Hocheston, and occupies the space extending from the old Roman road, now called Old Street-road, to the Regent's canal, on the banks of which are numerous lime and coal wharfs. This place, formerly a hamlet in the parish of St. Leonard's, has within the last half century become an extensive and populous district, and was constituted a parish by Act of Parliament in 1830. It is divided into the Old and New towns, the former containing some old houses, as Balmes's or Whitmore, once surrounded by a moat, and subsequently converted into a private lunatic asylum; the latter entirely modern. It is well paved, lighted with gas and supplied with water. The district is within the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court, and the N division of the Metropolitan police have their station here. The livings are all perpet. curs. in the dioc. of London, varying in val. from £500 to £250. The church dedicated to St. John the Baptist is an edifice of light brick, with a steeple consisting of successive stages of campanile turrets crowned with a dome. It was erected in 1826 by grant from the parliamentary commissioners, at an expense of £13,000. Christ Church was erected in 1839, and stands in the New North-road. Holy Trinity church is modern. There are places of worship for Independents, Wesleyan and New Connexion Methodists, and a synagogue attached to the ancient cemetery of the Jews. There are National and Infant schools in the several districts, and numerous almshouses. Aske's almshouses and school, under the Haberdashers' Company have an income of £3,550. The buildings were erected in 1825, and form a quadrangle, with a chapel and bronze of the founder in the centre. Fuller's almshouses for 28 aged women were founded and endowed in 1795; Westby's almshouses for 10 aged women in 1749; the Viscountess Lumley's almshouses for 6 aged persons were rebuilt in 1822; there are also Badger's and Baremere's almshouses.

HOY, one of the principal Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland. It lies to the S.W. of the Orkney cluster, about 15 miles S.W. of Kirkwall. It is a little over 13 miles in length, and its average breadth is between 3 and 5 miles. Hoy Sound separates it from Pomona. The northern portion of the island is hilly, Wardhill being the principal elevation, which rises 1,600 feet above sea-level. In the S. the island is indented by the natural harbour of Longhope. The soil consists chiefly of clay and peat. The greater part of the surface is disposed of in pasture land. The coast from Longhope Head northerly abounds in stupendous rocky formations. Here stands an immense insulated rock, which from its fanciful shape, resembling the human form, is termed the "Old Man of Hoy." The Dwarfie Stone is a spacious cavern consisting of two or three chambers. This island offers a wide field for the naturalist, botanist, or geologist. The northern portion of the island consists of the parishes of Hoy and Graemsay, and the southern of those of Walls and Flotta. The grouse, hawk, falcon, and eagle all frequent this locality. The parish of Hoy has Stromness for its post town. It is in the presb. of Caiston and synod of Orkney. The minister has a stipend of £158. The church was erected about the year 1780. Here are two non-parochial schools.

HOYLAND, HIGH, a par. in the wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Barnsley, its post town, and 3 W. of the Darton railway station. The village is situated on the brow of a lofty range of hills, commanding extensive prospects. The par. contains the tnshps. of Scissett, West Clayton, Comberworth, and Skelmanthorpe. There are several collieries, and a portion of the inhabitants are employed in the worsted mills. The land is nearly equally divided between arable and pasture, with about 300 acres of woodland and plantations. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. 1st and 2nd medieties together, £455. There is also a district church at Scissett, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £102. The parish church is dedicated to All Saints. The churchyard contains a tombstone to Anne Copley, who died at the age of 105 years, and bears date 1707. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. The Rev. E. Bird is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

HOYLAND, NETHER, a chplry. in the par. of Wath-upon-Dearne, wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.E. of Barnsley, its post town, 10 N.W. of Sheffield, and 1 mile from the Birdwell station on the South Yorkshire line of railway. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the Dearne and Dove canal, and on the Sheffield and Wakefield turnpike road. The chplry. contains the vils. of Upper Hoyland, Hoyland-lane End, and Elsecar, with the hmlts. of Broad-Carr and Stubbin. There are considerable iron foundries, also brick and tile kilns, and numerous coal mines. A mechanics' institute was erected here in 1840. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £340. The church, which was rebuilt on the site of the old chapel in 1830, is a stone edifice with a lofty spired tower, and is dedicated to St. Peter. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There are National and infant schools supported by voluntary contributions. The Primitive and Reformed Methodists have each a chapel, and the Wesleyans two. Earl Fitzwilliam is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

HOYLAND SWAINE, a tnshp. in the par. of Silkstone, wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 2 miles E. of Penistone railway station, 6 W. of Barnsley, and 13 S.E. of Huddersfield. The village, which is straggling, consisting of scattered houses, is situated on rising ground near the Sheffield railway. There are extensive nail manufactories. Here is a National school with master's residence, erected in 1850, for both sexes. The New Connexion Methodists have a place of worship. Edmund Buckley, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HOYLE SANDS, in co. Chester, extend for about 4 miles along the Wirral side of the Dee's mouth, and have inside a roadstead called Hoylake, with 3 fathoms water, which conducts into the S. channel of the Mersey.

HUBBERHOLME, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Buckden and par. of Arncliffe, West Riding co. York, 8 miles S.E. of Hawes, and 11 N.E. of Settle. It is situated near the river Wharfe. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £80, in the patron. of the Vicar of Arncliffe. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

HUBBERSTON, a par. in the hund. of Roose, co. Pembroke, 1 mile W. of Milford, and 8 miles from Haverfordwest. The village, which is considerable, is included within the borough of Milford, and is situated on a creek of the Haven. It has risen into importance through the establishment of a post-office station, and the current of a considerable trade in the export of corn, limestone, and coal. There is an observatory, and the remains of Pill Priory a little to the E. of the village. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £130. The church, dedicated to St. David, has some old stalls. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum.

HUBBLESTONE POINT, at the junction of the rivers Taw and Torridge, in co. Devon, so named from the tomb of Hubba, the Dane, who was buried here after his defeat at Cynvit Castle, now Henny, when the famous Raven standard was taken.

HUBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Sutton-on-the-Forest, wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 4 miles from Tollerton railway station, and 1 mile W. of Sutton-on-the-Forest. At the end of the village is a Maypole of various colours, where a feast is held on the third Sunday in June. The soil consists chiefly of clay and sand. The Wesleyan Society of Friends and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. There is an unconsecrated burial-ground.

HUCCLECOTE, a hmlt. in the par. of Churchdown, upper div. of the hund. of Dudstone, co. Gloucester, 2½ miles S.E. of the Gloucester railway station, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Cheltenham. The hamlet, which is of large extent, is situated on Ermine Street. There are some brickfields. The land is chiefly arable, and the soil clay. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £30. The church, dedicated to SS. Philip and James, has a bell turret. There is a National school for both sexes, also a chapel for the Wesleyans.

HUCKING, a par. in the hund. of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 6 miles N.E. of Maidstone, and 7 from Sittingbourne. It is situated on the Downs, and was anciently called Horckynge from its elevated situation. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Hollingbourn, in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. The Dean and Chapter of Canterbury are lords of the manor.

HUCKLOW-MAGNA, or GREAT HUCKLOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Hope, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 2 miles N.E. of Tideswell. The hamlet, which is considerable, contains places of worship for Presbyterians, Wesleyans, and Unitarians.

HUCKLOW-PARVA, a hmlt. in the par. of Hope, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 2 miles N.N.E. of Tideswell, adjoining the above.

HUCKNALL, AULT. See AULT-HUCKNALL, co. Derby.

HUCKNALL-TORKARD, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Broxtow, co. Nottingham, 6 miles N.W. of Nottingham. It is a station on the Nottingham and Mansfield section of the Midland railway. The parish is bounded on the E. by the river Leen. The village, which is large, consists principally of one long street, but is indifferently built. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the stocking manufacture and in knitting. Limestone is quarried for burning into lime. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1769. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £135. The church is an ancient edifice containing several mural monuments to the Byron family, when lords of Newstead Abbey, about 2 miles distant. Here also repose the remains of the poet, George Gordon, Lord Byron, who was interred on the 16th of July, 1824, in the family vault. In the chancel is a mural monument with an inscription to his memory, placed there by his lordship's sister, the Hon. Augusta Mary Leigh; and near it another marble slab monument, erected in 1863 in memory of Lord Byron's only daughter, "Ada, sole daughter of my house and heart." The monument is ornamented with a border and the Byron arms near the top, and has the following inscription:—"In the Byron vault below lie the remains of Augusta Ada, only daughter of George Gordon Noël, sixth Lord Byron, and wife of William Earl of Lovelace: born 10th December, 1815; died 27th November, 1852." The Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have places of worship, and there is a parochial school. The charities produce about £30 per annum, chiefly arising from lands bequeathed by Mrs. Byron in the reign of Elizabeth.

HUCKNALL-UNDER-HUTHWAITE, a tnshp. in the par. of Sutton-in-Ashfield, N. div. of the wap. of Broxtow, co. Nottingham, 5 miles W. of Mansfield, its post town, and 2 from Sutton-in-Ashfield. It is a very irregular township, and the inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture and in framework knitting. Here is a large colliery. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The Duke of Portland is chief landowner.

HUDDERSFIELD, a par., manufacturing and market town and parliamentary borough, in the wap. of Upper Agbrigg and lib. of Pontefract, West Riding co. York, 35 miles S.W. of York, and 189 N.N.W. of London. It is situated in the centre of the great woollen manufacturing district of Yorkshire, on the high-road from Manchester to Leeds, and is connected by numerous railways with all the great seats of industry in the N. of England. The Huddersfield and Ramsden canal communicates with the great canals of Yorkshire and Lancashire, and opens up direct communication between the Mersey and the Humber.—The prosperity of the town, which has more than quadrupled in wealth and population during the present century, in a great measure depends on the abundant supply of water-power afforded by the numerous streams falling into the Calder, and the near proximity of good coal and building stone. The Holme and Colne, which unite their waters in the town, fall into the Calder about 3 miles below it, turning in their course numerous mills for the manufacture of woollens, and for fulling and washing the cloths. The country surrounding the town is hilly and naturally unproductive, but careful husbandry and artificial appliances have brought it into a high state of cultivation.—Only one-fourth part of the parish, which is very extensive, comprising 15,080 acres, is included within the parliamentary borough of Huddersfield, the limits of which are co-extensive with those of the township, being about 3,950 acres; the remainder comprises the townships of Golcar, Lindley-cum-Quarmby, Longwood, with parts of Marsden, Scammonden-with-Deanhead, and Slaithwaite. The population of the parish, according to the census of 1861, was 52,250, and that of the borough 34,874—which latter includes the hmlts. of Fartown, Bradley, Deighton-with-Sheepridge, and Marsh-with-Paddock. The borough was created by the Reform Act of 1832, and returns one member to parliament. It is governed, so far as all improvements, lighting, watching, sewerage, and police are concerned, by a body of Improvement Commissioners, under an Act obtained in 1849, and elected partly by the rate-payers, partly by Sir J. W. Ramsden, Bart., of Byrom, to whom, as landlord, all Huddersfield belongs.—The town, which has been greatly extended of late years, is built on the slope and summit of a hill above the Colne. The streets are clean and well paved, and the leading thoroughfares have recently been widened. Among the most conspicuous improvements are the new streets and ranges of buildings round St. George's-square, including the railway station and Station Hotel, opened in 1848, the Lion Arcade, and the Britannia Buildings. Opposite the Corinthian portico of the station is a military trophy of Russian cannon brought from Sebastopol. The market-place is a large area surrounded by good houses and shops, where the buyers and sellers of cloth used to meet in the open air prior to 1768, when the commodious cloth hall was erected and presented to the town by Sir John Ramsden, Bart. This edifice is of brick, two stories high, and forms a circle of 880 yards, divided into two sections by an avenue of stalls, for the sale of woollen goods, running through the centre. The main building is divided on the one side into separate compartments or shops, and on the other into open stalls. It is open for business on Tuesdays and part of Fridays, when above 600 manufacturers attend from the surrounding villages. The other principal public buildings are—the Chamber of Commerce, opened in 1853; the mechanics' institute, completed in 1861, at the cost of £4,500, and situated in Northumberland-street; the Philosophical Hall, in Ramsden-street, erected in 1837, and capable of accommodating above 1,000 people; the Gymnasium Hall and riding-school, both in Ramsden-street, erected in 1847—the latter being also used as a theatre; the savings-bank, in Buxton-road; the court-house and police station for the Upper Agbrigg division of the West Riding, in Princess-street, where petty sessions are held every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday; the borough prison and police station, in Victoria-street; the infirmary, in the New North-road, to which a new wing has recently been added, enabling it to accommodate 60 indoor patients; the Huddersfield College, also situated in the New North-road, and affiliated to the University of London—it is divided into the lower and upper schools, and is attended by about 140 students; the Collegiate Institution, situated at Clare Hill, a Gothic building erected in 1839; the masonic hall, erected in 1838, and situated in South Parade; the Freemasons' hall, in Fitzwilliam-street; the model lodging-house, erected in 1854, and under the supervision of the Improvement Commissioners; the Young Men's Christian Association, situated in the market-place, and having a library of 500 volumes; the Literary and Scientific Society, in King-street, established in 1857; the Female Educational Institute, in King-street, established in 1846, on the same principle as the mechanics' institute; and the Church Institute, established in 1860, with its library and reading-room. Besides these are the buildings belonging to the four banking companies of Huddersfield, insurance offices, breweries, hotels, factories, dye-houses, and warehouses, many of which surpass in appearance the public buildings—as for instance the Britannia Buildings, built by G. Crosland, Esq., which are ornamented with carved stone bas-reliefs, and surmounted by a colossal figure of Britannia. Most of the private houses are built of a light-coloured stone, giving to the whole town an appearance of cleanliness and solidity not generally characteristic of the manufacturing towns of England.—The most important industrial products of Huddersfield are plain and fancy woollen cloths, serges, kerseymeres, cashmeretts, cords, mohair, and sealskin, besides an endless variety of fancy goods composed of worsted, silk, and cotton combined, including shawls, waistcoatings, and fancy dresses of the finest quality. Silk and cotton-spinning are also carried on, and there is a large organ-building manufactory, belonging to Messrs. Conacher, affording employment to a great number of workmen. There are several extensive iron foundries and engine works, for the manufacture of steam-engines, hydraulic-presses, and every description of machines employed in the manufacture of fabrics.—Besides being a parliamentary borough, Huddersfield is a polling-place for the West Riding. It is the head of a Poor-law Union embracing 25 parishes, and of superintendent registry and New County Court districts—the last being held in a building in Queen-street. The workhouse is situated at Almondbury, a village 2 miles from the town: and in the vicinity of the New North-road is the cemetery, opened in 1855; it comprises 13 acres of land well laid out and planted, having in the centre two Gothic chapels—the one half is consecrated for the use of the Established Church, the other is used by Dissenters. At Lockwood, about half a mile from the town, are the Spa baths, the waters of which are strongly sulphureous.—The parish church, dedicated to St. Peter, stands in the town, and was rebuilt in 1837, at the cost of £10,000. It is a spacious structure, capable of accommodating 1,800 persons, and has a tower containing a clock and ten bells. In the interior are several carved stone screens, and numerous windows of stained glass. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £600. In addition to the parish church there are twelve district churches, the livings of all which are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £300 to £150. St. Paul's church was built by the Parliamentary Commissioners in 1830, and contains 1,243 sittings. It has an E. window of stained glass. Christ Church, which was built and endowed by John Whitacre, Esq., stands on an eminence at Woodhouse, a little to the N. of the town. Holy Trinity church was erected by the late B. Haigh Allen, Esq., in 1819, and is situated at Westfield. St. John's church, a Gothic structure with tower and spire, was erected in 1853, at the cost of £7,000, by Sir John W. Ramsden, Bart. St. Thomas's church is a remarkably beautiful structure, with a tower and spire at the S.W. angle. It was built and endowed by the firm of Messrs. Starkey Brothers, at the cost of £10,000, and was opened on the 30th of June, 1859. It contains a richly-carved pulpit, and font of Caen stone, and a stone reredos in the chancel. The floor of the chancel is laid with Minton's patent encaustic tiles. Without the town are All Saints, at the populous village of Paddock; St. John's, at Golcar; St. Stephen's, at Lindley; St. Mark's, at Longwood; also churches at Scammonden, Slaithwaite, with Lingards and Marsden-in-Huddersfield; also a small chapel-of-ease, dedicated to St. Paul, at Aspley. The Dissenting places of worship are numerous, and some of them imposing structures, as the Free Wesleyan Church, in Brunswick-street, which was erected in 1859, at the cost of £7,000; the Unitarian Church, in Fitzwilliam-street, built in 1854 at the cost of £3,000; St. Patrick's Roman Catholic chapel, in the New North-road, built in 1832 at a cost of £2,000; the Christians' meeting-house, in the Bradford-road, built in 1861; besides others belonging to the Baptists, Independents, Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, New Connexion Methodists, Evangelical United Independents, and Society of Friends. There are National, British, Wesleyan, and infant day-schools, besides large Sunday-schools. The charities, including the Dole land, which comprises 25 acres, produce about £250 per annum. There are three newspapers, published every Saturday, in the town—the Chronicle, Examiner, and Times.—Markets are held on Tuesdays, principally for the sale of woollen goods, and on Saturdays for general produce. Fairs are held on 31st March and 4th October, and a large cattle fair on 14th May and the day following.

HUDDINGTON, a par. in the middle div. of the wap. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 5 miles S.E. of Droitwich, its post town, 3 N.E. of Spetchley railway station, and 8 N.E. of Worcester. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £56. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a small edifice with an open belfry containing one bell. The interior contains a tablet to Sir George Winter. The Earl of Shrewsbury is lord of the manor.

HUDDLESTON AND LUMBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Sherburn, upper div. of the wap. of Barkstone-Ash, West Riding co. York, 9 miles N. of Pontefract, and 2 N.E. of the Milford Junction station on the Leeds and Selby railway. In this township a cream-coloured stone is quarried, which, although soft at first, acquires considerable hardness by exposure to the atmosphere, and was the material used in the building of Henry VII.'s Chapel, in Westminster Abbey. At the enclosure of the parish, in 1794, an allotment of land was awarded in lieu of tithes. Huddleston Hall is a very ancient manor, and was formerly the seat of the Hungates. Lord Ashtown is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

HUDNALL, a hmlt. in the par. of Eddesborough, co. Bucks, 3 miles N. of Berkhampstead.

HUDNOLLS, an ext. par. place in the pars. of Hewelsfield and St. Briavel's, hund. of St. Briavel's, co. Gloucester, 5 miles N.E. of Chepstow. It is situated near the river Wye and Brockwear Common, on the borders of Monmouthshire.

HUDSWELL, a chplry. in the par. of Catterick, wap. of West Hang, North Riding co. York, 2½ miles S.E. of Richmond, its post town. It is situated on the river Swale. The land is sterile, and a portion of it marshy. Here are an extensive lead mine and a colliery. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £75, in the patron. of the Vicar of Catterick. The charities produce about £40 per annum, of which £18 goes to the National schools for both sexes.

HUGGATE, a par. in the Wilton Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 7½ miles N.E. of Pocklington, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the Wolds. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. There are Danish earthworks adjoining Wold House, also numerous barrows, and a well 348 feet in depth. The land is chiefly arable, and in a high state of cultivation. The tithes were commuted for annual money payments under an Enclosure Act in 1767. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £449, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone edifice, with a spired tower containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, also three Sunday-schools. The Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists have each a place of worship here. James Cristie, Esq., is lord of the manor. Races are held in July.

HUGGINSTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Aghaviller, bar. of Knocktopher, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Knocktopher. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel and a police station.

HUGGLESCOTE, a chplry. in the par. of Ibstock, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 5½ miles S.E. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, its post town, and 11½ N.W. of Leicester. The vil., which is extensive, contains the hmlts. of Coalville and Donington. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in frame-work knitting and the coal mines. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Ibstock, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing three bells. There is a National school for both sexes, also a chapel for the Baptists in connection with Sunday-schools. The Marquis of Hastings is lord of the manor.

HUGHENDON. See HITCHENDON, co. Bucks.

HUGHLEY, a par. in the borough of Wenlock, co. Salop, 4 miles S.W. of Much Wenlock, its post town, 11 N.E. of Church Stretton, and 11 S.E. of Shrewsbury. This place derives its name from Hugh de Le, who was proprietor of the manor in the 12th century, and ancestor of the Leas of Langley. In the reign of Richard II. a commission was issued to inquire into the best means of clearing the country of the banditti. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated on Wenlock Edge and is wholly agricultural. The soil is chiefly clayey. Coal mines were formerly worked, and there are quarries of excellent limestone. The road from Much Wenlock to Church Stretton passes on the S.E. of the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £73. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £162. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient stone edifice, with a turret containing four bells. The interior of the church contains part of a carved oak rood-screen. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. The Earl of Bradford is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

HUGIL, a chplry. in the par. and ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 6 miles N.W. of Kendal, its post town. It is situated near Hugil Fell, and contains the hmlts. of Grass-Garth, Ings, and Reston. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £93, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kendal. The church, which is situated at Ings, was built in 1743 by Bateman, a wealthy merchant, and native of this place. The charities produce about £82 per annum, of which £67 goes to Bateman's almshouses, and £12 to Wilson's school. Hugil Hall was formerly the seat of P. Collinson, the antiquary and naturalist.

HUISH, or HEWISH, a par. in the hund. of Swanborough, co. Wilts, 3 miles N.W. of Pewsey and 5 S.W. of Marlborough. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated amongst the Downs. There is an ancient camp and several barrows in the neighbourhood. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £185. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £178, in the patron. of the trustees of Froxfield College, to whom the property was given by Sarah Duchess of Somerset, in 1690. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. There is a small day school.

HUISH, a par. in the hund. of Shebbear, co. Devon, 5 miles N. of Hatherleigh, its post town, 8 S. of Torrington, and 12 W. of Eggesford. It is a small irregular village situated on the river Torridge, and on the W. side of the valley. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £117. Pipe and potters' clay are found. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £194. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a small ancient structure, with a tower containing three bells. Heanton House is the principal residence; it is a modern mansion, and is the seat of Lord Clinton, who is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

HUISH CHAMPFLOWER, a par. in the hund. of Williton, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.W. of Wiveliscombe, its post town, and 10 N. of Wellington. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Tone. On Brendon hills, and partly in King's Brompton, are the extensive mines of the Ebbw Vale Iron Company. The soil consists of loam and clay, with slate in the hills. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £254 6*s.* 9*d.* The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £288. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a large stone structure, with a square tower containing five bells. There is a school for both sexes. Sir W. C. Trevelyan is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

HUISH EPISCOPI, a par. in the E. div. of the hund. of Kingsbury, co. Somerset, half a mile E. of Langport, its post town, and 7½ miles S.E. of Bridgwater. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Yeo and Parret, and on the high road from Crewkerne to Langport. It contains the vils. of Langport, Westover, Coombe, Paradise, Pebsbury, and Wearne. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture. The soils are clayey, with subsoil of blue lias stone. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1797. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Langport annexed, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, joint val. £180, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Wells. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone edifice, with a tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £24 per annum. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor.

HUISH, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Stanborough, co. Devon, 5½ miles from Ivy Bridge, its post town and railway station, and 7 S.W. of Totnes. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated on the river Avon, which falls into Bigbury Bay. The soil is loamy, subsoil dunstone. Here is a meet for the South Devon harriers. There is good salmon and trout fishing in the Avon, though but a small stream. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £550. The church is a stone edifice. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Thomas King, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HUISH-ROAD, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Carhampton, co. Somerset, 4 miles S.E. of Dunster.

HUISH, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Stanborough, co. Devon, 5 miles S.W. of Kingsbridge, its post town, The par., which is very irregular in form, is situated in a vale on Bigbury Bay, and contains the hmlts. of Silverhill, Glumpton, and Hope Cove. It is a meet for the Marlborough hounds. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Alvington, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a small ancient edifice, with a square tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a chapel for the Plymouth Brethren at Glumpton. The Earl of Devon is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

HULAM, or HOLOM, a tnshp. in the par. of Monk-Hesleton, S. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 5 miles N.W. of Hartlepool.

HULCOTE, a hmlt. in the par. of Easton-Neston, hund. of Cleley, co. Northampton, 1½ mile N.E. of Towcester.

HULCOTT, a par. in the hund. of Aylesbury, co. Bucks, 3 miles N.E. of Aylesbury, its post town. It is a small agricultural village, situated on the river Thame. The surface is flat, and the land chiefly in pasture. It is intersected by the line of railway to Aylesbury. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £181. The church of St. Nicholas is a small stone edifice, with a wooden steeple containing three bells. In the interior is a monument to Benedict Leigh, bearing date 1547. John Alderson Cresswell Baker, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HULKS-IN-MEDWAY, a place in the town of Chatham, co. Kent.

HULL, or KINGSTON-UPON-HULL, a county in itself, municipal and parliamentary borough and seaport in the East Riding of Yorkshire, in 53° 44′ N. lat., and 0° 10′ W. long. Its population in 1861 was 98,994, having increased since 1851, when it was 84,690, by 12,971. The number of inhabited houses in the former year was 19,516, and of uninhabited 867. From a very early period of our history Hull has always been a place of considerable commercial importance; for a century previous to the reign of Edward I., Myton Wyk (the ancient name of Hull) carried on a thriving trade in the export of wools, leather, &c., and in the import of wines. But it was by the above-mentioned king that the foundation of the present prosperity of the town was laid. Edward had purchased Hull from the monastery of Melsa, and perceiving its natural advantages for the purposes of a harbour, caused one to be formed, at the same time granting the town a charter, and changing its name to Kyngestown-super-Hull. In 1316 a ferry was established across the Humber, between Hull and Barton. In 1322 the town was strongly walled in by Edward II. In 1359 it sent sixteen ships to the siege of Calais. In 1378 the walls were repaired with brick, the use of which is supposed to have been revived here, for the first time since the departure of the Romans, by Sir Michael de la Pole. In 1472 and 1476 it was visited by the plague. In 1537 it was taken by the insurgents in the "Pilgrimage of Grace." In 1635 it was again visited by the plague, which continued its ravages during more than three years. In the civil war between Charles I. and the parliament, Hull was the first place which resisted the authority of the king. The parliament had appointed Sir John Hotham to be governor of the town, in order to obtain possession of the large quantities of warlike stores which were deposited there. When the Earl of Newcastle, who had been sent by the king to take possession of the town in his name, appeared before the walls, Hotham refused to admit him; and the king, who arrived in April, 1642, with 200 followers, was treated in a similar manner. Upon this declaration of defiance Charles laid siege to the town, but was repulsed after several assaults. Hull was again besieged by the royalists under the Marquis of Newcastle in 1643, but was successfully defended by Lord Fairfax. During the disturbances which occurred on the abdication of James II., Hull was for a short time in the hands of the Roman Catholic party; but measures were so well concerted by the adherents of the Prince of Orange that the town was taken before their antagonists had even heard of such a design. The anniversary of this event is still observed by the inhabitants as a holiday.—Hull is situated in a low level plain at the confluence of the Hull and Humber, about 20 miles from the mouth of the latter. The town is protected from the overflow of the Humber by embankments. The streets in the old part of the town, consisting of Hull within the Docks, are narrow and dirty; but those in the parish of Sculcoates, where most of the wealthy inhabitants reside, have a more modern and handsome appearance. The most modern part of the town is Myton, which lies westward from the Humber dock; another portion of the town, consisting for the most part of warehouses, is situated on the left bank of the Hull. The houses are principally built of brick; the streets are well paved and lighted with gas; the town is plentifully supplied with water, which is conducted from springs about 4 miles distant. The environs of Hull are uninteresting, the country being flat and almost destitute of trees. The principal public buildings in Hull are—the custom-house, in Whitefriargate, a brick building with stone dressings; the exchange, a new building in course of re-erection; the Trinity House, in Trinity House-lane, founded in 1369, belonging to a society established for relieving poor mariners, licensing pilots, and regulating the navigation of the Humber; the dock-office, excise-office, Chamber of Commerce, stamp-office, corn exchange, and several good banks; the public rooms in Jarratt-street, consisting of a large assembly-room, a lecture-room, a museum, baths, &c.; the Protestant Hall, also in Jarratt-street; the Royal Institution, in Albion-street, containing the subscription library; the mechanics' institute, in George-street; the mansion house, situated in Lowgate; the railway station, at the terminus of the Hull and Selby railway; the Hull and East Riding School of Medicine; the borough gaol, in Kingston-street, erected in 1827; a new gaol in course of erection; the post-office, in Whitefriargate, a convenient building in a central situation; the Queen's Theatre, near the railway station; the Royal Theatre, in course of erection after being burnt down in Humber-street; and the Victoria Concert Rooms, at the junction of Humber-street and Queen-street. The botanical gardens (10 acres), about 1 mile from the town, and the zoological gardens (6 acres), are favourite places of resort. The park, consisting of about 27 acres, situated in the Beverley-road, was presented to the town by Mr. Pearson in 1860. A gilt equestrian statue of William III. stands in the market-place, and a Doric column, 80 feet high, erected to the memory of Wilberforce, who was a native of this town, stands at the end of Prince's Dock.—The churches in Hull are—the Holy Trinity, a cruciform structure with a tower, situated in the market-place; Drypool Church, erected in 1824; St. Mark's, Jenning's-street, Groves, with a lofty spire; Sculcoates, St. Mary, Air-street; St. Mary's, Lowgate, lately restored at a cost of £10,000; St. John's Church, St. John's-street; St. Stephen's, St. Stephen's-street, in the early English style, with a spire 200 feet high; St. James's, St. James's-street; St. Paul's, Cannon-street; Christ Church, John-street; Mariners' Church; and St. Luke's. The Methodists have 12 chapels, the Independents 8, the Roman Catholics 2, the Baptists 4, the Calvinists 1, the German Lutheran 1, the Society of Friends 1, the Jews 1, and the Unitarians 1. The schools in Hull are—the grammar school, founded by Bishop Alcock in 1486, the school-room of which was rebuilt in 1587, and is one of the best in England; the Vicar's School, founded by the Rev. W. Mason in 1737; Trinity House School, for 36 boys; Cogan's School, for 40 girls; and the Roman Catholic free school. Besides the above there are National schools, British and foreign schools, and Wesleyan schools.—The principal charitable institutions are—the Trinity House, for the relief of decayed seamen; the Charter House, founded in 1384 by Michael de la Pole; Lister's Hospital, founded in 1642 by Sir John Lister, for 12 poor persons; Gregg's Hospital, founded by John Gregg in 1416, for 12 women; Crowle's Hospital, founded in 1682, for 12 women; Salthouse Lane Hospital, founded in 1683; the Infirmary, in Prospect-street, erected in 1782; the lunatic asylum, in the Anlaby-road, and two dispensaries.—Hull is well situated for commercial purposes, being connected by the rivers which discharge themselves into the Humber with most of the manufacturing districts in England. The docks, which occupy the site of the old fortifications, with the harbour, cover an area of 60 acres; the Old Dock, commenced in 1775, and completed in 1778, is 1,703 feet long, 254 feet broad, and covers an area of about 10 acres; the Humber Dock, opening into the Humber, commenced in 1807, and completed in 1809, is 914 feet long, 342 feet broad, and covers an area of about 7 acres; the Junction Dock, connecting the Humber Dock with the Old Dock, commenced in 1827, and opened in 1829, is 645 feet long, 407 broad, and covers an area of about 6 acres; the Railway Dock, near the terminus of the Hull and Selby railway, was opened in 1846; the Victoria Dock, on the E. side of the Hull, affords accommodation for vessels of great tonnage, and covers, with the timber docks adjoining it, 43 acres. The West Dock, now in course of construction, covers 7 acres. Hull has a larger coasting trade than any other port in the kingdom; it also carries on an extensive trade with the N. of Germany, Holland, Belgium, Denmark, and the Baltic. The chief articles of export are woollen and cotton goods and hardware; and of import, timber, grain, seeds, wool, flax, iron, tar, pitch, resin, bones, and tallow. Hull was the first port in England which engaged in the Greenland fishery, and the revival of that branch of trade, in 1766, was due to its enterprise; during the last forty years, the number of vessels leaving Hull for the northern seas has gradually diminished, and but few ships belonging to this port are now engaged in the whale fishery. The principal manufactures of the town are those of ropes, canvas, chains, and chain-cables; iron ship-building and seed-crushing are largely carried on; there are corn, bone, colour, oil, and cotton mills.—Hull is governed by a corporation consisting of a mayor, 14 aldermen, 42 common councilmen, a recorder, and a sheriff. The town is divided into 7 wards—viz. Lowgate ward, Market-place ward, Holderness ward, North Myton ward, South Myton ward, East Sculcoates ward, and West Sculcoates ward. It returns 2 members to parliament. Quarter sessions are held here in the guildhall; the other law-courts are, the court of venire, presided over by the recorder, which has a jurisdiction in civil causes over the town and county of Hull; the county court, and the court of bankruptcy. The assizes for the county of Hull were formerly held here, but the trials for capital offences committed within the county now take place at York. The police system is the same as that of London, and most efficient. Hull is a station on the Hull and Selby railway, the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway, and the North-Eastern railway, and is connected with the Great Northern railway by the ferry.—The most remarkable men who were natives of the town are Andrew Marvell and Wilberforce.—The market days are Tuesday and Friday; a market is also held on Saturday for the sale of meat and vegetables. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in April, and on the 11th October for horses, cattle, &c., and on the following day for toys, pedlery, &c.

HULL, a hmlt. in the par. of Great Budworth, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 3 miles S.E. of Warrington. The Bridgwater canal passes to the N. of the hamlet, which forms part of the township of Appleton.

HULL, BISHOP'S, a par. in the hund. of Taunton, co. Somerset, 1½ mile W. of Taunton. The village is considerable. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £222, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul.

HULLAND, a tnshp. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Ashborne, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 5 miles N.E. of Ashborne, its post town, and 6 W. of the Belper and Duffield railway stations. The village, which is small, is situated on rising ground. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in dairy farming. The land is rich and fertile. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church is situated on an eminence, and near to it is the National school. Divine service is performed in a small endowed building at Hulland-Ward-Intakes, which is annexed to Mugginton. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here.

HULLAND WARD, a tnshp. in the par. of Ashborne, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby. 5 miles N.E. of Ashborne.

HULLAND-WARD-INTAKES, a tnshp. in the par. of Ashborne, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 6 miles S.E. of Ashborne.

HULLAVINGTON, a par. in the hunds. of Malmesbury and Chippenham, co. Wilts, 7 miles N.W. of Chippenham, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Malmesbury. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The par. contains the tythg. of Surrendral. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £455, and the vicarial for £165. Here is a meet for the Beaufort hounds. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £194, in the patron. of Eton College. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, with a square tower. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. The Independents, Primitive Methodists, and Baptists have chapels, and there is a National school.

HULME, a tnshp. in the par. and borough of Manchester, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S.E. of Manchester, of which it is a populous suburb. It is situated on the further-side of the river Medlock, which separates it from Manchester. The greater part of the township is now covered with buildings. It contains numerous cotton and other factories, the workhouse for Chorlton Union, and cavalry barracks. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the manufactures carried on at Manchester. The living of St. George is a rect. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £350, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. There are two other churches, one dedicated to the Holy Trinity, and the other to St. Mark, besides chapels belonging to most of the Protestant Dissenters.

HULME, a tnshp. in the par. of Winwick, co. Lancaster, 3 miles N. of Warrington.

HULME. See KINDERTON-CUM-HULME, co. Chester.

HULME, a tnshp. in the par. of Caverswall, N. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 2 miles N.E. of Lane End, and 4 N.W. of Cheadle.

HULME, CHURCH. See CHURCH HULME, co. Chester.

HULME-WALFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Astbury, hund. of Northwich, co Chester, 1¾ mile from Congleton, its post town, and 4 miles from Astbury. It is situated on rising ground, and the soil consists of clay and sand. The living is a cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, and is annexed to the rect.* of Astbury. The church, which was erected in 1856, is a stone structure, with accommodation for 300 persons. There is a National school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school.

HULNE PARK, a tnshp. in the par. of Alnwick, E. div. of the ward of Coquetdale, co. Northumberland. It is situated on the N. side of the town of Alnwick, and contains the hmlts. of Hulne Abbey, Park-Farm, and Friar's-Buildings, all within the Castle grounds. The entrance to the park is in Rotten Row, at which place there is a monument bearing an inscription to William the Lion, King of Scotland, who was here taken prisoner during the siege of Alnwick Castle in 1174. In this township, but about 2 miles N.W. of Alnwick, is a castle 90 feet in height, at the summit of which is a balcony commanding extensive views. Three miles from Alnwick are the ruins of Hulne Abbey, founded in 1240 by Ralph Fresburn, a crusader and Carmelite friar; and in 1468 a tower was added by the fourth earl of Northumberland. Bale, the biographer, wrote his "Lives" here. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor.

HULSE, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Budworth, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 4 miles S.E. of Northwich. It is situated on a branch of the river Weaver.

HULTON ABBEY, a lordship in the par. of Burslem, co. Stafford, 2 miles E. of Burslem. Here was formerly a small Cistercian abbey, founded in 1233, by Henry de Audley. At the Dissolution its revenue was returned at £76 14*s.* 11*d.*, and the site given to the Astons. The remains of the abbey are now converted into a farm-house. The village is considerable, and at the hamlet of Sneyd Green is a Wesleyan chapel. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the extensive collieries in the neighbourhood.

HULTON, LITTLE, or PEEL, a chplry. in the par. of Deane, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 4 miles S. of Bolton. The village, which is considerable, is chiefly inhabited by weavers and colliers. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £170. The church, which was consecrated in 1760, is dedicated to St. Paul.

HULTON, MIDDLE and OVER, tnshps. in the par. of Deane, co. Lancaster, 1 mile N.W. of Little Hulton, and 3 miles S.W. of Bolton. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the mines and collieries.

HULVER STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of Henstead, hund. of Wangford, co. Suffolk, 4 miles S.E. of Beccles. The hamlet, which is small, contains a chapel for Wesleyans.

HUMBER, a ward in the pars. of Holy Trinity and St. Mary, in the borough of Hull, East Riding co. York, See HULL.

HUMBER, a par. in the hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 3 miles S.E. of Leominster, its post town and railway station, and 13 from Hereford. It is situated on the river Lug, and on the Worcester and Bromyard turnpike roads. The par. includes the tnshp. of Risbury. The land is partly in hops, and the soil clayey. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £170. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small stone structure, with a tower. There is a free school. Higford David Burrs, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

HUMBER, a large river of the N.E. of England, dividing the counties of Lincoln and Yorkshire, and being the outlet of the rivers Ouse and Trent. It has an average breadth of 1½ mile down to Hull, which stands on its northern bank, and 2 to 6 miles down to Great Grimsby.

HUMBERSHOE, a hmlt. in the par. of Studham, hund. of Manshead, co. Herts; formerly in Beds.

HUMBERSTONE, a par. in the hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 2½ miles N.E. of Leicester, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated near the Midland Counties railway and the road from Leicester to Uppingham. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The tithes have been commuted under an Enclosure Act for land and an annual money payment. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a lofty tower, crowned with a spire, and containing five bells. There are two Wesleyan chapels. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. William A. Pochin, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HUMBERSTONE, a par. in the wap. of Bradley Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles S.E. of Great Grimsby, its post town, and 1½ mile E. of the Waltham railway station. The Louth navigation joins the Humber on the S. of the parish. The village, which is small, is situated near the mouth of the river Humber. It had formerly a Benedictine abbey, founded in the reign of Henry II. The land is about evenly divided between arable and pasture. The soil is clayey, producing good crops of wheat, beans, and oats. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £63. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a brick structure with a tower containing a clock and one bell. In the interior of the church are several monuments, among which is one to Matthew Humberstone, bearing date 1709. The church was rebuilt in 1710. The register dates from 1748. The charities produce about £700 per annum, chiefly the endowment of Matthew Humberstone's free school, and almshouses for 6 poor persons. The free school is for the benefit of the parishes of Clee, Humberstone, Laceby, Cleethorpe, Weelsby, Tetney, Scartho, and Holton-le-Clay, and is limited to 100 scholars and 12 boarders, for the privilege of the head-master, who has a residence and 8 acres of land. There is also a free school for girls, and a place of worship for Wesleyans. Lord Carrington is lord of the manor.

HUMBERTON-WITH-MILBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-on-the-Moor, wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Boroughbridge. It is situated on the rivers Ouse and Swale. There are several farm-houses and cottages. The soil is loamy.

HUMBIE, a par. in the co. of Haddington, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Gifford. It is situated in the S.W. portion of the county, and is 5 miles long by 3 broad. It is bounded by Ormiston, Salton, Bolton, Yester, Soutra, and the counties of Edinburgh and Berwick. The parish consists of a main body and a small detached portion lying wholly in the county of Edinburgh, about 1 mile distant from the rest of the parish, which contains the village of Upper Keith. The south-eastern and south-western extremities of the parish include some of the highest summits of the Lammermoors. The Lammerlaw and Soutra hills are the most remarkable elevations. Keith-water and its confluents, Humbieburn and Birnsburn, traverse the parish on their way to the Tyne. These waters abound with trout, and are of sufficient volume to give motion to several mills. Cultivation is carried a considerable distance into the upland districts, and extensive pastures occupy the higher acclivities. For a mountain country it is very highly cultivated. This par. is in the presb. of Haddington and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, in the patron. of the crown and the Earl of Hopetoun. The minister has a stipend of £288. The church was built in 1800. Here is a Free church, two parish schools, and an endowed female school. The parish was anciently called Keith-Hundeby, which, being embodied with the quondam district of Keith-Marshall, forms the present parish of Humbie. The former district was granted to Symon Fraser, and the latter to Hervey, by David I. Keith-Hundeby subsequently belonged to the monks of Kelso. Whiteburgh House is the principal mansion. The Earl of Hopetoun, Lord Polworth, Lady Buchan, Anderson of Whiteburgh, and the Christian Knowledge Society, are the principal landowners. On the Whiteburgh estate are remains of a Roman circular camp. There are ruins of an ancient chapel in the parish. The presence of coal has been observed, and iron ore occurs in many spots.

HUMBLETON, or HOMILDON, a tnshp. in the par. of Doddington, E. div. of the ward of Glendale, co. Northumberland, 1 mile N.W. of Wooler. On a hill near Humbleton-Bourn, in this township, are traces of Saxon earthworks, where stone coffins, &c., have been discovered of late years; and in a field called Red Riggs is a stone pillar in commemoration of the defeat of Archibald Earl Douglas (who through losing so many battles was called the "Tine man") by Hotspur in 1402.

HUMBLETON, a par. in the middle div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 9½ miles N.E. of Hull, and 5 N.E. of Hedon, its railway station and nearest money-order office. It contains the tnshps. of Humbleton, Danthorpe, Elstronwick, Flinton, and Fitling. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The living is a vic.* with that of Elstronwick annexed, in the dioc. of York, val. £230, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure with a square embattled tower. It contains an oil-painting of the transfiguration, after Raphael, presented by Miss Dixon as an altar-piece. The charities consist of about £70 per annum, the produce of a farm bequeathed by Francis Heron in 1718. Out of this estate a free school has been erected for both sexes, and a part has been recently exchanged for other lands. Lord Hotham is lord of the manor.

HUMBLEYARD, a hund. in co. Norfolk, contains five pars. of Bracon-Ash, East Carlton, Colney, Cringleford, Dunston, Flordon, Hethel, Hethersett, Intwood-with-Keswick, Ketteringham, Marlingshall, Melton Magna and Parva, Mulbarton, Newton Flotman, with Swainsthorpe, Swardeston, and Wreningham, comprising an area of 22,620 acres, the greater part of which is fertile and well timbered. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Norfolk, and dioc. of Norwich.

HUMBY, GREAT, a hmlt. in the par. of Somerby, wap. of Winnibriggs, co. Lincoln, 3 miles S.E. of Grantham, and 6 S.W. of Falkingham. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1795.

HUMBY, LITTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Ropsley, co. Lincoln, near Great Humby.

HUME, or HOME, a par. now united to Stichel, in the district of Kelso, cos. Berwick and Roxburgh, Scotland, 2½ miles S. of Greenlaw. Hume was anciently a parish of large extent, and included parts of Gordon and Westruther under its original proprietors, the earls of Dunbar. In the 12th century it came into the possession of the monks of Kelso, when its limits were reduced. Here stands an old castle restored by Lord Marchmont. It was surrendered to Albany in 1515, to Somerset in 1547, and to Cromwell in 1650. The Lurgie Craigs, near Mill Loch, are composed of columnar basalt. At Hume Pallat Hill are remains of a fort.

HUMSHAUGH, a chplry. in the par. of Simonburn, N.W. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 5 miles N.W. of Hexham, its post town. It is bounded on the E. by the river Tyne, and on the S. by the old Roman wall. It formerly belonged to the Swinburnes of Houghton. Limestone is quarried, chiefly for agricultural purposes. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £198. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £120, in the patron. of the governors of Greenwich Hospital. The church is of modern construction, built of stone, and has one bell. There are two schools for either sex. Chester House is the principal residence.

HUNA, or HOUNA, a post-office vil. in the par. of Canisbay, co. Caithness, 2 miles W. of John O'Groat's House. A ferry is established here to the Orkneys.

HUNCOAT, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, Higher div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 4 miles S.W. of Burnley, 1½ mile from Accrington, and 7 miles from Blackburn. It is a station on the East Lancashire railway. The village is situated on gently rising ground, on the Leeds and Liverpool canal, and consists of a few scattered farmhouses and cottages. The Accrington reservoir is situated on the borders of this township. The Wesleyans and Independents have each a chapel.

HUNCOTE, a hmlt. in the par. of Narborough, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 1½ mile from Narborough, its post town, 5 miles W. of Countesthorpe railway station, and 6½ S.W. of Leicester. It is situated near the Roman Fosse Way and the river Soar. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture and in frame-work knitting, and there is a large corn-mill on the brook. Here was formerly a chapel-of-ease. The Independents have a place of worship. The Earl of Stamford and Warrington is lord of the manor.

HUNDA, one of the South Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland. It lies in Scalpa Floe, 10 miles S. of Kirkwall, and belongs to the par. of South Rondalshay.

HUNDERSFIELD, a chplry. in the par. of Rochdale, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.E. of Rochdale. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £300, in the patron. of the vicar.

HUNDERTHWAITE, a tnshp. and vil. in the par. of Romald Kirk, wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 1 mile from Romald Kirk, and 6 miles N.W. of Barnard Castle. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated on the river Tees. The tnshp. contains the hmlts. of Hurry, Newhouse, Thorngate Hill, and Woden Croft. The land is partly moor. John Bowes, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HUNDLEBY, a par. in the E. div. of the hund. of Bolingbroke, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 1 mile W. of Spilsby, its post town, and 4½ miles N.W. of Firsby railway station. It is a small village, and a great portion of the inhabitants are employed in agriculture. Spilsby union poorhouse is situated in this parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £118. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing three bells. The church was rebuilt by subscription in the years 1854 and 1855, at an expense of £1,300. The interior contains some stained windows, and a stone pulpit. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. Lord Willoughby d'Eresby is lord of the manor.

HUNDON, a par. in the hund. of Risbridge, co. Suffolk, 3 miles N.W. of Clare, and 7 from Haverhill, its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Stour. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £201, in the patron. of Jesus College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing six bells. The interior of the church has lately been restored. In an adjoining building is a pyramidal monument to the memory of Arethusa, wife of James Vernon, Esq., and daughter of Lord Clifford. The register commences in 1642. The charities produce about £200 per annum, arising from 113 acres of land, left for the repairs of the church and the benefit of the poor. A variety of Saxon coins of Athelstane, &c., were found whilst digging a grave in 1687. Lady Harland is the proprietess of the manor. A fair for pedlery is held on Holy Thursday.

HUNDON, a hmlt. in the par. of Caistor, co. Lincoln, 2 miles from Caistor.

HUNDREDSBARROW, a hund. in co. Dorset, contains the pars. of Aff Puddle and Turners Puddle, comprising an area of 5,710 acres.

HUNDRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Chesham, co. Bucks, 2 miles W. of Chesham.

HUNGATE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Sawley, and par. of Ripon, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Ripon.

HUNGERFORD, a tnshp. in the pars. of Eaton and Munslow, co. Salop, 6 miles S.E. of Church Stretton. It is situated on the river Corve.

HUNGERFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Cleeve, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Watchet.

HUNGERFORD, a par. and market town, partly in the hund. of Kintbury Eagle, co. Berks, and partly in the hund. of Kinwardstone, co. Wilts, 24 miles W.S.W. of Reading, and 64 from London by road, or 61½ by the Hungerford, Newbury, and Reading branch of the Great Western railway. In ancient times it was called Ingleford-Charnham Street, from the old British way from Silchester to Bath, which passes through the parish. It is situated on the river Kennet and the Kennet and Avon canal, and contains besides the town of Hungerford the tythgs. of Charnham Street, Sanden Fee, and Edington, the last identified by Prof. Beke as the Saxon Ethandune, where Alfred, disguised as a harper, spied the Danish forces, and defeated them in 878. Hungerford was visited by Charles I. in 1644, and by William III. in December, 1688, who met the agents of James II. at the old inn. The town of Hungerford consists chiefly of one long street, intersected by the river Kennet, which here divides the counties of Berks and Wilts, and is crossed by a bridge of five arches. It contains a townhall, where John of Gaunt's horn is kept, market house, two branch banks, savings-bank, and union poorhouse, recently built. Its population in 1851 was 2,255, which had declined in 1861 to 2,031. At the E. end of the town is Hungerford Park, formerly the residence of the barons Hungerford. It is a mansion in the Italian style, occupying the site of the old house built by Queen Elizabeth and given to the Earl of Essex. There are no particular manufactures, the trade being chiefly in corn and agricultural produce. The inhabitants are by charter exempt from toll in the different fairs and markets throughout the kingdom, and enjoy many valuable privileges by grant from John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, who gave them the right of common over a considerable tract of down and marsh land, with the valuable fishery in the river Kennet, which is highly celebrated for the fineness of its trout. The fishery extends for some miles, and is strictly preserved by the town authorities, who grant tickets to visitors resorting to the town for the exciting sport of angling, at very reasonable charges. Though not incorporated, the town is governed by a constable, who is elected annually, and by 12 burgesses who have borne the office of constable. The manor of Hungerford, with the appurtenances of common and fishery, is held direct of the crown by the inhabitants, who as feoffees hold a very ancient court at Hocktide. The court is summoned by blowing a brass copy of the old horn presented by John of Gaunt. The copy bears this inscription:—"John a Gaun did give and grant the riall of fishing to Hungerford toune from Eldren Stub to Irish Stil; excepting som several mil pound. Jehosphat Lucas was constable, 1634." It is the head of a Poor-law Union, embracing 10 parishes in Berks and one in Hunts, also the seat of a superintendent registry, and new County Court. The land surrounding the town is celebrated for its production of barley, and the water meadows are highly productive. The tithes have just been commuted. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £522, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, has a monument to Robert, founder of the Hungerford family, of whom was Sir Thomas, first Speaker of the Commons, and Walter Hungerford, Lord Treasurer. There are Independent and Wesleyan chapels, also National schools. The parochial charities produce about £74 per annum. In the vicinity of the town are many seats. Market day is on Wednesday. Fairs are held on the last Wednesday in April, and on the 10th August for cattle, also three sheep fairs during the year, and a statute fair on the Wednesdays before and after Old Michaelmas day for hiring servants. The races take place in June.

HUNGERFORD-NEWTOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Hungerford, hund. of Kintbury Eagle, co. Berks, 3 miles N.E. of Hungerford.

HUNGERTON, a par. in the hunds. of East Goscote and Gartree, co. Leicester, 7 miles N.E. of Leicester, its post town, and 10 S.W. of Melton Mowbray. The par., which is inconsiderable, contains the ext. par. place of Baggrave, with the hmlts. of Ingarsby and Quenby. The living is a vic.* with that of Twyford and the perpet. cur. of Thorpe Satchville annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £320. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure with a lofty tower containing three bells. An organ was added in 1851, when the church was thoroughly restored. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Shuckburgh Ashby, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HUNGERTON, a par. in the wap. of Winnibriggs, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 4 miles S.W. of Grantham. It is in conjunction with the par. of Wyville. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Wyville, in the dioc. of Lincoln. There is no church, but the inhabitants attend that at Harlaxton.

HUNGRY-BENTLEY, a lib. in the par. of Longford, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 4 miles S. of Ashborne.

HUNIE, one of the Shetland Islands, coast of Scotland. It is situated on the E. side of Unst, and is full of rabbit warrens.

HUNMANBY, a par. and market town in the wap. of Dickering, East Riding co. York, 12 miles from Scarborough, 10¾ N. of Bridlington, and 2¾ W. of Filey. It is a station on the North-Eastern railway, which is connected with the Scarborough and Hull line. The par. is situated near the Wolds, on the road between Hull and Scarborough. Here is a brewery, and extensive brick and tile works. The town is paved and lighted with gas and has a literary institution. There is a library founded for the use of the neighbouring clergy by Dr. Bray, and a parochial library, also societies belonging to the Shepherds and Druids. The manor court is held at the White Swan inn, and the magistrates hold their meetings every Saturday at Bridlington. The soil is clay and chalk, and the land chiefly arable, the remainder being pasture and woodland. The living is a vic.* with the perpet. cur. of Fordon annexed, in the dioc. of York, val. £958. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing a clock and three bells. The interior of the church was repaired at great expense in 1845, and shortly after an organ was added in the gallery. In connection with the nave and aisle are five lofty arches, on which are the armorial bearings of the ancient lords of Hunmanby. The nave contains a tablet to the Darley family, Muston; also several stained windows, and monuments to the Osbaldeston family, besides several others. The register dates from 1584. The population, according to the census of 1861, was 1837. The parochial charities produce about £35 per annum. There are almshouses for four poor widows, also a parochial school, supported by Admiral Mitford, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Hunmanby Hall is brick building, and has a Gothic entrance arch, close to the railway station. It is built similarly to a monastic ruin, from the stone of Filey Brigg, and was erected by the Osbaldeston family in 1829. A horticultural show is held annually in the park. Monday is market day. Fairs are held on the 6th May and 29th October.

HUNNINGHAM, a par. in the Southam div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 5 miles N.E. of Leamington, its post town, 5¼ N.W. of Southam, and 3 N.W. of Marton, its nearest railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Leam. The par. contains the hmlt. of Hyde's Pastures. The soil is clay, with subsoil gravel. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £68. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, has a wooden tower containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. Lord Leigh is lord of the manor.

HUNNINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Halesowen, hund. of Brimstree, co. Worcester, formerly in Salop, 3 miles S. of Halesowen, and 6 N. of Bromsgrove. Lord Lyttelton is lord of the manor.

HUNSCOTE, a hmlt. in the par. of Charlcote, co. Warwick, 3 miles E. of Stratford-on-Avon.

HUNSDON, a par. in the hund. of Braughin, co. Herts, 5 miles S.E. of Ware, and 7 E. of Hertford. The Roydon station, on the Cambridge line, and St. Margaret's station, on the Hertford line, are both about 3 miles from the village. The parish is situated near the river Stort, in a highly cultivated part of the county. It once belonged to the Lady Margaret, mother of Henry VII., and was made an honour by Henry VIII., who built Hunsdon House, an old moated seat occupying the site of the Oldhalls Castle, where Edward VI. and Queen Mary were brought up. It was subsequently given by Elizabeth to her cousin Cary, Lord Hunsdon. The village is small, and there is a considerable tract of common. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £263. The church, dedication unknown, has a square tower surmounted by a spire, and contains five bells. In the interior of the church are several monuments, a curious mural brass figure of Gray, the huntsman, and another brass bearing date 1495. The parochial charities produce about £33 per annum. There is a National school.

HUNSHELF, a tnshp. in the par. of Penistone, wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S. of Penistone. This township, which is hilly, is situated near the river Dun and the Sheffield railway. It contains the hmlts. of Green-Moor and Snowden. Here are stone quarries, and extensive steel-wire works at Stock's Bridge. Red and black fire-clay are found in this township. The Methodists New Connexion have a place of worship at Green-Moor. Lord Wharncliffe is lord of the manor.

HUNSINGORE, a par. in the Upper div. of the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 4½ miles N.E. of Wetherby, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Nidd. The par. contains the tnshps. of Cattal-Magna and Walshford-with-Great-Elston. The ancient mansion of the Goodricke family, to whom the manor belonged, was destroyed during the parliamentary war in the reign of Charles I. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £400. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is partly covered with lead, and is a stone structure with a square tower containing a clock and two bells. There is a National school, supported by Joseph Dent, Esq., and his tenants.

HUNSLET, or HUNFLEET, a chplry. in the par. of St. Peter, Leeds, West Riding co. York, 1 mile S. of Leeds, within which borough it is situated. It is a station on the Midland railway. The chapelry, which is very extensive, is situated on the river Aire and Liverpool canal. Here are Wilson's locomotive factory, employing above a thousand persons, also chemical works, glass works, potteries, flax and woollen mills. The village, which forms a populous suburb of Leeds, during the present century rapidly increased in importance and manufacturing importance. Hunslet Lane, to the E. of the village, now forms a continuous range of buildings. The substratum abounds with coal of good quality. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure with a square tower containing one bell. There is also a church in the Hunslet-road, dedicated to St. Jude, the living of which is a vic.,* val. £130, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. There are a literary institution, subscription library, and several schools; also a National school. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans and New Connexion Methodists. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. Hunslet was formerly the seat of the Gascoignes, and belonged at the time of the Domesday Survey to the Lacys.

HUNSLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Rowley, wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of South Cove, and 6 S.W. of Beverley. A beacon formerly stood in this place, from which circumstance a division of the wapentake of Harthill derives its name. The soil is light and chalky.

HUNSLEY-BEACON, a div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, contains the pars. of Bishop Burton, Cherry Burton, North and South Cove, Cottingham, South Dalton, Etton, Hotham, Leckonfield, New Village, Newbald, Rowley, Sancton, Sculcoates, Skidby, with parts of Brantingham, Walkington, and the county part of Hull, comprising together about 64,740 acres.

HUNSONBY-WITH-WINSKEL, a tnshp. in the par. of Addingham, ward of Leath, co. Cumberland, 5 miles N.E. of Penrith, on the river Eden. There is a chapel for Wesleyans. The estate bequeathed by Mr. Hutchinson in 1726, for the purposes of education, produces £50 per annum.

HUNSTANTON, a par. in the hund. of Smithdon, co. Norfolk, 17 miles N.E. of Lynn, with which it is connected by a branch line of railway, 10 W. of Burnham Market, and 5½ from Snettisham. It is a watering-place and coastguard station situated on the Wash, at the north-western extremity of the county. The village lies a little to the E. of St. Edmund's Point, where that king is said to have landed when he came from Germany to be crowned king of East Anglia. On the cliff, which is 60 feet high, composed of chalk upon green sandstone and Portland oolite, and near the ruins of a chapel, is Hunstanton fixed light, 115 feet high, erected originally in 1665, and which can be seen 13 miles distant. The present lighthouse was finished in 1840. From this point is an extensive view of the North Sea and the Lincolnshire coast, as far as the floating light and Boston church. At the recess of the tide the sands may be traversed for a distance of 1½ mile, to a place called the Oyster Sea, where oysters, turbot, and other kinds of fish are in abundance. The further encroachments of the sea on the shore is prevented by extensive sandheaps called "meales," abounding with rabbits. Sea-bathing may be indulged in with safety, the sands extending many miles. Near Great Ringstead are situated the Downs. The soil is very fertile, and the land chiefly arable, except about 200 acres of plantation, common, warren, seabeach, and chalk-pits. The living is a vic.* consolidated with the rect.* of Ringstead Parva, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £280. Ringstead Parva is also called Barrett Parva, from the manor having, as late as Henry VII., belonged to a family named Barrett, from whom it passed to Le Strange. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, has a tower containing one bell. The interior contains an ancient late Norman font, about 1150, and an E. window. There are two brasses, one in the nave to Edmund Greve and Agnes his wife, without any date, but the dress of the figures is that of the reign of Richard III. The other is an altar-tomb to Sir Roger le Strange, "Esquire of the body" to Henry VII., and who built the gatehouse of the Hall, united in 1628 by Sir Hamon le Strange to the rest of the building. Sir Roger died in 1509. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a boys' school endowed by Stocking's charity, and a girls' school supported by Mr. Le Strange. Hunstanton Hall, the seat of the Le Stranges, who have possessed the manor from a remote period, is situated in a finely-wooded park, in which are the gate and ruins of the old hall. A part of the present mansion was unfortunately destroyed by fire in 1853.

HUNSTERSON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wybunbury, hund. of Nantwich, co. Chester, 5½ miles S.E. of Nantwich. This township was formerly called Huntsterston. The village is small and wholly agricultural. There is a chapel-of-ease dedicated to St. John, which was erected in 1837 by the late Sir John Broughton, to whom there is a monument. The chapel is situated on the W. side of Doddington Park. The village school is endowed with an annuity of £10 from Delves's charity. Sir Henry Delves Broughton, Bart., is lord of the manor.

HUNSTON, a par. in the hund. of Box, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 3 miles S.E. of Chichester, its post town and railway station. The parish, which is small, is situated near the Arundel and Portsmouth canal, and formerly belonged to the priory of Boxgrove. A small stream rises in this parish, and flows into Pagham harbour. The church is endowed with the rectorial tithes. The living is a vic. with that of North Mundham annexed, in the dioc. of Chichester, joint val. £617. The church, dedicated to St. Leodegar, is an ancient structure with a tower containing two bells. The register dates from 1678.

HUNSTON, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourn, co. Suffolk, 8 miles N.W. of Stowmarket, its post town, 9 N.E. of Bury St. Edmund's, and 3½ miles N. of Elmswell railway station. The village is small and entirely agricultural. It is in conjunction with the village of Langham. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £55. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is situated in the grounds of Hunston Hall. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. John Henry Heigham, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HUNSTONWORTH, a chplry. in the W. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 5 miles from Edmundbyers, 7 N.W. of Stanhope, and 12 from the Hexham station on the Newcastle and Carlisle railway. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated near the head of the river Derwent. It formerly belonged to Robert Corbert, who transferred it to Kepier Hospital, and after passing through several families of distinction, it finally became the property of Robert Capper, Esq. Here are large smelting-mills, and a huge water-wheel above 40 feet in circumference, with rods nearly a mile in length. The Derwent lead-mines are worked to a considerable extent, employing a large number of persons. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £130. The church, dedicated to St. James, was rebuilt about 1781, and has one bell. The register dates from 1724. There is an endowed parochial school for both sexes, also a library in the vestry for the use of the parishioners. In 1850 a room was erected in the vicinity of the mines as a place of worship for the Primitive Methodists and Wesleyans every alternate Sunday.

HUNSWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Birstall, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 1½ mile from Cleckheaton and Low-Moor station, and 3½ miles S.E. of Bradford. Here are extensive collieries, also several woollen mills. There is a Wesleyan chapel at East Bierley, which is in this township. In the adjoining village of Birkenshaw is St. Paul's Church. The trustees of the Savile estates are lords of the manor.

HUNTERFIELD, a vil. in the par. of Cockpen, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Edinburgh.

HUNTHILL, a vil. in the par. of Blantyre, co. Lanark, Scotland, 3 miles W.N.W. of Hamilton.

HUNTINGDON, a market town, municipal and parliamentary borough and county town, in the hund. of Leightonstone, co. Huntingdon, 59 miles N. of London by the Great Northern railway; it is also a station on the St. Ives, Huntingdon, and Cambridge branch of the Great Eastern railway. It stands on a gently rising ground, near the line of the ancient Ermine Street, not far from the site of the Roman station Durollipons. The Ouse, which separates it from the village of Godmanchester, is crossed by an ancient stone bridge of six arches, forming part of a causeway constructed above the meadows, which are frequently inundated by the river. It is noticed in the Saxon times as a town of considerable importance, and had a castle, erected by Edward the Elder in 917, of which some traces yet remain. There were also, before the Reformation, several religious houses, and two hospitals, one of which now exists. In the civil war of Charles I., the Royalists took and plundered the town, which then sustained considerable damage.—The modern town consists principally of one street, extending about a mile along the Great North road, with several smaller streets or lanes branching off to the right and left; these last consist of inferior houses, but are well paved, and lighted with gas. During the last twenty years, great improvements have been made in the drainage and sewage of the town, which were formerly in a very unsatisfactory state. The formation of the Great Northern railway has also tended to the advancement of the town, and many good and substantial houses have recently been built, the number of inhabited houses in 1851 being 1,244, and in 1861, 1,285.—The population, notwithstanding, has somewhat declined in the decennial period since 1851, when the number of inhabitants within the municipal borough was returned at 3,882, and within the parliamentary, which includes the parish of Godmanchester, at 6,219; these numbers had declined in 1861 to 3,846 for the municipal, and 6,254 for the parliamentary; showing that house accommodation had increased in an inverse ratio to the population, and with it the comforts and social condition of the inhabitants. The town is governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 common councilmen, who are chosen by the freemen. Previous to the passing of the Municipal Act, the residents could obtain their freedom by purchase, but now none can obtain it except the sons born of freemen. Each freeman, or freeman's widow, has the privilege of pasturing three cows and two horses on the common lands which belong to the town. For parliamentary purposes the borough includes the village of Godmanchester, and returns two members to parliament.—The trade of the town is considerable, principally in wool and corn, small vessels being able to ascend the Ouse. There are also two extensive breweries, an iron foundry, steam oil-mill, oil-cake manufactory, and works for the manufacture of patent bricks and tiles.—The market-place is tolerably spacious, and the townhall has two good court-rooms where civil and criminal causes are tried at the assizes; and above these a large assembly-room. There are a county gaol and house of correction, and a borough gaol; the former is situated about half a mile N. of the town, in the parish of Great Stukeley. Between this building and the town on the same line of road is situated the union poorhouse, with accommodation for the paupers of 33 parishes and townships included within the Huntingdon Poor-law Union. The town also contains a building belonging to the Literary and Scientific Institution, erected in 1842, in the High-street; it comprises an entrance hall, an octagon room 30 feet in diameter, used as a library and museum, and a room, 68 feet long by 27 wide, appropriated to lectures and public meetings, besides committee rooms, and domestic offices. This institution has a collection of philosophical apparatus, and a small collection of local curiosities and geological specimens. There are besides a savings-bank, county hospital, and a county library, but the old theatre has been taken down. Within the extra parochial liberty of Hinchingbrook, which is partly in the jurisdiction of the town, stands the mansion of the Earl of Sandwich, once the seat of Sir Oliver Cromwell, who entertained here James I., and his court, on his first progress from Scotland.—The borough of Huntingdon comprises the parishes of All Saints, St. Benedict, St. John the Baptist, and St. Mary. The churches of only two of these, All Saints and St. Mary, are now standing, though the town is said at one time to have had 15 churches. The living of All Saints is a rect. united with that of St. John the Baptist, in the archdeac. of Huntingdon and dioc. of Ely, val. £200. The living of St. Mary is also a rect.* with that of St. Benedict, val. £162. The church of All Saints, rebuilt in 1620, was much disfigured, but has lately been restored. The church of St. Mary is an ancient structure, with a perpendicular tower, and good entrance-porch on the W. side. The vicarage of St. Mary's was erected in 1851. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, have chapels, and the Society of Friends a meeting-house. Here are a free grammar school, on the site of the old hospital of St. John, at which Oliver Cromwell received part of his education, and a green-coat school, both richly endowed; also a county school, National school, self-supporting British school, girls' school of industry, and an infant school. The protector, Oliver Cromwell, was born here on the 25th of April, 1599. The family of Hastings take from this place the title of earl; and the Montagues, earls of Sandwich, who are lords of the manor, that of Viscount Hinchinbroke. Saturday is market day, chiefly for the sale of corn and provisions. Fairs are held on the Saturday before Michaelmas Day, the third Saturday in November, Tuesday before Easter, and the second Tuesday in May. They usually take place on Mill common, adjoining the town.

HUNTINGDONSHIRE, or HUNTS, an inland co. of England, situated in the E. lowlands, between 52° 8′ and 52° 36′ N. lat., and 0° 3′ E. and 0° 30′ W. long. In shape it somewhat resembles a lozenge, being 30 miles in length from N. to S., and about 23 miles in its shorter diagonal from E. to W. In size it is one of the smallest of the English counties, only Middlesex and Rutland being less, and one only, Rutland, having fewer inhabitants. According to the census of 1861 it comprised an area of 229,544 acres, with 13,704 inhabited houses, and a population of 64,250, having increased only 67 in the decennial period since 1851. At the commencement of this century its population was 37,568. It is bordered on the N. and N.W. by Northamptonshire, on the S.W. by Bedfordshire, and on all other sides by Cambridge. In ancient times it formed part of the district bordering on the Wash inhabited by the two Belgic tribes, Iceni and Catyeuchlani, and when subjugated by the Romans was included in the province of Flavia Cæsariensis. The Roman roads Ermine Street and Via Devana traversed the county, the former nearly in the line of the present N. road through Royston, the latter in a direct line from Leicester to Cambridge. At the intersection of these roads was the station Durolopons, occupying nearly the same site as the present Godmanchester, and on the Ermine Street another station called Durobrivæ, now the village of Water Newton, on the Nene; there was also a large camp at Chesterton. After the departure of the Romans the country bordering on the Wash was occupied by the East Angles, and subsequently annexed to Mercia. It then received the name of Huntandunescyre, and was constituted an earldom or county, which in the time of Edward the Confessor was held by Siward, whose son Waltheof married Judith, niece of William the Conqueror. Although so nearly related to the sovereign, his sympathy for the sufferings of his Saxon countrymen under the tyranny of the feudal rule roused him to arms, and he was beheaded by the Conqueror's order. The estates, however, continued in his family, and passed upon the marriage of his daughter Maud with Prince David to the royal family of Scotland, who continued to hold them as a fief of the English crown, with the title of earls of Huntingdon, until forfeited during the contest of the Bruce and Baliol families for the crown of Scotland. In these early times the county of Huntingdon appears to have been densely wooded, but a considerable portion was disafforested in the reign of Henry II., and the remainder in that of Edward I. It is now remarkably destitute of timber, there being no trees in the hedgerows, and only a small proportion of woods and coppice. In the fen lands the willow flourishes amazingly, and is valuable for withes. In the uplands corn is grown, and the fens after drainage yield abundant crops both of cereals and of grass. A large extent of land is laid down as meadow for the fattening of cattle to be sent to the great towns. The once celebrated Whittlesea mere has recently been entirely drained, as have also Ramsey and Ugg meres. With the drainage of the fens and the clearing of the forests a great amelioration has been effected in the climate, which was formerly damp and foggy, but is now healthy in all parts except the low lying districts, which are intersected by numerous cuts, drains, and sluices, many of which are navigable for boats, thus facilitating the transport of agricultural produce to Lynn, the chief shipping port for the Fen district.—The principal rivers are the Ouse and Nene. The former enters the county on the S., and passing St. Neot's, Huntingdon, and St. Ives, falls into the Wash at Lynn. It is navigable for large boats throughout the whole length of its course in this county, and as high up as Bedford, and receives the tribute of several streams, which join it near St. Neot's and Huntingdon. The Nene or Nen is also navigable for large boats. It winds along the N. border of the shire, till a little below Peterborough, where it enters Cambridgeshire, and falls into the Wash near Wisbeach. The two systems of the Ouse and Nene are connected by various navigable cuts, as the Forty-foot drain, or Vermuyden's drain, constructed in the reign of Elizabeth, and the new canal between Wisbeach and Outwell, completed in 1792. Nothwithstanding the numerous streams and meres, the inhabitants in many parts of the county are badly off for spring water, and draw their supply from ponds.—The general surface of the county is level, particularly in the N. and N.E., where it forms part of the great fen district of the lower Ouse, Nene, and Welland. The only hills are in the S. and W., the former being a continuation of the Bedfordshire range, which enters the county near Potton, and runs in a northerly direction to near Huntingdon. The latter are an extension of the Cambridgeshire hills, running in a north-westerly direction to Wansford in the valley of the Nene. The soil is of various qualities, according to the formation to which it belongs. In the N. it is chiefly stone brash or forest marble, and comparatively barren; in the S. and S.E., where the country is hilly, it is mainly ironsand and greensand; in the middle of the county the Oxford clay, forming an intermediate layer between the middle and lower assemblage of oolitic rocks, is the prevailing stratum; and in the N.E. the fen lands, which have recently been drained and brought into cultivation, are chiefly vegetable alluvial soil, producing abundant crops, and forming some of the richest meadows in England. In the uplands the system of farming is still in a backward state, but in the lowlands scientific husbandry is well understood. The farms are mostly of considerable size, but are held by yearly tenure. The principal crops are, wheat, oats, beans, barley, hemp, hay, and clover, besides rape and mustard, which last are extensively cultivated, and turnips on some of the drier soils. Water-fowl were numerous on all the meres and rivers, and eels abound. Although Stilton and other places in this county are celebrated for their excellent butter and cheese, dairy farming is not much followed. The cattle, formerly of mixed and generally inferior breeds, have been much improved by the introduction of shorthorns of the Yorkshire and Durham breeds. The sheep are mostly of the Leicester and Lincolnshire breeds, and the hogs of Berkshire or Leicester, with various crosses. Pigeon-houses are extremely numerous. The people are almost wholly engaged in agriculture, and there are no manufactures. The only handicrafts carried on are—iron founding, brick and tile making, paper and parchment mills, brewing, malting, currying, tanning, printing, comb and lace making, lime burning, rush plaiting, and maddermaking. Peat is found in many parts, and is dug out as fuel.—The county is intersected from S. to N. by the Great Northern railway, which passes by St. Neot's and Huntingdon, and is intersected by a branch of the Great Eastern called the Cambridge, St. Ives, and Huntingdon; it is also skirted on the N. by the Northampton, Peterborough, and Ely line. The coast roads are numerous and good, including the high N. road to Edinburgh, which passes through Huntingdon, Stilton, and Norman Cross, and is joined by the London road through Barnet and Baldock at Alconbury Hill. A road for Lincolnshire branches off from the high N. road at Norman Cross, and another for Leicester and Nottingham near Baldock. There are roads from Huntingdon to St. Neot's, Cambridge, Ramsey, and other places. Huntingdonshire returns two members to parliament for the county, and two for the borough of Huntingdon. It is included in the Norfolk circuit, and is an archdeac. within the dioc. of Ely, in the prov. of Canterbury. For civil purposes the county is divided into four hundreds, Norman Cross in the N., Hurstingstone in the E., Leightonstone in the W., and Toseland in the S. These are further divided into 106 parishes. The county town is Huntingdon, which enjoys separate jurisdiction, and together with Godmanchester returns two members to parliament. There are likewise St. Neot's, Ramsey, St. Ives, and Kimbolton, which are market towns, and the quondam market town of Yaxley. County courts are held at Huntingdon and St. Neot's. The county being of so small extent, it is joined with Cambridgeshire in the shrievalty, the two having only one sheriff. The county gaol is at Huntingdon, where the assizes and quarter sessions are held. The principal ancient structures were Kimbolton and Huntingdon castles, and the great abbeys of Ramsey and Sawtry St. Judith, besides which there were a nunnery near Hinchinbrook House, and a castle at Conington, on the border of the fens, but of these last no remains now exist. The Roman antiquities which have been dug up at Godmanchester, Water Newton, and Holywell, near St. Ives, include urns, pottery, funereal ornaments, encaustic tiles, sculptured stones, and many coins.

HUNTINGFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 4½ miles S.W. of Halesworth, its railway station and post town, and 24 N. of Ipswich. The village is small, and the inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is arable, and the soil heavy clay. At Huntingfield Hall in this parish Queen Elizabeth was entertained in great state by Lord Hunsden, and the oak from which the queen is said to have shot a buck with her own hand is still standing. The living is a rect.* with that of Cookley annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £1,054. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a tower. The parochial charities produce about £50 per annum, chiefly the produce of the town lands; £40 of this sum is applied to the repairs of the church, and the remainder to school purposes. The register dates from 1539. Lord Huntingfield is lord of the manor, and takes from this place the title of baron.

HUNTINGFORD, a tythg. in the par. of Wotton-under-Edge, co. Gloucester, 2 miles from Wotton.

HUNTINGTON, a hund. in co. Hereford, contains the pars. of Brilley, Clifford, Eardisley, Huntington, Kington, Whitney, Willersley, and Winforton, comprising an area of 28,850 acres.

HUNTINGTON, a par. in the above hund., co. Hereford, 4 miles S.W. of Kington, its post town, 16 W. of Leominster, and 23 from Hereford. The parish, which is small, is situated on the river Arrow, and has the ruins of an old castle of the Bohuns, once a place of great strength. The pastures are rich, and the dairy farms well managed. The living is a rect., with the vic.* of Kington annexed, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £520, in the patron. of the Bishop of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is an ancient stone edifice, with a wooden turret containing two bells. The charities produce about £118 per annum, which goes to Goff's free school. There is a place of worship for the Independents. Two large fairs are held on 18th July and 13th November for cattle, &c.

HUNTINGTON, a par. in the wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of York, its post town, by road, or 3½ by the York and Market Weighton railway, on which it is a station. It is situated on both banks of the navigable river Foss. The par. comprises the vils. of East and West Huntington, with the tnshps. of Earswick and Towthorpe. The inhabitants are employed in agriculture. The land is principally arable, and the soil clay. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £127, in the patron. of the subchanters and vicars-choral of York Cathedral. The church is an ancient stone structure, dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. There is a National school, also a small place of worship for the Wesleyans. Earl de Grey is lord of the manor.

HUNTINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Oswald, lower div. of the hund. of Broxton, co. Chester, 3 miles S.E. of Chester. It is bounded on the W. by the river Dee, which is here crossed by a ferry to Eccleston.

HUNTINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Cannock, E. div. of the hund. of Cuttlestone, co. Stafford, 3 miles E. of Penkridge. The village consists of a few farmhouses.

HUNTINGTON, a chplry. in the par. of Holmer, hund. of Grimsworth, co. Hereford, 2 miles N.W. of Hereford, its post town, and 1 mile S.W. of Holmer. It is bounded on the S. by the road leading from Hereford to Hay and Kington. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £85 15*s., and £75 are paid to the Rector of Holmer. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Holmer, in the dioc. of Hereford. The church is a modern stone structure dedicated to St. Bartholomew. The Bishop of Hereford is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

HUNTINGTOWER, a castle in co. Perth, Scotland, near Tibbermuir. It was here that Earl Gowrie confined James VI. in 1600, at the raid of Ruthven, but it now belongs to the Duke of Atholl, and is used for calico printing. Earl Dysart takes from it the title of baron.

HUNTISHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Goodrich, lower div. of the hund. of Wormelow, co. Hereford, 1½ mile from Goodrich, and 5 miles S. W. of Ross. It is situated on the river Wye.

HUNTLEY, a par. in the Duchy of Lancaster, co. Gloucester, 6 miles N.E. of Newnham, 4 S. of Newent, and 7 N.W. of Gloucester, its post town. It is a small village, situated on the high road from Gloucester to Ross. The country is wooded and commands views of the Cotswold, Malvern, and Bredon hills, with the mountains of South Wales, the Severn, and the Bristol Channel in the distance. About half the land is in meadow and pasture, the remainder divided between arable, wood, and waste. The soil rests chiefly on limestone, intermixed with red and blue clay and marl. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £240 11*s.* The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £300. The church is a small ancient edifice dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The parochial charities produce about £28 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, with a small endowment.

HUNTLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Cheadle, co. Stafford, 1 mile S. of Cheadle.

HUNTLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Yeovil, co. Somerset, 2 miles from Yeovil, and 22 S.E. of Bridgwater.

HUNTLY, a par., post and market town, in the district of Strathbogie, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. The par. is about 10 miles long, and 4 broad, and is bounded by the pars. of Rothiemay, Forgue, Drumblade, Gartly, Glass, and Cairney. The surface is very hilly, and lies at the juncture of the straths of the Bogie and Deveron, including the lofty hills of Clashmach. The confluence of the rivers Bogie and Deveron occurs within its limits. Large tracts of pasture occupy the hilly districts, and good arable land is found in the vicinity of the rivers. The road from Aberdeen to Inverness intersects the parish. This par. is in the presb. of Strathbogie, and synod of Moray. The minister has a stipend of £186. The church was built in 1805. There are also a Free church and an United Presbyterian church, besides Independent, Scotch Episcopal, English Episcopal, and Roman Catholic chapels. Here are parish, Free church, and infant schools, likewise a girls' industrial school. A large establishment for the education of young ladies is in the town, and some other private schools. The present par. consists of the ancient pars. of Dumbennan and Kinore, which were united in 1727. Huntly-Lodge is the mansion of the Duke of Richmond, the principal landowner, who inherits through the Gordons, to whom the parish formerly belonged. The town is situated at the confluence of the rivers Deveron and Bogie, which are both crossed by bridges. It is 16 miles N.W. of Aberdeen, and 149 from Edinburgh. It is a borough of barony, and a station on the Inverness and Aberdeen junction of the Great North of Scotland railway. Huntly is a town of modern foundation, and a populous seat of commerce of growing importance. It consists of several regular and well-edificed streets, and a commodious market place. The schoolhouses were erected by the Dowager Duchess of Gordon. Here are three banks, brewery, distillery, tannery, brick and tile works, &c. The linen manufactory is carried on to a certain extent; there is also a considerable traffic in grain and general farm and dairy produce. The town is lighted with gas, and the surrounding locality has been greatly improved. Besides the church, and several other places of worship, there are three libraries, reading-rooms, dispensary, teetotal and benevolent societies, and some other institutions. In 1829 the Deveron flooded its banks and greatly endangered the town. Huntly gives title of marquis to the Gordon family, of whose castle there are ruins near Deveron Bridge. It was demolished in 1594, after the battle of Glenlivet. Good salmon and trout are taken in the rivers. Granite abounds, limestone is obtained to a small amount, plumbago and garnets have also been found. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held fortnightly during six months of the year, and monthly during the remaining six months.

HUNTON, a par. in the hund. of Twyford, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 5 miles S.W. of Maidstone, its post town, 3 E. of the Yalding station on the North Kent railway, and 4 from the Marden station on the South-Eastern railway. The village is situated near the confluence of the rivers Beult and Teise with the Medway. It was formerly a market town under the Lenhams, from whom it passed to the Giffords, Clintons of Court Lodge, and thence to the Wyatts, &c. The land is partly in hop grounds and orchards for the supply of the London markets. The surface is diversified with hills, and the soil clayey. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £900. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £783, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a small square tower. The church has tombs of the Fanes of Burston. The register dates from 1639. The parochial charities produce about £30, with a sum for the erection of a school bequeathed by Bishop Porteus. There are spacious National schools erected at the expense of Henry Bannerman, Esq., who is lord of the manor. Hunton Court, a mansion situated in a well-timbered park, is the principal residence.

HUNTON, a chplry. in the par. of Patrick Brompton, wap. of West Hang, North Riding co. York, 5 miles from Catterick, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Leyburn. The village, which is large, is situated near the junction of two rivulets. This chplry. comprises parts of the tnshps. of Hunton and Arrathorne, the latter being partly in the par. of Patrick Brompton. The living is a perpet. cur., annexed to that of Patrick Brompton, in the dioc. of Ripon. The church is situated on rising ground at the E. end of the village. It is dedicated to St. John, and was rebuilt and endowed with £200 by Gregory Elsley, Esq., in 1794. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. T. Hutton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HUNTON, a chplry. in the par. of Crawley, hund. of Buddlesgate, co. Hants, 4 miles from Stockbridge, and 5 N.W. of Winchester, its post town. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £190. It once formed a district par., but is now united with Crawley for ecclesiastical purposes. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Crawley, in the dioc. of Winchester.

HUNTON-BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the hund. of Cashio, co. Herts, 3 miles N.W. of Watford. It is situated on the Birmingham railway and Grand Junction canal.

HUNTSHAM, a par. in the hund. of Tiverton, co. Devon, 3 miles E. of Bampton, its post town, and 6½ N.E. of Tiverton. It is a small straggling village, situated in a valley. The surface is varied, but the land chiefly of a poor clayey soil. The river Lowman, which joins the Exe at Tiverton, takes its rise in this parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £182. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £253. The church is a very ancient structure, with a square embattled tower, containing three bells. It has been recently thoroughly restored and enlarged. There is a free school for both sexes. Huntsham Court is the principal residence, the seat of A. H. D. Troyte, Esq., lord of the manor, and principal landowner.

HUNTSHAW, a par. in the hund. of Fremington, co. Devon, 3 miles N.E. of Great Torrington, its post town, and 5 N.W. of the Bideford railway station. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £190. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £182. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 14*s.* per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held. Lord Clinton is lord of the manor.

HUNTSHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Chilton-Trinity, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Bridgwater.

HUNTSLOW, a vil. in the par. of Westruther, co. Berwick, Scotland, 23 miles W. of Berwick. It is situated under the Lammermuir hills.

HUNTSPILL AND PURITON, a hund. in co. Somerset, contains the pars. of Huntspill and Puriton, comprising about 6,800 acres.

HUNTSPILL, a par. in the hund. of the same name, co. Somerset, 6 miles N. of Bridgwater, its post town, and 1½ mile from Highbridge railway station. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the mouth of the river Parret, and on the high road from Bristol to Exeter. The par. contains the vil. of Aston-Morris, as well as that of Huntspill. The latter was formerly a market town, and is now divided into two parts, distinguished as East and West. The Bristol and Exeter railway passes through the parish. There are some brick and tile-kilns. The land is principally rich pasture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £532, in the patron. of Balliol College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a tower containing a clock and five bells. The register dates from 1654. The charities produce about £320 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, endowed with £6 per annum; also a Sunday-school. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship. The rector is the lord of the manor. Fairs are held on 29th June, 10th August, and 17th December.

HUNTSTONWORTH. See HUNSTONWORTH, co. Durham.

HUNTWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Wragby, upper div. of the wap. of Osgoldcross, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Wakefield. It is a joint township with Nostal and Foulby.

HUNWICK WITH HELMINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Auckland St. Andrew, N.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 2 miles N.W. of Bishop-Auckland, by the Sunderland and Bishop-Auckland section of the North-Eastern railway, on which it is a station. It is situated near the northern bank of the river Wear. There is a National school.

HUNTWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of North Petherton, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.E. of Bridgwater. It is situated near the river Parret, on the line of the Bristol railway.

HUNWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Holt, co. Norfolk, 2 miles S.W. of Holt, its post town, and 19 from Norwich. The parish, which is small, is situated near the Glaven rivulet. The land is chiefly arable, with about 60 acres of heath and common. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £148. The living is a a rect. annexed to that of Stody, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, has a tower containing one bell. The register dates from 1661. The charities produce about £6 per annum, which goes to the girls' school. Here is also a school for both sexes. The Marquis of Lothian is lord of the manor.

HURCOTE, a hmlt. in the par. of White Lackington, co. Somerset, 1 mile E. of Ilminster.

HURCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Ilton, hund. of Abdick, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.W. of Ilminster.

HURCOTT, a tythg. in the par. of Somerton, co. Somerset, 1 mile N.E. of Somerton.

HURDCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Baverstock, co. Wilts, 4 miles W. of Wilton.

HURDLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Church Stoke, co. Montgomery, 3 miles S.E. of Montgomery.

HURDSFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 1½ mile N. of Macclesfield, its post town. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the silk manufacture, for which extensive mills have been erected, and there are dye-houses in connection with them. Stone of excellent quality is quarried, and there are several coal mines, but the latter are of small extent. The soil consists of clay and gravel. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc of Chester, val. £130, in the patron. of the trustees of Hyndman's charity. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a stone structure, with a square tower containing one bell. Here are two National schools. The Sunday-school is held in the schoolrooms adjoining the church. The Wesleyans have a chapel and a school. Hurdsfield House is the principal residence.

HURLESTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Acton, hund. of Nantwich, co. Chester, 2½ miles N.W. of Nantwich. A branch of the Chester canal passes through the township.

HURLET, a post-office vil. in the par. of Abbey, co. Renfrew, Scotland, adjoining Paisley, and 6 miles S.W. of Glasgow. It is situated on the river Lavern; and many of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries. Copperas, alum, and Epsom salts are manufactured.

HURLEY, a par. in the hund. of Beynhurst, co. Berks, 5 miles from Maidenhead, its post town, 3 from Marlow, and 4 from Henley. The village, which is situated at the ferry on the Thames, is celebrated as being a most healthy spot. The manor was given by William the Conqueror to Geoffrey de Mandeville, who founded a Benedictine cell here to Westminster Abbey. At the Dissolution it came to the Lovelaces, or lords Hurley, who, about 1600, erected Lady Place on the site of the old crypts. In 1688 the planners of the great revolution met here. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £263. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has recently been restored at great expense. It is of very ancient date, and was consecrated in 1086 by Osmund the Good. It has a stained-glass window, and a Norman screen, which separates the newly added vestry-room from the chancel. There are several ancient monuments, one of which is to the family of Lord Lovelace. There is also a district church at Knowl Hill, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £90. The parochial charities produce about £58 per annum. There is a parochial school. The crypts have been visited by William III., George III., and Paoli.

HURLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Kingsbury, co. Warwick, 4 miles S.W. of Atherstone.

HURLFORD, a post-office vil. in the par. of Riccarton, co. Ayr, Scotland, not far from Kilmarnock. It is a station on the Glasgow and Ayr railway, and is chiefly inhabited by colliers.

HURN, a tythg. in the par. of Christchurch, co. Hants, 2 miles from Christchurch.

HURRY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Hunderthwaite, in the par. of Romald-Kirk, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Barnard Castle. It is situated near the river Tees.

HURSLEY, a par. in the lower half of the hund. of Buddlesgate, co. Hants, 4 miles S.W. of Winchester, its post town. The village stands on the high road from Winchester to Romsey. This parish formed part of the ancient manor of Merdon, and belonged to the Saxon kings and bishops of Winchester, but afterwards came into the hands of Richard Cromwell. It is the head of a Poor-law Union. It is identified as the Mrantune of the Saxon chronicles, where Cynewulph, king of Wessex, was assassinated by Ceynard, brother of Sigebert, the last king of Wessex. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Otterbourne annexed, in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £440. The parish church, dedicated to All Saints, has an octagonal spire containing five bells. In the interior are several stained-glass windows and the tomb of Richard Cromwell and others of that family. There is also a district church at Ampfield, the living of which is a perpet. cur.* in the patron. of the Vicar of Hursley. The charities produce £1 per annum. Hursley Lodge, situated in a wooded park well stocked with deer, is the seat of Sir William Heathcote, Bart. It is a mansion built on the site of an older one, in which the great seal of the Commonwealth was discovered about a century ago.

HURST, a par. in the hund. of Street, lib. of Romney-Marsh, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 7 miles S.E. of Ashford. Hythe is its post town. The parish, which is small, is situated on the Royal Military canal. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £55. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, has gone to decay, and the inhabitants frequent the church at Aldington.

HURST, a parochial chplry. partly in the hunds. of Sonning and Charlton, co. Berks, and partly in the hund. of Amesbury, co. Wilts, 3 miles N.W. of Wokingham, 6 from Reading, its post town, and 3 from the Twyford station, on the Great Western railway. It contains the hmlts. of Bean Wood, Broad Hinton, Newland, Winnersh, and Whistley Hurst. The Great Western railway intersects the parish. The living is a perpet. cur. with the cur. of Twyford annexed, in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £413, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure, containing monuments to the memory of Margaret, wife of Sir Henry Savile, founder of the Savilian professorship at Oxford, and to Sir Richard Harrison, who twice raised, at his own expense, a troop of cavalry for the service of Charles I. The parochial charities produce about £450 per annum, including the endowment of Barker and Twyford's almshouses, and of Polehampton's free school. Hurst Place is an old Elizabethan seat built by the lord-treasurer Ward, and once occupied by the queen of Bohemia, daughter of James I.

HURST, a tnshp. in the par. of Woodhorn, E. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 5 miles N.E. of Morpeth. The little castle, or peel house, is still standing, and inhabited by a farmer.

HURST, a tnshp. in the par. of Dilwyn, co. Hereford, 1 mile N. of Weobly. It is joined to Newtown.

HURST, a hmlt. in the par. of Ashton-under-Lyne, co. Lancaster. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately.

HURST, a hmlt. in the par. of Martock, co. Somerset, 2 miles N.E. of Petherton. It is joined to Bower-Hinton.

HURST., a vil. in the par. of Stoneleigh, co. Warwick, 4 miles S.W. of Coventry.

HURST, a hmlt. in the par. of Marrick, North Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Reeth.

HURST, a castle on the coast of co. Hants, 4 miles S. of Lymington. It was built by Henry VIII. to command the Needles passage of the Channel, and was the place of confinement of Charles I. in December, 1648.

HURSTBOURNE-PRIORS, a par. in the upper half of the hund. of Evingar, co. Hants, 2 miles S.W. of the Whitchurch railway station, and 62 miles from London. Andover is its post town. The village is small, and a portion of the inhabitants are employed at a paper-mill. The living is a vic.* annexed to the cur. of St. Mary Bourne, in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £202, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. John, has a low tower containing a peal of bells. The parochial charities produce £2 per annum. Hurstbourne Park is the seat of the Earl of Portsmouth, who is lord of the manor.

HURSTBOURNE-TARRANT, a par. in the upper half of the hund. of Pastrow, Andover div. of co. Hants, 5½ miles N.W. of Andover, its post town, and 10½ S.W. of the Newbury railway station. The village, which is considerable, is situated in a narrow valley on the river Swift, which flows only during certain periods. The surface is hilly, but fertile. There are extensive woods and commons. It comprises the hmlts. of Ibthorp, Upton, and Corrholt. The road from Newbury to Andover crosses the parish. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,340, and the vicarial for £402. The living is a vic.* annexed to the cur. of Vernham Dean, in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £370, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure of the latter part of the 12th century, and has a square wooden tower containing five bells. It contains monuments of the Paulet family and others. The charities produce £19 per annum, a portion of which is applied to the support of the National school. The Independents have a chapel, and a school in connection with it. D. A. B. Dewar, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HURST COURTNEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Birkin, lower div. of the wap. of Barkstone Ash, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Snaith, and 6 from Birkin. It is situated on the river Aire.

HURST-GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Salehurst, hund. of Henhurst, rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, 7 miles N. of Battle. The principal residence is Iridge. There are several other small places of this name, one near Coleshill, co. Warwick, and another near Clitheroe, co. York.

HURSTINGSTONE, a hund. in co. Huntingdon, contains the pars. of Huntingdon, Bluntisham, Broughton, Bury, Colne, Hartford, Holywell-cum-Needingworth, Houghton, Old Hurst, St. Ives, Pidley-cum-Fenton, Ramsey, Great and Little Raveley, Abbot's and King's Ripton, Somersham, Great and Little Stukeley, Upwood, Warboys, Wistow, Witton, Woodhurst, and part of Hinchinbrook, comprising 74,440 acres (exclusive of the borough of Huntingdon).

HURSTLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Letton, hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 4 miles S.W. of Weobly.

HURST, OLD, a par. in the hund. of Hurstingstone, co. Huntingdon, 5 miles N.E. of Huntingdon. The greater part of the parish was formerly woodland. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to St. Ives. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, contains an old octagonal font.

HURSTPERPOINT, a par., post and market town, in the hund. of Buttinghill, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 8 miles N. of Brighton, and 11 W. of Lewes. It is situated near the Brighton and South Coast railway, and between the two great Brighton roads. The manor was once possessed by Earl Goodwin; it afterwards passed into the hands of the De Warrens, and from them to the Pierrepoints, Gorings, and Shaws. The town, which stands on a declivity, is situated one mile N. of the South Downs. It consists of one long street, comprising many good houses. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture, with 21 acres of orchard, and 280 of woodland. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £1,000. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a modern stone structure, built by Sir C. Barry. It contains an ancient font, and has tombs of the Courthopes, Campions, and Borrers. The charities produce about £49 per annum. The register dates from the latter part of the 16th century. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a place of worship, and there are National schools for both sexes. A short distance from the town there is a school called St. John's College. It is an extensive building, capable of accommodating 300 boys, and is in connection with St. Nicholas, Shoreham. Dr. Swale, the tutor of Prince Henry, eldest son of James I., was buried here. Danny Park, the old seat of the Campions, and Pakyns Manor, the ancient mansion of the Borrers, are the principal residences. Tuesday is market day, chiefly for corn.

HURST TEMPLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Birkin, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Snaith. It is situated on the river Aire. Here was a small preceptory belonging to the Knights Templars, founded in 1252 by Ralph de Hastings.

HURSTWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, higher div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, near Whalley, and 2 miles E. of Burnley.

HURTMORE, a tythg. in the par. of Godalming, co. Surrey, 2 miles from Godalming, and 4 S.W. of Guildford.

HURWORTH, a par. in the S.W. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 1 mile E. of Croftbridge, and 3 miles S.E. of Darlington, its post town. The par., which is situated on the N. side of the river Tees, contains the tnshps. of Hurworth and Neasham. The Great North road from London to Edinburgh enters the parish at Croftbridge, a little below which the North-Eastern railway crosses the Tees by a stone bridge of four oblique arches. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the linen manufacture and in agriculture. The soil is various. The village consists of a spacious well-built street, situated on the brow of a hill commanding an extensive view of the valley of Teesdale. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £574. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was repaired in 1832, at the cost of £1,800. It has a tower containing a clock and three bells. In the interior is a stained-glass window. The register dates from 1559. The charities produce £38 per annum, of which £27 goes to the support of the National school, which was erected in 1831, and is a stone building with ornamental turrets. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have places of worship. Emmerson, the mathematician, was a native of this place.

HUSBANDS-BOSWORTH. See BOSWORTH, HUSBANDS, co. Leicester.

HUSBORNE-CRAWLEY. See CRAWLEY HUSBORNE, co. Beds.

HUSTHWAITE, a par. in the wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 4 miles N. of Easingwold, its market and post town. It is situated near the Thirsk and Malton railway, which has a station at Husthwaite Gate, where the trains stop when required. The village, which is small, is situated on rising ground. About half the land is arable. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £103, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure with square tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1674. There is a Sunday-school, and a village school for both sexes. The charities yield £7 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The principal residence is Husthwaite House.

HUTBANK, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Preston Quarter, co. Cumberland, 2 miles from Whitehaven.

HUTCHESONTOWN, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Gorbals, co. Lanark. It is situated near Hutcheson's bridge on the Clyde, and forms part of the suburbs of Glasgow.

HUT-GREEN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Eggbrough, par. of Kellington, West Riding co. York, 5 miles W. of Snaith. It is situated near the Goule canal.

HUTHWAITE, a hmlt. in the par. of Sutton-in-Ash field, N. div. of the wap. of Broxtow, co. Nottingham, near Mansfield.

HUTHWAITE, a vil. in the tnshp. of Thurgoland, par. of Silkstone, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.E. of Penistone.

HUTTOFT, a par. in the Marsh div. of the hund. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4½ miles E. of Alford, its post town and railway station, and 13 N.E. of Spilsby. The village is small, and situated on rising ground near the coast, commanding views of the country and German Ocean, which bounds the parish on the N.E. Huttoft Bank is now a farmhouse. The tithes were commuted for land and an annual money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1779. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient structure with tower containing three bells. The interior contains an old decorated engraved chest and several monuments. The Wesleyans and Independents have each a chapel. There is a National school, and the parochial charities produce about £18 per annum.

HUTTON, a par. and post-office vil. in the Merse district of co. Berwick, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Chirnside, containing also the post-office vil. of Paxton. Its boundaries are the liberties of Berwick, the English border, and the pars. of Whitsome, Ladykirk, Edrom, Chirnside, Foulden, and Mordington. It is about 4 miles long by 3 broad. The surface is a nearly level plain, and the soil fertile, particularly along the river banks. The river Whitadder flows along the northern and a part of the eastern boundary. The Tweed passes along some part of the south-eastern border, and is crossed by a suspension bridge at Tweed-hill. The roads from Berwick to Dunse and Kelso traverse the parish. This par. is in the presb. of Chirnside, and synod of Merse and Teviotdale, in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £245. Here are two or three private schools, and two libraries. Hutton consists of an ancient parish, which was divided into the districts of Hutton and Fishwick. The latter was held by the monks of Coldingham from the time of Edgar of Scotland until the Reformation. The principal residences are Tweed Hill and Paxton House. There is a brick and tile factory in the parish, and the trout and salmon fishery is very prolific. Hutton Hall is a remnant of a border fortification. Sandstone is abundant, and gypsum occurs on the banks of the Whitadder. Philip Redpath, who translated Boethius, was sometime minister of this parish.

HUTTON, a par. in the hund. of Barstable, co. Essex, 3½ miles E. of Brentwood, its post town, and 2½ from Billericay. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is small, is of ancient date, situated on the road from Brentwood to Billericay. The land is chiefly arable. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £380. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £386, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a tower with five bells. It contains a brass of a man in armour, bearing date 1510. The register dates from 1654. There is a National school. The parochial charities produce £38 per annum. The principal residence is Hutton Hall.

HUTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Penwortham, hund. of Leyland, co. Lancaster, 3½ miles S.W. of Preston. It is situated not far from the Ribble, on the old road from Liverpool to Preston. The village is wholly agricultural. The township contains 1,923 acres, of which more than one-third is marsh and water. Bricks and draining tiles are made here. In this township is situated the Hutton free grammar school. The principal residences are Hutton Hall and Penwortham Priory.

HUTTON, a par. in the hund. of Winterstoke, co. Somerset, 1½ mile from the Weston Junction railway station, and 7 miles N.W. of Axbridge. Here are ochre and other pits, where many bones of animals and birds have been found. The soil is loam and clay, and the subsoil clay. The Bristol and Exeter railway passes through the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £315 4*s.* 2*d.* The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. 434. The church is an ancient stone structure, dedicated to St. Mary, and has an embattled tower containing five bells. In the interior are several monuments and brasses; also a new painted window has been inserted. It has a stone pulpit, ornamented with sculpture. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes. Hutton House, the principal residence, contains a hall, with oak roof; it has also an old embattled tower, commanding views of the surrounding scenery. Anciently it was used for ecclesiastical purposes, and is said to have belonged to the abbey of Glastonbury. A porch, bearing the Bisdee arms, has been recently erected. It is at present the seat of Edward Bisdee, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

HUTTON AND CORRIE, a par. in the Annandale district of co. Dumfries, Scotland, 6 miles N.E. of Lockerby, its post town. Its length is 13 miles, and its average breadth 3 miles. Its boundaries are Moffat, Eskdalemuir, Westerkirk, Tundergarth, Dryfesdale, Applegarth, and Wamphray. The surface is hilly, the greater portion consisting of extensive tracts of pasture. The Dryfe-water has its source in the northern part of the parish. The Corrie-water also rises in the parish on the eastern border, and the Nielk-water passes along the S. and S.E. This par. is in the presb. of Lochmaben, and synod of Dumfries. The minister has a stipend of £260. The church was erected about 1710, and was enlarged some fifty years later. Hutton is the northern and Corrie the southern portion of the united parish. The two districts were incorporated in 1609. Hutton was formerly a chapelry subordinate to the old church of Sibbaldbye. The patronage and lands of Corrie were held in the 12th century by a vassal of Robert de Bruce. In the reign of James V. it came to the Johnstones, and was lately purchased from that family by Jardine of Lawrick. Among other remains, ancient forts are observed, one on the summit of Carthur Hill, and another on the opposite bank of the Dryfe-water. Galloway cattle and Cheviot sheep are reared among the hills, and trout abounds in the streams.

HUTTON BONVILLE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Birkby, wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 2½ miles N.W. of Cowton railway station, and 4 from Northallerton, its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Swale, and contains the village of Lovesome Hill. It is a meet for the Bedale hounds. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £53. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a small stone structure, with open turret containing one bell. Hutton Bonville Hall is the principal residence.

HUTTON-BUSHELL, or HUTTON BUSCEL, a par. in the wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 6 miles S.W. of Scarborough, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on a hill. Nearly a third of the parish is moor and woodland. An Enclosure Act was obtained in 1790, when the tithes were commuted for land and an annual money payment. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £320. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, is an ancient structure, with square embattled tower containing three bells. The altar has a stained-glass window. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is an endowed school for both sexes. Lord Downe is lord of the manor.

HUTTON-CONYERS, an ext. par. place, in the wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 1½ mile N. of Ripon. The village is situated on the N. bank of the river Ouse. The North-Eastern railway passes through the township. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in brick and tile making.

HUTTON-CRANSWICK, a par. in the Bainton Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 4 miles S. of Driffield, its post town, and 1 mile from Cranswick station on the Hull and Bridlington section of the York and North Midland railway. It is bounded on the E. by the navigable river Hull, on which are extensive flour-mills, and contains the tnshps. of Rotsea and Sunderlandwick, and the hmlts. of Cranswick and Hull. The soil is clayey and the land chiefly arable. The surface is boldly undulating, and the higher grounds command extensive views over the Wolds and of Holderness. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £130. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an old brick and stone structure, with an embattled tower containing three bells. In the interior is an old Norman font. The charities produce £10 per annum. There are places of worship for Baptists, Methodists, and Primitive Methodists; also National and infant schools. Lord Londesborough and Lord Hotham are lords of the manor.

HUTTON HANG, a tnshp. in the par. of Finghall, wap. of West Hang, North Riding co. York, 1 mile from Finghall, and 3 miles N.E. of Middleham. This township is partly situated in East Hang, and gives name to the two wapentakes of East and West Hang. It belongs ecclesiastically to the par. of Bedale. The Marquis of Ailesbury is lord of the manor.

HUTTON-HENRY, a tnshp. in the par. of Monk-Hesleton, S. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 2 miles S. of Castle Eden, and 2 W. of Monk-Hesleton. It contains the hmlt. of Road Ridge. The village, which is wholly agricultural, is situated on an eminence commanding a view of the surrounding country and the German Ocean. There is no church, but Divine service is performed in a private house which is licensed as a chapel-of-ease to the parish church. There is a Roman Catholic chapel dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul; it was erected at the sole expense of the Very Rev. Thomas Augustine Slater, the Roman Catholic canon. Over the altar is a painting of the Crucifixion. F. A. Millbank, Esq. is lord of the manor.

HUTTON, HIGH and LOW, hmlts. in the par. of Huttons-Ambo, North Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of New Malton.

HUTTON-IN-THE-FOREST, a par. in the Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 6 miles N.W. of Penrith, its post town, and 3 from the Plumpton station of the Lancashire and Carlisle railway. It is situated on the river Peterill, and contains the tnshps. of Hutton and Thomas Close. It was anciently held by the king's stirrup holder, he having also to keep in repair the fences of Plumpton Forest. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture and woodland. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £123, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is a plain stone edifice, dedicated to St. James. The parochial charities produce about £26 per annum, which goes to the support of Fletcher's school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, and there are National schools for both sexes. On the common are traces of Collinson's Castle, and on the road to Carlisle lies the Roman station, Old Penrith. Hutton Hall and Hutton Park are the principal residences. Sir H. Vane is lord of the manor.

HUTTON-IN-THE-HAY, a hmlt. in the par. and ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 2½ miles E. of Kendal. It is joined to Scalthwaiterigg. There is a corn-mill in the hamlet, and a parochial school for both sexes. The land is chiefly arable. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor.

HUTTON-LE-HOLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Lastingham, wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 9 miles N.W. of Pickering, and 2½ N. of Kirby-Moorside. It is situated on a branch of the river Rye, and contains Thaunton Lodge. The soil is sandy and mixed with limestone. The Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. H. B. Darley, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HUTTON-LOWCROSS, or HUTTON-LOCRAS, a tnshp. in the par. of Guisborough, E. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Guisborough, and 44 N. of York. The village, which contains a large number of scattered houses, is situated in the vale of Guisborough, under Rosebury Topping. William de Bernaldby founded a hospital here for lepers, dedicated to St. Leonard, and subsequently given to the priory of Guisborough, traces of which still exist. Ralph de Neville also founded a nunnery here for the Cistercian order, portions of which have recently come to light while ploughing.

HUTTON-MAGNA, or HUTTON LONG VILLIERS, a par. in the wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 6 miles S.E. of Barnard Castle, and 9 from Richmond. Darlington is its post town. The village is very small. The inhabitants are engaged in lime burning. The soil is loamy, upon limestone and gravel. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £52, in the patron. of the Vicar of Gilling. The church is an ancient structure, with a belfry containing two bells. Sir T. A. Clifford Constable, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

HUTTON MULGRAVE, a tnshp. in the par. of Lythe, E. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 4 miles W. of Whitby. It is situated near Dursley Bay. Mulgrave Castle, the seat of the Marquis of Normanby, situated in the midst of a park, is a Gothic mansion with a lofty tower. Roman remains have been found here, including urns, &c.

HUTTON, NEW, a chplry. in the par. of Kirkby-in-Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 4 miles E. of Kendal, and 3 S.E. of the Oxenholme railway station. It is situated on the river Betha, and contains the tnshps. of Hutton New, Hay, and Hutton-le-Hay. On Hutton Common is situated the reservoir of the Lancaster canal. The soil is sandy, and the land chiefly arable. There is a cornmill. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £80, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kendal. The church is dedicated to St. Stephen, and is of modern erection. There is a free grammar school founded in 1778. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor.

HUTTON, OLD, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Kirkby-in-Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 4½ miles S.E. of Kendal, and 2¾ from the Oxenholme railway station. It is joined with Holmescales to form a chapelry. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the river Betha. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £98, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kendal. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, was rebuilt in 1669. It is a stone edifice with turret containing one bell. There is an endowed school, founded by Edward Miller in 1613, with a library attached.

HUTTON PRIEST, a tnshp. in the par. of Warton, co. Lancaster, 8 miles N.E. of Lancaster. It is situated near the Kendal canal.

HUTTON ROOF, a tnshp. in the par. of Greystoke, Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 11 miles W. of Penrith. The township contains only a few scattered houses. The land is equally divided between arable and pasture. Limestone is quarried. H. Howard, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HUTTON ROOF, a chplry. in the par. of Kirkby Lonsdale, ward of Lonsdale, co. Westmoreland, 3½ miles S.W. of Kirkby Lonsdale, its post town, and the same distance from the Burton Holme railway station. It contains the hmlt. of Newbiggin. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the limestone quarries and in agriculture. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £80, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kirkby Lonsdale. The church is a small ancient stone edifice. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is an endowed school for boys and girls.

HUTTON-RUDBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Rudby-in-Cleveland, W. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Stokesley, and 6 S. of Yarm. It is situated near the river Leaven, the banks of which have an almost perpendicular ascent from the water's edge. Here are large linen factories, which employ a great number of the inhabitants. A portion of this township goes by the name of Enterpen. The Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. To the former is attached a school. There is a National school, erected in 1836.

HUTTONS-AMBO, a par. in the wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of New Malton, its post town. It is situated on the river Derwent, and the York and North-Eastern railway passes through the parish. It contains the vils. of Hutton, High and Low. The soil is composed chiefly of clay and loam, on a limestone subsoil. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1805. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £93, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a modern building with turret containing two bells. The Wesleyans have a chapel at High Hutton. There are National schools for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. The lords of the manor are George Foljambe and Joseph Starkey, Esqs.

HUTTON SAND, a tnshp. in the par. of Thirsk, North Riding co. York, 3 miles W. of Thirsk. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £115, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

HUTTON-SESSAY, a tnshp. in the par. of Sessay, wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 1 mile N.E. of Sessay, and 5 miles S.E. of Thirsk, its post town. It is situated near the Great Northern railway. At Sessay is a station of the York and Newcastle railway. The soil is of a loamy nature. The place is chiefly the property of Viscount Downe.

HUTTON, SHERIFF, a par. in the wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 9 miles S.W. of New Malton, and 10 N.N.E. of York. The par., which is of large extent, comprises the tnshps. and hmlts. of Cornbrough, Farlington, Sheriff Hutton, North Ings, Lillings Ambo, and Stittenham. The land is about equally divided between arable and pasture, with 120 acres of woodland in the township of Sheriff Hutton. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1769. Here are remains of a castle erected by Bertram de Bulmer in the reign of Stephen, which, being seized by Edward IV., became a royal castle. Richard III. selected it as the place of confinement for Edward Plantagenet, wherein he remained till the death of Richard at the battle of Bosworth Field. The Princess Elizabeth, afterwards consort of Henry VII., was also confined here. It was subsequently given by Henry VIII. to his natural son the Duke of Richmond. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £194, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is dedicated to St. Helen. There are places of worship for Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists, also a small endowed school. The principal residences are Hutton Lodge and Hutton Park.

HUTTON-SOIL, a tnshp. in the par. of Greystoke, Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 6 miles W. of Penrith, and 12 from Keswick. The land is chiefly pasture, and the soil clay and sand. It contains the hmlt. of Penrudduck. There are places of worship for Presbyterians and Wesleyans, and a school for both sexes. The lord of the manor and principal landowner is H. Howard, Esq.

HUTTON ST. JOHN, a tnshp. in the par. of Greystoke, Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 5½ miles W. of Penrith. The township, which contains only a few scattered houses, is situated on the road to Keswick, about 3 miles from the lake Ulleswater. The land is chiefly arable, and the soil clayey. Henry Howard, Esq., is lord of the manor. Hutton Hall, the seat of A. H. Huddlestone, Esq., was formerly the residence of the Huttons, of which family was John, the priest, who saved Charles II. after the battle of Worcester, and gave him absolution on his death bed.

HUTTON WANDESLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Long Marston, West Riding co. York, 5 miles W. of York. The soil is clayey. This township is owned by Lord Wenlock, who is lord of the manor. The principal residence is Hutton Hall.

HUXHAM, a par. in the hund. of Wonford, co. Devon, 3½ miles N.E. of Exeter. It is situated near the Bristol railway and river Culm. There is a paper-mill in the neighbourhood, and some valuable mines of manganese. The parish is of small extent, and the village wholly agricultural. The soil is partly sandy and partly clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £118. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Poltimore, in the dioc. of Exeter.

HUXLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Waverton, lower div. of the hund. of Broxton, co. Chester, 4½ miles E. of Waverton, and 3½ S.W. of Tarporley. It is situated near the Chester and Crewe railway, and the Chester canal, which passes on the S. side of the township. The New Connexion Methodists have a place of worship; and a school was erected in 1851, on land given by Randle Wilbraham, Esq. Here are situated the mansions of Higher and Lower Huxley Hall: the former passed along with the estates of the Savages to the Cholmondeley family.

HUXLOE, a hund. in the co. of Northampton, contains the pars. of Great and Little Addington, Aldwinkle, Barnwell, Barton Seagrave, Burton Latimer, Cranford, Denford, Finedon, Grafton Underwood, Irthlingborough, Islip, Kettering, Lilford, Lowick, Sudborough, Twywell, Warkton, and Woodford, comprising 41,790 acres. This hundred is mentioned in the Domesday Survey as Hochesla.

HUYTON, a par. in the hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 6 miles E. of Liverpool. It is a station on the Manchester and Liverpool section of the London and North-Western railway. The par. contains the tnshps. of Knowsley, Roby, and Tarbock. The township of Knowsley abounds with coal and stone. The land is chiefly arable, with a large extent of woodland and park grounds. Latham House, in this parish, sustained a siege during the Civil War. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £690. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient edifice. There are also two district churches at Knowsley and Roby—the livings of both are perpet. curs., val. £300 and £200. The charities produce £40 per annum, of which £10 goes to the support of a school. There is a Roman Catholic chapel and a National school. The principal residence is Knowsley Park, a seat of the earls of Derby.

HWYLBREN, a tnshp. in the par. of Gwaenysgor, co. Flint, 4 miles N.E. of Rhyddlan.

HYCKHAM, NORTH, a par. in the wap. of Boothby-Graffo, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 4½ miles S.W. of Lincoln, its post town. The Midland railway has a station here. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Witham. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1769. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £220, in the patron. of the bishop. The old church has long been in ruins, but the burial-ground adjoining is occasionally used. In 1858 a new church was erected on a new site, and a parsonage-house was built in 1859. The new church is dedicated to All Saints. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The charities produce about £2 per annum.

HYCKHAM, SOUTH, a par. in the lower div. of the wap. of Boothby-Graffo, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 5 miles S.W. of Lincoln, its post town. It contains a portion of the tnshp. of Haddington. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £340, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a small edifice with tower surmounted by a spire containing two bells. The Hon. Charles Cust is lord of the manor.

HYDE, a parochial chplry., and market town, in the par. of Stockport, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 7¼ miles E. of Manchester, its post town, 6 N.E. of Stockport, and a quarter of a mile E. of the Hyde and Newton station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire line of railway, of which the Whaleybridge branch intersects this township. It is situated on the river Tame and Peak Forest canal. The div. of Hyde comprises the following tnshps.—viz. Hyde, Newton, Wernith, Godley, Mottram-en-Longden Dale, Matley, Hollingworth, Hattersley, and Tintwhistle. The township of Hyde was until recently a merely agricultural district sparsely inhabited, but has greatly improved of late, and chiefly owes its prosperity to the cotton trade, for which there are extensive manufactories, employing a great number of hands; engineering is also carried on to a great extent. Here are the Lancashire collieries, which extend a considerable way under the town. The town is well paved, lighted with gas, and has an excellent supply of water. It contains the county court, vestry-room, concert-room, temperance hall, gasworks, water-works, literary and scientific and mechanics' institutes. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £156, in the patron. of the Rector of Stockport. There is also the district church of St. Thomas, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £130, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church, dedicated to St. George, is a commodious stone structure with a tower containing eight bells. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. The Independents, Primitive Methodists, Wesleyans, and New Connexion Methodists have places of worship. There is also a chapel for Unitarians at Gee Cross, one of the largest in the kingdom, with a tower crowned by a spire 145 feet in height. In the interior are two windows, one representing our Saviour with the Apostles, and the other Faith, Hope, and Charity. Here are two National schools for both sexes, and the Boston Mills school. The Wesleyans and Unitarians have each a school. The Hyde and Glossop News and North Cheshire Herald newspapers are published every Saturday. Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on the 16th May and 15th November.

HYDE, a tnshp. in the par. of Didbrook, lower div. of the hund. of Kiftsgate, co. Gloucester, 4 miles E. of Winchcombe.

HYDE, a hmlt. in the par. of Minchinhampton, co. Gloucester, 1 mile N.E. of Minchinhampton.

HYDE, a vil. in the par. of Kingsbury, co. Middlesex, 8 miles N.W. of St. Paul's, London.

HYDE, a tythg. in the par. of Montacute, co. Somerset, 4 miles N.W. of Yeovil.

HYDE ABBEY, or NEW MINSTER, the famous monastery at Winchester, co. Hants, where Godeman the monk, in the 10th century, painted St. Ethelwold's "Benedictional," now in the possession of the Duke of Devonshire.

HYDE, EAST, a hmlt. in the par. of Luton, hund. of Flitt, co. Bedford, 3 miles S.E. of Luton.

HYDE, NORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Heston, co. Middlesex, 1 mile from Norwood, and 3 miles N.W. of Brentford.

HYDEPARK, a locality in co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles from Belfast, near the Ballymoney road. It is notable for its extensive calico-printing works. There are also several private seats of this name in various parts of Ireland.

HYDE PASTURES, a hmlt. in the par. of Hunningham, Southam div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 2 miles from Nuneaton.

HYDE, WEST, a hmlt. in the par. of Luton, hund. of Flitt, co. Bedford, 3 miles S.E. of Luton. It contains several farmhouses, and the residence of Lionel Hames, Esq., called The Hyde. John S. Leigh, Esq., is lord of the manor.

HYLTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Monk Wearmouth, E. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 3 miles N.W. of Sunderland, its post town. It is situated on the river Wear, and has a station on the Sunderland and Bishop Auckland section of the North-Eastern railway. The manor was held by the Hyltons from the reign of Athelstane to 1746, when it passed into the hands of the Musgraves. The castle, an ancient baronial mansion, was built by the Hyltons, but has been greatly modernised, only a small portion of the original building now remaining. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £260, in the patron. of the bishop. The church has tombs of the Hyltons.

HYNDFORD, a bar. in the upper ward of co. Lanark, Scotland. It gave title of baron to the Carmichaels of Hyndford.

HYRETH, a vil. in the par. of Llanfallteg, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles N.E. of Narberth.

HYSON-GREEN, a hmlt. in the pars. of Lenton and Radford, co. Notts, 1 mile N.W. of Nottingham. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £150.

HYSSINGTON, a par. in the hunds. of Montgomery and Chirbury, cos. Montgomery and Salop, 4 miles from Bishop's Castle, its post town, and 4 from Montgomery. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £161. There are some trifling charities.

HYTHE, a hund. in the lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, including the cinque port and borough of Hythe and West Hythe, comprising about 2,240 acres.

HYTHE, a par., parliamentary and municipal borough, and cinque port, in the hund. of the same name, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 16 miles from Dover, 25 S. of Canterbury, and 75 from London by the South-Eastern Railway, which has a station here. It is situated on the Royal Military canal, near the river Limne, and at the end of the old Roman way called Stone Street. A passage boat plies daily between this place and Rye. Hythe signifies a "haven," and was anciently an important maritime town, with a good haven, which has since been silted up, and the beach is now nearly three quarters of a mile from the town. It was rated at five ships, with a complement of 21 men each, for the service of the king. In 1036 it was given to the archbishops of Canterbury, who built a castle at Saltwood, traces of which are still visible. During the reign of Edward III. this borough returned two members to parliament, and by the Reform Act this town, with Cheriton, Newington, Folkestone, and Saltwood, returns one member to parliament. It received its first charter of incorporation from Queen Elizabeth, who granted the place at a fee-farm rent of £3 to the inhabitants. It is governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 common councilmen, with the style of the "mayor, jurats, and commonalty of the town and port of Hythe." The town, which consists chiefly of one long street, is remarkably clean, well paved, and lighted with gas. It contains a dispensary, townhall, bank, savings-bank, gaol, a literary and scientific institution, and market-house, which latter, situated on the N. side of the High-street, is a commodious structure erected in 1794. Hythe being situated on the sea-coast affords facilities for sea-beathing, and has latterly become a place of great resort for that purpose. In its vicinity are to be seen the ruins of the castles of Saltwood, Lympne, and Studfall. It is a petty and quarter session town. Many of the inhabitants are engaged as fishermen, and there is a large brewery employing many persons. At the W. end of the town a range of barracks was erected in 1807 for 300 men, besides officers. Here is now established a celebrated school of musketry, where volunteers go to perfect themselves in the use of the rifle. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £175, in the patron. of the Rector of Saltwood. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is situated on a hill, and has a tower with a steeple containing eight bells. It contains tombs of the Deedes of Sandling Park. In the crypt is a large quantity of human bones, supposed to be the remains of the Britons who fought a battle with the Saxons between this town and Folkestone in 456. The parochial charities produce £485 a year. In the town are two hospitals—St. Bartholomew's, founded in 1336, by Hamo, Bishop of Rochester, which has an endowment of £221, now distributed between five men and eight women, who each receive £20 per annum; and St. John's, with an endowment of £180, which supplies two men and seven women with £18 per annum. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Roman Catholics have each a place of worship. During the reign of Henry IV. a fire broke out which destroyed a considerable portion of the town; this was afterwards followed by the plague, which carried off a great many of its inhabitants. About 2½ miles E. of the town is Shorncliffe camp. The market day for corn is Thursday. Fairs are held on the 10th and 11th July and 1st December.

HYTHE, WEST, a par., partly in the hund. of Hythe, and partly in that of Worth, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 2½ miles W. of Hythe, its post town, and 8 E. of Folkestone. It was formerly a harbour for shipping, but the sea having receded from it, it now forms part of the cinque port, municipal and parliamentary borough of Hythe. The Grand Military canal passes through the parish. The living is a vic. united with the vic.* of Lympne, in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £34, in the patron. of the archdeacon. The church has long been in ruins.

HYTHE, a hmlt. in the hund. of Lexden, co. Essex, 2 miles from Colchester, and 3 from Wivenhoe. It is a station on the Wivenhoe branch of the Great Eastern railway.

I

I, or I-COLM-KILL. See IONA.

IAR-CONNAUGHT. See CUNNEMARA, Ireland.

IBANE AND BARRYROE, a bar. in co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is bounded inland by Carbery on the E., and by the sea on the S.W. The length of the united bar. is 10 miles, and its greatest breadth over 7. Ibane and Barryroe are geographically dissevered by Clonakilty Bay, Ross harbour, and Courtmacsherry Bay. The bar. contains the pars. of Abbeymahon, Donaghmore, Kilsillagh, and parts of Castleventry, Kilgarriff, Kilkeran, Rathbarry, Kilmeen, Rosscarbery, and Timoleague, with the towns of Timoleague and Courtmacsherry. The Barryroe district was anciently the territory of the O'Cowigs, under the princes of Carbery, who ruled in the Ibane district. Ibane came to the Barrymores from Lord Arundel.

IBBERTON, a par. in the hund. of Whiteway, co. Dorset, 7 miles W. of Blandford Forum, its post town, and 5 S. of Sturminster Newton. It is a small agricultural village situated on a branch of the river Stour. The parish is intersected by a range of hills running E. and W. In the S. are the chalk downs, a vale consisting of meadow and pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £190. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £220. The church, dedicated to St. Eustache, is an ancient structure with a square tower. It stands on the side of a hill, and commands a view of the Vale of Blackmoor. The charities produce about £15 per annum, bequeathed for the repairs of the church. Lord Rivers is lord of the manor. There is a National school.

IBERIUS, ST. a par. in the bar. of Forth, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing the post town of Broadway. The par. lies at the upper end of Ladies' Island Lake. The surface consists of a good average soil. The living is an impropriate cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, in the patron. of the bishop, val. £47. There is a Roman Catholic chapel and Methodist meeting-house, and a day school. In the Roman Catholic arrangement the par. is united to the district of Ladies' Island.

IBERIUS, ST. See WEXFORD, Ireland.

IBLE, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Wirksworth, co. Derby, 4 miles N.W. of Wirksworth. The village is very small and wholly agricultural. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel.

IBRICKANE, a bar. in co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Its length is 15 miles, and its greatest breadth 8. It is bounded by Corcomroe on the N., the Inchiquin Islands on the E., Moyarta on the S., and the ocean on the W. It has a bold imposing coast line indented by Doonbeg Bay; in the offing lie the islands of Mutton and Enniskerry. The surface is very boggy in the S., but rises to a considerable elevation at Mount Callan, on the N.E. border. This bar. contains the pars. of Kilfarboy, Killard, and Kilmurray, part of Kilmacduane, the town of Miltown-Malbay, and the vils. of Doonbeg, Kilmurray, and Mullagh.

IBSLEY, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Fordingbridge, co. Hants, 3 miles N. of Ringwood, its post town and railway station, and 2 S. of Fordingbridge. It is situated on the river Avon. The living is a cur.* united with the vic.* of Fordingbridge, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is a small modern edifice, containing a monument to Sir John Contables. The Independents have a chapel, and there is a parochial school. The Earl of Normanton is lord of the manor.

IBSTOCK, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 6 miles S.E. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, its post town, 5 N. of Market Bosworth, and 2 S.W. of the Bardon station on the Leicester and Burton railway. It is an extensive parish situated near the river Anker. The village, which is well built, contains some good shops. Here are extensive collieries, also brick and tile kilns. Clay, marl, gravel, and freestone abound. The soil is generally fertile, and watered by several rivulets. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £522. The living is a rect.* with the curs. of Hugglescote and Donington, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £964, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Denis, is an ancient structure, with a tower crowned with a spire, and contains four bells. There is also a district church at Coalville, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £134. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There are National and British schools. The Baptists and Methodists have each a chapel. Here is a branch mining railway in conjunction with the Swannington line of railway, which passes through the extremity of the parish. Earl Howe is lord of the manor and proprietor of Gopsal Hall, where Handel composed his oratorio of the Messiah.

IBSTONE, or IPSTONE, a par. chiefly in the hund. of Desborough, co. Bucks, but partly in that of Pirton, co. Oxford, 3 miles S.W. of Stoken Church, 6 S.E. of Watlington, and 7 W. of High Wycombe, its post town. It is situated in a wooded country, and contains part of the vil. of Turvill. The soil is gravel and lime. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £170. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £156, in the patron. of the bishop and Merton College, Oxon, alternately. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a small stone edifice, with tower containing two bells. There is a National school with a small endowment.

IBURN-DALE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Ugglebarnby, and par. of Whitby, North Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Whitby.

ICCOMB, a par. partly in the upper div. of the hund. of Slaughter, co. Gloucester, but chiefly in the upper div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 3 miles S.E. of Stow-on-the-Wold, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Adlestrop station on the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton railway. An alien priory was founded here by Gervaise Paganel, which afterwards became a cell to Wenlock Priory. Its revenue at the Suppression was £36 3*s*. The par. contains the hmlt. of Roundhorn, also the remains of a small Danish camp. The soil is stone brash. The tithes have been commuted for land and a money payment under an Act of Enclosure in 1809. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure. It contains the effigy of a knight, and monuments to the Cope family. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum, part of which belongs to the parish of Stow-on-the-Wold. There is a school for both sexes. Iccomb Hall, formerly the seat of the Cope family, is much decayed. The Rev. John Hopton is lord of the manor.

ICKBOROUGH. See IGBOROUGH, co. Norfolk.

ICKENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Elthorne, co. Middlesex, 2½ miles N.E. of Uxbridge, its post town. The parish, which is wholly agricultural, is situated near the river Colne, and was anciently called Tykenham. It formerly belonged to the Shoreditches. The lands are chiefly meadow and pasture. The greater portion of the tithes were commuted for land under an Act of Enclosure in 1780, and the remainder subsequently for a rent-charge of £40 2*s*. 7*d*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of London, val. £382. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient structure containing several brasses of the Shoreditches and others. Swakeleys, an ancient mansion in the Elizabethan style, is the seat of Thomas Truesdale Clarke, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

ICKFORD, a par. in the hunds. of Ashendon and Ewelme, cos. Bucks and Oxford, 4 miles N.W. of Thame, and 16 S.W. of Aylesbury, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Ickford. The land is chiefly pasture. It is supposed to have been the place where the treaty was signed in 907 between Edward and the Danes. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £392. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a small ancient edifice with a tower. In the interior is a piscina with projecting basin in good preservation. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a free school. The Baptists have a chapel. T. Phillips, who wrote the "Life of Cardinal Pole," was a native of this place. Thomas Jacombs, Esq., is lord of the manor. Archbishop Sheldon, of Canterbury, was once rector of this parish, and presented part of the communion plate.

ICKHAM, a par. in the hund. of Downhamford, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 5 miles E. of Canterbury, its post town, and 2½ from the Beaksbourne station, on the London, Chatham, and Dover railway. It is situated on the river Stour, and contains the hmlt. of Well Street. It was anciently named Yecham. The land is principally arable and meadow, with about 90 acres of hop-grounds. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,000. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £997, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, has a square tower, and has recently been restored. The parochial charities produce £15 per annum. There is a parochial school. The principal residence is Leigh Priory, situated in the midst of a park. It was in 1785 the property of Thomas Barrett, Esq., from whom it passed to its present owner, F. Phillips, Esq., who has had it recently enlarged. Well Court, the manor house, is situated near the river, and was formerly in the possession of the Cliffords. The Roman road from Canterbury to Richborough passed through this parish.

ICKLEFORD, a par. in the hund. of Hitchin, co. Herts, 2 miles N.E. of Hitchin, its post town and railway station. The village, which is small, is situated near the ancient Icknield Street, at the ford of the Ivel, under the Wilbury hills. The women are employed in the manufacture of the straw-plait. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £280. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, has a square tower containing five bells. It has been thoroughly repaired at the expense of the Hon. Mrs. Ryder, and contains a tomb to Boswell, the gipsy king. The register dates from 1749. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Here is a National school, founded and supported by the Hon. Mrs. Ryder. Ickleford House is the seat of T. Cockayne, Esq.

ICKLES, a vil. in the tnshp. of Brinsworth and par. of Rotherham, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Rotherham.

ICKLESHAM, a par. in the hund. of Guestling, rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, 1½ mile S.W. of Winchelsea. Rye is its post town. It is situated on the river Brede and the Grand Military canal, and is bounded on the E. by the English Channel and the mouth of Rye harbour. The land is partly in hops. The site of the new town of Winchelsea was formerly a part of this parish, called Petit Higham, but was purchased by the inhabitants of Old Winchelsea, which is now covered by the sea. The remains of Camber Castle, erected by Henry VIII. for the defence of the coast, stand within the limits of this parish. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Rye Harbour annexed, in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £715, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower. The register dates from 1598. The charities produce £3 per annum. There are endowed almshouses, and the Wesleyans have a place of worship. The vicarage-house has recently been rebuilt.

ICKLETON, a par. in the hund. of Whittlesford, co. Cambridge, 11 miles S. of Cambridge, 6 from Saffron Walden, its post town, and 1½ mile from the Chesterton station, on the Cambridge section of the Great Eastern railway. The old Roman road Icknield Street traversed this parish, and many Roman coins and remains of a villa, &c., have been found. The parish is partly bounded by a branch of the river Cam, which separates it from the county of Essex. It was formerly a market town, and the site of a Benedictine nunnery, founded in the reign of Henry II. by the De Veres, or Cantelupes. At the Dissolution its revenues were returned at £80 1*s.* 10*d.* The village is considerable, but wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1810. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £85, in the patron. of the Bishop of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a lofty tower containing six bells. It is supposed to have been built before the Norman Conquest. The parochial charities produce about £69 per annum. The Hon. Mrs. Algernon Herbert is lady of the manor.

ICKLINGHAM, ALL SAINTS AND ST. JAMES, a par. in the hund. of Lackford, co. Suffolk, 8 miles N.W. of Bury St. Edmund's, and 4½ S.E. of Mildenhall, its post town. It formerly formed two distinct parishes, which are now united for ecclesiastical purposes. The village is situated on the river Lark, a branch of the Ouse. The soil is light and sandy, and there are some large rabbit-warrens in the neighbourhood. The parish is traversed by the old Roman road Icknield Street, and there is a Roman camp called Kentfield, which occupies about 25 acres. Many relics have been found, including a leaden cistern, urns, &c. Gun-flints were formerly made here, but since the introduction of percussion-caps the trade has entirely ceased. There is an agate powder and ornamental flint manufactory, which affords employment to many of the inhabitants. The tithes of All Saints have been commuted for a rent-charge of £320 2*s.*, and those of St. James for £239 18*s.* The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £504. There are two churches in the parish, situated about half a mile from each other. They are both ancient edifices, and are dedicated to St. James and All Saints respectively. In the former are several monuments to the family of Gwilt, lords of the manor; and in the floor of the chancel is some tesselated pavement found in the ruins of a Roman villa, supposed by some antiquaries to be that of Faustina. There is a chapel for Dissenters and a National school for both sexes. The charities produce about £45 per annum, arising from land given for the poor.

ICKORNSHAW, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Cowling, and par. of Kildwick, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Keighley.

ICKWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Northill, hund. of Wixamtree, co. Bedford, 3 miles N.W. of Biggleswade. Ickwell Green is a meet for the Cambridgeshire hounds.

ICKWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Thingoe, co. Suffolk, 3 miles S.W. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town and railway station. The manor was given by Bishop Theodred to Bury Abbey. There is no village, the whole of the parish being comprised within the park. The surface is varied, and the lower grounds are watered by a rivulet which expands into a broad lake. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely. The church is a small edifice, with a tower recently rebuilt. It stands in Ickworth Park, the seat of the Marquis of Bristol. This park is 11 miles round, and is stocked with upwards of 700 head of deer, and has gardens occupying nearly 6 acres. The mansion, which was begun in 1795 by the late marquis, who was Bishop of Derry, is a brick building upwards of 600 feet in length. It is in the Italian style of architecture, and consists of a circular centre connected with wings by extensive corridors. It contains some basso-relievos from Homer, after Flaxman.

IDA, IGRIN, AND IBERCRON, a bar. in co. Kilkenny, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Its length is over 16 miles, and its greatest breadth over 6. It is bounded by the bar. of Gowran on the N., the river Barrow on the E., that of the Suir on the S., and the bars. of Iverk and Knocktopher on the W. The united bar. contains the pars. of Ballygurrin, Cluin, Dysertmoon, Dunkit, Gaulskill, Kilbride, Kilcoan, Kilcolm, Kilmakevoge, Rathpatrick, Rossbercon, Rower, and Shambo, and part of the pars. of Jerpoint, West Listerling, Rossinan, and the vils. of Ballygub, Ballinamona, Ballincrea, Rossbercon, and Tullagher.

IDBURY, a par. in the hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 5½ miles N.W. of Burford, and 6 S.W. of Chipping Norton, its post town. It contains the hmlts. of Bould and Foxcott. Near the turnpike road from Stow-on-the-Wold to Burford are the remains of a large Roman encampment. The land is chiefly arable and pasture, with 60 acres of woodland. The soil is in parts rich and fertile, but in others a cold clay. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £60, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient edifice with a Norman entrance on the N. side of the nave. The parochial charities produce £14 per annum. There is an endowed school.

IDDENSHALL, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Oswald, hund. of Eddisbury, co. Chester. It is included in the city of Chester.

IDDESLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Shebbear, co. Devon, 11 miles S.E. of Torrington, and 4 N.E. of Hatherleigh. Winkleigh is its post town. It is situated near the rivers Torridge and Okement. The soil is sand and clay. The inhabitants are principally engaged in agriculture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £350. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient stone structure with a square embattled tower containing five bells, and was partly rebuilt in 1848. The chancel contains the effigy of a Crusader. There is a place of worship for Bible Christians. Sir Stafford Northcote is lord of the manor.

IDDOLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandefeilog, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles S. of Carmarthen. It is situated on the river Towy.

IDE, a par. in the hund. of Exminster, co. Devon, 2 miles S.W. of Exeter, its post town and railway station, and 1½ mile W. of Alphington. It is situated in a valley on the river Alphin. There are several extensive farms. The soil is clay and sand, and subsoil red sandstone. The land is very fertile, about two-thirds being arable, the remainder pasture and orchard. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £155, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Ida, has a tower containing four bells. It was rebuilt in 1834, at a cost of £1,300. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. The Dean and Chapter of Exeter are lords of the manor. There is a school for both sexes, supported by voluntary contributions.

IDEFORD, a par. in the hund. of Teignbridge, co. Devon, 2½ miles S.E. of Chudleigh, and 4¾ N.E. of Newton Abbott. The village, which is small, is situated in a valley entirely surrounded with lofty trees. The soil is clay and gravel, and subsoil limestone. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £255. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £350. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure with a square tower. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. Lord Clifford is lord of the manor.

IDE-HILL, a chplry. in the par. of Sundridge, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 4 miles S.W. of Seven Oaks. It is situated near the river Darent. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £132, in the patron. of the Rector of Sundridge. The church, erected and endowed by Bishop Porteus, of London, in 1807, has subsequently been enlarged. There is a National school.

IDEN, a par. in the hund. of Goldspur, rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, 2¼ miles N. of Rye, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the river Rother and the Royal Military canal. The land is partly in hops, and the surface is undulating. The parish is surrounded on the N. and E. by the county of Kent. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £753. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure with a square tower containing six bells. The register commences in 1550. The charities produce £5 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

IDERIDGEHAY, a tnshp. in the par. of Wirksworth, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 3 miles S. of Wirksworth, its post town, 10 N.W. of Derby, and 4 W. of the Belper railway station. It is situated among the limestone hills, in a district abounding in lead and barytes. Bricks are made to a considerable extent. The living is a perpet. cur.* annexed to vic.* of Wirksworth, in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £56. The church was erected at a cost of £2,000, of which £1,500 was given by Robert Cresswell, Esq., who resides here in a cottage of the Swiss style. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Ecclesbourn House and Alton Manorhouse are the principal residences.

IDLE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Calverley, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 9 miles N.W. of Leeds, its post town, 3 N. of Bradford, and 1½ mile from Apperley Bridge railway station. It is situated on the river Aire, and contains Windhill and 2 other hmlts. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the woollen cloth manufacture, and there are extensive quarries, employing a large number of hands. The surface is boldly undulating, rising into numerous hills of considerable elevation. The village of Idle, which is considerable, stands on the acclivity of a hill on the S. side of the valley of Airdale; and at the foot of the hill is the large village of Windhill. The Leeds and Liverpool canal passes through this township. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £300, in the patron. of the Vicar of Calverley. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a stone structure with square embattled tower crowned by pinnacles, and containing one bell. In the interior is a stained-glass window. There is a mechanics' institute, and also a young men's church institute. The Independents, Baptists, Unitarians, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. There are National, British, and infant schools for both sexes, also Sunday-schools connected with the Church and the various Dissenting denominations. W. R. C. Stanfield, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in April and second Wednesday in October for cattle.

IDLE, a river rising in Sherwood Forest, co. Notts, and, after a course of 40 miles, falling into the Trent at Stockwith, in Lincolnshire.

IDLESTREE. See ELSTREE, co. Herts.

IDLICOTE, a par. in the Brailes div. of the hund. of Kington, co. Warwick, 3 miles N.E. of Shipston-on-Stour, its post town. The parish, which is small, is wholly agricultural. It is a meet for the Warwick hounds. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. Stone is quarried. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £80. The church is dedicated to St. James. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. Idlicote House, the principal residence, is the seat of Captain H. K. P. Peach. It formerly belonged to the monks of Kenilworth, and after passing through several hands, was finally purchased by the present owner, who is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

IDMISTON, a par. in the hund. of Alderbury, co. Wilts, 7 N.E. of Salisbury, its post town, and 5½ S.E. of Amesbury. It is situated on the Bourne branch of the river Avon, and contains the tythgs. of Porton and Shripple, and the hmlts. of Ford and Gomeldon. The village is very irregularly built and wholly agricultural. There is a narrow strip of land on each side of the river, and the unenclosed down is valuable as pasture. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1794. The living is a vic. with the cur. of Porton annexed, in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £260, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a square wooden tower containing four bells. In the interior are several monuments, one of which is to the Rev. John Bowle, the Spanish scholar and editor of the Spanish "Don Quixote." The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. William Beach, Esq., is lord of the manor. There are several barrows and tumuli.

IDRONE, EAST and WEST, two bars. in co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. These bars. are bounded by Queen's County and the bar. of Carlow on the N., co. Wexford on the E., the bar. of St. Mullins on the S., and by co. Kilkenny on the W. Their length is over 15 miles, and their greatest breadth 8 miles. Part of the Castle-Comer mountains rise in West Idrone, and Mount Leinster in East Idrone. The river Barrow has part of its course in these baronies. The surface consists generally of good land. East Idrone includes the pars. of Agha, Clonygoose, Dunleckny, Kiltennell, Lorum, and Slyguff, and part of Ballyellin, Fenagh, Killinane, Myshall, Ullart, and Nurney, with the towns of Borris, Bagnalstown, and a portion of Leighlin-Bridge. West Idrone contains the pars. of Old Leighlin and Tullowcrine, part of the town of Leighlin-Bridge, besides part of the pars. of Cloydagh, Killinane, and Wells, with the vils. of Royal Oak and Old Leighlin.

IDSTONE, a tythg. in the par. of Ashbury, hund. of Shrivenham, co. Berks, 5 miles N.W. of Lambourne. The old Roman road intersects the village.

IDSWORTH, a chplry. in the par. of Chalton, hund. of Finch-Dean, co. Hants, 1 mile N. of Finch-Dean, 3 miles E. of Horn-Dean, its post town, and 6 N. of the Havant railway station. The chapelry, which adjoins the county of Sussex, is watered by the Lavant, which flows through here in its course to Portsmouth. The population are chiefly employed in agriculture. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Chalton, in the dioc. of Winchester. The chapel-of-ease is situated in Ibsworth Park, the seat of Jervoise Clarke Jervoise, Bart., who is lord of the manor. A school is supported by Lady Jervoise.

IFFA AND OFFA, EAST and WEST, two bars. in co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The bars. of Clanwilliam, Middlethird, and Slievardagh are on the N., co. Kilkenny on the E., co. Waterford on the S., and cos. Cork and Limerick on the W. They are 26 miles in length, and their greatest breadth is over 12 miles. The western division contains part of the Galtee and Knockmeledown mountains, but the greater portion of the surface consists of the Golden Vale of the Suir. The river Suir washes the eastern skirts of the Galtees. West Iffa and Offa contains the pars. of Ardfinnan, Ballybacon, Derrygrath, Molough, Mortlestown, Neddans, Newcastle, Rochestown, Shanrahan, Templetenny, Tubbrid, Tullaghorton, Tullaghmelan, and Whitechurch, with the towns of Clogheen, Caher, and Ballyporeen, and part of the par. of Caher. East Iffa and Offa contains the pars. of Ballyclerahan, Carrick, Kilgrant, Kilegan, Kilcash, Kilmurry, Lisronagh, Newchapel, Rathronan, and Temple-Etny, with the town of Abbey, and part of Carrick-on-Suir and Clonmel, besides part of the pars. of Donaghmore, Garran-Gibbon, Newtown-Lennan, Inishlounaght, Killoloan, Kilsheelan, and St. Mary of Clonmel.

IFFLEY, a par. in the hund. of Bullingdon, co. Oxford, 1¾ mile S.E. of Oxford, its post town. It is situated on the left bank of the Isis, adjoining the road from London to Oxford, and near the Oxford railway. It contains Hockmoor and Littleworth. A hard limestone, suitable for rough building, is quarried. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £146, in the patron. of the archdeacon. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with low square tower. In the interior is an ancient piscina and font, also the remains of a stone pulpit and several painted windows. The parochial charities produce £147 a year, of which £39 is the endowment of Dr. Nowell's school.

IFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Burbeach, rape of Bramber, co. Sussex, 7 miles N.E. of Horsham, and 2 miles W. of Crawley, its post town and railway station. The soil is chiefly clay and marl, with much ironstone. The parish is watered by the river Mole, and rises into hills of moderate elevation. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture. The waste land, about 300 acres, was enclosed in 1853, with the exception of a few acres reserved for recreation. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £455 17*s.* 6*d.*, and the vicarial for £216 15*s., with 2½ acres of glebe. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £180. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, contains effigies of a knight and his lady of the time of Edward III., supposed to be Sir John de Ifield, and the tombs of the Hollys family, of whom was Denzel Lord Hollys, of Charles I.'s time. The register commences in 1568. There is a meeting-house for Quakers. Lord Rodney and Captain M. Pipon are lords of the manor and principal landowners. About half a mile N. of the village is Ifield Court, an ancient moated mansion. Ewhurst Place, the residence of the Holles, and subsequently of the Pelhams, is also moated.

IFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Toltingtrough, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 2½ miles S.E. of Gravesend. The village, which is small, is usually called Shinglefield Street, and is situated on the line of the Roman road, traces of which are yet visible. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £149 1*s.* 6*d.* The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £120. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, was rebuilt in 1596, and is the smallest in the diocese. It was repaired and a vestry added in 1838. There is a village school.

IFORD, a par. in the hund. of Swanborough, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 2 miles S.W. of Lewes, its post town and railway station, and 4 from Newhaven. This parish is supposed to derive its name from the shrine or statue of a Saxon deity called Niorde. It is bounded on the E. by the river Ouse. The land is chiefly pasture and down, with some arable. The village is small, but contains several well-built houses. The living is a vic.* united with the vic. of Kingston, near Lewes, in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £343. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a small ancient structure with square tower and shingled spire. The register dates from 1557. There are remains of an ancient fort, and on the downs are several barrows.

IFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Westwood, hund. of Elstub, co. Wilts, 2 miles S. of Bradford. It was formerly a Roman settlement.

IFORD, or IVER, a tythg. in the par. of Christchurch, lib. of Westover, co. Hants, 2 miles N.W. of Christchurch. It contains the divs. of Iford, Tuckton, and Wick.

IFTON, a par. in the hund. of Caldicott, co. Monmouth, 6 miles S.W. of Chepstow. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. united with the rect. of Rogiett, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The church has long been in ruins.

IFTON-RHYN, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Martin, hund. of Oswestry, co. Salop, 5 miles from Ellesmere, and 6 N.E. of Oswestry. It is situated near the Ellesmere canal and Watt's Dyke. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries.

IGBOROUGH, or ICKBOROUGH, a par. in the hund. of Grimshoe, co. Norfolk, 9 miles S. of Swaffham, and 6 N.E. of Brandon, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the river Wissey, and on the road from Brandon to Swaffham. The soil is light loam, and about two-thirds of the land arable, the remainder being pasture, meadow, and heath. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £124. The living is a rect. united with the rect.* of Langford, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, has a square tower. It contains some painted windows representing the Virgin Mary and St. Catherine. The charities produce £9 per annum. There is a National school. A Roman mile stone, pavement, and urns have been found here. The Hon. F. Baring and W. A. T. Amhurst, Esq., are lords of the manor.

IGHTENHILL-PARK, an ext. par. place in the higher div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster. It is situated on the river Calder, and near the road from Burnley to Blackburn. The land is chiefly pasture, and the township abounds in coal and stone of excellent quality. The Duke of Buccleuch is lord of the manor.

IGHTERMURROUGH, a par. in the bar. of Imokilly, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing the vil. of Ladies-Bridge and a portion of the town of Castle-Martyr, which is its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface consists of good soil, and is traversed by a small stream called the Dower. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £405, in the patron. of the crown. Carey's-Wood is the principal residence. The church is about a century old. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, which is united to those of Ballymacoda and Shanbally. Here are also two day-schools.

IGHTFIELD, a par. in the hund. of North Bradford, co. Salop, 4 miles S.E. of Whitchurch, its post town, and 7 from Drayton. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £288. The church is a small ancient edifice dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The charities produce about £5 10s. per annum. There is a National school. Ightfield Hall is the principal residence.

IGHTHAM, a par. in the hund. of Wrotham, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 21 miles S.W. of Wrotham, its post town, and 10 W. of Maidstone. It was anciently named Eightham, from the circumstance of its having contained eight "hams," or villages. At Oldbury Hill was anciently a Roman station, the entrenchments of which, occupying 137 acres, are still traceable. In the enclosure are two fine springs. The par. contains the hmlt. of Borough Green. The land is chiefly arable and hop grounds. The village, which is considerable, was formerly a market town. It was held successively by the Crevequiers, Criols, Inges, and Zouches, from whom latterly it came into the hands of its present owner, D. James, Esq., of Ightham Court Lodge. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £650. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £510. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with square embattled tower containing five bells. It contains monuments to the Selby family, and several pieces of needlework executed by Dame Selby, also effigies of Sir T. Cawne, and brasses to Sir R. Clement, bearing date 1528. The parochial charities produce £15 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, and there is a National school with a small endowment. There is an extensive nursery, which gives employment to a large number of persons. A fair is held in Whitsun week.

IGMANTHORPE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Kirk Deighton, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Wetherby.

IGRIN. See IDA, co. Kilkenny, Ireland.

IKEAN. See ISLAND ICANE.

IKEATHY AND OUGHTERANY, a joint bar., co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is over 7 miles long and about 5 broad, and is bounded by co. Meath on the N., by the bars. of Salt on the E., by the bar. of Clane on the S., and by those of Clane and Carbery on the W. The surface is generally flat, but slopes on the N.E. towards the Liffey, and on the N.W. towards the Boyne. The Royal canal traces the bar. on the N. It contains the pars. of Balraheen, Cloncurry, Sculloges-town, Clonshanbo, Donadea, Dunmurraghill, Mainham, and Kilcock.

IKEN, a par. in the hund. of Plomesgate, co. Suffolk, 4 miles W. of Aldborough, and 5 from Orford. Wickham Market is its post town. The parish, which is wholly agricultural, is situated on the coast of the North Sea. A large quantity of corn, coal, &c., is shipped at Iken Cliff, on the river Ore, which bounds the parish on the N. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £425. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £430. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, is situated on a hill. It is an ancient edifice with a square tower and thatched roof. The charities produce £36 per annum, the produce of the town estate, which is farmed by the Marquis of Hertford.

IKERRIN, a bar. in co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is 13 miles in length and a little over 8 in breadth. It is bounded by King's County on the N. and N.W., by Queen's County and co. Kilkenny on the E., by the bar. of Eliogurty on the S., and by the bar. of Lower Ormond on the W. A large portion of the Devil-Bit mountains lies within the limits on the W. The Suir traverses the length of the barony. It contains the pars. of Barnane, Killavinoge, Killea, Killoskehan, Bourney, Rathnaveoge, and Templeree, and the town of Roscrea, and parts of the pars. of Borrisnafarney, Corbally, Cullenwaine, Templemore, and Templetouhy.

ILAM, a par. in the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 5 miles N.W. of Ashbourn, 9 N.E. of Cheadle, and 12 S.E. of Leek, its post town. The village is small, and situated in a glen, where the rivers Hamps and Manifold have their source, 15 yards apart. The par. contains the hmlts. of Castern, Throwley, and Rushley, and the inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Nearly the whole of the land is pasture. The great road from London to Manchester passes near the village. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £410. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £365. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, was rebuilt in 1618. It has a tower containing five bells, and an octagonal chapel recently erected on the N. side by W. Russell, Esq., in which is a monument to P. Watts, by Chantrey. In the church is the tomb of St. Bertram, also effigies of the Meverell family. In the village, near the bridge, is an hexagonal cross over a fountain erected in memory of Mary Russell, and bearing date 1840. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a school endowed by W. Russell, Esq. Ilam Hall, the principal residence, is a mansion rebuilt in the Elizabethan style. It has an armoury and some pictures, and is surrounded with grounds, in which are St. Bertram's well and ash. Congreve wrote his "Old Bachelor" here.

ILANMORE, one of the chief islands of Clew-Bay, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Westport.

ILANMORE, or EILANMORE, a small island on the coast of Argyll, Scotland. It lies near the N.E. corner of Coll.

ILANROAN, a small island on the coast of Western Argyll, Scotland, near the S. corner of Oronsay, and about 3 miles N.E. of Ilanterach.

ILAR, LOWER AND UPPER, a hund. in two divs., co. Cardigan. The former contains the pars. of Cilcennin, Henfynyw, Llan-badarn-Tref-Eglwys, Llanddeinol, Llanddewi-Aberarth, Llanrhystyd, Llan-Saintffraid, Llan-ych-aiarn, Llan-grwyddon, Trefilan, and part of Kilie-Ayron, with the town of Aberayron; the latter contains the pars. of Gwnnws, Llan-Afan, Llanfihangel-y-Croyddin, Llan-Ilar, Llanfihangel-Lledrod, Rhostie, Yspytty-Ystwyth, Yspytty-Ystrad-Meiric, and part of Llanbadarn-Fawr.

ILCHESTER, or IVELCHESTER, a par. and incorporated town, formerly a representative borough and market town in the hund. of Tintinhull, co. Somerset, 4 miles S.E. of Somerton, 5 from Yeovil, and 122 W.S.W. of London. The town stands on the S. bank of the river Yeo, over which is a stone bridge connecting it with the parish of Northover. It is supposed to be the Ischalis of Ptolemy, and was the chief town in the territory of the Belgæ. When the Romans took possession of the country, they fortified it with a rampart surrounded by a moat filled with water from the river Ivel, and made it one of their principal stations on the great Fosse Way, which led from Lincolnshire to Devon. By the Saxons it was called Gifelcestre, or Ivelcestre, and was a place of importance after the Norman Conquest, containing at the time of the Survey six churches and 107 burgesses. It was ineffectually besieged by Robert Mowbray in 1088, during the rebellion against William Rufus. It was incorporated by charter of King John, but the charter having lapsed, it was renewed by Philip and Mary, and the government vested in a bailiff and 12 capital burgesses. There was formerly a considerable quantity of thread lace and silk manufactured, but these branches of industry have entirely died out, the town now depending on the local traffic and its position in the midst of a large agricultural district. The houses are in general old and indifferently built. At the lower end of the market-place, now disused, is the townhall, where assemblies are occasionally held, and at the upper end a Doric pillar, supporting a vertical sun-dial. It is still a polling-place for the western division of the county but no longer a parliamentary borough, having been disfranchised at the passing of the Reform Act. The assizes for the county, formerly held here, have been transferred to Taunton, Wells, and Bridgwater. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £51 10s. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £150, in the patron. of the Bishop of London. The church is an ancient structure with a small octagonal tower. There are places of worship for Independents and Wesleyans, and a National school. The almshouses, founded in the reign of Henry VI., and rebuilt in 1810, have an income from endowment of £150 per annum. Here was a convent of preaching friars, in which the celebrated Roger Bacon was educated, also a nunnery, called Whitehall, founded in 1220 by William Dacus as an hospital for poor travellers, and dedicated to the Blessed Trinity, which, prior to the Reformation, had dwindled into a free chapel. Ilchester gives the title of earl to the Fox family. A specimen of carved ivory, representing the Annunciation of the Virgin, and supposed to have been brought to England by Richard Cœur-de-Lion, was found hidden behind the wainscoting in the house anciently occupied by the family of Masters, and in a field nearly opposite a massive gold ring, in which was set a coin of the Emperor Severus, in excellent preservation. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of Bath and Wells. Fairs, chiefly for pigs, are held on the Monday before Palm Sunday, 2nd July, and 2nd August.

ILDERTON, a par. in the ward of Coquetdale, co. Northumberland, 4½ miles S.E. of Wooler, its post town, 12 S.W. of Belford. The parish is situated under the Cheviot hills, near the river Breamish, which has a fall at Linhopespout. Several other minor streams, as the Caldgate, Lilbourn, and Roddam, intersect the parish. The high road from Alnwick to Wooler passes to the S.W. It contains the tnshps. of Ilderton, North and South Middleton, Middleton Hall, Roddam, and Roseden. The soil is light and gravelly,. This parish formerly belonged to the Ildertons, who had a seat here. The principal mountain in the neighbourhood is Hedgehope, rising to the height of 2,347 feet above sea level, and at the base of which is a Druidical circle of ten stones. There are traces of Roman camps at Rosedon. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £96. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a modern structure, with tower containing one bell. There are parochial schools for both sexes, also a Sunday-school.

ILFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Ilton, co. Somerset, 2 miles N. of Ilminster.

ILFORD, GREAT, a par. and post town in the hund. of Becontree, co. Essex, 2 miles N. of Barking, 5 W. of Romford, and 7 N.E. of London. It is situated on the river Roding and on the road to Chelmsford. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway, and the London and Tilbury line has a station at Barking for Great Ilford. In 1836 this place, with Barking Side, Chadwell Street, Aldborough Hatch, and part of Hainault Forest, were severed from Barking, and created a separate parish for ecclesiastical purposes. During the reign of Henry II. a hospital for lepers was founded here by Adeliza, Abbess of Barking. At the dissolution of monasteries this hospital ceased to exist, but was afterwards refounded by Queen Elizabeth for six aged men and a chaplain. The town, which stands on the eastern bank of the river Roden, is well lighted with gas, and contains a police station, where petty sessions are held every Saturday. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of London, val. £430, in the patron. of All Souls' College, Oxford. In addition to the parish church there are three district churches at Aldborough Hatch, Barking Side, and St. Mary's, the livings of all which are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £20 to £110. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a modern brick structure, with a tower and spire. The parochial charities produce £105 per annum, which goes to the support of the hospital The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. There is a National school for both sexes, also an infant school, the whole erected at the expense of the Misses Thompson. A reading-room has been established in the town, the expenses of which are defrayed by Miss E. Thompson. Various fossil remains have been met with in a brickfield in a high state of preservation, also a stone coffin containing a human skeleton. A pleasure fair is held in July on the site of the Fairlop oak in Hainault Forest.

ILFORD, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Becontree, co. Essex, 5½ miles W. of Romford, and 6½ N.E. of London. Great Ilford is its post town and railway station. The parish, which is small but very fertile, is situated on the river Roding. The London and Tilbury line passes through the parish and has a station at East Ham. Ilford gaol, a large brick building, is situated in this parish, and petty sessions are held here weekly. The village, which is small, is situated at a little distance to the W. of Great Ilford. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £310. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of London, val. £408. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small but ancient structure, and contains tombs of Lethicullier, the antiquary, and other families. The parochial charities produce £31 per annum. J. W. Wright, Esq., is lord of the manor. The principal residences are Ilford Lodge, and Ilford Cottage. Fairs are held in February and May for the sale of cattle, chiefly from the N. of England and from Wales and Scotland.

ILFRACOMBE, a par., seaport, market town, and fashionable bathing place, in the hund. of Braunton, co. Devon, 11 miles N.W. of Barnstaple, and 50 N.W. of Exeter. This town derives its chief importance from its situation on the shore of the Bristol Channel. In ancient times it was a continental port of so much importance as to furnish six ships and 96 men towards the armament of Edward III. against Calais, while Liverpool contributed only one vessel and 5 men. Its trade is now inconsiderable, consisting chiefly in the conveyance of goods from Bristol, live stock from Ireland, and coal from South Wales, but its prosperity depends on its situation, and the excellence of its beach affording great facilities for sea-bathing. It is a polling town, coastguard station, and subport to Barnstaple. The harbour, which is considered the best on that side of the channel, is surrounded by rocks forming a natural basin, but dries at low water. It is sheltered by a pier 850 feet in length, which has been considerably extended and improved. The harbour has recently been purchased by a company with a view to its extension. It is proposed to enlarge the present area by a couple of acres, and to convert the present space into a floating-dock, and to erect quays on the E. side. At the W. side of the harbour is Lantern Hill, with an old chapel for a lighthouse, which is only used in the winter. Near Wilder's Mouth is Capstone Hill, 181 feet high, and on the E. is the rock of Hillsborough, on the summit of which, 441 feet high, is a Danish fortification. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the coasting and fishing trades. The town is built on the side of a hill near the northern extremity of the county, overlooking the Bristol Channel, and opposite the coast of Wales. It consists principally of one long street extending from the church to the harbour, and which, though formerly inconveniently narrow, has been recently widened. There are besides several new streets and terraces, as Montpellier, Hillsborough, and Coronation terraces. From the E. end of the town views of the Bristol Channel, with the opposite coast of Wales, may be obtained. The town is well paved and lighted with gas. It contains a bank, custom-house, gas works, subscription library, public assembly, ball, reading, and billiard rooms. In lieu of the old market, which was quite insufficient, a new one has been built, the lower part being divided into shops, and the upper part being a large townhall, used ordinarily as a public reading-room. The great attraction of the town is its facilities for sea-bathing, for which it has become a fashionable resort. The living is a vic.* annexed to the cur. of Lee, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £150, in the patron. of the prebend thereof. There is also a district church, dedicated to SS. Philip and James, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £170. The parish church, which is situated at the western extremity of the town, stands on high ground, but is completely sheltered from the N. and S.W. winds by the lofty hills which surround the town. It is an ancient structure, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, with a square tower containing six bells. The interior contains tombs of Captain Richard Bowen, Charles and Grace Cutcliffe. The new church of SS. Philip and James was erected in 1856. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum. Here are British and Foreign infant and National schools, also National schools at Heale, Lee, and Slade. The Independents, Wesleyans, Plymouth Brethren, and Baptists have each a chapel. There is also a Free church at Portland-street and a sailor's chapel at Quay Bethel. A Cottage-garden Society was established here in 1837. Sir B. P. Wrey is lord of the manor. Coaches run to and from Barnstaple daily, and steam packets during the season to Lynton, Hayle, Padstow, Bideford, Bristol, and Swansea. Market day is Saturday, and an annual market on the 23rd August. A fair is held on the 14th April.

ILKESTON, a par. and market town in the hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 8 miles N.W. of Nottingham, its post town, and 10 N.E. of Derby. It is a station on the Erewash Valley branch of the Midland railway. This parish, anciently called Elchestane, is watered by the river Erewash, and the Erewash and the Nutbrook canals pass through it. It contains the hmlts. of Little Hallam and Cotmanhay. Ilkeston of late has considerably increased in importance and become a favourite watering-place owing to the discovery of a mineral spring, the properties of which are said to be different from those of any other spa in England, and to resemble the Seltzer water of Germany. There are commodious baths adjoining the Rutland Arms Railway hotel. The water is used externally as well as internally. The parish abounds with coal and ironstone, and traces of lead have been observed. The manufacture of stockings and lace has declined, but there are extensive brick and lime kilns, also manufactories of stone bottles, fire-brick, garden pots, and common earthenware. The town, which stands on a lofty eminence near the river Erewash, commands extensive views of the surrounding country. Ilkeston obtained the grant of a market and fair in 1251. The Notts assizes were held here during the plague, and the town is at present a polling place for the southern division of the county. Courts lect and baron for the manor are held under the Duke of Rutland. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under an Act of Enclosure in 1794. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £290. There is also a district church at Cotmanhay, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, lately restored at a cost of £4,000, has a lofty tower of modern date containing five bells. In the interior are a stone screen and several ancient monuments. There are schools for boys and girls, held in two buildings lately erected at a cost of £800. The parochial charities produce about £120 per annum, of which £60 goes to Smedley's schools and almshouses, situated at various places. The Independents, Wesleyans, Baptists, Unitarians, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel with Sunday-schools attached. The British schools, erected in 1845, form a commodious brick building, affording accommodation for 120 boys and 60 girls. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor. Market day is Thursday, for pigs, meat, butter, cheese, poultry, &c. Fairs are held on 5th March, Whit-Thursday, and Thursday after Christmas, also a statute fair in October.

ILKETSHALL ST. ANDREW, a par. in the hund. of Wangford, co. Suffolk, 3 miles S.E. of Bungay, its post town. The village is small and principally agricultural. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £130. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has an octangular tower. The charities produce about £22 per annum, the produce of the town estate, which is applied to the repairs of the church. There is a Wesleyan chapel in the village.

ILKETSHALL ST. JOHN, a par. in the hund. of Wangford, co. Suffolk, 2 miles S.E. of Bungay, its post town. The village is small, containing only a few scattered houses. The surface is flat, and the soil a stiff clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £217. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £311, in the patron. of the Lord Chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a small ancient edifice with a square embattled tower. In the interior are several stained-glass windows. The register dates from 1538. R. D. French, Esq., is lord of the manor, and resides at the Hall, a brick mansion.

ILKETSHALL ST. LAWRENCE, a par. in the hund. of Wangford, co. Suffolk, 3 miles S.E. of Bungay, its post town. It is situated on the road to Halesworth, The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £47. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a small ancient building, with a square embattled tower, and was repaired in 1841. The register dates from 1559.

ILKETSHALL ST. MARGARET, a par. in the hund. of Wangford, co. Suffolk, 3 miles S.E. of Bungay, its post town. The soil is clayey, and the land chiefly arable. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £536 8*s., and the vicarial for £120. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £131. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a small ancient structure, with an old circular Norman tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1558. The charities, consisting of the town estate, produce £38 per annum, of which £33 is applied for the repairs of the church, and £5 for the benefit of the poor. Sir Shafto Adair, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

ILKLEY, a par. in the upper divs. of the waps. of Skyrack and Claro, West Riding co. York, 5½ miles N.W. of Otley, its post town, and 14 N. of Bradford. It is situated on the river Wharfe, and near the Leeds and Thirsk railway, which has a station at Arthington. It contains the tnshps. of Ilkley, Middleton, and Nesfield, and the hmlts. of Flaning Stone, Wheatley, and Langbar. Here was formerly the Roman station Alicana, with the camps of Counter Hill, Castleburgh, and Woofa. Many relics have been found, including an altar dedicated to Verbeia, the nymph of the river Wharf, which is preserved at the manor house. The parish, which is of large extent, comprises a considerable portion of high moorland, abounding in grouse. The remainder of the land is chiefly pasture and arable in good cultivation. From a rock called the Hanging Stones, is obtained a view over the surrounding country. Ilkley is famed from an early period for its medicinal spring of remarkably cold water, which, gushing from the rocky hills of Rumbalds Moor, attracts many visitors during the summer season. The waters, though combining few chemical ingredients, are found to be powerfully efficacious in various diseases. There are two hydropathic establishments: one called Ilkley Wells House, capable of accommodating 100 persons, and situated between the village and the moor. In the grounds surrounding it are a gymnasium, bowling green, and Turkish baths. The other, called Ben Rhydding, is justly celebrated for its air and water baths. It was erected in 1848, at a cost of £30,000. It is surrounded by about 200 acres laid out for pleasure and exercise. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £126. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing six bells. It has recently been restored, and in the interior is an E. window, an ancient font, clock, and register chest. There are brasses to the Heber and Watkinson families, bearing date 1650, and several monuments to the Middletons, one dated 1312, with the effigy in stone of Sir Adam de Middleton. In the churchyard are three ancient crosses. There are places of worship for Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. The parochial charities produce £146 per annum, of which £77 goes to the support of a free school. There is also a Sunday-school. Peter Middleton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ILLARY, or BALESHARE, one of the Inverness islands, coast of Scotland. It lies to the W. of North Uist, and is about 4 miles long by 1½ broad.

ILLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Shropham, co. Norfolk, 3 miles W. from Harling Road station on the Norwich and Brandon line of railway. Thetford is its post town. It is a small agricultural village. The land is fertile and chiefly arable. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £140. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a small structure, with square tower containing three bells. R. K. Long, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ILLINGWORTH, a chplry. in the par. of Halifax, wap. of Mosley, West Riding co. York, 2½ miles N.W. of Halifax. The village, which is considerable, may be considered a suburb of Halifax. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £140, in the patron. of the Vicar of Halifax. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. There is a National school.

ILLMIRE, or ILMER, a par. in the hund. of Ashendon, co. Bucks, 2½ miles N.W. of Risborough, its post town, 4 S.E. of Thame, and 9 from Aylesbury. The par. is small and wholly agricultural. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £71 10*s.*, and the vicarial for £104 4*s.* The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £88. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small ancient structure. The charities produce about £3 per annum. Illmire House is the principal residence. The Earl of Chesterfield is lord of the manor.

ILLOGAN, a par. in the hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 2½ miles N.W. of Redruth, its railway station and post town. It is situated on the Bristol Channel, and contains the vils. of Pool, Portreath, and Church Town. In this par. is Carnbrea Fort, 700 feet above sea level, on which is a lofty monument in memory of Francis Lord de Dunstanville Basset, bearing date 1836. The railway from Hayle into the mining district of Gwennap passes through the parish, and a branch diverges from it to Portreath, which is a flourishing place with a small haven for the exportation of copper ore to the smelting works in Wales, and the importation of coal and lime. The soil is loamy, and the substratum is rich in mineral wealth, chiefly copper and tin, of which several mines are in operation. There are also extensive quarries of building stone. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £670. The living is a rect.* with the two chapels-of-ease of Trevenson and Portreath annexed, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £587. The church, dedicated to St. Illogan, is a modern structure, with the tower of the former church still standing, containing a clock and six bells. In the interior are several monuments and brasses to the Basset family. The oldest register begins in 1539, and ends 1699. The Wesleyans and Reformed Methodists have eight places of worship in various parts of this parish, and the Bryanites one. There are five large schools, conducted on the National system, supported by J. F. Basset, Esq., with the aid of government grants and an old endowment of £10 from a former member of the Basset family. Redruth union workhouse is situated in this parish. John Francis Basset, Esq., is lord of the manor. There are numerous Druidical remains, of which the principal is Carn Brea, where Roman coins and British gold coins have been found; the remains of this ancient work occupy the eastern extremity of a hill 700 feet above the level of the sea; the building, though irregular, covers a considerable space, the interstices between the detached portions of rock on which it is founded being connected by arches; the ancient part, which is pierced with loophole windows, is said by antiquaries to have been built by the Britons, while the modern part appears to have been constructed as an object to embellish the view from the grounds of Tehidy House. About 300 yards to the W. are the remains of a circular fortress, called the Old Castle, which was surrounded by a strong wall, and along the cliffs of this part of the coast are numerous remains of ancient fortifications.

ILLSFIELD. See ELLISFIELD, co. Hants.

ILLY, a tnshp. in the par. of Halesowen, hund. of Brimstree, co. Worcester, formerly in Salop, 7 miles S.W. of Birmingham. It is situated near the river Stour and the Dudley canal.

ILMER. See ILLMIRE, co. Bucks.

ILMINGTON, a par. in the hunds. of Kington and Kiftsgate, cos. Warwick and Gloucester, 4 miles W. of Shipston-on-Stour. It contains the hmlts. of Lark Stoke, Compton, Scorpion, and Foxcote. It is a meet for the Warwickshire hounds. The village is considerable, and part of the inhabitants are employed in winding silk, manufactured at the mills of Blockley and Camden. The railway from Stratford-on-Avon to Morton-in-the-Marsh passes through the parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £624. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce £58 per annum. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans; also a National school. The strong chalybeate spring, about a quarter of a mile to the N.W. of the village, was formerly much frequented.

ILMINSTER, a par., post and market town, in the hund. of Abdick, co. Somerset, 20 miles S.E. of Bridgwater, 12 S.E. of Taunton, and 5 N. of Chard railway station. It was a place of considerable importance in the Saxon times, and was formerly more extensive than at present, having been repeatedly damaged by conflagrations. It is situated on the Chard canal and the river Isle, which is crossed by a four-arched bridge. The par. contains the hmlts. of Sea, Crock Street, Peasmarsh, Horton, Winterhay, Higher Horton, Ashwell, and Dillington. A railway is in course of construction, between Ilminster, Chard, and Taunton, thereby connecting, in the most direct way, the two channels from Watchett, through Taunton, Ilminster, and Chard, to Seaton and Axmouth. The inhabitants are employed in the cloth, flax, and silk mills malting, tanning, &c. The land is divided between arable and pasture with some orchards. The soil is a sandy loam, alternating with clay. The town is well paved and lighted with gas. It contains two banks, police station, and market-house. It is under the jurisdiction of the county magistrates, who hold a petty sessions for the division monthly, and constables or tything men are annually appointed at the court-leet of the lord of the manor. It is a polling-place for the western division of the county. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £500. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient cruciform structure, with a lofty square tower containing six bells. In the interior are effigies and monuments, also two brasses of the Wadhams, one of which is to Nicholas, founder of Wadham College, bearing date 1410. The vicar has the privilege of granting licenses for marriages without the jurisdiction of the bishop. The charities produce about £800 per annum, including the endowment of the free grammar school, founded in 1550 by H. Waldron, and endowed with lands for four exhibitions at Oxford University in 1824 by W. Hanning, Esq. There are besides National and Sunday schools for both sexes, also a gratuitous school for the instruction of reading, writing, and arithmetic, maintained by the trustees of Waldron's charity. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Unitarians have each places of worship. Dillington House, the principal residence, is situated in a park, and is the seat of John Lee, Esq., who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. At White Lackington Park is a chesnut tree, under which the Duke of Monmouth dined before the battle of Sedgmoor. Market days are Wednesday and Saturday. A fair for cattle is held on the last Wednesday in August.

ILSINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Teignbridge, co. Devon, 7 miles N.W. of Newton Abbott, its post town, and 5 N. of Ashburton. The parish is small and chiefly agricultural. Here are copper, tin, lead, and iron mines, also extensive granite quarries at Haytor. The soil is various, abounding with pipe and potters' clay. The Stover railway passes through the N.E. part of the parish. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £340, and the vicarial for £300. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £313, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce £98 per annum, of which £21 goes to Ford's school, besides other small bequests. The Duke of Somerset is lord of the manor.

ILSINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Piddletown, co. Dorset, 3 miles E. of Dorchester.

ILSLEY, EAST, or MARKET ILSLEY, a par. and small market town in the hund. of Compton, co. Berks, 11 miles S.W. of Abingdon, and 7 miles S. of Didcot station. Newbury is its post town. It is situated on the chalk downs under Ickleton Street, near the Great Western railway, and is chiefly noted for its sheep fairs. It is a polling and petty sessions town, and has a good trade. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £645, in the patron. of Magdalen College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure in the Norman style of architecture, with a Gothic porch and a square embattled tower containing five bells. Here the Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a National school for both sexes. Miss Vurjan is the lady of the manor. Market days are on alternate Wednesdays from a fortnight before Easter till July, and several fairs are held for the sale of sheep and lambs on Wednesdays from Easter week till November, and one on the 13th October for the hiring of servants and pleasure. The wool fair is in July, and the annual races take place in October.

ILSLEY, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Compton, co. Berks, 11 miles N.W. of Newbury, and 2 from East Ilsley, its post town. It is situated in a deep valley near the centre of the downs, almost hidden by the surrounding hills. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the breweries. The land is chiefly arable. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1825. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £537, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small ancient structure with low tower. In the interior are monuments to Sir John Head and William Moorland. The charities produce about £2 per annum, besides 10 loads of wood given to 5 poor men annually. The living was once held by Bishop Goodman, and Mark Antonio, Archbishop of Spalatro, who first accounted for the colours of the rainbow. There are National schools for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. — Baker, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ILSTON, or LLANILLTYD, a par. in the hund. of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, 7 miles from Swansea, its post town and railway station, and 5 from Loughor. It is situated on the river Pen-Arths-Pill. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £200, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Illtyd. In 1825 several Roman coins and antiquities of the reign of Nero were found here.

ILSTON-ON-THE-HILL, a chplry. in the par. of Carlton Curlieu, hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 3 miles S.W. of Billesdon, its post town, and 8 S.E. of Leicester. It is a small village, and wholly agricultural. The soil is various. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £100. The church has a square tower containing a clock and three bells. The charities produce about £123 per annum, of which the town land is £88. John King, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ILTON, a par. in the hund. of Abdick, co. Somerset, 2 miles N. of Ilminster, its post town, 5 W. of South Petherton, and 7 W. of Martock station on the Yeovil branch of the Bristol and Exeter railway. It is situated on the Chard canal, and contains the hmlts. of Ashford, Hurcott, and Ilford. The soil is clayey, and subsoil limestone. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £275, and the vicarial for £120. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £193, in the patron. of the Bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a stone structure with tower surmounted by a spire, and contains four bells. The church has recently undergone repairs. The register dates from 1642. There is a school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The parochial charities produce about £60 per annum, including the endowment for Whetstone's almshouses. Lady Egremont is lady of the manor and chief landowner.

ILTON-WITH-POTT, a tnshp. in the par. of Masham, wap. of East Hang, North Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Masham. The land is principally pasture and meadow. The soil is stony and gravelly. Admiral Harcourt is principal landowner and lord of the manor.

IMBER, a par. in the hunds. of Heytesbury and Swanborough, co. Wilts, 4 miles N.E. of Heytesbury, its post town, 6 N.E. of Warminster, and 7 S.E. of Westbury railway station. The parish is situated on Salisbury Plain, and surrounded by extensive downs. The substratum is chalk alternated with flint. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £409. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £120. The church is dedicated to St. Giles. In the interior are two stone effigies of Knights Templars of the family of Le Rouse. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. The Baptists have a chapel, and there is a National school.

IMERSAY, or OVERSAY, a small island on the W. coast of Argyle, near the S.W. corner of Isla.

IMLAGH. See EMLAGH, co. Meath.

IMMINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 8 miles N.W. of Great Grimsby, its post town, and 2 N.W. of Harbury, its nearest railway station. The par., which is situated near the river Humber, contains the hmlt. of Roxton. The land is chiefly pasture. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £105, in the patron. of the Earl of Yarborough and others. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a square tower containing three bells. The register commences in 1570. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. The Earl of Yarborough is lord of the manor.

IMOGEELY. See MOGEELY, co. Cork, Ireland.

IMOKILLY, a bar. in co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is 17 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 11 miles. It is environed by Kinataloon on the N., by Youghall harbour on the E., by the Atlantic on the S., and by Cork harbour on the W. This bar. contains the pars. of Aghada, Ardagh, Ballintemple, Corkbeg, Inch, Rostellan, Titeskin, Trabolgan, Ballyoughtera, Bohillane, Clonpriest, Cloyne, Garryvoe, Imogeely, Ightermurragh, Kilcredan, Killeagh, Kilmahon, St. Mary of Youghal, and parts of Clonmult, Dungourney, Garranekinneflake, Middleton, and Mogeesha. It also contains the towns of Cloyne, Castlemartyr, Middleton, and Youghal.

IMPHRICK, or EMERICK, a par. in the bars. of Fermoy, and Orrery and Kilmore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.N.W. of Doneraile. Midleton is its post town. It is 2½ miles in length, and near 2 in breadth. The river Awbeg traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with Lisgoold, £760, in the patron. of the bishop. In the Roman Catholic arrangement it is included in the Ballyhea district. Velvetstown is the principal seat of the neighbourhood.

IMPINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Northstow, co. Cambridge, 3 miles N. of Cambridge, its post town and railway station. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated near the road from Cambridge to Cottenham. The soil is loam and clay, and the land principally arable. The village, which consists of a few farmhouses, was formerly a market town. The tithes were commuted for land upon the enclosure of the parish in 1806. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £128, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a small structure with tower containing three bells. In the interior is a brass to Sir John Burgoyne and family, bearing date 1500. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. In 1799 a woman named Elizabeth Woodcock was buried in the snow for eight days, but was taken out alive. A monument recording the circumstance has been erected on the spot where she was found. This was the birthplace of Pepys, secretary to the navy in the reign of Charles II., and author of the "Diary." The old mansion of the family is still standing, but it passed some years ago by marriage into the hands of the Coffin family. Christ's College, Cambridge, are lords of the manor.

INA, a lake 3 miles long, also the name of a valley and mountain pass in the par. of Moyrus, in the bar. of Ballinahinch, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. They are situated near the Binabola hills, or Twelvepins, and about 8 miles N. of Betraghby Bay.

INAGH, a par. in the bar. of Inchiquin, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, now included in the par. of Dysart, but recognised as a separate par. in the Roman Catholic arrangement. [See DYSART.]

INCE, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, co. Chester, 6 miles W. of Frodsham, its post town, and 3 N. of Dunham. It is a station on the Helsby and Hooton branch of the Birkenhead, Lancashire, and Cheshire Junction railway. The village, which is small, is situated near the ferry on the river Mersey. There was formerly a seat of the Abbots of St. Werburgh, a part of which is now used as a farmhouse. The land is moory and in parts marsh, protected by an embankment from the tides of the Mersey. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £250. The church, which is situated on a lofty eminence, is dedicated to St. James. It is an ancient structure with a tower containing a clock and three bells. The church was thoroughly repaired in 1854, at an outlay of £3,000, by the late Mrs. Park. In the interior is a painted E. window. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held. Ince Hall is a building in the Italian style, situated in a park, and is approached by a carriage-way about 1 mile in length.

INCE-BLUNDELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Sephton, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 9 miles N. of Liverpool, and 7 S.W. of Ormskirk. It is situated on the river Alt, near the coast. It has been the seat of the Blundells from the reign of Henry III., from which it takes its suffix. The land is divided between arable, meadow, and woodland. In the village is a stone cross of a very ancient date. There is a Roman Catholic chapel and day schools. Ince-Blundell Hall, the seat of the Blundell family, is situated in the midst of a wooded park. Close to it is the Pantheon, two-thirds the size of that of Rome, and containing upwards of 500 pieces of sculpture and 200 paintings, some of them by the most celebrated masters, including Raphael's "Fall of Man" and Canova's "Psyche."

INCE-IN-MAKERFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Wigan, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, adjoining the borough of Wigan. It is a station on the Lancashire and Yorkshire, and is crossed by the London and North-Western railway. The Leeds and Liverpool canal runs through the township. It is celebrated for a species of coal called "cannel," which is found here in large quantities, and the works of which employ a large number of the inhabitants. There are extensive iron and chemical works, and cotton mills, in which a great number of hands are engaged. The principal residence is Ince Hall, formerly the seat of the Gerard family. There are two cemeteries at Ince, one for its own use, and the other belonging to the town of Wigan, situated on either side of the London and North-Western railway. There is a National school.

INCH, a par. in the bar. of Shelmaliere West, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6½ miles S.W. by W. from Taghmon, its post town. It is 2 miles long by about 1 mile broad. The surface, which is partly drained by the Corug, consists of middling soil. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Horetown, £362, in the patron. of the bishop. This parish forms part of the Roman Catholic district of Newbawn.

INCH, a par. in the bars. of Gorey and Arklow, cos. Wexford and Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Arklow. Gorey is its post town. The surface has some mountain, but the greater part is well cultivated. It is about 3 miles long by 2 broad. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with another, £374, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church was built in 1831 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilgorman. There are a parish and three private schools. St. Austin's and Ballyfad are the principal residences. A collision took place here between James II.'s and William III.'s troops after the battle of the Boyne. Chalybeate springs occur in several places.

INCH, or INCH-DOVEA, a par. in the bar. of Eliogarty, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Thurles. Cappawhite is its post town. It is 2½ miles in length by 2 in breadth. The surface consists of a medium soil occupying part of the Suir Valley. The southern border is partly traced by the river Clodiah. The living is suspended, in the dioc. of Cashel. The par. is made up of the two ancient districts of Inch and Dovea. There is a Roman Catholic chapel attached to that of Drom, also three day schools.

INCH, an island and par. in the bar. of West Inishowen, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 9 miles N.W. of Londonderry. Derry is its post town. The par. includes the district of Barr of Inch, or Mintiaghs, and the island of Inch, situated on the W. side of Lough Swilly. The surface is somewhat broken and rises in the centre at Inch Top to a considerable height. The living is a perpet cur. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £92, in the patron. of the dean of the dioc. The church stands on the island, and was recently repaired by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The parish is included in the Roman Catholic district of Iskahan, Burt, and Inch. There are a Roman Catholic chapel on the island, and a Presbyterian meeting-house. Here are also a parochial, a Sunday, and two private schools. Inch House, on the island, is the principal residence. On the S. side of the island is the site of a castle built by Sir Cahir O'Dogherty, in the 15th century. It afterwards belonged to Sir Arthur Chichester, from whom it descended with the island to the present owner, Lord Templemore. The island was occupied by the insurgents in 1641. Several ferries keep up the communication with the mainland.

INCH, a par. in the bar. of Imokilly, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, between 4 and 5 miles S.W. of Cloyne, its post town. The surface consists of a fair soil, and is traversed by the road from Cloyne to Poor Head. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £409, in the patron. of the crown. The church was built in 1831 by the late Board of First Fruits. The parish forms part of the Aghada Roman Catholic district. There are parish and other schools under the National Board. The demesne of Castle-Mary is a prominent feature. Woodview is another residence. The limestone quarries of Carrigacrump are very extensive. There is a coastguard station at Poor Head, near which are the remains of a stronghold built at the instance of Queen Elizabeth, and reduced by the Earl of Desmond. There are traces of a cromlech at Castle-Mary.

INCH, a small island, lying at the head of Lough Allen, co. Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. Here are vestiges of some religious structure, attributed to St. Beorg.

INCH, an ancient par. in co. Inverness, Scotland, now joined to Kingussie.

INCH, a par. in co. Wigtown, Scotland, containing the post-office vils. of Cairnryan and Lochans. It has the co. of Ayr on the N. and Loch Ryan on the W., and is otherwise bounded by the pars. of New Luce, Old Luce, Portpatrick, Stonykirk, Stranraer, and Leswalt.

It is a little over 10 miles in length, and its average breadth is about 4 miles. The greater part of the surface consists of a tract lying between Loch Ryan and Luce Bay. In the S. it is nearly flat, but in the N. and N.W. the surface becomes elevated. Part of the upland district is rugged and barren, but affords some pasturage and arable. The levels consist of a fair soil, and about two-fifths of the entire surface is under cultivation. The Main water describes part of the eastern boundary, meeting the Luce water at Waterfoot, while the Pillanton follows the S. and S.W. boundary for some distance. Several lakes assist the drainage of the interior, particularly the Saulseat. This par. is in the presb. of Stranraer, and synod of Galloway, in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £259. The church was built in 1770. There are two Free churches and a chapel-of-ease in the parish; also five or six private schools. The ancient parish of Saulseat and the greater part of the former parish of Inch form the present parish. The church belonged to the bishops of Galloway previous to the Reformation, but reverted to the crown in 1689. Castle Kennedy stands on a peninsula in the loch of that name, and is supposed to have been built in the time of James VI. It belonged to the earls of Cassilis, and afterwards to Sir John Dalrymple, from whom it came to the earls of Stair. It was burnt in 1715, and has since remained unoccupied. The resident landowners are Lord Dalrymple and General Sir. J. Wallace. On a peninsula stretching out into Saulseat Loch stood an abbey founded in the 12th century for Premonstratensian friars. The burial ground still exists, but only slight traces of the abbey. Cairns, tumuli, and sepulchral remains are very numerous. Innermessan farm is the site of the ancient town of the Novantes Rerigonium. Near this spot is an extensive moat, where relics of antiquity have been found. The ancient seat of the Lyns of Larg, and Craigcaffie Castle, that of the Nelson family, were in this parish. Two ancient chapels also stood in the parish—St. John's, on Loch Ryan, and St. Patrick's, near Portpatrick. The waters of the parish abound in fish and wild fowl. Sir John Ross, the Arctic navigator, was a native of Inch.

INCH. See also ENNIS, INIS, and INNIS for places not occurring in the following order.

INCH-ABOR, a small island in Loch Lomond, co. Dumbarton, Scotland, near the mouth of the river Endrick.

INCH-AFFRAY ABBEY, in the par. of Maderty, co. Perth, Scotland, 8 miles W. of Perth. It was founded in 1200 by Gilbert Earl of Strathearn, and was given at the Dissolution to the Drummonds. The site now belongs to the Earl of Kinnoul.

INCH AND ISLANDS, or INNISCOURCY, a par. in the bar. of Lower Lecale, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2½ miles N. of Downpatrick, its post town. It is about 3 miles long, and nearly as broad. There is a considerable tract of rocky waste; the remainder consists of a middling soil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Down, val. £214, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1742, and enlarged in 1831. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Crossgar, Kilmore, and Killyleagh. There are parochial and Sunday schools, and two private establishments. Finnebrogue is a large demesne. The river Quoile, which separates the parish from Downpatrick, is here crossed by a bridge. There is also an embankment across Lough Strangford, which checks the action of the tide. On Inch Island Sir John de Courcy founded a Cistercian abbey in 1180, in atonement for having destroyed Erynagh Abbey, which had been converted into a stronghold against him. The present remains, though much dilapidated, exhibit some interesting features.

INCHARD, a loch in the par. of Edderachylis, co. Sutherland, Scotland, near Rhiconish. It is about 5 miles in length by 3 broad.

INCH-CRAYOCK, or ROSSIE ISLAND, a small island belonging to the par. of Craig, lying in South Esk, co. Forfar, Scotland. It has a flat surface extending over about 34 acres. In 1618 Inch-Crayock was embodied with Skeoch and Dunninald in forming the parish of Craig, previous to which period the island, with some neighbouring lands, gave name to a separate parish, and had a parish church and burial-ground. The cemetery is still in use.

INCH-CAILLIACH, a small island lying in Loch Lomond, in the par. of Buchanan, co. Stirling, Scotland, near the embouchure of the river Endrick. Its surface consists generally of good land. A nunnery formerly stood here occupied by elderly women, hence the name of the islet. It was also the site of the church and burial-ground of the ancient parish of Inch-Cailliach.

INCH, CASTLE, in co. Kildare, Ireland, 3 miles E. of Athy.

INCH-CLAIR, INCH-FAD, INCH-FRIECHLAND, INCH-GALBRAITH, and INCH-GRANGE, small islands in Loch Lomond, co. Stirling, Scotland, near the mouth of the river Endrick.

INCHCOLM, an island lying in the Frith of Forth, and belonging to the par. of Aberdour, co. Fife, Scotland. It is about 1 mile long, and consists of a bare uninteresting surface, and is occupied by one family only. The island was anciently called Æmona, and seems to have been the site of a Druidical temple, and afterwards of a chapel founded by some of the disciples of St. Columba. On the island are extensive remains of a monastery founded in 1123, in fulfilment of the vow of Alexander I., who took shelter here from the violence of a storm when crossing the Frith.

INCHCONACHAN, or COLQUHOUN'S ISLAND, in Loch Lomond, co. Dumbarton, Scotland, near Luss.

INCHCORMAC, a small island in Loch Swin, co. Argyll, Scotland, near Jura Sound.

INCH-GARVIE, a small island in the Frith of Forth, co. Fife, Scotland, opposite Queensferry. It was fortified at the commencement of the present century.

INCHICRONAN, a par. in the bar. of Upper Bunratty, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5½ miles N.E. of Ennis. Corofin is its post town. Its length is 5 miles, and its breadth over 3. The vil. of Crusheen is in this par. The greater part of the surface consists of mountain and waste. The par. is traversed by the road from Ennis to Gort. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Kilnaboy, £432, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, with a school, besides three other schools. Drumcor, Doon, Glenwilliam, Garlick Hill, and Viewmount are among the principal residences. Within this parish are the lake and island of Inchicronan; the latter is the site of an abbey, founded in 1190 by Donald O'Brien, King of Limerick, and granted in 1620 to Donogh Earl of Thomond. Here are also the ruins of the old parish church and of O'Brien's castle.

INCHIGEELAGH, or EVELEARY, a par. in the bars. of East Carbery and West Muskerry, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles W.S.W. of Macroom, its post town. It is 9 miles long by 6 broad. The parish consists of a wild and mountainous district. Within its limits rises the river Lea, and here are the lakes Gougane-Barra and Allua; the former is about 1 mile long by half a mile broad. In the lake lies a small island connected with the shore by a causeway, which legend asserts to have been the retreat of St. Finbar. There are some remains of a hermitage which was occupied by O'Mahony in the last century. The peasantry formerly made an annual pilgrimage here to do honour to the patron saint. The pass of Cooleagh occurs on the road from Macroom to Bantry, and is one of the most remarkable ravines in Ireland. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £380, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1815 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are two commodious Roman Catholic chapels; likewise three schools under the National Board, a private and a Sunday school. On rising ground near the river stands Carrinacurra Castle, which belonged to the O'Learys, the ancient lords of the soil, and from whom the district was formerly named. Fairs are held on the 31st May, 31st August, and the 3rd December.

INCHINABACKY, or ROXBOROUGH, a par. in the bar. of Barrymore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Castle-Martyr. Midleton is its post town. The surface consists of a fertile soil with abundance of limestone. It is drained by the Midleton rivulet on the S.W. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with another, £115, in the patron. of the crown. The church was recently in ruins. The parish belongs to the Roman Catholic district of Midleton. Roxborough, Stumphill, and Castleview are the principal residences.

INCHINNAN, a par. in co. Renfrew, Scotland. Renfrew is its post town. It is over 3 miles long, and is 3 miles broad at the widest. It is nearly insulated by the rivers Clyde, Cart, Gryfe, Houston, and Erskine. The surface is hilly, and it possesses a rich and well-cultivated soil. The road from Glasgow to Greenock traverses the parish. This par. is in the presb. of Paisley, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister has a stipend of £254. The church, a Gothic structure with square tower, occupies the site of the ancient church, which was removed in 1828. There is Free Church accommodation in the parish. The church and lands of Inchinnan were granted to the Knights Templars by David I., and afterwards belonged to the Knights of St. John. Some old tombs are pointed out as the Templars' graves. The principal landowner is Campbell of Blythswood, who acquired the estate by purchase from the Duke of Montrose. The ancient mansion, built in 1506, stood near the present site of Garnaland farm. The rivers are crossed here by a double bridge built in 1812. Lime and freestone are obtained, and coal is also abundant.

INCHIQUIN, a bar. in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Its boundaries are co. Galway on the N., Bunratty on the E., Islands on the S., and Corcomroe on the W. It is over 12 miles in length, with a breadth of 10. In the vicinity of the river Fergus the surface is flat with a light soil. Large tracts of moorland occur in the W. Several lakes are within the limits, the principal of which are Tedano and Inchiquin. It contains the pars. of Dysert, Inagh, Kilkeedy, Killinaboy, Kilnamona, Rath, Ruan, and the town of Corrofin. This barony was granted in 1585 to Lord Inchiquin by Queen Elizabeth, previous to which time it had been called Tullagh O'Dea, and was the territory of the O'Briens.

INCHIQUIN, an island of Lough Corrib, in the bar. of Clare, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It was the site of an abbey founded, as is alleged, before the 7th century.

INCHIQUIN, a lough in co. Clare, Ireland, near Corrofin.

INCH-IRA and INCH-MARTIN, several small islands in the co. of Perth, Scotland, near the embouchure of the rivers Tay and Earn.

INCH-KEITH, an island lying in the Frith of Forth, co. Fife, Scotland. It is situated 2½ miles from Pettycur, and belongs to the par. of Kinghorn. It is about half a mile long by 500 yards broad. The surface is rocky, and has an elevation at the N. end of 180 feet, on which stands a lighthouse, built in 1803. It has a revolving light which flashes once a minute, and is visible at a distance of 18 miles. There are several springs of good water on the island. In Maitland's "History of Edinburgh" we find that in 1497 the Privy Council gave an order that all in the burgh infected with a plague called the "grangore" should be conveyed by the government to the island of Inch-Keith. This island is supposed to be the Caer Guidi of Bede. It was the property of the Keith family, but having reverted to the crown was granted to Lord Glammis, and subsequently came into the possession of the Buccleuchs. It was fortified by the English under Somerset, but was reduced by the French, and the fortifications dismantled by order of the Scotch government in 1567.

INCH-KENNETH, a small island of the Hebrides, included in the par. of Kilfinichen, co. Argyle, Scotland. It lies near the mouth of Loch-na-Keal. The surface is highly fertile, and the island about 1 mile by half a mile in size. Here are remains of the ancient parish church and burial-ground, which latter is still in use. Dr. Johnson visited this island and became the guest of Sir Allan Maclean, the ruins of whose cottage are pointed out. Here is the residence of Colonel Macdonald, who is the present proprietor of the island.

INCH-LONAIG, a small island in Loch Lomond, co. Dumbarton, Scotland, formerly covered with yew-trees.

INCHMACNERIN, an island of Lough Key, in the bar. of Boyle, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It was the site of a priory supposed to have been founded in the 6th century.

INCH-MACHOME, an island lying in Monteith Loch, in the par. of Port-of-Monteith, co. Perth, Scotland. Its surface extends over an area of about 5 acres. Here stand interesting ruins of an extensive Augustinian priory, founded by Edgar, King of Scotland. In 1310 it was visited by Robert Bruce, and afterwards by James VI. In 1547 the infant Queen Mary was hidden away here to prevent her forcible marriage with Edward VI.

INCHMARIN, the largest island in Loch Lomond, co. Dumbarton, Scotland. It is 2 miles in length by 1 mile across, and is independent of any parish. It is well wooded, and was formerly the site of a castle of the Lennox family, but is now a hunting-seat of the Duke of Montrose.

INCHMARNOCK, an islet in the Frith of Clyde, on the W. side of Bute, Scotland. On it stand the remains of an old chapel dedicated to St. Marnoch.

INCHMARTINE, an ancient parish now joined to Errol, co. Perth, Scotland.

INCHMICKERY, an islet in the Frith of Forth, coast of Scotland. It lies between the islands of Cramond and Inchcolm, and is surrounded by an oyster-bed.

INCH-MOAN, a small island in Loch Lomond, co. Dumbarton, Scotland, near Luss.

INCHMORE, a small island in Lough Gouna, bar. of Granard, co. Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It contains some church ruins of uncertain origin. Also an island in Lough Ree, co. Westmeath, Ireland, 6 miles N. of Athlone.

INCHMORE, a peninsula and castle in co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles from Kilkenny, on the banks of the river Nore. Inchmore Castle was built by Robert Baron of Courtstown, who died about 1640, and was a residence of the Grace family. It is now a ruin.

INCH-MORE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Upper Moyfenrath, co. Meath, Ireland, 7 miles S.W. of Trim. It is situated near the bridge over the Boyne.

INCH-NA-DAMPH, a hmlt. in the par. of Assynt, co. Sutherland, Scotland. It is seated on the edge of Loch Assynt. Fairs are held on the first Thursday in January, and in August and September.

INCH ST. LAWRENCE, or ISERTLAURENCE, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of Limerick. Ballybrood is its post town. It is 1½ mile long by half a mile broad. The surface consists of arable and pasture land. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Emly, val. with Ballybrood, £429, in the patron. of the bishop. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Cahirconlish; adjoining it is the National school. Remains of a fortress are observed at Scaghard, and of a castle at Grenane.

INCH-TAVANACH, or MONK'S ISLAND, on the W. side of Loch Lomond, co. Dumbarton, Scotland, near Luss. It is about three-quarters of a mile in length by half a mile broad.

INCH-TORR, a small island in Loch Lomond, co. Stirling, Scotland, forms part of the parish of Buchanan.

INCHTURE AND ROSSIE, a par. in the Carse of Gowrie, co. Perth, Scotland, containing the vils. of Ballendean and Balledgarno, and the post vil. of Inch-ture. It is about 4 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 3 miles. Its boundaries are the Tay and the pars. of Abernyte, Errol, Kinnaird, and Longforgan. The surface is flat and in a high state of cultivation. One or two small rivulets traverse the parish. Both the coach and railroad from Perth to Dundee pass through the interior, and the latter has a station here. The par. is in the presb. of Dundee and synod of Angus and Mearns, in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £225. The church stands in the village of Inchture. It is a Gothic building erected in 1834. The ancient parishes of Rossie and Inchture were united in 1670. Rossie Priory, the mansion of the Kinnairds, was built in 1817 by Charles, the eighth lord. Ballendean House is another residence. In the E. of the parish are seen the ruins of Moneur Castle. There is a large brewery in the village, which occupies a site 9 miles from Dundee. The weaving of linen is followed by many of the inhabitants. Whinstone and freestone are quarried in several places.

INCH-TURK, an islet in Lough Ree, co. Westmeath, Ireland, 6 miles N. of Athlone.

INCHYDONEY, an island in Clonakilty Bay, co. Cork, Ireland.

INCHYOLAGHAN. See CASTLE-INCH, co. Kilkenny, Ireland.

INCHYRA, a vil. situated on the borders of the pars. of Kinfauns and St. Madoes, co. Perth, Scotland, 8 miles from Perth. It is a small port on the river Tay, and has a good harbour, with a ferry to Fingask. Inchyra also gives name to a small district or detachment of the parish of Kinnoul. It extends about 1 mile in length and three-quarters of a mile in breadth.

INCOMB, a tnshp. in the par. of Ivinghoe, co. Bucks, 2 miles from Ivinghoe.

INDAL, a loch on the S.W. side of Islay, co. Argyll, Scotland.

INELLAN, a vil. and the seat of a post-office in the par. of Dunoon, co. Argyle, Scotland, 3 miles S. of Dunoon. It is of modern growth, and being easily accessible by the Glasgow and Rothesay steamboat, has become a summer resort. Here are Free Church and chapel-of-ease congregations.

INGANESS BAY and HEAD, in the Island of Pomona, Middle Orkneys, coast of Scotland, 3 miles E. of Kirkwall.

INGARSBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Hungerton, hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 5 miles E. of Leicester. It was formerly a grange to Leicester Abbey. The principal residence is Ingarsby Hall, where is preserved the carved bed on which Wolsey died. Here are some barrows, or giants' stones. Lord Maynard is lord of the manor.

INGATESTONE, a par. and post town in the hund. of Chelmsford, co. Essex, 6 miles S.W. of Chelmsford, and 5 N.E. of Brentwood. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. The town is supposed to have derived its name from the Roman milestone which stood here on the road to Colchester. It was formerly a market town and a place of some importance. For several centuries the manor was possessed by the abbots of Barking, but at the Dissolution it was given by Henry VIII. to the Petres. Here are gasworks belonging to the railway company. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, with the perpet. cur. of Buttsbury annexed, val. £420. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a lofty tower containing five bells. It contains monuments of the Petre family. The charities produce £3 per annum. There is a chapel for Independents, and an infant school with a small endowment. In 1557 Sir William Petre founded and endowed twelve almshouses for Catholics; and Mrs. Rayner left a small sum for almshouses in 1806. Ingatestone Hall was formerly the seat of the Petre family, and attached to it is a Catholic chapel. The Hyde, the seat of Edgar Disney, Esq., situated in the midst of well-laid-out grounds, contains a collection of pictures.

INGBIRCHWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Penistone, wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Denby. There is a Wesleyan chapel in the village. Lord Scarborough is lord of the manor.

INGERTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. and lib. of Ripon, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.E. of Ripon.

INGESTRIE, a par. in the hund. of South Pirehill, co. Stafford, 3½ miles N.E. of Stafford, its post town, and 2½ from the Weston and Colwich stations on the Trent Valley railway. It is situated on the Grand Trunk canal and river Trent. It passed from the family of the De Multons to the Chetwynds in the reign of Edward III., who take hence the title of viscount. The surface rises gently towards the W. The land is in general a sandy loam with some clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £204 2*s.* 6*d.* The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £569. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1676 by the Chetwynds, and is a small structure with a chancel paved with black and white marble, and containing several monuments and stained-glass windows exhibiting the armorial bearings of the Chetwynds. Ingestrie Hall, late the seat of the earls of Shrewsbury and Talbot, is a fine mansion with a park and extensive plantations. A bridge has been recently erected over the river Trent, connecting this parish with that of Weston. The Earl of Shrewsbury and Talbot is lord of the manor and owner of the land.

INGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Aslacoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 8½ miles N.W. of Lincoln, its post town, and 6 N.E. of the Marton station. The village is considerable, but chiefly agricultural. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1769. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £50. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was rebuilt in 1792. Colonel Neville is lord of the manor. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans.

INGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourn, co. Suffolk, 4 miles N. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town and railway station. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge. The living is a rect.,* consolidated with the rects. of Culford and Timworth, in the dioc. of Ely, val. £549. The church is dedicated to St. Bartholomew. The Rev. E. R. Benyon is lord of the manor, and owner of the whole of the soil.

INGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Happing, co. Norfolk, 16 miles N.E. of Norwich, and 1½ mile N.E. of Stalham, its post town. It was formerly held by the Inghams, and had a small college for the redemption of captives, founded in 1360 by Sir Miles Stapleton. The village, which is considerable, is situated about 2 miles from the river Ant. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £456. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a large structure, with lofty tower. In the interior are two ancient brasses to the Stapletons, dating from 1432, and effigies of Sir O. Ingham, governor of Acquitaine, and Roger de Boys. The register dates from 1650. There are some small charities, consisting of 17½ acres of land, allotted to the poor on the enclosure of the parish in 1812. The Baptists have a place of worship. A fair is held on the Monday after Whitsuntide for cattle and stock.

INGLEBOROUGH, a mountain in the West Riding co. York, 7 miles N.W. of Settle. It rises to the height of 2,361 feet, and is covered with grass to the summit, which is generally hid in mists.

INGLEBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Foremark, hund. of Repton, co. Derby, 6 miles N.E. of Burton, and 7 S. of Derby. It is situated near the river Trent. In this township there is an elm-tree 600 years old.

INGLEBY-ARNCLIFFE, a par. in the W. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 8 miles S.W. of Stokesley, and 8 from Northallerton, its post town. It is a station on the North Yorkshire and Cleveland section of the North-Eastern railway. The par. contains the hmlt. of Ingleby Cross. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £49. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a tower. In the interior are two ancient effigies in stone, much disfigured. The register commences from 1657. Ingleby Hall, situated in the midst of wooded grounds, and sheltered by a lofty range of hills, is the seat of — Mauleverer, Esq., who is the lord of the manor. A short distance from the mansion are the ruins of the Carthusians of Mount Grace, occupying a space of about 3 acres, entered by a Gothic gateway; the tower of which, supported by perpendicular Gothic arches, is still standing. A portion of the building has been coverted into tenements. In 1804 a large inn was erected here by subscription, called the Cleveland Tontine, but is now converted into a farmhouse.

INGLEBY BARWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Stainton, W. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Yarm. It contains the hmlts. of Leven Bridge, and Newtown. It is situated near the river Tees.

INGLEBY GREENHOW, a par. in the W. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Stokesley. It contains Battersby and Greenhow, and is a station on the North Yorkshire and Cleveland section of the North-Eastern railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in husbandry. The village, which is small, is situated on a gentle acclivity. Near a third of the parish is moorland, the remainder chiefly meadow and pasture, with some arable, and about 500 acres of woodland. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £67. The church was rebuilt in 1741. The charities produce about £13, of which £4 goes to the support of a school. Ingleby Manor is the principal residence.

INGLEBY, NORTH and SOUTH, hmlts. in the par. of Saxelby, wap. of Lawress, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.W. of Lincoln.

INGLESHAM, a par. in the hund. of Highworth, co. Wilts, 3 miles N. of Highworth, its post town, and 2 S. of Lechlade. Formerly a part of this parish was in the co. of Berks. It is bounded on the N. and W. by the river Isis. The Thames and Severn canal commences here. The land is chiefly meadow and pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £198. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £295, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a small structure, with an open campanile turret. It contains many curious details of Norman architecture, and some sculptured screen work. There is a parochial school.

INGLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Staindrop, S.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 8¼ miles W. of Darlington. It is situated on the high road from Barnard Castle to Darlington. The soil is clayey. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £165, in the patron. of the Vicar of Staindrop. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a modern stone building, with belfry containing one bell. The register dates from 1844. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a village school for both sexes, in which the Primitive Methodists hold divine service on Sunday evenings. The Duke of Cleveland is lord of the manor.

INGLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bentham, W. div. of the wap. of Staincliff, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S. of Bentham, and 10 S.E. of Settle, its post town. It is situated on the river Creta, under Ingleborough Hill, and contains the hmlts. of Twisleton, and Gearstones. It is a station on the Ingleton branch of the North-Western railway, which has a viaduct across the river. The village is considerable, and cotton spinning is carried on to some extent. There are several large caves in the hills. The surface is very hilly, the highest point being Thornton Scar, which is about 300 feet above sea-level, and abounds with coal and limestone, the mines of which afford employment to many of the inhabitants. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £120, in the patron. of the Rector of Bentham. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with tower containing three bells. The charities produce about £15 per annum. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans, also a National school. The township contains a police station and court-houses, in which petty sessions are held for Ewcross division.

INGLEWOOD FOREST, a district in the par. of Penrith, Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 3 miles N. of Penrith. It is situated in a dreary tract of moorland, and was a forest before the reign of Henry VIII. Inglewood Cottage is the principal residence.

INGLISMALDIE, a seat of the Earl of Kintore, in co. Kincardine, Scotland, 3 miles N.W. of Marykirk. It is situated on the river Esk, and surrounded by extensive woods.

INGOE, a tnshp. in the par. of Stamfordham, N.E. div. of the ward of Tindale, co. Northumberland, 9 miles N.E. of Hexham. The inhabitants of this township, which is of large extent, are chiefly engaged in agriculture and the rearing of cattle. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship, and there is a village school, built by public subscription in 1851. Ingoe Hall is the principal residence.

INGOLD AND COTTAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Preston, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 2 miles N. of Preston. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The hamlet of Cottam consists of a few scattered houses. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a school.

INGOLDISTHORPE,, a par. in the hund. of Smithdon, co. Norfolk, 10 miles N.E. of Lynn, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Castle Rising. The village, which is small, is situated in a well-wooded vale near the river Wash. Ironstone abounds and is used for building purposes. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture, with about 200 acres of common. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £300. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a square tower containing two bells. In the interior is a Norman font, and opposite the S. porch is an ancient cross. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a Sunday-school held in the church. The principal residence is Mount Amelia. J. Bellamy, Esq., is lord of the manor. Roman coins have been found here.

INGOLDMELLS, a par. in the Marsh div. of the wap. of Candleshoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 12 miles E. of Spilsby, and 6 N.E. of the Burgh railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the sea-coast near Ingoldmells Point. Coral and other pebbles are found on the beach. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £73. The church, dedicated to SS. Paul and Peter, is an ancient building with tower containing five bells. In the interior is a brass of W. Palmer, bearing date 1520. There is a parochial school. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel.

INGOLDSBY, a par. in the wap. of Aswardhurn, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 8 miles S.E. of Grantham, its post town, and 4½ N. of the Corby railway station. The parish, which is much scattered, is situated on the river Glen, and contains the hmlt. of Scotland. The soil is various, in some parts gravelly and in others clayey. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £600, in the patron. of Christ's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a stone building, with square tower containing three bells. There is a Sunday-school. In this parish is an ancient encampment, 500 feet in diameter, and several barrows called the Round hills. Lord Aveland is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

INGON, a hmlt. in the par. of Hampton-Lucy, co. Warwick, 1 mile N. of Stratford-on-Avon. The principal residence is Ingon Hall. This property once belonged to Shakspeare's mother.

INGRAM, a par. in the N. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 9 miles S. of Wooler, and 5 N.W. of Whittingham, its post town. The parish, which is extensive, is situated on the river Breamish, a tributary of the Tweed, under the Cheviots. It contains the tnshps. of Fawdon, Clinch, Hartside, and Ingram. The surface is mountainous, and the soil varies extremely. At Linhop are traces of a British town, and on the hills numerous remains of camps and temples. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £462. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure, with a square tower containing one bell. It contains an antique font, bearing date 1662. In 1837 the N. and S. aisles were taken away and the roof lowered. The register dates from 1600. There is a small school supported by the landed proprietors. The principal residence is Reveley Manor.

INGRAVE, a par. in the hund. of Barstable, co. Essex, 2½ miles S.E. of Brentwood, its post town, and 20 from London. It is a small village, and is a meet for the South Essex hounds. Its Saxon name was Ing Ralph. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £290. The living is a rect. annexed to the rect.* of West Horndon, in the dioc. of Rochester, val. together £344. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a plain brick structure, with square tower containing five bells. There are Roman Catholic schools for boys and girls. The charities produce £6 per annum. Lord Petre is lord of the manor.

INGROW, a hmlt. in the par. of Keighley, West Riding co. York, 2 miles from Keighley. The hamlet is situated in a valley near the confluence of the rivulets Worth and North Beck. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, and in the patron. of the bishop. The church is modern.

INGS, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Hugil, par. and ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 8 miles N.W. of Kendal. The chapel, which was rebuilt in 1743 by Robert Bateman, stands in the village.

INGS, NORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Sheriff-Hutton, wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 9 miles S.W. of New Malton, and 10 N.E. of York.

INGTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Tinwell, hund. of East, co. Rutland, 1 mile S.W. of Stamford. It is situated near the junction of the rivers Chater and Welland. There is no village, only a few scattered houses.

INGWARDINE, a tnshp. in the par. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 4 miles N. of Cleobury-Mortimer.

INGWORTH, a par. in the hund. of South Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 2 miles N. of Aylsham. It is situated in a vale near the river Bure, which bounds the parish on the W. The road from Aylsham to Cromer passes through the village. The land is chiefly arable. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £166. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £127. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a small ancient structure, and formerly had a round tower, which fell down in 1822. The register dates from 1558.

INHURST, a tythg. in the par. of Banghurst, co. Hants, 4 miles N.E. of Kingsclere.

INISHAE, an islet off the coast of Galway, Ireland, between Mannin Bay and Ardbear Harbour.

INISHAIL, an ancient par. in co. Argyle, Scotland, now joined to Glenorchy.

INISHANNON, a par. and post town in the bars. of East Carbery and Kinalea, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 12 miles S.W. of Cork. The parish is 4 miles long and 3 broad. The surface consists of part of the valley of the river Bandon. The soil is good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £474. The church was considerably repaired in 1761. There are also a Roman Catholic chapel and Methodist chapel. This parish gives name to a Roman Catholic district, including Knockavilla, Briny, and Leighmoney. There are public and parochial schools, and four private establishments. Shippool, Downdaniel, Woodview, and Belmont are among the principal residences. The town is situated on the left bank of the Bandon, and on the road from Cork to Bantry. It was anciently a place of importance, and was surrounded by a wall and forts. It now consists of one principal street. The river is crossed by a stone bridge of six arches, and vessels of 200 tons can come up to within a short distance of the town. The cotton trade, now almost extinct, was formerly carried on. There is a dispensary within the Bandon Poor-law Union. In 1412 Henry V. granted the town and ferry to Philip de Barry. In 1641 the castles of Downdaniel, built by Barry Oge in 1476, and Cariganass, built by the McCarthys, were besieged and taken by the Cromwellians. Poulnalong Castle was also fortified by the insurgents, and reduced in 1642. Annagh Castle, which was garrisoned for the king, withstood a long and determined siege. The garrison were at length overcome by strategy. Fairs are held on 29th May, and 23rd October.

INISHARGY AND ISLANDS, a par. in the bar. of Ards, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing the town of Kircubbin, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 3 broad. The surface extends northerly to the Irish Channel, with Lough Strangford on the E. The soil is of middling quality. The living is a vic. in the the dioc. of Down, val. £427, in the patron. of the primate. [See also ST. ANDREWS.]

INISHARK, an islet in co. Mayo, Ireland, near Inishbofin.

INISHARN, an islet in Killery Harbour, co. Mayo, Ireland.

INISHATIRRA, an islet in Lough Key, co. Roscommon, Ireland.

INISHBEG, the name of several small islands off the coast of Ireland, in the cos. of Cork, Donegal, Kerry, &c.

INISHBIGGLE, an islet off the coast of Mayo, Ireland, in Achil Sound.

INISHBOFIN, an island and par. in the bar. of Murrisk, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 26 miles S.W. of Westport. Clifden is its post town. It is 3½ miles long by 2 broad, and is separated from Sark Island by a narrow sound. The northern coast is very precipitous. The southern has a natural harbour, which has a blockhouse, built in the time of the Commonwealth. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Ballinakill, £99, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, and in the Roman Catholic arrangement the parish belongs to the Ballinakill district. There are two private schools. The fisheries were formerly very extensive, and the castle or blockhouse was erected for their protection against the Dutch. An abbey is said to have been founded here by St. Colman, in 667. The island is the property of the Marquis of Sligo, but formerly of the Marquis of Clanricarde.

INISHBOFIN, or INNISBOFFIN, an island and coastguard station in the bar. of Kilmacrenan, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. 1 mile off the coast. It is about 1 mile long, and principally inhabited by fishermen.

INISHBOFIN, or INNISHBOFFIN, an islet in Lough Ree, co. Longford, Ireland. Here was a small abbey founded by St. Rioch, but destroyed by the Danes in 1089.

INISHCALTRA, a par. partly in the bar. of Upper Tulla, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, and partly in that of Leitrim, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, including some small islands in Lough Derg, 4 miles N.E. of Scariff, its post town. It is about 4 miles square. The surface is varied in contour; the mainland along Lough Derg is a low tract screened by the declivities of the Slieve-Baughta mountains. The Bora rivulet and the road from Scariff to Portumna and to Loughrea pass through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with two others, £111, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1785 by the late Board of First Fruits. It was enlarged in 1830. There are one public and one private school. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Clonrush. There are also meeting-houses for Methodists and Baptists. Woodpark and Kilrateera are the principal residences. The parish takes its name from Inniscalthra, or Holy Island, in Lough Derg. It is also called the Island of Seven Churches, and is famous as the site of several religious houses. The origin of the seven churches, we are told, was in an abbey founded here by St. Camin in the 7th century. The island was sacked by the Danes between 834 and 946. There are several round towers, and on the mainland is a Danish fort.

INISH-CAPEL, an islet off the coast of Western Argyle, Scotland, 1 mile W. of Seil Island.

INISHCARAGH, or INISHKEERAGH, an islet off the coast of West Donegal, Ireland, 1 mile S. of Arran.

INISHCARRA, a par. and the seat of a post-office in the bar. of East Muskerry, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Cork. It is 8 miles long by 4 broad. The parish is watered by the rivers Lee, Dripsey, and Bride. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £332, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1820 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There is also a chapel-of-ease. This parish gives name to a Roman Catholic district, and has three chapels. There are a parish school, two private schools, and a Sunday-school. The dispensary is within the Cork Poor-law Union.

INISHCLERAUN, or INISHCLOGHRAN, an islet in Lough Ree, co. Longford, Ireland.

INISHCOO, an islet off the coast of West Donegal, Ireland.

INISHCORKER, an islet in the estuary of the river Fergus, co. Clare, Ireland.

INISHDADROM, or CONEY, an islet as above.

INISHDONEY, an islet in the Lower Lough Erne, co. Fermanagh, Ireland.

INISHDOOEY, an islet in co. Donegal, Ireland, near Inishbofin.

INISHDOORUS, an islet in Lough Corrib, co. Galway, Ireland.

INISHDRISCOL, an islet in Roaringwater Bay, co. Cork, Ireland.

INISHDUFF, an islet in Fintra Bay, co. Donegal, 5 miles S.W. of Killybegs.

INISHEER, an island par. in the bar. of Aran, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3½ miles from the Clare coast, from which it is separated by South Sound. It is 2 miles long and over 1 mile broad. The living is a vic. united to the benefice of Ballinakill, in the dioc. of Tuam. Here are two churches, but both in ruins.

INISHERK, an islet off the coast of West Galway, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Gormuna.

INISHFALLEN. See INNISFALLEN, Ireland.

INISHFARNARD, an islet in Coolagh Bay, co. Cork, Ireland.

INISHFREE ISLETS, in Inishfree Bay, co. Donegal, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Gweedore Bay.

INISHGEIL, or INCHAGUILE, an islet in Lough Corrib, co. Galway, Ireland.

INISHGLORA, an islet off the coast of Mayo, Ireland, 2 miles W. of the Mullet.

INISHGORT, or INISHGOULA, an islet with a lighthouse, in Clew Bay, co. Mayo, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Newport.

INISHKEEL AND ISLANDS, a par. in the bars. of Bannagh and Boylagh, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. Ardara is its post town. It is 24 miles long by 8 broad. The surface is broken and mountainous, the principal summits being Rochrow, 1,649 feet, and Aughta, 1,958 feet. Numerous lakes occupy a considerable area; among them may be mentioned Nalughraman and Finn. The river Guibarra flows through part of the parish. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Raphoe, val. £455, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1825. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, also a Methodist meeting-house. There are public, parochial, and two private schools. The island of Inniskeel, or Innis-Coel, was so called from a monastery which was, founded on it in the end of the 6th century by St. Conald Coel. The isle lies about 1 mile off the mainland, and has a good harbour on the E. side called Churchpool.

INISHKEEN, or ENNISKEEN, a par. partly in the bars. of Louth and Upper Dundalk, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, and partly in the bar. of Farney, co. Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Louth, and 5 W. of Dundalk, its post town. It is a station on the Irish North-Western railway. The parish is 4½ miles long by 3 broad. The surface consists of a tolerably good soil. It is traversed by the river Fane, and the road from Dundalk to Magheross. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Clogher, val. £406, in the patron. of the bishop. The church has an old burial-ground containing a vault dated 1672. The parish has two Roman Catholic chapels, and gives name to a Roman Catholic district. There are a parish and two Sunday schools. Candlefort, Lattaghtagh, and Drumservin, are the chief residences. Here is a police station. There are some remains said to be the ruins of an abbey founded by St. Dagen, also of a peculiar round tower and of a large Danish fort. A well-built stone bridge spans the Fane.

INISHKEEN. See ENNISKEEN, co. Cork.

INISHKEERAGH, an island in the bar. of Erris, co. Mayo, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of the Inniskea islands.

INISHKENNY, or INNISKENNY, a par. in the bars. of Cork and East Muskerry, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles from Cork, its post town. It is 3½ miles long by 3 broad. The soil is of fair quality, and the road from Cork to Bandon traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £275, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1809 by the late Board of First Fruits. The parish forms part of the Roman Catholic district of Carrigrohane. There is a parish school. Waterfall and Castle White are the principal residences. There are some traces of the Augustine monastery of Ballymacdane, founded in 1450 by Cormac M'Carthy.

INISHLACKEN, an islet in Roundstone Bay, co. Galway, Ireland.

INISHLIRE, an islet in Clew Bay, co. Mayo, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Newport.

INISHLOE, an islet at the mouth of the river Fergus, co. Clare, Ireland.

INISHLOUNAGHT, or ABBEY, a par. partly in the bars. of East Iffa and Offa, co. Tipperary, and partly in the bar. of Glenaheiry, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Clonmel, its post town. The surface consists of a rich and highly cultivated soil. The parish is traversed by the road from Cork to Dublin. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with another, £531, in the patron. of the crown. The church was rebuilt in 1818, by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are a parish school, a girls' school, and three private schools. Near the village are the ruins of an abbey first founded by St. Mochoemoc in the 7th century, and subsequently by Donald O'Brien, King of Limerick, in 1187. It was granted to Edward Geogh by Queen Elizabeth. Part of this abbey is embodied with the church. Here, in 1399, the Earl of Desmond met the Earl of Ormonde, when a reconciliation took place. Marlfield, Oakland, and Salisbury, are the principal residences. Granite and limestone are quarried. Tobeeraheena is a fair town.

INISHMAAN, or Ennismain, an island par. in the bar. of Aran, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. Clifden is its post town. It lies in the entrance to Galway Bay, and is one of the three principal Aran Isles. It is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. as part of the benefice of Ballinakill, £99, in the patron. of the bishop.

INISHMACLELAN, an island off the coast of Kerry, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Great Blasquet.

INISHMACNAUGHTEN, an islet at the confluence of the rivers Fergus and Shannon, co. Clare, Ireland.

INISHMACOWNEY, an islet at the mouth of the river Fergus, co. Clare, Ireland.

INISHMACSAINT AND ISLANDS, otherwise CHURCHHILL, a par. partly in the bar. of Tirhugh, co. Donegal, and partly in the bar. of Magheraboy, co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. The parish is 20 miles long by 4 broad, containing its post town, Churchhill, the market town Derrygonnelly, and part of Ballyshannon. The principal part of the parish consists of a tract stretching along the margin of Lower Lough Erne. There is a considerable extent of mountain and bog, but the greater portion of the soil is arable land. Loughs

Carrick and Bunnahone, and the source of the Sillies river, are within the limits. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Clogher, val. £576. The church was built in 1831, by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are two chapels-of-ease, four Roman Catholic chapels united in pairs, and a Methodist meeting-house, also two public schools, parochial, private, and five Sunday schools. The island which gives name to this parish is situated in Lough Erne, 3 miles E.S.E. of Churchhill. It was the site of an abbey said to have been founded in the 6th century by St. Nennid. This parish contains the Shean summit and the dell of Phoula-Phouca.

INISHMAGRATH, a par. in the bar. of Drumahaire, co. Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Drumahaire. It contains the post town of Drumkeeran. The parish is 8 miles long by 6½ broad. It is situated on the bank of Lough Allen. The surface is generally mountainous, but has some arable tracts. It is traversed by the road from Carrick-on-Shannon to Manor-Hamilton. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Kilmore, val. £650, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1830, by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. It was lately repaired by the ecclesiastical commissioners. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, a parish school, and several private establishments. Strand-hill and Corry Lodge are the principal residences. On an islet in the lough are the remains of a religious house alleged to have been founded by St. Beoy. The abbeys of Conagh and Tarmon, sacked by Cromwell, stood on the side of Lough Allen. Coal, iron, lime, and freestone, with other minerals, are found, part of the parish being within the great Connaught mineral district. There is a medicinal spring near Gubacowan.

INISHMAKEERA and INISHMEANE, islets off the coast of Donegal, Ireland.

INISHMORE, or ARRANMORE, an island and par. in the bar. of Aran, co. Galway, Ireland. [See ARAN ISLES.] There is also an islet of this name in Upper Lough Erne, co. Fermanagh, Ireland, near Belleisle.

INISHMOT, a par. in the bar. of Lower Slane, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Ardee. Drogheda is its post town. It is 1½ mile long by 1 broad. The surface is varied. It consists of a fair proportion of good land on a limestone bottom, with a good deal of marsh. The living is a suspended rect. in the dioc. of Meath, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish forms part of the Roman Catholic district of Syddan.

INISHMULCLOHY, or CONEY ISLAND, in Sligo Bay, co. Sligo, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Sligo.

INISHMURRAY. See INNISMURRAY, co. Sligo.

INISHNABROE, one of the Blasquet Islands, co. Kerry, Ireland.

INISHNEE, an island in Roundstone Bay, co. Galway, Ireland. It is near 3 miles in length by 1½ mile broad.

INISHRUIN, an islet off the coast of Galway, Ireland, near Renoyle Point.

INISHSIRRER, an islet in the co. Donegal, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Bloody Foreland.

INISHUGH, an islet in Clew Bay, co. Mayo, Ireland.

INISPOLLAN, a grange in the bar. of Lower Glenarm, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Cushendall, on the road from thence to Ballycastle. In the Roman Catholic arrangement Inispollan belongs to Culfeightrin; in the Protestant to the par. of Layd.

INISROCHA, an islet in Lower Lough Erne, co. Fermanagh, Ireland.

INISRUSH, a vil. in the bar. of Loughlinsholme, co. Londonderry, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Bellaghy.

INISTALLA, an islet off the coast of Mayo, Ireland, near Innisturk.

INISTEGIL, an islet on the W. side of Killery Harbour, co. Mayo, Ireland.

INISTIOGE, a par. and small market and post town in the bar. of Gowran, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. The parish is about 3½ miles in length and breadth, and is bounded on the E. by the river Nore. Lead ore is found in small quantities near the river, and there is a quarry of granite. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with another, £426, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was rebuilt in 1824 by the late Board of First Fruits. There are three Roman Catholic chapels, two of which are in the town, all united to that of Rower, a Methodist meeting-house, besides National and four day schools. The demesne of Woodstock adjoins the town, which is situated on the right bank of the Nore, 13 miles S. of Kilkenny, and 63 from Dublin, on the road from thence to New Ross. It consists principally of a quadrangle of houses overshadowed by rows of lime-trees. In the centre of the square stands the fragment of an ancient cross with an inscription to one of the Fitzgeralds. A stone bridge spans the Nore. The dispensary is within the New Ross Poor-law Union. Inistiogo is an incorporated town, and was formerly a parliamentary borough. It is governed by a portreeve, burgesses, recorder, town-clerk, &c. It returned two members before the Union. The town was anciently protected by a wall. In 1607 it obtained a grant of a market and fair, and in the year following a charter of incorporation, which refers to the place as an ancient borough. Here are ruins of an Augustine priory founded by Thomas Fitz Anthony in the beginning of the 13th century, also the remains of Brownsford and Clowen castles. Friday is market day. Fairs are held on the 9th and 13th June and 14th October.

INISTRAVAN, an islet in the co. Galway, Ireland, 1 mile N. of Littermore.

INISTRUSKAR, or INISHTOOSKERT, an islet off the coast of the co. Kerry, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Dunmore.

INISTUBBRED, an islet in the co. Clare, Ireland, at the mouth of the river Fergus.

INISTURK. See INNISTURK, Ireland.

INISVACHTUIR, an islet in Lough Sheelin, co. Westmeath, Ireland.

INKBERROW, a par. in the middle div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 5 miles W. of Alcester, its post town, 9 S.E. of Droitwich, and 11 N.E. of Worcester. The par., which is considerable, contains the hmlt. of Cokehill, and the ruins of a nunnery founded in 1260 by Isabella, Countess of Warwick. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. Here are stone quarries. The soil is clay and marl. The parish is intersected by the road between Warwick and Worcester. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £513, and the vicarial for £800. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £840. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing six bells. It was thoroughly repaired in 1841. In the interior is an effigy of John Savage of Eglock. The charities produce £82 per annum, of which £80 is from land appropriated to the poor under an Enclosure Act in 1818. Morton Hall is the principal residence. The Baptists have a chapel at Cokehill. The Earl of Abergavenny is lord of the manor.

INKPEN, a par. in the hund. of Kintbury-Eagle, co. Berks, 3 miles S.E. of Hungerford, its post town. The village is considerable, and chiefly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £615. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £520. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a small ancient edifice with a low square tower containing three bells. In the interior are monuments to the Butler family. The charities produce about £25 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, also a Wesleyan chapel and Sunday-school in connection with it. The Earl of Craven is lord of the manor.

INNERALLAN. See INVERALLEN, co. Inverness.

INNERCHADDEN. See FORTINGALL, co. Perth.

INNERGOWRIE, an ancient par. now joined to Liff, co. Forfar, Scotland.

INNER HIGH (GLASGOW), a par. in the district of Glasgow city, co. Lanark, Scotland. See GLASGOW.

INNERKIP, a par. and post town in co. Renfrew, Scotland. The par. contains the town of Gourock. It is over 6 miles in length, and nearly 6 miles in its greatest breadth. Its boundaries are co. Ayr, the Frith of Clyde, and the pars. of Greenock and Kilmalcolm. The surface inclines gently from the coast to the S.E., and by far the greater portion consists of moor and pasture land. The arable districts are mostly fertile. The Shaw, the Kip, and the Daff are the principal of several streamlets which interthread the parish in their way to the sea. On the coast are the bays of Gourock, Lunderstone, Innerkip, and Wemyss. This par. is in the presb. of Greenock and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister has a stipend of £284. There are two Free churches, a chapel-of-ease, an United Presbyterian church, and an Independent chapel, also an endowed school and three public libraries. The ancient church and lands were granted to the monks of Paisley in the 12th century. Robert III. founded a chapel at Christwell. In 1594 part of the parish was detached and joined to that of Greenock. Ardgowan House is the seat of Sir M. R. S. Stewart, Bart., who, with Scott of Kelly, Macfie of Langhouse, and Darroch of Gourock are the principal landowners. Kelly House is the seat of J. Scott, Esq. Near Ardgowan are some remains supposed to be of Innerkip Castle, which was occupied by the English temp. Robert Bruce, and was the retreat of Sir Philip de Mowbray. Commanding a view of the coast stand the ruins called Laven Castle. Laven belonged to the Mortons till 1547, afterwards to the Semphills, and now to the Shaw-Stewarts. At Clochpoint a steady light is displayed. The village is situated at the embouchure of the river Kip. It was formerly a burgh of barony, and holds three fairs during the year. The Largs steamers touch here, and a ferry crosses to Dunoon.

INNERLEITHEN, a par. and post-office vil. in cos. Peebles and Selkirk, Scotland. Its boundaries are co. Edinburgh, part of Stow, the river Tweed, and the pars. of Peebles and Eddlestone. The surface is broken and hilly, inclining from the Tweed northwards. Windlestrae-law is the principal elevation. Several small streams issue from the hills, the largest of which is the Leithen. Some highly fertile tracts occur along the banks of the Tweed and Leithen, and a very considerable proportion of the surface is in pasture. This par. is in the presb. of Peebles and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The minister has a stipend of £290. The church was built in 1786. There are also Free and United Presbyterian churches, and an Independent chapel. Part of the old parish of Kailzie was annexed to this parish in 1674. The church and sanctuary of Innerleithen was granted to the monks of Kelso by Malcolm IV. The principal residences are Glen-Ormiston and Holylee, the seats of the Chambers and Ballantyne families, who, with Horsburgh, Esq., and the Earl of Traquair, are principal landowners. The village is seated on the road from Kelso to Glasgow, near the confluence of the Leithenwater and the Tweed. This village owes its prosperity to a neighbouring medicinal well, which has lately come into high repute. Many new and well-built houses have been erected, and there are two or three good inns. We may also mention the bridges—one of stone across the Leithen, another of wood across the Tweed; also the pump-room, newsrooms, &c. Near the village are the remains of a fortification. On the Tweed's bank stands Horsburgh Castle. Slate quarries have been worked, and peat is plentiful.

INNERWELL, a vil. in the par. of Sorbie, co. Wigton, Scotland. It is situated under Innerwell Head, on a small harbour in Wigton Bay.

INNERWICK, a par. and post-office vil. in co. Haddington, Scotland. The par. also contains the vil. of Thornton-loch. It is bounded on the E. by Oldhamstocks, on the S. by co. Berwick, and on the N.E. by the German Ocean. Its length is over 9 miles, and its average breadth between 2 and 3 miles. The surface is hilly, the greater portion lying among the Lammermuir hills. There is a good deal of heath and pasture land. It has a somewhat bold and rocky coast-line of about 3 miles in extent. Numerous burns wend their way through the parish; among them may be mentioned Monynut-water, Philip-burn, Craigburn, &c. This par. is in the presb. of Dunbar and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The minister has a stipend of £278. The church, which stands in the village, was built in 1784. There are also a Free church, girls' private school, and a library. The church of Innerwick was granted to the monks of Paisley by the Stewarts, who held the manor from David I. It was erected into a free regality in 1404. Near the village, on a lofty point, are seen the ruins of Innerwick Castle, formerly belonging to the Stewarts, and afterwards to the Hamiltons; facing it is the site of Thornton Castle, of the Homes—both strongholds were reduced by the Protector. At a short distance are the traces of an ancient structure called King Edwin's Bridge. Stone coffins and relics were found in the vicinity some time ago. Lime and sandstone are abundant.

INNERWICK. See GLENLYON, Scotland.

INNFIELD, or ENFIELD, a vil. in the bar. of Lower Moyfenrath, co. Meath, Ireland, 18 miles S.W. of Navan. It is situated near the river Blackwater and the Royal canal.

INNIS. See INCH AND ENNIS.

INNISBEG (i.e. a small island), a name applied to many islets in Ireland, but none of sufficient importance to be noticed under separate headings.

INNISBOFFIN. See INISHBOFIN, Ireland.

INNISCATTERY, or SCATHERY, an island in the bar. of Moyarta, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is situated in the embouchure of the Shannon, about 2 miles off the shore of the par. of Kilrush. Geographically it has little worthy of remark, but historically it is of much interest. It is said to have been the seat of a bishopric founded by St. Patrick. There are traces of seven structures, supposed to be the remnants of the eleven churches built by Senanus. But the most prominent object is a pillar-tower, one of the finest specimens of its kind known; it is 120 feet high, and was some years ago cleft by lightning. A holy well here was the annual resort of numerous pilgrims, and, indeed, the spot is regarded still with deep veneration among the superstitious, and numerous legends are rife in connection with this ancient seat of religion. Formerly the island was the scene of many fierce contests with the Danes, and in some parts, where the sea has encroached upon the beach, a perfect stratum of human bones is visible. Moore selected this island as a subject for one of his poems.

INNISFALLEN, an island lying in the lower lake of Killarney, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Killarney. It is about 18 acres in extent, and contains the ruins of the abbey, supposed to have been founded at the end of the 6th century by St. Finian. The whole abbey, with its possessions, was granted by Queen Elizabeth to Robert Collan. There is an original history of Innisfallen in the Bodleian library down to 1319. The Oratory, an older ruin, stands at the S.E. end of the island, and has been fitted up as a dining-hall.

INNISHERKIN, or SHERKIN, an island in the par. of Tullagh, bar. of West Carbery, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It lies in the entrance to Baltimore Bay, and is over 3 miles long, with an average breadth of three-quarters of a mile. The soil is generally good. The E. side has a bold rocky coast, with an inlet called the Horseshoe; and to the W., near Wren Head, is the inlet Corney Cove. Here are the ruins of a small Franciscan abbey founded by Florence O'Driscoll in 1460. A little to the N. is the site of a fortress garrisoned in the time of Queen Anne. Dunelong Castle stood opposite to that of Dunashad.

INNISHOWEN, or ENNISHOWEN, a bar. in co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. Its length is 22 miles, and its greatest breadth 16½ miles. It is bounded by the ocean on the N., by Lough Foyle on the E., by the liberties of Londonderry on the S., and by Lough Swilly and the Atlantic on the W. The coast is generally bold and majestic, presenting much grandeur of scenery. Culdaff Bay and Strathbreagy Bay are the chief inlets. The surface is mountainous and wild. This bar. is divided into E. and W. districts, and contains the ext. par. districts of Effishbreda, Curro-hill, Mintiaghs, and the pars. of Burt, Clonca, Clonmany, Culdaff, Dysertegney, Donagh, Lower and Upper Fahan, Inch Lower and Upper, Moville, Muff, and the towns of Buncrana and Carndonagh. This barony gives name to a Poor-law Union lying within its limits, containing 21 electoral divisions. The poorhouse, built in 1843, affords indoor relief for 600 cases. It has five dispensaries.

INNISKEA, NORTH and SOUTH, two islands in the bar. of Erris, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. near the Mullet peninsula. Here are extensive fisheries.

INNISKEEN. See INISHKEEN.

INNISMURRAY, an islet of the par. of Ahamlish, bar. of Carbury, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, lying on the S. side of Donegal Bay. It consists chiefly of a precipitous rock accessible at one point only, and having a superficial measurement of about 130 acres. It is peopled by fifty or sixty inhabitants, who depend upon the sale of fish for their support. A rude pile of stones and some other shapeless fragments are regarded by the islanders as the ruins of an abbey founded by St. Molasse. There is also a small island of this name in the mouth of the river Fergus, co. Clare.

INNISTRAHUL, an islet off the coast of Donegal, Ireland, 7 miles N.E. of Malin Head. It has on it a lighthouse erected in 1812, with a revolving light visible for 18 miles.

INNISTURK, an island and coastguard station in the bar. of Morisk, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, lying in the Atlantic 4 miles N.N.E. of Inishbofin. It is 2¼ miles long by 1 mile broad. It is chiefly inhabited by poor fishermen. There is also a small island of this name in co. Galway, 6 miles N.W. of Clifden.

INNY, a river flowing from Lough Sheelan, in the prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It traces part of the boundaries of cos. Cavan, Westmeath, and Longford, and eventually falls into Lough Rea. It abounds in trout, salmon, and other fish. There is also a rivulet of this name, which rises near Lough Cloon, in co. Kerry, and falls into Ballinskelligs Bay.

INSCH, a par. and post vil. in the district of Garioch, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It is a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. The parish is 5 miles long by 3 broad, and is environed by Drumblade, Forgue, Culsalmond, Premnay, Oyne, Kennethmont, Leslie, and Gartly. The surface is hilly, comprehending part of the Foudland hills, which here rise to an altitude of 1,100 feet. Another prominent elevation is Dunnideer Hill. Numerous streamlets water the interior, and the Shevock water, falling into the Ury, traces the southern and western boundary. The parish is traversed by the road from Aberdeen to Huntly. This par. is in the presb. of Garioch and synod of Aberdeen. The minister has a stipend of £204. The church was built in 1613. There are also a Free church, a Baptist meeting-house, and an Assembly's school, besides two others; also a teetotal society and savings-bank. The village is a burgh of barony, and a monthly market is maintained, but the weekly market is now discontinued. On Dunodeer Hill are the ruins of a fortification, and in the vicinity are several Druidical remains. Fairs are held on the Friday before the 18th May, and on the third Tuesday in October (old style).

INSH, a quoad sacra par. in the pars. of Alvie and Kingussie, co. Inverness, Scotland, 8 miles S.W. of Aviemore Inn.

INSKIP-WITH-SOWERBY, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Michael-on-Wyre, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 7 miles N.W. of Preston, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Garstang. It is situated near the river Wyre. The soil is very light and peaty. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £105, in the patron. of the Vicar of St. Michael-on-Wyre. There is a National school for both sexes. The Earl of Derby is lord of the manor.

INSTOW, a par. in the hund. of Fremington, co. Devon, 6 miles W. of Barnstaple, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Bideford. It is a station on the Bideford Extension railway, and has communication with Bristol by steamers passing on their way from Bideford. The village is a quiet watering-place situated on the bay at the confluence of the rivers Taw and Torridge, and on the high road leading from Bideford to Barnstaple. There are quarries of freestone, and several chalybeate springs. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure with a tower containing three bells. In the interior are several monuments. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Mrs. Cleveland is lady of the manor.

INTAKE, a hmlt. in the par. of Handsworth, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Sheffield.

INTWOOD, a par. in the hund. of Humbleyard, co. Norfolk, 3 miles S.E. of Norwich, its post town. It is situated near the Brandon railway. The village, which is of ancient date, consists of a few farmhouses. The manor was given by the Conqueror to Eudo Dapifer, and in the reign of Elizabeth came to Sir Thomas Gresham, the founder of the Royal Exchange. It afterwards passed into the hands of the Hobarts. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £143. The living is a rect.* united with the rect. of Keswick, in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £350. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with round tower surmounted by an octagonal lantern. Intwood Hall, the principal residence, occupies the site of the old hall of the Greshams, where the Earl of Warwick was entertained in 1549, on his march against the rebels in Norfolk. The arched gateway and other portions of the old hall are still visible, bearing the arms of the Gresham family, but the greater part of the buildings are modern. Hudson Gurney, Esq., is lord of the manor.

INVER, a par. in the bar. of Lower Belfast, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. Larne is its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad, and contains the vils. of Inverbeg and Invermore. The surface consists of medium soil. The parish is bordered on the E. by Lough Larne, and on the N. by the Larne river. The road from Belfast to Glenarm passes through the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Connor, val. £127, in the patron. of the crown. The church is ancient, but has undergone considerable alteration. There is a National school. This parish forms part of the Roman Catholic district of Larne and Carrickfergus. Inver Lodge and Inver House are the principal residences. Many of the rebels retired here after the battle of Antrim in 1798. A priory was founded here at an early period, of which the parish church is said to be a remnant. Near this spot are traces of a fort. Here are extensive bleach-grounds.

INVER, a par. in the bar. of Bannagh, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles W. of Donegal, its post town, containing the post and fair town of Mount-Charles. It is near 9 miles long by 6½ broad. The surface is mountainous and heathy, about one third only being available for cultivation. Benbawn attains an altitude of 1,490 feet. The river Inver rises in the E. and takes a south-westerly course to Inver Bay, at the head of which stands the fishing village of Inver. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Raphoe, val. £439, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, a commodious building, erected in 1807, was recently repaired by the ecclesiastical commission. There are a Roman Catholic Chapel and a Methodist meeting-house; also five public, several private, and four Sunday schools. The dispensary for Inver and Mount-Charles is in the Donegal Poor-law Union. The Hall is a seat of the Marquis of Conyngham, Sea-view of the Earl of Belmore. The other residences are, Salthill, Bonneyglen, Cloverhill, Kilmacredan, and White Hill. The bay, which extends between Doorin and St. John's points, has a pier at Port-of-Inver, and a salthouse. A Franciscan monastery was founded here in the 15th century on the site of one founded by St. Natalis in the 6th century. It was granted to Viscount Clandeboy at the Suppression. Cornelian is found in a small lake near Mount-Charles. Pearls have been found in Lough Tawer.

INVER, a vil. in the par. of Tain, co. Ross, Scotland. It is seated on the S. side of Dornoch Frith. The cholera raged fearfully here in 1832.

INVER, or LOCHINVER, a post-office vil. in the par. of Assynt, co. Sutherland, Scotland. It is situated at the head of Loch Inver, and though a small place has a very good trade, chiefly in the herring fishery.

INVER, a vil. in the par. of Little Dunkeld, co. Perth, Scotland. It is seated on the Bran near its junction with the Tay, and formerly had a ferry to Dunkeld.

INVER, a vil. in the bar. of Erris, co. Mayo, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Belmullet. It is situated near Inver Point, in Broadhaven Bay.

INVERALLEN, an ancient par., now joined to Cromdale, cos. Inverness and Elgin, Scotland.

INVERALLOCHY, a vil. in the par. of Rathen, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 2 miles S. of Frazerburgh.

INVERAMSAY, a hmlt. in the district of Garioch, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 4 miles from Inverury, and 20 from Aberdeen by the Great North of Scotland railway, on which it is a principal station, the Banff and Turriff line branching off here.

INVERAN, the seat of a post-office in the par. of Criech, co. Sutherland, Scotland.

INVERARITY, a par. in the Sidlaw district of co. Forfar, Scotland, containing the post-office vils. of Fotheringham and Kincaldrum. It is nearly of a circular form, between 4 and 5 miles in diameter, and is environed by Kinnettles, Forfar, Guthrie, Murroes, and Glammis. The surface is diversified, and the soil various. Some fertile alluvial tracts occur in the valleys. The Arity water bisects the parish, and falls into Dean water. The road from Dundee to Aberdeen traverses the parish. This par. is in the presb. of Forfar, and synod of Angus and Mearns. The minister has a stipend of £245. The church was built in 1754. The old church stood just above the meeting of the Corbieburn and Arity water. Here is an industrial school. The ancient parish of Menthie, with that of Inverarity, were embodied to form the present parish. Fotheringham and Kincaldrum are the principal residences. There are remains of a Roman camp in the eastern extremity of the parish. Sandstone and grey slate are very plentiful.

INVERARY, a par. and royal burgh, in co. Argyle, Scotland. The par. of Inishail forms its northern boundary, co. Dumbarton and Loch Fyne lie on the E., Loch Fyne on the S., and Dalavich and Kilchrenan on the W. and N.W. It is about 15 miles long, and its breadth ranges between 3 and 6 miles. The surface is mountainous; Benbui, the principal summit, attains an altitude of 2,800 feet. It has a coastline of 10 miles on Loch Fyne, indented by numerous bays and creeks. The streams Ary and Shira traverse the parish. The soil is variable in quality. Agriculture, formerly neglected, has of late received more attention, under the auspices of the Duke of Argyll. The rearing of cattle and sheep are the principal occupations. This par. gives name to a presb. of the synod of Argyle. There are English and Gaelic churches. The minister of the former has a stipend of £169, and of the latter £158. The churches are attached to each other, and were erected in the town in 1794. There are Free and United Presbyterian churches; also two parochial, a Free Church school, and four or five other schools assisted by the Duke of Argyll's family. The ancient districts of Kilmilieu and Glenary form the present par. of Inverary. The castle of the Duke of Argyll, commenced in 1745, stands on the bank of the Ary. The old castle was removed from its adjacent site some forty years ago. The burgh of Inverary is a small seaport, and the county town of co. Argyle. It is situated at the mouth of the Ary, 39 miles N. of Rothesay, and 60 N.W. by W. of Glasgow. It consists chiefly of two well-edificed streets, the principal one fronting the bay. It contains the court-house, gaol, two branch banks, savings-bank, several insurance agencies, and a good hotel. A stone cross stands at the waterside, which formerly served as the old town cross. The obelisk near the church was erected to the memory of a party of Campbells who were killed as heretics when Montrose was making a raid through the county. The trade of the town is dependent upon the herring fishery. The bay is not capable of accommodating vessels of large size. In 1836 the old pier underwent considerable improvement. The town joins with Oban, Irvine and Ayr, and Cambelton in sending one representative to parliament. The parliamentary constituency in 1861 was 46. The government of the town is vested in a provost, town-clerk, and 12 councillors. The corporation revenue in 1857-8 amounted to £199. Sheriffs' courts sit twice a week between May and July, and October and April. A justice of the peace, small debt court, and a borough court also sit during the same period. Inverary was made a burgh of barony in 1472, and erected into a royal borough about 1648. In 1742 the old town was entirely removed and the present one built in its stead. A stone bridge here crosses the Ary, and a ferry communicates with the opposite shore of Loch Fyne. A constant steamboat traffic is maintained between this place and Glasgow. The views from Duniquoich and Glenshira are very fine. The prevailing rocks in this parish are mica-slate, porphyry, limestone, greenstone, and chlorite. About 8 miles from the town are the great granite quarries of Furnace. Fairs are held on the last Friday in May and the last Thursday in October, also a large wool fair on the third Thursday in July.

INVERAVEN, a par. in cos. Banff and Elgin, Scotland, containing the post-office vils. of Ballindalloch and Glenlivet. Its length is 20 miles and its greatest breadth 9. It boundaries are Knockando, Mortlach, Glenbucket, Strathdon, and Cromdale. The surface is mountainous, and has considerable tracts of plantation and moorland, but arable soil is found in the vicinity of the rivers. The river Aven traces part of the N.W. boundary, and the river Livet passes through it. This par. is in the presb. of Aberlour, and synod of Moray. The minister has a stipend of £251. The church was built in 1806. There are a Free church, chapel-of-ease, and two Roman Catholic chapels in the parish. There are parochial, Society's, two Roman Catholic, and three Protestant denominational schools. The mansion of Ballindalloch has recently been enlarged and modernised. The Duke of Richmond and the Grants of Ballindalloch are the principal landowners. On the summit of Benrinnes, which is partly in this parish, is a cave, the alleged retreat of Grant of Carrion, or "James of the Hill." The ruins of Drummin Castle stand at the confluence of the Livet and Aven. There are also Druidical remains, and the ruins of a hunting lodge of the Huntlys at Blairfindy. The rivers are crossed by four or five bridges. Glenlivet limestone is extensively worked. Game is very plentiful, and the roedeer is seen at Ballindalloch. There is a fir-tree at Kilmaichlie which is 11 feet span.

INVERAY, a branch of the river Dee, co. Aberdeen, Scotland.

INVERBEG, a vil. in the par. of Inver, bar. of Lower Belfast, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. Larne is its post town.

INVERBERVIE. See BERVIE, co. Kincardine.

INVERBROTHOCK, a quoad sacra par., in co. Forfar, Scotland. It belongs to the political par. of St. Vigans. The church was built in 1828. There are two Free churches and a Methodist chapel.

INVERCANNICH, EASTER and WESTER, two hamlets, and a post-office station, co Inverness, Scotland, 14 miles S.W. of Beauly

INVERCAULD. See BRAEMAR, co. Aberdeen, Scotland.

INVERCHAOLAIN, a par. in the district of Cowal, co. Argyle, Scotland. Greenock is its post town. Its length is about 15 miles, and its breadth 8 miles. It is environed by Kilmodan, Kilmun, Dunoon, East Kyle of Bute, and Loch Riddan. The surface is rough, and includes a good proportion of mountain pasture and woodland. It is indented about 8 miles inland by the sea loch Striven. This par. is in the presb. of Dunoon, and synod of Argyle. The minister has a stipend of £170. The church was erected in 1812. There are two Free churches, and two parish schools. Southall and Knockdown are the principal seats in the neighbourhood.

INVERCOE, a vil. in the district of Appin, co. Argyle, Scotland, 23 miles N.E. of Oban. It is situated near Loch Linnhe.

INVERCRUDEN. See CRUDEN, co. Aberdeen.

INVERESHIE, a demesne in co. Inverness, Scotland, 9 miles S.W, of Aviemore Inn.

INVERESK, a par. in co. Edinburgh, Scotland, containing besides the village of Inveresk, the post town of Musselburgh, and the town of Fisherrow. It is a little over 3 miles in length and the same in breadth. The Frith of Forth forms its northern boundary. From about half a mile from the shore the surface begins to ascend by gentle elevations till it reaches the hills of Fallside, Carberry, and Inveresk. The river Esk divided the par. into two parts, and the memorable Pinkieburn passes near the hill of Inveresk on its way to the Esk. The surface is highly cultivated. The parish is traversed by the London and Edinburgh road and the North British railway, which has a station here. This par. is in the presb. of Dalkeith and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The minister has a stipend of £353. The present church was built about 1800. It is situated on the summit of Inveresk Hill, and its beautiful spire somewhat redeems its general ugliness in other points. There are a Free church, chapel-of-ease, two United Presbyterian churches, and Episcopal, Methodist, Independent, and Evangelical chapels. The educational establishments are very numerous; among them are a grammar and two boarding schools. Carberry House, a structure of great antiquity, has recently been modernised. Monkton House is the seat of Sir Archibald Hope. The Duke of Buccleuch, the Earl of Wemyss, and Sir Archibald Hope, are among the principal landowners. The vil. of Inveresk has been called the Montpelier of Scotland. It consists chiefly of villa residences, disposed in a curved line corresponding to the concave base of Inveresk Hill and the bend of the river Esk. The monks of Dunfermline received grants from Malcolm Canmore, David I., in Great and Little Inveresk, two then existing manors. This district was afterwards granted to Lord Thirlestane by James VI. In 1709 it was purchased by the Duchess of Buccleuch. The battle of Pinkie was fought here in 1547, and further inwards is Carberry Hill, the scene of Mary's surrender to the nobility in 1567. The spot now occupied by the church is found to have been the site of the Roman Prætorium, from the numerous traces of Roman structures which have been discovered. Freestone and limestone are extensively worked, and there is a considerable seam of coal.

INVERGARRY, the seat of a post-office vil. in co. Inverness, Scotland. It is situated on the left bank of Loch Oich, 7½ miles S.W. of Fort Augustus. Invergarry Castle, the ancient seat of the Macdonalds, is in the vicinity.

INVERGARVEN. See GIRVAN.

INVERGORDON, a post town and small seaport in the par. of Rosskeen, co. Ross, Scotland, 6 miles W. of Cromarty. It is a station on the Inverness and Aberdeen Junction railway. The town is situated on the W. coast of Cromarty Frith, and on the road from Inverness to Thurso. It has a good harbour and pier, and maintains a constant traffic between Aberdeen, Leith, and London. Here are situated the parish church and school, and the Free Church school, besides a day and boarding school. Situated amidst grounds is Invergordon Castle, the seat of Macleod of Cadboll. The market is monthly. Fairs are held on the third Tuesday in February, second Tuesday in April and December (old style), and on the first Tuesday in August and second Tuesday in October.

INVERGOWRIE, an ancient par. in the districts of Dundee and Eastern Perth, cos. Forfar and Perth, Scotland, now incorporated with Liff and Benvie. It is a station on the Perth and Dundee branch of the Scottish Central railway.

INVERKEILLOR, a par. in the co. Forfar, Scotland, containing the post vil. of Chance-Inn. It is over 7 miles long, and its greatest breadth is over 4. It has a coast line of about 6 miles in extent on the German Ocean, and is otherwise bounded by the pars. of Carmylie, St. Vigeans, Kirkdell, Kinnell, and Lunan. The surface is variable in contour, with generally a good soil. The Keilor stream rises in the S., and empties itself into Lunan water, on the S. wing of which stretches out Redhead. The Lunan water and Eighty burn, good salmon streams, also traverse parts of the parish. The surface is intersected by the roads from Arbroath to Montrose and Brechin. The Arbroath and Forfar railway also crosses the parish in the W. This par. is in the presb. of Arbroath and synod of Angus and Mearns, in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £247. The church was built in 1735, and enlarged about a century since. Here is a Free church and endowed school, library, and savings-bank. Ethie House is the seat of the Earl of Northesk; the other residences are Anniston, Kinblythmont, and Lawton. The Earl of Northesk and Lord Panmure, with four others, are the landowners. Near Ethie House are the ruins of St. Murdock's chapel; there are also chapel ruins at Quytefield, now used by the Boysacks as a family burial-place. There are traces of Danish camps on the lands of the Earl of Northesk and of Mr. Carnegie, but the most interesting remains are those of Redcastle, supposed to have been built by William the Lion as a hunting seat. There is a quarry of Arbroath stone in the parish, and very extensive freestone works at Redhead, where Scotch pebbles are also found.

INVERKEITHING, a par. and post town in the district of Dunfermline, co. Fife, Scotland, containing also the post vil. of Hillend. It lies open to the Frith of Forth, and is bounded inland by the pars. of Dalgetty and Dunfermline. The parish includes Inchgarvie island and Birnar rock. At the point of a peninsulated portion of the parish known as the Ferry hills, jutting out southward, is North Queensferry. The surface is moderately hilly, but well cultivated. This par. is in the presb. of Dunfermline and synod of Fife. The minister has a stipend of £276. The church, standing in the town, was built in 1826. It is a Gothic building. Here are an United Presbyterian church and school, and three other schools. Rosyth Castle is the seat of the Earl of Hopetoun. The town is a royal burgh and seaport situated on the bay of its name, and on the road from Edinburgh to Perth, 2 miles N. of North Queensferry, and 14 N.W. of Edinburgh. The principal part of the town consists of two well-edificed streets, lighted with gas and paved. The principal buildings are, the churches, grain market, townhouse, and parochial schoolhouses. There are also two branch banks, several insurance agencies, curling club, library, and gas company. The harbour is frequented by numerous collier vessels, which make shipments for the south. The borough was chartered at a very early period, as appears from a record of the time of William the Lion, which refers to a charter of still earlier date. It is governed by a provost, two bailies, dean of guild, treasurer, town clerk, and councillors. The burgh unites with Stirling, Dunfermline, Culross, and South Queensferry, in sending one member to parliament. The revenue of the borough in 1854 was £454 4*s*. Old Rosyth Castle was the residence of Margaret, queen of Malcolm Canmore. Annabella, widow of Robert III., also had a residence in this town. The ruins of old Rosyth Castle, once the seat of the great Stuart family, stands on the opposite shore to the present castle. Sir Walter Scott makes an allusion to the old castle in the "Abbot."

INVERKEITHNY, a par. and post-office vil. in the co. Banff, Scotland. It is about 6 miles long by 5 broad, and is bounded by the pars. of Rothiemay and Marnoch and the co. of Aberdeen. The surface is hilly, and is traversed by the little river Keithney. There is a considerable area of waste and uncultivated land, with some wood. This par. is in the presb. of Turriff and synod of Aberdeen. The minister has a stipend of £215. There is Free Church accommodation and a parish school here.

INVERKINDY, the seat of a post-office between the pars. of Strathdon and Towie, co. Aberdeen, Scotland.

INVERLEVEN, or DUBBIESIDE, a vil. in the par. of Markinch, co. Fife. It is situated on the right bank and near the mouth of the river Leven.

INVERLOCHY, a vil. on Loch Eil, in the co. Inverness, Scotland, 1 mile E. of Fort-William. It is situated near the river Lochy, and has remains of an old moated castle. It was here that Donald of the Isles routed the Earl of Mar in the reign of James I., and in 1645 Montrose defeated the Campbells, as described in the "Legend."

INVERMORE, a vil. in the par. of Inver, bar. of Lower Belfast, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland.

INVERMORISTON, the seat of a post-office, on the left side of Loch Ness, 7 miles N.E. of Fort-Augustus, co. Inverness, Scotland.

INVERNAHAVON, a farm in the co. Inverness, Scotland, 8 miles N. of Dalwhinnie. It is situated near the junction of the rivers Spey and Truim. It is famous in history as the scene of the skirmish between the Mackintoshes and Camerons in the reign of James I.

INVERNESS, one of the largest counties of North Central Scotland, comprising, besides a very extensive tract of mainland, the western portion of the Hebrides, the Isle of Skye, and a portion of the ancient prov. of Moray. It was in former times considered a kind of viceroyalty, and is mentioned in Acts of David I. as having a sheriff. Its present limits were determined about 1661. Its boundaries are the co. Ross and the inner end of the Moray Frith on the N., cos. Elgin and Aberdeen on the E., cos. Argyle and Perth on the S., and the ocean on the W. It lies between 56° 40′ and 57° 36′ N. lat., and between 3° 50′ and 5° 50′ W. long. Its length from N.E. to S.W. is 85 miles, and its breadth from N. to S.E. is 55 miles. Its superficial measurement, including its insular district, has been estimated at 1,209 square miles, of which about 59 are lacustrine, and 500,000 acres under cultivation. The area of its Hebridean district is 1,150 square miles. Its mainland coast line is remarkably irregular. This county is divided into the following districts, viz. Lochabar, Badenoch, Moydart, Arisaig, Glenelg, and Strathglass. The county contains 29 whole and 7 parts of parishes. Its only borough is the county town, Inverness; Beauly and Grantown rank next in importance. Balloch, Broadford, Campbeltown, Connage, Clacknaharry, Culcabock, Fort-William, Fort-Augustus, Glenelg, Hilton, Invermorriston, Kyleakin, Kingussie, Lewiston, Lochmaddy, Lynchat, Newtonmore, Portree, Petty, Resandrie, Ralia Stein, Smithtown of Culloden, and Stuarton, are the principal villages.—The surface of the mainland is extremely mountainous, and constitutes a very considerable portion of the Highlands of Scotland. The Glenmore-nan-albin, or "great glen of Scotland," traverses the county from S.W. to N.E., dividing it into nearly equal parts. The Caledonian canal is carried along the bottom of the glen. The Aird, the pars. of Ardersier, and the lordship of Petty, constitute the low-land district; Glengarry, Glenmoriston, and Glenurquhart, run parallel to, and Stratherrick flanks the Great Glen; Strathnairn, Badenoch, and Strathdearn, are the basins of the rivers Nairn, Spey, and Findhorn; the Hebridean portion comprises Skye, Harris, North and South Uist, Barra, and Eig. The general aspect of the surface is one of frowning grandeur, so primitive, indeed, that posts are frequently observed set up to mark the doubtful roads which thread their way through wild mountain ranges and sombre valleys. The Great Glen abounds in the grandest scenery. Along its course are stationed Fort-William, Fort-George, and Fort-Augustus. The latter, with Loch Ness, Glenurquhart, and Corrimony, present some very striking features. Strathglass has its attractions, and a very imposing prospect is enjoyed from Erchless Castle. A large part of the county is covered with heath, extensive fir woods, and other plantations, but the glens and straths are generally fertile and highly cultivated.—The sea-lochs Hourn, Nevis, Mirrer, and Moidart, indent the mainland coast in the W., while on the S. side of the county are lochs Shiel, Eil, Leven, Ericht, Laggan, and Treig. Among the numerous lakes of the W. the principal one is Loch Arkeg, which is connected with lochs Lochie, Oich, and Nesslie, in the N.E. The river Glass traverses the N.W. of the county, and, after receiving the waters of the Farrer, enters the head of Loch Beauly. The river Foyers, with its beautiful fall, after receiving the tribute of the Spey, the Findhorn, and the Beauly, empties itself into Loch Ness.—The highest summits are those of Ben Nevis and Mealfourvounie. The geological formations vary according to the district, but primary rocks prevail throughout the county, especially gneiss; and among the Grampians and at Ben Nevis granite, trap, and porphyrity. In the lower lands sandstone and limestone are abundant, and the latter in the vicinity of Fort-William assumes the compactness of marble. In the Lochabar district are those remarkable natural terraces which are supposed to mark the line of the sea-beach during the glacial period. In this locality also is found a spotted marble intermingled with lead ore and copper pyrites. Iron ore in small quantities occurs in some parts of the county, as also lead and silver.—The soil generally consists of a light sandy mould resting on a subsoil of clay or gravel, except in the valley of the Great Glen, where a rich alluvial soil occurs. The area of plantation has been on the increase latterly, and small farms are constantly being abandoned to make way for extensive sheep-walks, for which mode of farming the climate seems particularly adapted, being mild and rainy by reason of its mountainous character and its proximity to the ocean. The favourite breeds of sheep are the Cheviot and Linton, and of cattle the Skye and Kyloe breeds. The inhabitants generally speak the Gaelic language, and in the seclusion of their primitive mountain homes frequently retain the customs and display the spirit of their Celtic forefathers. The greater number are engaged in farming pursuits, and some few in trade and manufacture. In the western districts they direct their attention to fishing, the herring fishery being the most considerable.—The county of Inverness returns one member to parliament, its constituency in 1854 being 932. The population in 1851 was 96,500, and the number of inhabited houses 17,536. The new valued rental in 1860-61 was £215,506. Sheriffs' courts for the county are held at Inverness twice a week during session, and sheriffs' small-debt courts at Grantown, Kingussie, Beauly, and Fort-Augustus. There are 27 police stations in the county, with three district and one county prison. The military roads, which were constructed in the early part of the 18th century, are monuments of industry and skill. The principal of these are, from Inverness to Dalwhinnie and to Fort-Augustus; from Fort-Augustus to Fort-William; and from Inverness to Fort-Augustus.—Game is abundant, including the Alpine hare, wild cat, roe deer, red deer, otter, hawk, and eagle.

INVERNESS, a par. in the N.E. district of the co. Inverness, Scotland, containing the county town of Inverness (as above) and several villages. It has a length of 14 miles, and its breadth averages about 2½ miles. It is environed by the firths of Moray and Beauly, by Petty, Daviot, Loch Ness, Urquhart, and Kirkhall. The parish lies nearly wholly within the valley of the Great Glen of Scotland. The hill of Tomnahurich near the town is an attractive feature.

The river Ness traverses part of the parish, and receives the waters of several minor streams. This par. gives name to a presb. in the synod of Moray. Here are three parish churches. The High church and the Gaelic church are in the patron. of the crown and Professor Scott. The ministers have a stipend of £277 each. The West church is in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £200. The other places of worship are, three Free churches, two United Presbyterian churches, besides Episcopalian, Methodist, Independent, and Roman Catholic chapels. Besides numerous private establishments, there are the Royal Academy, Bell's schools, the Roman Catholic and Free Church schools, with some others. The principal seats are, Culloden House, Muirtown House, Darochville, Dochfour, and Raigmore houses. There are Druidical remains and several cairns; two of the latter are insulated excepting at low water. On the N.E. of the parish is the famous field of Culloden.

INVERNESS, a market town, seaport, and royal borough, in the par. of its name, being the chief town of the co. Inverness, Scotland, 156 miles N.N.W. of Edinburgh, 38 W.S.W. of Elgin, and 19 S.S.W. of Cromarty. It is a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. It is situated at the northern extremity of the Glenmore-nan-Albain, and on either bank of the river Ness, a little above its embouchure into the Moray Frith. A kind of natural terrace runs in rear of the town from near Loch Ness to the Spey, which is the site of numerous villas, and about 2 miles distant rises Craig-Phadric. This town is considered to be the capital of the Highlands. Its streets are well paved and lighted. The portion which stands on the right bank of the Ness is the old town, and is the site of the original village. It consists of the High-street, several other thoroughfares, and a cluster of narrow alleys. The river is crossed by a bridge conducting to the more modern portion of the town, seated on the left bank of the Ness. This portion is well edificed and excellently arranged. Great improvements were wrought in the town by Provost Inglis at the close of the last century, when the paving and sewage schemes were carried out. The water-works render an ample supply. The principal public buildings are the castle and gaol at Castle-hill, built in 1835, and the townhall and exchange, erected in 1708. Near the latter are the Northern meeting-rooms, and opposite the townhall is the ancient town cross. In Academy-street stands Inverness Academy, founded by subscription in 1792. It is an excellent institution, and has a museum and extensive pleasure-grounds. There are several other first-class educational establishments, as the Free Church school and Farraline-park school. The old academy, built by bequest of Provost Dunbar in 1668, is now used as a poorhouse. The old gaol had a spire, which still remains. The Established and Gaelic churches stand side by side, near Church-street. The former has a square tower said to have been built by Cromwell. The Free High church and West church are both elegant structures, as are also the Episcopal and Roman Catholic chapels, though of less pretension. The Northern infirmary is an imposing building. Here are the Caledonian bank, branches of the Commercial, National, North of Scotland, Bank of Scotland, and British Linen Company banks, and a savings-bank, several insurance agencies, clerk of the peace office, sheriffs' office, stamp office, horticultural society, customhouse, dispensary, mechanics' institute, and several other public departments. The lower bridge is of wood, and was built in 1855. The suspension or upper bridge took the place of a stone structure which was carried away by a flood, which did much damage, in 1849. There are also two suspension bridges which connect two small islands lying in the Ness with the mainland.—This borough was first chartered by William the Lion. A great charter was also obtained in the time of James VI., and the corporation have in their possession a fine collection of records referring to the history of the town. The boundaries of the borough include all the town and a great portion of the suburbs. It is governed by a provost, 4 bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and 14 councillors. Here sit the courts of assize, sheriffs' court, quarter sessions, and justice of peace small-debt courts. It sends one member to parliament in conjunction with Forres, Fortrose, and Nairn. The municipal and parliamentary constituency in 1854 was 532. The population of the parliamentary borough in 1851 was 12,793. The revenue of the corporation was in 1831-32 £1,839, and in 1854-55 £1,577.—The manufactures of this town are unimportant. Spinning of linen thread, which was formerly very considerable, is now nearly extinct, as are also the hemp manufacture and the malting trade. The principal manufactures now are, woollen cloth, tanning, sailcloth, ropemaking, and iron and brass founding. About the middle of the last century the trade of Inverness, which had been gradually declining with the foreign ports, began to revive, and in 1803 a brisk commercial intercourse became established between this town and London. There are from 4,000 to 5,000 bolls of oats exported annually from here, though about forty years ago the town was importing the same article to the extent of 8,000 to 10,000 bolls of meal. Its subports are, Cromarty, Burghead, Findhorn, Lossiemo, Portmahomack, Fortrose, Fort-George, Nairn, and Fort-William. The chief commodities exported are, potatoes, grain, sailcloth, woollen goods, ropes, iron, leather, oak bark, whisky, and malt liquor. The imports are chiefly coal, pig iron, wine, hemp, bacon, fish, boots, linen and woollen goods, hardware, &c. Steamers run to Aberdeen, Leith, Glasgow, &c. The Caledonian canal, which starts from here, runs right across the county, affording ready means of water communication. Its wharves admit of large vessels coming alongside. There are three small harbours, but the lowest and largest admits vessels of 250 tons. There is a ferry station at Kessock, with piers, &c., erected by Sir William Fettes. Two agricultural societies hold their meetings in the town.—Inverness supports two weekly newspapers, the Inverness Advertiser and the Inverness Courier. Formerly intemperance was indulged in to a fearful extent, but the state of things is now vastly different: the people are polished and educated, the Gaelic language, so generally spoken at the commencement of this century, is now nearly extinct, and the Inverness English is remarkable for the pureness of its pronunciation.—The town of Inverness is of very ancient origin. It is supposed to have been a Pictish seat of royalty even in the days of Columba. It appears as a royal burgh in the time of David I. The town was sacked in 1229 by Gillespie M'Scourlane, a Highland chief, who was afterwards executed. From the time of Bruce downwards the town constantly suffered by the frequent descent of the Highlanders. After the revolution the people stubbornly adhered to the Jacobites, and gave considerable trouble before they gave way. During the turbulent times of 1745-46, 36 men were publicly executed. Of the old castle of Inverness no traces remain. According to Shakspeare it was the property of Macbeth, and the scene of Duncan's murder, though that event is generally supposed to have been perpetrated at a spot near Elgin. After the destruction of the castle a royal seat was built on its site, which was visited in 1555 by Queen Mary of Guise, who held a parliament in it. In 1745 it was held by Sir John Cope, and soon after fell into the hands of Prince Charles Edward, who ordered its destruction by gunpowder. The site is now occupied by the county buildings. A large fort was built in 1652 by Cromwell at the mouth of the river, but was shortly after destroyed. The monastic structures which stood about Inverness were demolished to supply material for Cromwell's fort, the only remnant being the chapel-yard in Chapel-street, which was the ancient burial-ground of a Dominican monastery. In Church-street is Lady Drummuir's house, where Charles Stuart and the Duke of Cumberland slept. Queen Mary lodged at the "Lovat Arms." In the vicinity are the demesnes of Muirtown, Culloden House, Daigmore, Darrochville, &c., also Clachenharry rocks and column, Tor-a-Bhean, Ord Hill of Kessock, the Druidical remains of Torbreck and Leys, Culloden field, Kilmorack and Foyers falls, Beauly Vale, the monuments of Clava, Castle Dalcross, Fort-George, and the Roman Bona. The presb. of Inverness is in the synod of Moray, and contains Daviot, Dores, Inverness, Kiltarlity, Kirkhill, Moy, and Petty. The Free Church district includes the same, with Stratherrick and Strathglass. Tuesday and Friday are market days. Fairs are held on the third Wednesday in June, the first Wednesday after 11th February and November (old style), last Friday in April and October, second Wednesday and Thursday after 18th July, and first Wednesday after 15th August (old style).

INVERNOCHTIE, the old name of Strathdon, co. Aberdeen.

INVEROURAN, a vil. in co. Argyle, Scotland, 8 miles to the S. of King's House Inn, on Loch Tulla.

INVERQUHARITY, a demesne in the par. of Kirriemuir, co. Forfar, Scotland. The castle, standing on the river South Esk, was built previous to the 15th century, and is the seat of Sir J. Ogilvie, Bart.

INVERSNAID, a hmlt. and seat of a post-office in the par. of Buchanan, co. Stirling, Scotland. It is situated near the E. shore of Loch Lomond, and is a station on the Loch Lomond branch of the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway; it has a ferry station for crossing the loch. A fort was erected here and garrisoned in the time of George the II. for the quelling of the Highlanders. It was sometime the quarters of Wolfe, afterwards General Wolfe, who fell at Quebec, but is now out of use as a military station.

INVERTIEL, or WEST BRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Kinghorn, co. Fife, Scotland. In the village are a Free church and a chapel-of-ease.

INVERUGIE, a vil. in the par. of St. Fergus, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 2 miles from Peterhead, It is a station on the Formartine and Buchan section of the Great North of Scotland railway. The village is situated on the river Ugie, and has the ruins of Inverugie Castle, formerly a seat of the Cheynes.

INVERUGLASS, a hmlt. in the par. of Luss, co. Dumbarton, Scotland, 3 miles N.W. of Luss. It is situated on the W. shore of Loch Lomond, and has a ferry near the embouchure of the river Douglas. Opposite the hamlet is the island of its name, with ruins of a seat of the Macfarlanes.

INVERURY, a par., post town, and royal burgh in the district of Garioch, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. The parish is situated between the rivers Ury and Don. The former forms its boundary on the N. and E., and the latter on the S. Its length is 4 miles, and its breadth about 2. The surface is hilly, the highest ground being Manar, Drimmies, and Knockinglaw hills. This par. is in the presb. of Garioch and synod of Aberdeen. The minister has a stipend of £258. The church, which was built in 1842, is a Gothic structure. There are also a Free church, Independent, Methodist, Episcopal, and Roman Catholic chapels. There are five or six private schools. Gordon of Manor House, the Earl of Kintore, Count Leslie, Shand of Drimmies, and Grant of Braco, are the principal landowners. The road from Aberdeen to Inverness passes through the parish. The town of Inverury is situated on the Aberdeen canal, 16 miles N.W. of Aberdeen by the Great North of Scotland railway, on which it is a station. Its site is on a small peninsula formed by the confluence of the Don and Ury, both which rivers are spanned by bridges. Since the opening of the canal and railway the trade of the town has much improved. There are three branch banks and a savings-bank. The burgh joins with Kintore, Peterhead, Banff, Cullen, and Elgin in sending one member to parliament. It is governed by a provost, three bailies, treasurer, and four councillors. The burgh revenue in 1853 was £400, and in 1859-60 the corporation revenue was £388. It is said to have been chartered as a royal burgh by Robert Bruce, but the earliest existing charter bears date 1558. Between Barra and old Meldrum is the scene of Bruce's victory over the Comyns. In December 1745 a detachment of the Pretender's followers was routed here by the royal troops. The canal was first cut in 1793, and has 17 locks. It terminates at Aberdeen, being 19 miles in length. The Catholic college of Aquhorties on the Don is worthy of notice. Sheriff's courts are held four times in the year. A fortnightly market is held during December, and the four following months, and a monthly one from May to October. Earl Kintore takes title of baron from Inverury.

INWARDLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Black Torrington, co. Devon, 3½ miles from Hatherleigh, its post town, and 3 N.W. of Okehampton. It is situated on a branch of the river Torridge. The roads from Okehampton to Exeter and from Hatherleigh to the N. intersect the parish, which is of large extent. The land is chiefly arable, and there are several stone quarries. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £277. The church is an ancient structure with a square tower. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a parochial school.

INWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Lexden, co. Essex, 1½ mile S.E. of Kelvedon, its post town and railway station, and 5⅔ miles N.E. of Witham. The village, which is small, is situated on rising ground. The land is elevated, and the soil a strong rich loam, producing abundant crops. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £361. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £306. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small ancient structure, with a wooden belfry containing one bell. It has a S. porch, partly built of Roman bricks, and in the interior are the remains of an ancient tesselated pavement, and a piscina. Inworth Hall is the seat of Mr. J. S. Surridge. There is a National school. The parochial charities produce £2 per annum. J. H. Blood, Esq., is lord of the manor.

IONA, an island, par., and seat of a post-office, in the quoad civilia par. of Kilfinichen, co. Argyle, Scotland. The quoad sacra par. also includes a small portion of Mull. It is one of the smaller Hebrides, situated about 2 miles off the S.W. extremity of Mull. It is about 3 miles long by 1 mile broad. It is famous for having been selected by St. Columba as the scene of his missionary labours. He founded here a chief abbey for Culdees, which is the principal among the numerous ruins standing on the island. The most ancient remains are those of St. Oran's chapel, supposed to be of Norwegian origin. Iona is one of the most interesting spots to the antiquary, but these objects are too numerous to describe. This par. is in the presb. of Mull and synod of Argyle, in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £120. The church was established by government. There is also a Free church, government school, Gaelic, girls', and charity schools. The village of Threld is a squalid little place, but its poor inhabitants are a hardy simple-minded race. Barley and oats are grown for the supply of the tenants. The cattle reared on the fine pastures are sent to Mull. Very handsome pebbles come from Iona, and were formerly very abundant. Marble, serpentine, &c., may be obtained. Dr. Johnson visited the island in 1773, and the late Prince Consort in 1847; the Queen also landed here for a short time.

IORSA. See EARSAY, Isle of Arran.

IPERSBRIDGE, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Dibden, co. Hants, 7 miles S. of Southampton.

IPING, a par. in the hund. of Easebourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 2 miles N.W. of Midhurst, its post town. It is situated on the river Rother, which is here spanned by a bridge of five arches. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture, and in the paper mills. It is written in Domesday Book Epinges, and was at that time held by Aldred, a servant of Edward the Confessor, It afterwards passed into the hands of Richard Amundeville, and was granted by Henry VIII. to Sir Henry Audley. The parish is of great length, being 6 miles from N. to S., but its average breadth does not exceed half a mile. About a third of the land is woodland, common, and waste; the remainder is divided between arable and pasture. The road from Midhurst to Petersfield passes through the parish. The living is a rect. with the cur. of Chithurst annexed, in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £314. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1840. It is a stone building, with a tower containing one bell. The register dates from 1683. There are National and infant schools. Near the church are some Norman remains. Iping House is the principal residence.

IPLEY FARM, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Dibden, co. Hants, near Dibden.

IPPLEPEN, a par. in the hund. of Haytor, co. Devon, 3 miles S.W. of Newton Abbott, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Totnes. It is situated near the Plymouth railway, and contains the chplry. of Woodland. The village is considerable. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £480. Here was once a cell belonging to the priory of St. Peter de Fulgeriis, in Brittany. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £119, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The parish church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a commodious stone structure, with a tower containing six bells. In addition to the parish church there is a district church at Woodland, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £56, in the patron. of the inhabitants. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There are places of worship for Independents, Wesleyans, and Baptists, also a National school for both sexes.

IPPOLLITTS, or IPPOLYTS, a par. in the hund. of Hitchin, co. Herts, 2 miles S. of Hitchin, its post town. The village, which is small, with a few scattered houses, is situated on the river Hiz. The tithes were commuted for land and corn rents under an Act of Enclosure in 1811 The living is a vic.* annexed to the vic. of Great Wymondley, in the dioc. of Rochester, joint val. £301, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Ippolyte, is an ancient structure, with a square tower, surmounted by a short spire, and containing three bells. It has porches on the N. and S. sides, and an open screen of the Tudor period. The register dates from 1710. There is a National school. The parochial charities produce £21 per annum, including the endowment of the almshouses. St. Ibb's House is the principal residence.

IPSDEN, a par. in the hund. of Langtree, co. Oxford, 4 miles from Wallingford, its post town. The par., which is extensive, is situated under the Chiltern hills, and contains part of the hmlt. of Little Stoke. The land is heathy, but in parts fertile. Ipsden Heath is a meet for the Wormsley harriers. The living is a vic. united with the vic.* of North Stoke, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is of great antiquity, and contains some ancient engravings. The charities produce about £13 per annum. Ipsden House is the principal residence.

IPSLEY, a par. in the Alcester div. of the hund. of Barlichway, co. Warwick, 6 miles W. of Henley-in-Arden, and 6 N. of Alcester. Redditch is its post town. It is situated on the river Arrow, and contains the hmlt. of Headless Cross. The village is chiefly agricultural. There is a large needle and fish-hook manufactory at Ipsley Mill, which employs a portion of the inhabitants. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £685. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £588. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice with a square embattled tower. In the interior are monuments of the Hubaurd family. There is also a district church at Headless Cross, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £102. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There are schools for both sexes adjoining the district church of St. Luke's. A Roman Catholic chapel has been erected on the border of this parish, at an expense of £6,000.

IPSTONE. See Ibstone, co. Oxford

IPSTONES, a par. in the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 4 miles N. of Cheadle, its post town, and 2½ of Froghall station on the London and North-Western railway. The village, which is large, is situated on high ground near the river Churnet and the Uttoxeter canal. The par. contains the hmlts. of Foxt and Morridge. Here are excellent gritstone quarries, affording employment to many of the inhabitants. The soil is generally barren, and a great portion of it is composed of moors and peat mosses. The face of the country has of late been greatly improved by plantations. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £130, in trust to the freeholders. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, has a tower containing one bell. In the interior are an enamelled pedigree and a monumental urn of the Sneyd family. There is a chapel-of-ease at Foxt, also places of worship for the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. Here is an endowed school called the Agricultural School, with a piece of land adjoining, which the pupils cultivate. There are various small charities, producing about £8 12*s.* per annum. Belmont Hall is the principal residence.

IPSWICH, a market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, and the principal port in Suffolk, being the capital of the eastern div. of the county, 17 miles from Colchester, 24 from Harwich by rail, or 12 by river, and 68 from London by the Great Eastern railway, which has its station at Stoke, about 1 mile from the centre of the town. Here the East Suffolk line branches off. During the summer months steamers sail from Ipswich for London daily, calling at Harwich and Walton-on-the-Naze; besides numerous small steamers to Harwich, which are constantly plying upon the river Orwell.—The town of Ipswich, which stands on a gentle acclivity about 12 miles from the sea, on the N. bank of the Orwell, here crossed by two bridges, is a place of great antiquity, having been a mint town in the Saxon times. It became a free borough in the reign of Richard I., from whom the inhabitants purchased their freedom, and was incorporated by charter of John. It is now governed by a mayor, 10 aldermen, and 30 councillors, 6 being returned for each of the 5 wards into which the borough is divided. The municipal and parliamentary boundaries are co-extensive, including in 1861 8,272 inhabited houses, with a population of 37,950, against 32,914 in 1851, showing an increase of no less than 5,006 in the decennial period. It has returned two members to parliament since the 23rd of Edward I., and is the place of election for the eastern division of the county. The summer assizes for the county are held here, also quarter sessions occasionally, and county and borough petty sessions every week. It is also the head of a Poor-law Union, superintendent registry district, and new County Court—which last is held monthly.—The streets of Ipswich are many of them ancient and narrow, but have recently been much improved. Among the public buildings are the townhall; the custom-house, an Italian building on the quay; the corn-exchange, capable of accommodating 1,200 persons; the post-office, recently rebuilt; the county gaol, borough gaol, court-houses for the assizes and sessions, a temperance hall, which will accommodate 500 people; a theatre; assembly rooms for balls and concerts; museum of natural history, &c., erected in 1847, and supported by a corporation rate; a public library with 8,000 volumes, occupying the ancient house in the butter-market; literary institution, held in the townhall; Church of England young men's society; young men's Christian Association; two prosperous savings-banks, a mechanics' institution, with large lecture-hall and a library of 7,000 volumes; a working men's college and club; cavalry barracks, barrack and depot for the East Suffolk militia; besides a bathing-house, arboretum, public walks and gardens, and a horticultural society, which holds three grand fêtes during the season. The manufactures of the town are prosperous, including ship-building yards, a silk factory, flax-mills, breweries, tanneries, malting-houses, rope yards, lime and cement works, stay-making, patent artificial stone manufactory, and the extensive "Orwell Works," for the manufacture of agricultural implements and machinery. The coasting and foreign trade is also very considerable, consisting chiefly in the export of corn, malt, butter, cattle, and the various manufactures of the town, and the import of colonial produce, coal, iron, and timber. Vessels drawing 15 feet water can now ascend the Orwell and float in the wet-dock, which was completed in 1842, and lies to the E. of the bridge. Four weekly newspapers are published in the town—the Suffolk Chronicle, Ipswich Journal, Ipswich Express, and East Suffolk Mercury.—The borough includes 14 parishes, comprising the 12 town parishes enumerated below, and the parishes of Whitton and Westerfield, which, though separate villages, are comprised within the liberties—viz. St. Clement's, a rect. with the rect.* of St. Helen annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £326; St. Lawrence, a perpet. cur., val. £175, in the patron. of the parishioners; St. Margaret, a perpet. cur.,* val. £300, in the patron. of Simeon's Trustees, with St. John's chapel-of-ease; St. Mary-at-Elms, a perpet. cur., val. £80, in the patron. of the parishioners; St. Mary-at-the-Quay, a perpet. cur.,* val. £103, in the patron. of the parishioners; St. Mary Stoke, a rect.,* val. £337, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Ely; St. Mary-at-the-Tower, a perpet. cur.,* val. £103, in the patron. of the parishioners; St. Matthew, a rect.,* val. £249, in the patron. of the lord chancellor; St. Nicholas, a perpet. cur., val. £150, in the patron. of the parishioners; St. Peter, a perpet. cur.,* val. £138, in the patron. of Simeon's Trustees; St. Stephen, a rect.,* val. £150; Holy Trinity, a perpet. cur.,* val. £160, in the patron. of three trustees. The mother church of Ipswich is St. Mary-le-Tower, built in the 14th century. It has a peal of ten bells, and is attended by the judges and the mayor and corporation. Holy Trinity was erected and endowed by the late rector, at a cost of £15,000, in 1835, as a chapel-of-ease to St. Clement's. There are five Baptist chapels, two Independent, three Wesleyan, and one each for Unitarians, Society of Friends, Primitive Methodists, and Swedenborgians, also a Jews' synagogue. The Intermural Burial Act was applied to Ipswich in 1855, when the graveyards were all closed, and a well-laid-out cemetery formed at a short distance from the town. Foremost of the charitable institutions is the East Suffolk and Ipswich Hospital, founded in 1836, which receives about 40 in-door patients, and has an average of 200 out-door patients: there are also several almshouses, a shipwrecked seamen's society, and other charitable institutions and clubs. The free grammar school, which is held in the spacious premises erected in 1847, bears a high reputation for its course of studies. The industrial training school and probationary home for penitent orphan females was founded in 1857, and is supported by voluntary contribution. There are also National and denominational schools in the several parishes, and many private schools in the town. General markets are held on Tuesday and Saturday, and a corn and cattle market on Tuesday. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in May and two following days for live stock and pedlery, and one at Handford Hall on the 22nd August and two following days for lambs.

IRAGHTICONNOR, a bar. in co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is 15 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 13. It is bounded on the N. by the mouth of the Shannon, on the E. by co. Limerick, and on the S. by the bar. of Clanmaurice. Along the coast stretches a grand line of cliffs, with the caves of Ballybunion. The surface is damp and boggy. It contains the pars. of Aghavallen, Ballyconry, Gally, Killehenny, Kilconly, Kilmaughten, Knockanure, Lisselton, Listowel, Murhur, and parts of Duagh, Dysert, and Rattoo, likewise the towns of Tarbert, Listowel, and Ballylongford. This barony takes its name from the O'Connors of Kerry, to whom it formerly belonged.

IRBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Woodchurch and Thurstaston, hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 6½ miles S.W. of Birkenhead, and 5 N.W. of Parkgate. It formerly belonged to the Gleggs.

IRBY-IN-THE-MARSH, a par. in the hund. of Candleshoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles S.E. of Spilsby, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Burgh. It is situated near the river Steeping, and within a short distance of the Firsby railway station. The parish formerly belonged to the Irbys, now lords Boston. It is intersected by the road from Spilsby to Wainfleet. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £105. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £83, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is of considerable antiquity, and has a low tower. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. There is a National school. Irby shares equally with Burgh-le-Marsh in Holden's charity.

IRBY-UPON-HUMBER, a par. in the hund. of Bradley Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 7 miles N.E. of Caistor, and 6 S.W. of Great Grimsby, its post town and railway station. The soil is chalky, and at a spot called the Dales are several chalk quarries. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated at the edge of the Wolds, commanding an extensive view of the river Humber. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £240. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £251. The church is a small edifice dedicated to St. Andrew. The charities produce £34 per annum, of which £20 goes to the support of a school. The parish is a meet for the Brocklesby hounds.

IRCHESTER, a par. in the hund. of Higham Ferrers, co. Northampton, 3 miles E. of Wellingborough, its post town, and 3 S. of Higham Ferrers. It is situated on the river Nen, and is a station on the Great Northern railway. The village is considerable, and the inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture, shoemaking, and mat-making—this last from the rushes that grow by the river side. It contains the hmlt. of Kunston. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under an Act of Enclosure in 1769. The living is a vic.* united with the vic.* of Wollaston, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, is an ancient stone edifice with a tower surmounted by an octagonal spire, and containing a clock and five bells. In the interior are a very ancient carved oak pulpit and reading-desk. The charities produce about £71 per annum. There is a chapel for Wesleyans and a free school. About 1 mile from the village is Kunston Hall, standing on an eminence in the midst of a park, and commanding an extensive view of the surrounding country. In the vicinity is a Roman camp of 18 acres.

IRCHINGFIELD, or ARCHENFIELD, a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of Hereford, contains the benefices in Wormelow hund., and several adjoining pars. It anciently formed a separate liberty, and is described in Domesday Survey under the name of Arcenfelde: it was also called Ircingafeld by the Saxons, and Urging by the Welsh.

IREBY, a par. in the ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 7 miles S.W. of Wigton, and about the same distance S.E. of Aspatria. It contains the tnshps. of High and Low Ireby, and the hmlt. of Ruthwaite. The soil is clay and light loam, with limestone and freestone subsoil. It is situated in a bleak spot, and is believed to be the Roman Arbeia. The village of Low Ireby is situated on the river Ellen, and on the high road between Carlisle and Keswick. It was formerly a market town, and is now a village of some importance. The river Ellen takes its rise in the neighbouring lake of Overwater. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £64, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a modern structure erected in 1847. In the interior is a stained-glass window. The charities produce £8 per annum, which goes towards the support of a free grammar school. There is a Sunday-school. Ellenside House, the principal residence, is a mansion situated on the banks of the Ellen. F. L. B. Dykes, Esq., is lord of the manor. High Ireby is situated about 1 mile from the church. It contains only a few houses. Sir H. Vane, Bart., is lord of the manor.

IREBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Thornton, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 7 miles from the Hornby railway station.

IRELAND'S EYE, a small rocky island in the bar. of Coolock, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile N. of Howth. It is in the form of a cone, and serves as a breakwater to Howth harbour. Its summit commands an extensive and imposing view. It has ruins of a chapel on the S.W. side, and is the reputed site of an abbey founded in the 6th century by St. Nessan. The island is famous for many rare plants and innumerable rabbits.

IRELETH, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Dalton, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 2 miles from Dalton, and 5 W. of Ulverstone. The chplry. contains the vils. of Lindale and Martin. It is situated on the river Dudden, and has a station at Lindale, on the Furness line of railway. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the iron mines, of which there are a great number in the neighbourhood. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Dalton. The church is situated on rising ground overlooking the river Dudden. There are two parochial schools—one at Ireleth, and the other at Lindale.

IRETON, KIRK, a par. in the hund. of Wirksworth, co. Derby, 3 miles S.W. of Wirksworth. The village, which is considerable, was much damaged by a tornado in 1811, which unroofed the houses and twisted large trees from their roots. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £355, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is partly Norman, and is supposed to date from the 13th century. There are places of worship for Baptists and Primitive Methodists; also a school, erected and endowed by John Slater in 1686. The charities produce about £7 per annum.

IRETON WOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk Ireton, hund. of Wirksworth, co. Derby, 1 mile W. of Kirk Ireton, and 3 S.W. of Wirksworth.

IRISH SEA, the channel between England and Ireland, called by the Romans Oceanus Hibernicus.

IRISHTOWN, a post-office vil. in the par. of Donnybrook, bar. and co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is a watering-place on the S. side of Dublin Bay, and contains the church of Ringsend, a Roman Catholic chapel, dispensary, schools, and almshouses.

IRISHTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Burry, bar. of Upper Kells, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, near Kells.

IRISHTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Ardea, bar. of Portnahinch, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, near Mountmellick. Irishtown House is in the vicinity.

IRK, a tributary of the river Irwell, rises near Crompton in Lancashire.

IRLAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Barton-on-Irwell, co. Lancaster, 5 miles S.W. of Leigh. It is situated on Chat Moss, near the junction of the rivers Irwell and Mersey.

IRMINGLAND, a par. in the hund. of South Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N.W. of Aylsham. The village, which consists of two or three farmhouses, is situated on the river Bure. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture and meadow. Inningland Hall, once the seat of General Fleetwood, who married the daughter of Oliver Cromwell, is now a farmhouse. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £170. The living is a rect. annexed to the rect.* of Heydon, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church was dedicated to St. Andrew, but has long since been removed.

IRNHAM, a par. in the wap. of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 1¾ mile of Corby railway station, 6 N.W. of Bourne, its post town, and 10 S.E. of Grantham. The par., which is situated near the river Glen, contains the hmlts. of Bulby and Hawthorpe. The land is chiefly arable and well wooded. The soil is principally clay marl, with some stone brash. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £600. The living is a rect.* with the vic. of Corby annexed, val. £608. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing a clock and four bells. The interior contains brasses to Sir A. Loutrell, and others. In the churchyard is a monument to William Hervey Woodhouse, Esq. Irnham Hall is the principal residence. There is a place of worship for the Roman Catholics; also an endowed school.

IRON-ACTON, a par. in the hund. of Thornbury, co. Gloucester, 3½ miles N.W. of Chipping Sodbury, and 1½ mile N.W. of the Yate railway station. This place derives its name Acton from the Saxon word for oaks with which it anciently abounded, and its prefix from some iron works which formerly existed here. It is situated near the Bristol and Gloucester railway, and contains the hmlt. of Latteridge. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the coal and iron mines. The soil is clayey, with subsoil coal and limestone. The common lands were enclosed by Act of Parliament in 1780. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £695, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient stone structure, with a lofty tower. It was built in the 15th century by Robert Poyntz, of whom there is a monument. In the churchyard is an ancient cross much decayed. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. There are schools for both sexes, principally supported by the rector. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a chapel. Walton Long, Esq., is lord of the manor.

IRON-BRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Madeley, co. Salop, 1 mile S.E. of Coalbrookdale. It is a station on the Severn Valley railway. The village is situated near the iron bridge over the river Severn, which bridge is 100 feet span, with a rise of 40 feet. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the neighbouring iron works. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Hereford, and in the patron. of the Vicar of Madeley.

IRON-BROCK-GRANGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Wirksworth, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 11 miles N.W. of Derby.

IRON-GRAY, an ancient par. now joined to Kirkpatrick, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland.

IRON, LOUGH, in the bars. of Moygoish and Corkaree, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Ballinacarrigy. It is about 2 miles long, and has on the S.W. bank the demesnes of Tristernagh and Baronstown.

IRON-VILLE, a manor in the par. of Alfreton, co. Derby, 3 miles S.E. of Alfreton. It is situated on the Erewash canal.

IRSTEAD, a par. in the hund. of Tunstead, co. Norfolk, 11 miles N.E. of Norwich, its post town. It was anciently called Orsteada, and is situated on the river North. There are two wharfs in the vicinity, one on an arm of the Broad, and the other on the river Ant. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture, a considerable portion of the latter being marsh. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £198 10*s.* The living is a rect. annexed to the vic.* of Barton Turf, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a small ancient edifice, with a square embattled tower. The charities produce about £12 per annum, besides about 40 acres of heath allotted to the poor for fuel. There is a National school.

IRT, a stream rising under Great Gavel Fell, in co. Cumberland, and flowing through Wast Water, falls into the sea at Ravenglass.

IRTHINGTON, a tnshp. and par. in the ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 2½ miles N.W. of Brampton. Carlisle is its post town. It is situated on the N. side of the river Irthing, which rises in Spadeadam Moss on the borders of Northumberland. The par. contains the tnshps. of Irthington, Laversdale, Newby, and Newtown. The soil is various and the land chiefly arable. Remains of an ancient Roman fort or castle exist, and a large number of coins have recently been found in this neighbourhood. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Kentigern, is a stone structure with bell turret. In the interior is a stone pulpit and font, and three stained-glass windows. The E. window is in three compartments, one a representation of the patron saint, the centre Christ driving out the money changers, and the third Solomon superintending the building of the Temple. In the churchyard is a tombstone of Robert Bowman, who died here at the age of 119. The parochial charities produce £11 per annum. There is a parochial school, also a Sunday-school. The Earl of Carlisle and W. P. Johnson, Esq., are lords of the manor. The principal residence is the Nook, formerly the manor house.

IRTHLINGBOROUGH, a par. in the hund. of Huxloe, co. Northampton, 2 miles N.E. of Higham Ferrers, its post town, 5 N.W. of Wellingborough, and 15 from Northampton. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the river Nen, and consists principally of one street nearly 2 miles in length, and is a station on the Peterborough branch of the London and North-Western railway. The inhabitants are principally employed in boot and shoemaking, parchment-making, and lace manufacture. In the reign of Edward III. a college for secular canons was founded here by John Pyel, Lord Mayor of London. An allotment of land was assigned in lieu of tithes and moduses under the Enclosure Act of 1808. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £266. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a tower surmounted by a lofty octagonal lantern, and containing a clock and six bells. It is built in the form of a cross, and has two chantry chapels. In the interior are effigies of John Pyel, his wife, and a knight. Near the church is a stone cross 13 feet in height, by which the land measurers of the neighbourhood regulate the length of the pole. The church of All Saints has long since been demolished. The parochial charities produce about £87 per annum, of which £27 is the endowment of Trigg's free school. There are chapels for Baptists and Wesleyans.

IRTON, a par. in the ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 15 miles from Whitehaven, its post town, and 4 from the Drigg station on the Whitehaven and Furness line of railway. It is situated on the river Irt, from which it derives its name, and contains the tnshps. of Irton and Saunton with Melthwaite. The parish is generally hilly, and in some parts mountainous. The soil is various, being fertile in some parts and in others peat and bog, which last is used for fuel. The parish was in the possession of the Irton family prior to the Norman Conquest. The land is chiefly arable, with about 1,000 acres of woodland. Granite of several varieties is extensively quarried. A stream called the Mite flows through the lower grounds. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £96. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, is a modern edifice built on the site of the old one. It has a square embattled tower containing two bells. In the interior are a stone font, several stained-glass windows, a carved oak pulpit and reading desk, and monuments to the Irton family, also one to Vice-Admiral Hodgson. In the church-yard is an ancient stone cross about 10 feet high, formerly richly carved, but now much disfigured. The charities produce about £16 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, and there is a commodious school erected at the cost of T. Brocklebank, Esq. The Hall is an ancient edifice, with a quadrangular tower, situated on a hill and commanding extensive views.

IRTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Seamer, wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Scarborough.

IRVINE, a par., post and market town, and royal burgh and seaport, in the district of Cunninghame, co. Ayr, Scotland. It is surrounded by the pars. of Stevenston, Kilwinning, Stewarton, Dreghorn, and Dundonald, and is about 4½ miles long, with a breadth of 3¼ miles. The surface has its greatest elevation in the N.E., but in the opposite direction it becomes depressed and sandy. The soil is generally good. The parish is almost insulated by rivers. The Annock flows on the E. and S.E., the Irvine on the S., the Garnock on the S.W., and the Lugton on the N. and N.W. The roads from Irvine to Glasgow, Kilmarnock, and Kilwinning, and a portion of the Glasgow and Ayr railway, traverse the parish. This par. is a presb. in the synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister has a stipend of £312. The church was erected in the town in 1774. It has a spire, and was repaired in 1830. There are also a Free and two United Presbyterian churches, a Baptist and a Roman Catholic chapel. The Irvine academy is situated in the town, and was built in 1814. The other schools are, a charity, a subscription, two adventure, and two ladies' schools. Eglinton Castle is the demesne of Earl Eglinton. The town, which consists chiefly of one main street, is situated at the mouth of the river Irvine, 10 miles N. of Ayr, and 69 from Edinburgh. It is a station on the Ayr and Glasgow railway. The extensive suburb of Fullarton is connected with the town by a stone bridge of four arches. The principal buildings are the townhall and gaol, built in 1745. The market cross was removed in 1694, and used in the building of a meal market. The management of the town is entrusted to a provost, 3 bailies, dean of guild, treasurer, and 18 councillors. The corporation revenue in 1859-60 was £2,023. The parliamentary constituency in 1854 was 248. It sends one member to parliament in union with Ayr, Campbeltown, Inverary, and Oban. The trade of Irvine is of considerable importance both as a seaport and seat of manufacture. The principal exports are, coals, carpeting, skins, cotton yarn and cloth, &c., and among its imports are, dairy and orchard produce, raw hides, stone, &c. The harbour is commodious, having from 9 to 11 feet water on the bar at spring tides. The principal branches of manufacture are, weaving, shipbuilding, leather dressing, ropemaking, and various miscellaneous trades. There are a mechanics' institute, library, and newsroom, also several insurance agencies and branch banks. The only newspaper published in the town is the Ayrshire News Letter. Irvine, anciently called Earwine, is a royal burgh of great antiquity, and was chartered by Bruce in 1308. It is interesting as being the birthplace of Montgomery the poet. Stone Castle, near Boutrechill, is supposed to be the remains of a nunnery. A convent belonging to the Carmelites or White Friars was founded here in the 14th century by the Fullartons, and was situated near the site of the parish church, but not the smallest vestiges of it now remain. The church of Irvine anciently belonged to the monks of Kilwinning. The sect called Buchanites first sprung into existence here in 1784, from the preaching of Mrs. Buchan, whose ravings captivated Whyte, then minister of the parish. A bailie court is held every week, and small-debt court every fortnight. The presbytery of Irvine includes Dreghorn, Stevenston, Ardrossan, Beith, Dalry, Dunlop, Fenwick, Irvine, Kilbirnie, West Kilbride, Kilmarnock, Kilmaur, Kilwinning, Loudon, and Stewarton. The Free Church district comprises all except the first two, and with the addition of Perceton and Saltcoats. Irvine gave the title of viscount to the family of Ingram, now extinct. Races take place annually at Eglinton Park. Monday is market day. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in January, first Tuesday in May, and third Wednesday in August.

IRVINE, a river, having its source at Loudon Hill, in the par. of Loudon, and a second headwater in the adjacent par. of Avondale, co. Ayr, Scotland. The greater part of its course forms the mutual boundary between the districts of Cunninghame and Kyle. It is 22 miles in length, and after receiving the waters of the Carmel and Annock streams, falls into the Frith of Clyde at the town of Irvine.

IRVINESTOWN. See LOWTHERSTOWN, co. Fermanagh, Ireland. At Irvinestown Road is a station on the Irish North-Western railway.

IRVING, an ancient par. now joined to Kirkpatrick-Fleming, co. Dumfries, Scotland.

IRVON, a stream abounding in trout and salmon pink, rises in Bryngarw, co. Brecon, and joins the Wye at Builth.

IRWELL, a tributary of the river Mersey, rises near Holme, in Rossendale Forest, co. Lancaster.

ISAF, a hund. in the co. Carnarvon, contains the pars.

of Caerhun, Conway, Gyffin, Llanbedr-y-Cennin, Llangelynin, and part of Eglwys-Fach.

ISALED, a hund. in the co. Denbigh, contains the pars. of Cerrig-y-Druidion, Gwern-Howel, Gwytherin, Llangerniew, Llangwym, Llannefydd, Llansannan, Nantglyn, Pentrevoelas, and parts of Henllan, Llanfairtalhaiarn, Llanfihangel-Glyn-y-Myfyr, Llanrhaidr-in-Kemmerch, and Yspytty.

ISALLT, a tnshp. in the par. of Llys-faen, co. Denbigh, 4 miles W. of Abergele.

ISA-PEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Dwygyfylchi, co. Carnarvon, 2 miles W. of Conway.

ISAR-AFON, a tnshp. in the par. of Caerhun, co. Carnarvon, 4 miles S. of Conway.

ISAY, one of the Western Islands, Scotland. It is situated in West Tarbert Loch, near the isle of Harris.

ISCOED. See ISHCOED, co. Carmarthen.

ISCOYD, or ISCOED, a chplry. in the par. of Malpas, hund. of Maylor, co. Flint, 3 miles W. of Whitchurch. There are brine springs at Wich Brook and Broad Oak. The village is considerable. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries. The principal residence is Iscoyd Hall.

ISDULAS, a hund. in the co. Denbigh, contains the pars. of Abergele, Bettws-yn-Rhôs, St. George, Llanddoget, Llanddulas, Llanelian, Llansaintffraid, and parts of St. Asaph, Eglwys-Fach, Llandrillo-yn-Rhôs, Llanfairtalhaiarn, and Llanrwst.

ISELL, a par. in the ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 3 miles N.E. of Cockermouth, its post town. It contains the tnshps. of Isell with Redmain, Isell Old Park, Blindcrake, and Sunderland. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Derwent, which is here crossed by a bridge built in 1691. Coal and copper mines were formerly wrought within the parish, and building stone is quarried at Moothley Hill. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1808. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £157. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient edifice, with turret containing two bells. Isell Hall and Isell Grange are the principal residences. Sir Wilfrid Lawson is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

ISELL OLD PARK, a tnshp. in the par. of Isell, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 4½ miles N.E. of Cockermouth. This township contains only a few straggling houses.

ISERTKELLY, or DYSERTKELLY, a par. in the bar of Loughrea, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Loughrea, its post town. It is situated on the river Gurtamackin, and is separated into two detached sections. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmacduagh, val. with Killinane, £452, in the patron. of the Marquis of Clanricarde and the bishop alternately. In the demesne of Castleboy stand the ruins of a castle. The other mansions are Cranagh and Woodville.

ISERTKIERAN, a par. in the bar. of Slieveardagh, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles N.E. of Fethard. It is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface consists of good land, and is traversed by the road from Fethard to Callen. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Killenaule, £817, in the patron. of the bishop.

ISERTLAURENCE. See INCH ST. LAWRENCE, co. Limerick, Ireland.

ISFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Loxfield-Dorset, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 6 miles N. of Lewes, and 3 S.W. of Uckfield, its post town. It is a station on the branch of the London, Brighton, and South Coast railway. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Ouse. The ruins of Isfield Place, formerly the mansion of the Shirley family, are now a farmhouse. There is a paper manufactory and an extensive flour mill. The soil is a rich loam, and very productive of hops. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £405. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £340, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient stone edifice with a chancel and S. chapel. It has a square low tower containing one bell. The chapel contains several brasses and monuments; the chancel an altar tomb to Sir John Shirley, with recumbent figures of himself in armour, and two ladies. The register dates from 1570. The Independents have a place of worship. There is a National school, supported by subscription. Henry-King, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

IS-GORFAI, a hund. in the co. Carnarvon, contains the county town of Carnarvon, and the pars. of Bettws-Garmon, Llanboblig, Llanberis, Llan-ddeiniolen, Llanfaglan, Llanfair-is-Gaer, Llanrug, and part of Beddgelert.

IS-GRAIG, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanddwywe, hund. of Ardudwy, co. Merioneth.

ISHAM, a par. in the hund. of Orlingbury, co. Northampton, 4 miles S.E. of Kettering and 4 N.E. of Wellingborough, its post town. It is a station on the Midland railway. The village is situated on a branch of the river Nen, and formerly belonged to the Ishams of Lamport. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the woollen mills. The tithes were commuted under an Enclosure Act obtained in 1778. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £371, in the patron. of the bishop. It was formerly divided into two moieties, inferior and superior, each valued in the King's Books at £7 10*s.*, but was consolidated into one benefice by an order in council, dated August 21st, 1841. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing a clock and four bells. The parochial charities produce about £34 a year, arising from land. There is a chapel for Wesleyans, also a National school for both sexes. The Hon. E. S. Perry is lord of the manor.

ISHARTMON, a par. in the bar. of Forth, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S. of Killinick. Wexford is its post town. It is a little more than 1 mile long by half a mile broad. It is situated on the shore of Lough Tacumshane, and consists of a tolerably good soil. The living is an impropriate cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £36, in the patron. of the bishop. Butlerstown is a modern mansion adjoining the ancient castle of that name. Lyngstown Castle is another residence. Building stone and marl are quarried. The ruins of the ancient church are still remaining.

ISHCOED, or ISCOED, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandefeilog, co. Carmarthen, 5 miles S. of Carmarthen. It is situated near the Towey and the Roman road Via Julia.

ISHCOED, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Ishmael, hund. of Kidwelly, co. Carmarthen, 8 miles S.W. of Carmarthen. It is situated near the mouth of the river Towey.

ISHLAWRCOED, a hmlt. in the par. of Bedwelty, lower div. of the hund. of Wentllooge, co. Monmouth, 7 miles W. of Pont-y-Pool. It is situated between the rivers Rumney and Sirhowey, in the midst of a rich mineral district abounding in ironstone and coal, which are extensively worked.

ISHMAEL, ST., a par. in the hund. of Kidwelly, co. Carmarthen, 7 miles S.W. of Carmarthen. This parish, which is of considerable extent, lies on the coast of Carmarthen Bay, near the river Towey's mouth. It contains the tnshps. of Broadlacy, Hull, Ishcoed, Llansaint, Treforis, and Ystrad, with the little watering-place of Ferryside. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in fishing, catching cockles, and in agriculture. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £187. The church is an ancient structure situated close to the sea-shore.

ISHMAEL'S, ST., a par. in the hund. of Roose, co. Pembroke, 5 miles W. of Milford. The village, which is small, is situated on the haven near Sandy Haven. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £90.

ISHOL, two islets of this name in co. Argyle, Scotland—one in Loch Linnhe, the other near the island of Islay.

ISIS, the name of the Thames above Oxford.

ISKENNEN, a hund. in co. Carmarthen, contains the pars. of Bettws, Llan-arthney, Llan-ddarog, Llandeilo, Llanfihangel-Aberbythych, and part of Llandilo-Fawr.

ISLA, a river rising among the Grampian Hills at Glass Mhiel, in the N.W. district of co. Forfar, Scotland, and falls into the Tay opposite Kinclavin. Its length is about 41 miles. Its upper part gives name to a district called Glenisla. Its principal tributaries are the Back, Melgum, and Dean. It forms a cascade, called the Reekie, below Glenisla.

ISLA, a feeder of the river Deveron, rising above Botriphnie, in co. Banff, Scotland.

ISLAND, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Kennington and par. of Radley, co. Berks, 2 miles S. of Oxford. It is situated near the Isis.

ISLAND, or INCHYDONY, a par. in the bars. of East Carbery and Barryroe, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Clonakilty, its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad, and includes the island of Inchydoney, lying in Clonakilty Bay. The surface is for the most part in a high state of cultivation. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ross, val. with Kilgariffe, £335, in the patron. of the bishop. This parish belongs partly to the Roman Catholic district of Clonakilty, and partly to that of Rathbarry. The island was granted to the Bishop of Ross by Queen Elizabeth, and is the seat of the Hungerford family. Lead ore exists near Dunmore in a rich vein, yielding a large per-centage of silver.

ISLANDBRIDGE, a post-office vil. in the par. of St. James, bars. of Uppercross and Dublin, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, near the metropolis. It is a station on the Dublin and Cork railway, and is situated on the river Liffey, where it is crossed by a bridge of 105 feet span. There are artillery barracks, cotton and flour mills.

ISLANDEADY, or ISLANDINE, a par. in the bars. of Carra and Burrishoole, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Newport. Castlebar is its post town. It is 13 miles long by 4¾ broad. The surface is mountainous and boggy. Lough Islandeady, 4 miles long, and Loughs Beltra and Lannagh, are within the limits. Croaghmoyle is the principal summit, rising 1,412 feet above sea-level. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Castlebar, £614, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two Roman Catholic chapels in the parish, a public school, and five or six private schools. The principal seats are Rahins, Mucknagh, Green Hill, and Woodville. The French occupied Rahins in 1798; and in the vicinity of that demesne is a monument to the wife of Dodwell Brown.

ISLANDIKANE, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Waterford. It is about 3 miles square, and has a precipitous coast. A group of rocks off the coast, called the Isles of Icane, present many remarkable geological features. Dunhill Lodge is the principal seat. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Dunhill. There is a private day school. Near Dunhill Lodge are the ruins of Don Isle Castle. Lead ore has been obtained in some quantities; and other metals seem to exist, though not worked.

ISLAND MAGEE, a par. and seat of a post-office in the bar. of Lower Belfast, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Carrickfergus. It consists of a peninsula 7 miles long by 1½ mile broad, extending between Lough Larne and the North Sea, with Muck Island lying a short distance off the coast. The soil is generally good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Connor, val. £300, in the patron. of the crown. The church, rebuilt in 1827, occupies the site of an ancient structure. There are two Presbyterian meeting-houses, five schools under the National board, and several private day schools. The ruins of Castle Chichester form an attractive feature in the landscape. In 1315 Edward Bruce landed here. In 1642 many of the Roman Catholic occupants were massacred by a party of Scotch soldiers. In this parish is the cave which afforded a hiding place for Hill from the pursuit of the MacDonells. The manufacture of linen, and fishing, employ the chief part of the inhabitants. Portmuck and Blackhead are coast-guard stations. The Gobbin cliffs, which rise to the height of 200 feet, are of basaltic formation, and extend nearly 2 miles along the coast. The caves in these rocks, now the retreat of numerous sea-fowl, were formerly the fastnesses of smugglers. Near the end of the peninsula are a cromlech and a large rocking-stone. Limestone is abundant, and red ochre and gypsum are met with.

ISLANDMORE, an island and coastguard station in the bar. of Burrishoole, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It lies in Clew Bay, 5 miles S.W. of Newport. There is also an islet of this name in Lough Strangford, co. Down.

ISLANDS, a bar. in co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Its length is 11 miles, and its greatest breadth 8. It is bounded on the N. by Inchiquin, on the E. by Bunratty, on the S. by Clonderalaw, and on the W. by Moyarta and Ibrickane. Besides numerous islands in the estuary of the Fergus, this bar. contains the pars. of Clare-Abbey, Clondegad, Drumcliff, Killone, and Kilmaly, with the towns of Ennis and Clare.

ISLANDSHIRE, a hund. formerly in Durham, but now in the co. Northumberland, contains the pars. of Ancroft, Fern Island, Holy Island, Kyloe, Tweedmouth, and part of Belford, comprising 26,820 acres.

ISLAY, or ILAY, the principal island of the South Hebrides, W. coast of Scotland, 12 miles S.W. of Jura, and 15 W. of Cantyre. It belongs to the county of Argyle, and is 25 miles long by 20 broad. Rochindaal, a sea-loch, penetrates to the centre of the island. The surface is hilly, though not mountainous, attaining an elevation of 1,500 feet at Ben Varn, and 1,050 feet at Ben Ronastel. About a third of the land is under cultivation, and the remainder covered with heath. The coast is generally low, but at the Mull of Oe it becomes lofty and precipitous. The principal points along the coast, which is some 90 miles in extent, are Port Askeg, Dunlossit Tower, Ardmore Head, near Thurot's Bay, Texa Island, Portnahaven, Tonvore Head, Neave's Island, and Oersa Island, with lighthouse, near which is Rhinn's Point and the Corydirua whirlpool. The island is watered by the rivers Laggan and Sorn, and the loughs Indaal and Greinord. Game, deer, and wild fowl abound, and the salmon fishery is very productive. The climate is moist but healthy. On a small island in Lake Finlaggan are the ruins of the residence of the Macdonalds, Lords of the Isles. The island afterwards came to the Campbells of Calder and Shanfield, from whom it was purchased by a Tontine Company for £600,000. There are veins of lead yielding a heavy per-centage of silver. Graphite, iron, copper, and manganese are also found. In the W. part of the island the rocks are chiefly gneiss, schistose, and clay slate, with some limestone. Marble, glass-sand, peat, &c., are obtained. The district of Islay comprises the pars. of Killarow, or Bowmore, Kilchoman, Kidalton, Jura, Collonsay, Kilmeney, and North Knapdale. The presb. of Islay is in the synod of Argyle, and contains the same pars. as named above excepting the last. The Free Church district includes only the first three parishes.

ISLE-ABBOTS, a par. in the hund. of Abdick, co. Somerset, 9 miles S E. of Taunton, its post town, 5 N. of Ilminster, and 6 S.W. of Langport station, on the Yeovil branch of the Bristol and Exeter railway. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Isle, or Ivel, a branch of the Parret. The par. contains the hmlts. of Stewley and Woodlands. The soil is clayey, and subsoil blue lias stone. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £70, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Bristol. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing five bells. The church has been recently restored. The register dates from 1685. There is a school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Baptists have a place of worship. John Flott, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ISLE-BREWERS, a par. in the hund. of Abdick, co. Somerset, 10 miles S.E. of Taunton, its post town, 5 N.W. of South Petherton, and 6 S. of Langport station on the Yeovil branch of the Bristol and Exeter railway. It is a small village, situated on the river Isle, or Ivel, which separates it from the adjoining parish of Isle-Abbots. The soil is clay, intermixed with sand. The canal from Langport terminates at Westport in this parish, where are convenient wharfs. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £27, and the vicarial for £195. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £220. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone and brick structure, with a tower surmounted by a spire. It was thoroughly restored in 1861. The register dates from 1692. There is a school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. General Sir John Michell is lord of the manor.

ISLEHAM, a par. in the hund. of Staploe, co. Cambridge, 4 miles W. of Mildenhall, and 8 N. of Newmarket railway station. The village, which is considerable, is situate near the ferry which crosses the river Lark. There formerly existed here a cell to the alien priory of St. Jacutus, in Brittany. This place is famous for its excellent limestone, large quantities of which are sent to various parts of the country. The road from Ely to Mildenhall passes within 2 miles of the village. In the fens have been found deers' horns in juxtaposition with human bones, and those of the extinct British beaver. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £450, in the patron. of the Bishop of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient building, with a square embattled tower containing a clock and seven bells. In the interior are an old font and brasses of J. Bernard and Sir T. Peyton, bearing dates 1451 and 1484 respectively. The register dates from 1556. Near the church are the remains of the old Norman church belonging to the priory, which is now used as a barn. The parochial charities produce £209 per annum, £136 of which is the endowment of the twelve almshouses founded by Sir T. Peyton. There are chapels belonging to the Methodists, Baptists, and Calvinists; also a National school. Isleham Hall is the principal residence.

ISLEHAMPSTED-CHEYNEYS. See CHENIES, co. Bucks.

ISLE MARTIN, an islet in Loch Broom, co. Ross, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Ullapool. It is near 3 miles in circumference.

ISLE OF WHITHORN, a vil. in the par. of Whithorn, co. Wigton, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Whithorn borough. It is a small seaport, and has a harbour and pier. There is a Free church in the village, and remains of an ancient chapel by the shore. A chalybeate spring near the village attracts a few visitors.

ISLE OF WIGHT. See WIGHT, and the like for other names compounded with Isle.

ISLE-ORONSAY, a post-office station near the island of North Uist, Outer Hebrides, Scotland. The island is half a mile long, and is detached from the Uist at high water only.

ISLE-TANERA, a vil. on the island of Taneramore, one of the Summer Isles, co. Ross, Scotland, 5 miles S. of Ru More.

ISLEWORTH, a hund. in co. Middlesex, contains the pars. of Heston, Isleworth, and Twickenham, comprising about 9,280 acres.

ISLEWORTH, a par. in the hund. of the same name, co. Middlesex, 8 miles W. of Hyde Park corner, and 1 S.W. of Brentford. It is situated on the river Thames, and is a station on the South-Western railway. It contains Brentford End, Smallbury Green, Wyke Green, and parts of Hounslow and Whitton. In Domesday survey it is written Gistelesworde. Prior to the Norman Conquest the manor belonged to Earl Algar, from whom it passed to Walter de St. Vallery, and subsequently to Richard, king of the Romans, who built a castle here. Simon de Montfort encamped here in 1266. It was anciently celebrated for a monastery called the Monastery of Sion, of the order of St. Bridget of Sweden, originally founded at Twickenham in 1414 by Henry V., but removed to this place in 1432, the revenue of which at the Dissolution was £1,944 11*s.* 8*d.* The site was granted by Edward VI. to Edward Duke of Somerset, Lord Protector, who erected the mansion of Sion House, but in the reign of Mary the convent was refounded for an abbess and nuns. In the following reign it was again suppressed, and continued vested in the crown till the reign of James I., when it was given to Henry Percy, the ninth Earl of Northumberland, and is now the property of the present duke. The custom of borough-English prevails in this manor. —The village, which consists of one principal street, occupies a situation on the north side of the river Thames, and is lighted with gas, and paved. A considerable part of the parish is laid out in market gardens, which produce large quantities of strawberries, raspberries, and other fruit for the London market. There are an extensive brewery, cement works, and a corn-mill, believed to be one of the largest in England. The Brentford union workhouse is situated in this parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of London, val. £681. in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Windsor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was built from a design of Sir Christopher Wren, and has an ivy-mantled tower containing a peal of eight bells, belonging to a more ancient structure. In the interior are several monuments, two brasses (one to Chase, bearing date 1544), also effigies of Darcey and Devaux. There is also a district church at Woodlands, dedicated to St. John, the living of which is a perpet. cur.* in the patron. of the vicar. It was erected by subscription on a piece of land given by the Duke of Northumberland; and adjoining it are a parsonage, school, and twelve almshouses, all three built by the late John Farnell, Esq., and the two latter endowed by him. The charities produce £1,903 per annum, of which £551 goes to schools, £826 to almshouses —viz. Tolson's, Ingram's, Bell's, Sermon's, and Farnell's, £325 is dispensed by the Board of Feoffees, and the rest is appropriated to several small charities. There are chapels for Independents, Wesleyans, Quakers, and Roman Catholics, which last have also a school attached to the convent. There are five schools in this parish—viz. three endowed National schools for boys, girls, and infants, a greencoat school, and a new school at Brentford End. There are many seats in the neighbourhood, among which may be mentioned Sion House, the seat of the Duke of Northumberland. It is situated in the midst of a park, through which there is a fine walk. The mansion was originally erected by the Protector Somerset on the site of the old monastery, but has been subsequently considerably altered and enlarged under the superintendence of Inigo Jones. It is a spacious quadrangular and embattled structure, with towers at the angles. There is a tradition of a subterranean passage under the bed of the river Thames communicating with Kew gardens. This seat was the place selected by the parliament for the residence of the children of Charles I., while under the care of the Countess of Northumberland. Gordon House, the residence of Judge Haliburton, the author of "Sam Slick," Isleworth House, Sion Hill, Wyke House, and Silver Hall, are the other principal seats. Keate, who wrote the account of the Pelew Islands, was a native of this place. Among the residents were Lord Baltimore, the founder of Maryland, the Countess of Sutherland, the "Sacharissa" of Waller, Talbot Duke of Shrewsbury, the Duchess of Kendal, the mistress of George I., and Sheridan. A fair is held on the first Monday in July.

ISLEY-WALTON, a chplry in the par. of Kegworth, hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 2 miles S.W. of Castle Donnington, and 7 N.E. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch. It is situated near the river Soar and the high road from London to Manchester. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the stocking manufacture and in the breweries. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Kegworth, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, but has been recently enlarged. The charities produce about £15 per annum, chiefly the rent of two cottages and a piece of land at Market Overton.

ISLINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Tilney, hund. of Freebridge Marsh Lane, co. Norfolk, 4 miles S.W. of Lynn, its post town, and 3½ from Terrington St.

Clement. It is situated near the turnpike road from Wisbeach to Lynn, and Wisbeach to Downham Market. The soil is loam intermixed with clay and sand. Islington Hall is the principal residence.

ISLINGTON ST. MARY, an extensive suburban par., forming part of the Metropolitan borough of Finsbury, in the Finsbury div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, 2 miles N. of St. Paul's, London. It has stations on the Blackwall and Kingston and North London railways at Highbury, and a station on the Great Northern at Holloway. The parish includes besides Islington proper, the populous suburban districts of Highbury, Holloway, Ballspond, Battlebridge, Barnsbury Park, Kingsland, and Newington Green. This place, called in Domesday Book Iseldone, or the "lower town," appears to have derived its name from its situation with regard to Tolentone, the modern Highbury. In the vicinity of Barnsbury Park were until recently traces of a Roman camp, supposed to have been that of Suetonius Paulinus, who encamped here previous to his battle with Boadicea, whom he defeated at Battle Bridge. There is also a Roman camp at Highbury, and many coins and weapons were discovered at Islington in 1845, near White Conduit House, some of the coins bearing date 110. It was a place of some importance in the time of the Saxons, and subsequently supplied the inhabitants of London with many agricultural products. It is mentioned in Percy's "Reliques" as the "merry country village," The Welsh chiefs who visited Edward I. took up their quarters at Islington. In 1465 Henry VI. was taken prisoner at this village after the battle of Hexham by the Earl of Warwick. Henry VII. was escorted through this place after the defeat of Lambert Simnel. Henry VIII. and Queen Elizabeth frequently visited Islington, and the Earl of Leicester, Sir John Spencer, Robert Dudley, and Sir Thomas Fowler resided here. During the reign of Mary many of the inhabitants suffered death for their adherence to the Protestant faith. Canonbury House, of which the tower and other remains are still standing, was the seat of the Prior of St. Bartholomew's Monastery in Smithfield. From the tower a view of the surrounding country and London are obtained. At Highbury was the moated seat of the Prior of St. John's, Clerkenwell, which was demolished by the mob under Wat Tyler. During the Civil War extensive fortifications were erected here by order of the parliament for the protection of the Metropolis.—The parish, which is situated on rising ground on either side of the New River, has latterly become a populous suburb of London. It is well paved, lighted with gas, and abundantly supplied with water (the latter by the New River Company). There are many squares; among the principal are Cloudesley, Lonsdale, Milner, and Gibson, Highbury and Barnsbury Parks, Highbury Crescent, and Canonbury, and many residences of the city merchants and tradesmen. Among the principal buildings are the Vestry Hall, situated in Upper-street, a modern erection; the Clerkenwell new county court; the model prison, for solitary confinement, situated in the Caledonian-road; City prison, Metropolitan police station, and the Agricultural Hall, erected in 1862—in this last are held the annual cattle shows of the Smithfield club, and occasionally concerts, balls, &c.; it is the largest hall in London, being capable of holding 50,000 people; the Church Missionary college, opposite Tyndale-place, was erected in 1827, and is capable of accommodating 46 students; the Church of England training college is a brick building, erected in 1826, at a cost of £22,000—it has a portico in the centre, with two wings; the Church of England proprietary school; Church of England young men's society; literary institution; working men's institute; athenæum, dispensary, savings-bank, and branch of the London and County bank, and four hospitals. On Islington Green is a well-executed statue of Sir Hugh Myddelton, inaugurated in 1863. The new Cattle Market occupies 65 acres, and is capable of accommodating 3,000 cattle and 50,000 sheep.—The living is a vic. in the dioc. of London, val. £1,400, in the patron. of trustees. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, is erected on the site of an older one, and has a tower crowned by a spire containing a peal of bells and illuminated clock. The tower was repaired in 1787 by means of a curious wicker scaffold, put up by a person named Birch, a basket maker. In the interior are two ancient brasses, and tombs of Lady Owen, Dr. William Hawes, founder of the Royal Humane Society, Dr. William Cave Aubert, of Highbury House, Poole, the founder of the Small-pox Hospital, Baxter, and Cloudesley. In the churchyard are buried the Rev. John Lindsay, an eminent non-Irving clergyman, John Hyacinth-de-Magelhaens, the natural philosopher, Osborne the bookseller, and Nichols the antiquary. In addition there are the following district churches: St. Stephen's, a perpet. cur., val. £400, in the patron. of the vicar; St. Peter's, a perpet. cur.,* val. £400, in the patron. of the vicar; Christ Church, a perpet. cur., val. £550, in the patron. of trustees; St. James's, a perpet. cur., val. £600, in the patron. of the vicar; St. Clement's, a perpet. cur., val. £300; St. Luke's, a perpet. cur., val. £400, in the patron. of trustees; Chapel-of-ease at Holloway, with the cur. of St. Barnabas, val. £700, in the patron. of trustees; St. Philip's, a perpet. cur., val. £300, in the patron. of trustees; St. John's, a perpet. cur., val. £600, in the patron. of trustees; St. Mark's, a perpet. cur., val. £300, in the patron. of the Incumbent of St. John's; St. Mary's, a perpet. cur., val. £400, in the patron. of the Incumbent of St. Matthew's; St. Paul's, a perpet. cur., val. £550, in the patron. of trustees; St. Matthew's, a perpet. cur., val. £400, in the patron. of the Incumbent of St. Paul's; St. Jude's, a perpet. cur.,* val. £200, in the patron. of the Incumbent of St. Paul's; Holy Trinity, a perpet. cur., val. £485, in the patron. of trustees; All Saints, a perpet. cur., val. £300, with the cur. of St. Matthias, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Trinity; St. Andrew's, a perpet. cur., with the cur. of St. Michael's, val. £450, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Trinity; St. Thomas's, a perpet. cur., val. £300, in the patron. of trustees. Dr. William Cave, Bishop Wilson, and Strahan, once held the living of this parish. There are places of worship for Independents, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Roman Catholics, Unitarians, and Irvingites. There are numerous charities, among which are Whittington's College, or almshouses, at Holloway, erected near the spot where he heard "Bow bells." The Clothworkers' almshouses, situated in Frog-lane, are for widows of decayed members. They were founded in 1538 by Margaret Countess of Kent. In Queen's Head-lane are 8 almshouses, founded by Mrs. Davis in 1794, and endowed with £2,000 in the Three per Cent. Consols. There are also almshouses for bricklayers, bookbinders, &c. There are several charitable bequests for distribution among the poor. This parish shares with Clerkenwell in the benefit of Lady Owen's schools and almshouses. In 1517 Richard Cloudesley left certain money and lands called the Stonefield Estate, for endowing the Hermitage chantry, now pulled down. By an Act of Parliament obtained in 1811, the proceeds of this charity, amounting to £925 per annum, were applied to the repairing and maintenance of the chapel-of-ease and of the three district churches erected in 1827. The parochial schools have an endowment of £160 per annum. There are National, Lancasterian, British, and infant schools in different parts of the parish. The Caledonian Asylum for the maintenance and education of the children of Scotch soldiers and sailors who have either died or been disabled in the service, and also of the children of Scotch parents resident in London, was incorporated in 1815. The children wear the Scotch national costume. The building is a brick structure situated in the Copenhagen Fields, and has a portico of four fluted columns surmounted by a statue of St. Andrew. Among the many eminent persons who were residents or natives of this parish may be mentioned Sir Walter Raleigh, G. Morland, the painter, Pepys, Topham, the strong man, Nichols, the antiquary, Edmund Halley, the astronomer and mathematician, Bagford, the antiquary, Pain who wrote the "Rights of Man,"

Oliver Goldsmith, Addison, De Foe, Cruden, Dr. Pitcairn, Clarke, the Orientalist, Mrs. Robinson, who translated the "Death of Abel," Charles Lamb, Collins, T. S. Surr, Bishop Stillingfleet, Colley Cibber, Dr. Price, the Rev. John Palmer, Lady Owen, and Samuel Rogers, the poet. Market days are Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday.

ISLIP, a par. in the hund. of Huxloe, co. Northampton, half a mile N.W. of Thrapston, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the banks of the navigable river Nen, and near the Northampton and Peterborough railway. The land is principally arable, and the soil clay and gravel. A white stone is quarried for building purposes. The great tithes have been commuted for land under an Enclosure Act. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £377. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure with a spire. There is a place of worship for Baptists. The parochial charities produce £111 per annum, chiefly the endowment of Medbury's almshouses, and a bequest for poor clergymen's widows. W. B. Stopford, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

ISLIP, a par. in the hund. of Ploughley, co. Oxford, 16½ miles S.E. of Woodstock, and 7 N.E. of Oxford, its post town. It has a station on the Oxford and Bletchley branch of the London and North-Western railway. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Wray and Cherwell. The village is of ancient date, and was formerly a market town; and was the birthplace of Edward the Confessor, whose father, Ethelred II., had a palace here, the chapel of which was standing in the latter part of the last century. The soil is fertile, and the population chiefly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £393, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. It was once held by Bishop Ravis, Aglionby, one of the translators of the Bible; Heylin, the author of the "Cosmographie," and Dean Vincent. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient edifice with a square tower. It has recently been restored, and the ancient font used at the baptism of Edward the Confessor, which was removed during the Great Rebellion, is now in the garden of the rectory. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge. The charities produce £120 per annum, chiefly the endowment of South's and Auger's school, which was founded in 1710, and provides for the education, clothing, and apprenticing of 25 boys and 16 girls. The Dean and Chapter of Westminster are lords of the manor.

ISMORLAIS, a hmlt. in the par. of Llan-non, co. Carmarthen, 5 miles N. of Llanelly. It is situated near the head waters of the river Morlais.

ISMYNYDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanaber, co. Merioneth, 3 miles from Barmouth.

ISMYNYDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanykil, co. Merioneth, 4 miles from Bala. It contains the hmlts. of Llidiarde and Rhyducha.

ISOMBRIDGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Ercall Magna, co. Salop, 5 miles N.W. of Wellington.

ISSACOED, or IS-Y-COEDD, a chplry. in the par. of Holt, co. Denbigh, 4 miles E. of Wrexham. It is situated near the banks of the river Dee, and contains the tnshps. of Dutton-y-Bran, Dutton-Cacca, Dutton-Diffeth, Ridley, and Sutton. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £80, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Winchester. The church is dedicated to St. Paul.

ISSAY, an island lying in Dunvegan Bay, belonging to the par. of Duirinish, Isle of Skye, co. Inverness, Scotland. It is a fertile spot about 2 miles long.

ISSAYNDRE, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanbadarn-Fawr, hund. of Geneur-Glynn, co. Cardigan, 3 miles from Aberystwith.

ISSELL'S, ST., a par. in the hund. of Narberth, co. Pembroke, 3 miles N. of Tenby. The village, which is considerable, is situated on Carmarthen Bay, and is resorted to for sea-bathing. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the export of coal and culm from Saunders-foot pier. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £114, in the patron. of the chapter. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum, chiefly the endowment of Jones's school. Kilgetty, the ancient seat of the Picton family, is now a farmhouse.

ISSEY, ST., a par. in the hund. of Pyder, co. Cornwall, 3 miles S.E. of Padstow, and 5 N.E. of St. Columb-Major. This parish, which is of considerable extent, is separated from that of Little Petherick by a tributary of the river Camel. The surface is varied and the substratum is chiefly stone, which is quarried for building purposes. Veins of copper and lead ore were discovered here in 1832, while sinking the foundations for the vicarage. The rectorial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £465, and the vicarial for £223 1*s.* 2*d.* The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £246, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Issey, is an ancient structure. There are places of worship for the Independents, Wesleyans, and Bryanites; also a National school. Halwyn House was a seat of the Champernownes. In the vicinity is an ancient encampment called the Rounds.

ISSINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Binsted, co. Hants, 4 miles N.E. of Alton. It is situated on the river Wey.

ISSURT, a small island, one of the Western Isles, coast of Scotland.

IS-Y-COEDD. See ISSACOED, co. Denbigh.

IS-Y-COEDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Penegos, co. Montgomery, 2 miles N.E. of Machynlleth. It is situated in a fertile valley near the river Dovey.

IS-Y-FFORDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llan-faen, co. Denbigh, 4 miles W. of Abergele.

ISYGARREG, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Machynlleth, co. Montgomery, 2 miles from Machynlleth, and 31 W. of Montgomery. It is situated under Arran-y-Gessel, which rises to the height of 2,224 feet, near the junction of the rivers Dovey and Dulas. The land is chiefly open mountain pasture. Slate and lead occur, but are not much worked.

ITCHENOR, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Manhood, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 5 miles S.W. of Chichester. The parish is bounded on the N.W. by Chichester harbour. The village, which is small, is a subport to Chichester and a coastguard station. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £167. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £151. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure.

ITCHIN, a river which has its source in Alresford-pond, and after a course of 20 miles falls into Southampton Water.

ITCHIN, a vil. near the mouth of the river Itchin, co. Hants, 1 mile E. of Southampton.

ITCHIN-ABBAS, a par. in the hund. of Bountisborough, Winchester div. of co. Hants, 3 miles W. of Alresford, and 5 N.E. of Winchester, its post town. It is situated on the river Itchin. There formerly existed a small priory, part of which has been converted into a private mansion. The parish, which is well wooded, consists chiefly of arable land, with about 60 acres of water meadow. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £448. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £468. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a plain building with a wooden tower containing three bells. A gallery has been recently added. There is a free school, founded and endowed by the late Nathaniel Bailey. Lord Ashburton is lord of the manor.

ITCHINFIELD, or HITCHINGFELT, a par. in the hund. of East Easwrith, rape of Bramber, co. Sussex, 4 miles S.W. of Horsham, its post town, and 1 mile from the junction of the Mid-Sussex and Horsham and Guildford lines of railway. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable, with a portion of woodland, noted for its splendid oak. The soil is clayey, but in a high state of cultivation. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £390. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val.

£280. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure, with a low square tower containing three bells. The register commences in 1700. The charities produce about £16, of which £13 10*s.* goes to the support of Miss Merlott's school. There is also a National school.

ITCHING STOKE, a par. in the hund. of Bountisborough, Winchester div. of co. Hants, 2 miles W. of Alresford, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Winchester. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Itchin. The turnpike road from Alresford to Winchester passes through the parish. The surface is boldly undulating and well wooded. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £8 4*s.* 4*d., and the vicarial for £320. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £260. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a modern edifice with a tower containing two bells. There is a National school for both sexes supported by Lord Ashburton, who is lord of the manor.

ITCHINGSWELL, or ECCHINSWELL, a par. in Kingsclere div., in the lower half of the hund. of Evingar, co. Southampton, 2 miles to the N.W. of Kingsclere, and 5 S.E. of Newbury, its post town and nearest railway station, on the Great Western line. It includes the hmlt. of Knightsbridge and several small places. A rivulet passes through the parish, from which it derives its name. The village is small and chiefly agricultural. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. with the vic. of Sydmonton annexed, £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kingsclere. The church is a small ancient structure dedicated to St. Lawrence. The Independents have a chapel, and there is a parochial school. The Earl of Carnarvon is lord of the manor.

ITCHINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Tytherington, upper div. of the hund. of Henbury, co. Gloucester, 2 miles S.E. of Thornbury.

ITCHINGTON, BISHOPS. See BISHOPS ITCHINGTON, co. Warwick.

ITCHINGTON, LONG, a par. in the Southam div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 2 miles N.W. of Southam, and 2 from the Marton station, on the London and North-Western railway. It is situated on the river Ichene, or Watergall, and near the Warwick canal. It contains the hmlts. of Stoney Thorpe and Bascote. It was the birthplace of St. Wulfstan, and came through the Odingsells, &c., to Dudley, Earl of Leicester, who entertained Queen Elizabeth here on her way to Kenilworth, in 1575. Blue limestone is abundant. This place is a meet for the Warwickshire hounds. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1775. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £190. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a plain ancient structure with a tower. The parochial charities produce about £31 per annum, of which £26 goes to Bosworth's and Tompkin's school. A National school was built in 1855.

ITHON, a river which rises in co. Radnor, and after a course of 30 miles joins the Wye above Builth.

ITONFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Hesket-in-the-Forest, Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 8 miles N.W. of Penrith.

ITTERINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of South Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N.W. of Aylsham, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated in a valley on a tributary stream to the river Bure. The surface is undulating and well wooded. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £345. The living is a rect. united with that of Mannington, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £272. The church is dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and has a square tower containing one bell. At a short distance from the church are the ruins of a chapel. The register dates from 1560.

ITTON, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Caldicott, co. Monmouth, 3 miles N.W. of Chepstow. It includes the ext. par. lib. of Howick. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a discharged rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £153. The church is an ancient structure dedicated to St. Deinol.

ITTON, a hmlt. in the par. of South Tawton, co. Devon, 3 miles E. of Okehampton.

IVARSTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Kilfinaghta, bar. of Lower Buratty, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, near Sixmilebridge.

INE, ST., a par. in the hund. of East, co. Cornwall, 4 miles N.E. of Liskeard, and 4 W. of Callington. The village is considerable. The substratum abounds in minerals, and there is a slate quarry which is extensively worked. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £430. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £362, in the patron. of the crown. The church is a handsome structure. In the chancel is a monument to Sir Boucher Wray. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans. The charities produce about £10 per annum.

ITEAGH, UPPER and LOWER, two bars. in the co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. The surface of these baronies is mountainous, containing offshoots of the Mourne range. The river Bann runs through Upper Iveagh, which is 14 miles long by 9 miles broad, and contains the pars. of Annaghclone, Clonduff, Clonallen, Drumballyroney, Drumgrath, Drumgooland, Donaghmoore, Kilbroney, Kilcoo, Maghera, Warrenspoint, and part of the pars. of Aghaderg, Dromara, Garvaghy, Kilmegan, and Seapatrick. Lower Iveagh is 18 miles long by 16 broad, and contains the pars. of Donaghcloney, Dromore, (and town), Hillsborough (and town), Magherally, St. Inn's of Moira, Tullylish, and parts of Aghaderg, Annahill, Blaris, Dromara, Garvaghy, Magheradrool, Magheralin, Seapatrick, and Shankill, likewise the towns of Gilford and Moira.

IVEGILL. See HIGHHEAD, co. Cumberland.

IVELCHESTER. See ILCHESTER, co. Somerset.

IVEL, a river which rises in Mitley Hill, co. Herts, and joins the Ouse at Tempsford, in Bedfordshire.

IVER, a par. in the hund. of Stoke, co. Bucks, 3½ miles N.E. of Colnbrook, and 2 S.W. of Uxbridge, its post town. It is situated on the river Colne, and near the Great Western railway, which has a station at Drayton, 1½ mile distant. The Grand Junction canal passes near the village, which is very considerable, and was formerly a market town. Thorny was the residence of Cromwell, and Queen Elizabeth had a moated seat at Rycots, now used as a farmhouse. The market has long been discontinued. There are paper and oil mills, and a good trade is done in corn. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £115. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is of great antiquity, and contains several interesting monuments. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum, chiefly the endowment of Bowyer's free school, which is now conducted on the National system. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The principal residences are, Iver Lodge, Iver Court, and Ritchings Lodge, formerly the seat of Lord Bathurst, who entertained here Pope, Shenstone, Addison, Prior, and many other celebrated wits. Courts leet and baron are held every other year. Fairs are held on the 10th and 11th July.

IVER. See IFORD, co. Hants.

IVERAGH, a bar. in the co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is bounded on the N. by Dingle Bay, on the E. by the bar. of Dunkerron, on the S. by Ballinskelligs Bay, and on the W. by the Atlantic. Its greatest length is 23½ miles, and its breadth 11. The coast is wild and rugged, with the outlying islands of Valencia, Beginish, and Puffin. The surface is mountainous and boggy. This bar. contains the pars. of Cahir, Dromod, Killemilagh, Glenbeagh, Killinane, Prior, and Valencia, and part of Killorglin, with the town of Cahirsiveen.

IVERK, a bar. in the co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is bounded on the N. by the bars. of Kells and Knocktopher, on the E. by the bar. of Ida, on the S. by the co. Waterford, and on the W. by the co. Tipperary. It is 12 miles long by 5½ broad. The surface is elevated in the N., but in the S. it is fertile and well cultivated. It contains the pars. of Aglish, Arderra, Ballytarsney, Clonmore, Kilmacow, Owning, Pollrone, Portnascully, Rathkieran, Tibberaghny, Tubbrid, Ullid, Whitechurch, and parts of Fiddown and Muckalee.

IVERUSS, or IVEROSSA, a par. in the bar. of Kenry, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Askeaton, its post town. It is situated at the mouth of the Shannon, where the Deel joins that river. The parish is 1½ mile long by 1 broad. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. with Askeaton, £336. The parish schoolhouse serves for the performance of Divine service. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Askeaton. There are ruins of a church founded by Iverus, a Dane who encamped here during his sail up the Shannon to Limerick in 824, also ruins of Beigh Castle and some Danish fortifications.

IVES, ST., a par., seaport, market town, and parliamentary borough, locally in the hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 18 miles W.N.W. of Falmouth, and 20 W. of Truro. The nearest railway station is at St. Erth, on the West Cornwall line, about 3 miles distant. It is situated on the W. shore of a spacious bay of the same name, on the N.E. coast of Cornwall. The harbour is commodious and safe, and the bay is about 12 miles deep by 3½ wide from St. Ives Point to Godrevy Island. An excellent pier, defended by a battery, has been recently constructed, at the extremity of which is a lighthouse. The anchorage outside the pier is in 6 fathoms, but it is exposed to N. winds and moving sands. There are several steamers and about 150 sailing vessels belonging to the port, to which St. Agnes, Hayle, and Portreath, are subports. The principal trade is the pilchard fishery, of which from 12,000 to 20,000 hogsheads are caught from July to October, and sent for the most part to the Mediterranean. Shipbuilding is also extensively carried on, and considerable business is done in the coasting trade. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the extensive brewery, &c., or in connection with the mining speculations, of which the Trelvyan Consols, Trenwith and St. Ives Consols, are the principal mines now in operation. The metalliferous veins chiefly occur in the N.E. part of the parish, where the substratum is composed of compact and slaty felspar, abounding with actynolite, and intersected by veins of copper and tin; the subsoil in the other districts is granite or slate. The limits of the borough, which includes Lelant and Towednack, are much more extensive than those of the parish, which is bounded on the S. and W. by the above-named places, and on the other sides by the Irish Sea. The population of the parliamentary borough in 1851 was 9,872, and in 1861, 10,353, while the municipal borough contained in 1851, 6,525, and in 1861, 7,027. It was formerly called Pendennis, or Pendunes, and is a borough by prescription, first chartered by Charles I., and confirmed by James II. Before the passing of the Reform Bill it sent two members to parliament, but since one. Under the New Act it is governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors, with the style of "the mayor and burgesses of the borough of St. Ives." The town is very irregularly built, and the streets narrow, but tolerably straight and well kept. It is plentifully supplied with water, lighted with gas, and is increasing. It contains a townhall, custom-house, coastguard station, and an institute with public newsroom. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £160, in the patron. of the Vicar of Lelant. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a spacious structure of the time of Henry V., with a tower 90 feet high containing a clock and two bells. In the interior are many ancient mural monuments. The register commences in the 16th century. There are four Dissenting places of worship belonging to the Wesleyans, Lady Huntingdon's Connexion, &c., also National and Wesleyan schools. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. The principal residences in the vicinity are Tregenna and Trenwith. Market days are Wednesday and Saturday. A fair is held on the 29th of November.

IVES, ST., a par. and small market town in the hund of Hurstingstone, co. Hunts, 6 miles E. of Huntingdon, and 59 N. of London by road, or 72 by the Great Eastern railway, on which it is a station. The Great Northern railway also has a station at Huntingdon for St. Ives; and there is a wharf on the river Ouse, by means of which navigation considerable business is done. In the Saxon times this place was called Slepe, which name is retained by one of the two manors comprehended in the parish, and by that appellation is mentioned in Domesday Book. Its more modern name is derived from Ivo, or St. Ives, a Persian ecclesiastic, who is said to have visited England as a missionary in the 6th century, and to have been buried here. Over his grave a Benedictine priory was erected in 1017 by Earl Edelmar, as a cell to Ramsey Abbey, which, having been burnt in 1207, was rebuilt and continued till the Dissolution, when the site was granted to Sir Thomas Audley. The priory barn and dovecote, with some fragments of the building, are still standing, but present no remarkable features. It received charters from Henry I. and Edward I., conferring on the town the privilege of holding markets and fairs, and was for some time the residence of Oliver Cromwell, who occupied Slepe Hall, recently taken down to make room for a number of new houses, which now occupy its site. In the parish book, now in the possession of the vicar, Cromwell's signature appears as chairman of a vestry meeting.—A considerable part of the town was consumed by fire in 1689, so that the houses are generally modern. The streets are well paved and lighted, but the lower parts of the town, built close on the bank of the Ouse, are liable to inundation by the flooding of that river, which, in 1823, swept away a considerable quantity of property. Over the river is a stone bridge of six arches, said to have been built by the abbots of Ramsey. The approach to the bridge on the S. is by a causeway raised on arches to admit the passage of the waters in the time of floods; and over one of the arches, near the centre of the bridge, is an ancient building, originally intended for a chapel, but now used as a publichouse.—There are no manufactures, but a considerable business is done in agricultural produce, and there are large establishments for brewing and malting. The town is governed by commissioners, appointed under a local Act, obtained in 1846, and by a high constable under the Duke of Manchester, who is lord of the manor. In 1851 the population was 3,522, and in 1861, 3,321, showing a decrease in the decennial period of 201. Petty sessions are held every Monday by the county magistrates. It is the head of a Poor-law Union, embracing 18 parishes in Hunts and 6 in Cambridge, but the union poorhouse is situated in the adjoining parish of Hemingford Grey, about half a mile from the town; St. Ives is also the head of a superintendent registry, but is included within the Huntingdon new County Court district.—The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, with the chplries. of Old Hurst and Woodhurst annexed. The church, originally built by Abbot Ednoth in the reign of King Edgar, was burnt in 1207, but was rebuilt. The present structure, dedicated to All Saints, occupies the same site, close to the river, but is no older than the 15th century, and has a tower and spire at the W. end. There are places of worship belonging to the Independents, Wesleyans, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, and Society of Friends. The National school, built in 1845, is in the Elizabethan style of architecture, situated at the E. end of the sheep market. There are also a Dissenters' school, conducted on the system of the British and Foreign Society, and a small National school at the village of Woodhurst, about 3½ miles N. of St. Ives. The parochial charities produce about £90 per annum. Roger de St. Ives, an Austin monk, and Pratt, author of "Gleanings," were born here.—Market day is Monday, when much business is done in corn, cattle, sheep, and pigs. There are two large fairs held annually, on Whit Monday and on the 11th of October, for cattle, sheep, second-hand clothing, and haberdashery. At the Michaelmas fair much cheese is also disposed of.

IVESTONE, a tnshp. in the par. of Lanchester, W. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 12 miles S.W. of Gateshead, and 9 N.W. of Durham. It contains the hmits. of Crook, Hall, and High Brooms, and part of the vil. of Leadgate. The inhabitants are principally employed in the ironworks. There are chapels belonging to the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists at Leadgate, and a Roman Catholic chapel at High Brooms, also schools for both sexes, supported by the proprietors of the Conside ironworks, besides Roman Catholic schools.

IVINGHOE, a par. and small market town in the hund. of Cottesloe, co. Bucks, 3½ miles from Tring, its post town and nearest railway station on the London and North-Western line, 6 S.E. of Leighton Buzzard, and 9 from Aylesbury. It is situated near the Grand Junction canal, under the Chiltern hills, and is traversed by the old Roman road, Icknield Street. The par. contains, besides the market town of Ivinghoe, the hmlts. of Aston, Horton, and St. Margaret. The town is of great antiquity, and formerly had a Benedictine nunnery, founded in 1160 by Henry de Blois, Bishop of Winchester, and brother to King Stephen. It consists of two streets built on the slope of a chalk hill, but is neither paved nor lighted. It contains a new market house and townhall, in which petty sessions are held monthly. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture and in making of straw plait. The soil is chalky, but fertile. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act, in 1821. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £220, The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient cruciform structure, with a tower crowned by a spire, and containing a clock and five bells. In the interior are some monuments of the Duncombe family and an altar-tomb of Henry de Blois. The parochial charities produce £43 per annum. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a chapel, and there are National schools for both sexes, also three Sunday-schools. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on the 6th May and 17th October for cattle.

IVINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Leominster, hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 2 miles S.W. of Leominster, its post town. It is situated on the river Lug. On Brierley hills are remains of a camp, which was once occupied by Owain Glyndwr. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Leominster. The church, dedicated to St. John, was erected in 1841. A stained window has recently been inserted over the altar. There is a National school for both sexes.

IVONBROOK GRANGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Wirksworth, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 4 miles N.W. of Wirksworth.

IVYBRIDGE, a post town in the par. and hund. of Ermington, co. Devon, 3 miles N.W. of Modbury, 11 N. of Plymouth, and a quarter of a mile from its station on the South Devon railway. It is situated on the river Erme, under a hill which rises 1,130 feet above sea-level. There is a large flour-mill, also a paper-mill. The soil is rich and the temperature remarkably mild. In the village is a good hotel. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter. The church is a small edifice built in 1799, but subsequently improved and enlarged. Here is a National school for both sexes, and an institution, with reading-room and library, supported by subscriptions. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Calvinists have each a chapel. Lady Rogers is lady of the manor.

IVY-CHURCH, a par. in the lib. of Romney Marsh, hthe of Shepway, co. Kent, 3 miles N. of New Romney, its post town, and 11 S. of Ashford. The village is small, consisting of a few farmhouses. The land is principally pasture. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £405, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. George, has an embattled tower containing a clock.

IVY-CHURCH, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Alderbury, co. Wilts, 3 miles S.E. of Salisbury. Here was formerly an Austin canonry, founded by Henry II., the remains of which have been converted into a private residence. The site was given at the Dissolution to the Barwicks. Leland says that the skeleton of a man was discovered here 11 feet 10 inches in length.

IVY HATCH, hmlt. in the par. of Ightham, hund. of Wrotham, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 1½ mile S. of Ightham, and 3 miles E. of Sevenoaks.

IWADE, a par. in the hund. of Milton, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 3 miles N. of Sittingbourne, 13 N.E. of Rochester, and 2 N.W. of Milton, its post town. The village, which is very small, is situated on the river Swale. The par. is bounded on the N.W. by Stangate Creek, and on the north-eastern side is King's Ferry. This ferry is crossed by means of a cable 140 fathoms long, by which the ferrymen pull their boat over. A great portion of the parish is moorland. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £533 16*s.* 3*d.* The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £70, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small ancient edifice with a low steeple. There are the remains of ancient military earthworks on Swaines Down.

IWERNE COURTNAY, or SHROTON, a par. in the hund. of Redlane, Sturminster div. of co. Dorset, 5 miles N.W. of Blandford, its post town, and 8 S. of Shaftesbury. It is situated under Hambledon Hill, on the river Ewerne, and contains the chplry. of Farington. It is a small agricultural village, and formerly belonged to the Courtnays. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £260. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Farington annexed, in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £372. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower containing four bells. The register dates from 1562. Lady Freke's School has an endowment of £20 per annum. Lord Rivers, a descendant of the Courtnays, is lord of the manor. A fair is held on the 25th September, for cattle and cheese.

IWERNE MINSTER, a par. in the hund. of Sixpenny-Handley, West Shaston div. of co. Dorset, 6 miles N. of Blandford, its post town, and 6 S. of Shaftesbury. It is situated at the head of the small river Ewerne, and on the high road from Shaftesbury to Blandford and Poole. The village is considerable, but chiefly agricultural. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £306, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. Annexed are the perpet. curs. of Hinton, val. £342, and East Orchard with Margaret Marsh, val. £100, both in the patron. of the Vicar of Iwerne Minster. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a cruciform structure with a spire 162 feet in height. The register dates from 1742. There is a National school for both sexes. The Baptists have a place of worship. Thomas B. Bower, Esq., is lord of the manor.

IWERNE STEEPLETON, or PRESTON, a par. in the hund. of Pimperne, North Blandford div. of co. Dorset, 3 miles N.W. of Blandford. There is no village, only two or three farmhouses, and the residence called Steepleton House. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £81. The church, a small ancient edifice, is dedicated to St. Mary.

IXWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourn, co. Suffolk, 4 miles N. of Thurston, and 6½ from Bury St. Edmund's, its post town. It is situated on the river Thet, near the Eastern Union railway and the old Roman road, Icknield Street. The village, which is considerable, is of ancient origin, and was formerly a market town. An Austin canonry was founded here in 1100 by Gilbert le Blund, some traces of which are still visible. At the Dissolution it was given by Henry VIII. to the Codingtons in exchange for Nonsuch. Many ancient Roman remains have been discovered in the village. The inhabitants are employed in agriculture and in the chalk-pits. Petty sessions are held monthly; and courts leet and baron are held occasionally for the manor. The market, now disused, was held on Friday. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £101. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure with a lofty square embattled tower. In the interior is an ancient tomb under an arch, with sculptured brasses and inscription to the memory of Richard and Elizabeth Codyngton, bearing date 1567. The charities produce about £65 per annum. There is a Wesleyan chapel. The National school is supported by subscription, and the Sunday-school by a bequest of W. Varey, Esq. Mrs. Cartwright is lady of the manor, who resides at Ixworth Abbey, a mansion built on the site of the ancient priory.

IXWORTH-THORPE. See THORPE-BY-IXWORTH, co. Suffolk.

J.

JACKFIELD, a populous district and chplry, in the par. and borough of Broseley, co. Salop, 1 mile N.E. of Broseley. It extends along the bank of the river Severn, which separates it from Madeley. The village is chiefly built on elevated ground overlooking Iron Bridge and a part of Coalbrookdale. The manufacture of bricks and tiles is extensively carried on, and quantities of ironstone are calcined and transmitted down the river to Stourport. The living is a perpet. cur. val. £109. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a red brick structure, with a square tower containing one bell. Divine service is also performed in the evenings in the National school, which was erected in 1844.

JACK'S-HOLE, a coastguard and fishing station in the bar. of Arklow, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Mizenhead.

JACKTON, a vil. in the par. of East Kilbride, co. Lanark, Scotland, 1 mile from the White Cart.

JACOBSTOW, a par. in the hund. of Stratton, co. Cornwall, 8 miles S.W. of Stratton. The par. is bounded on the S. by the river Derrington, and intersected by the road from Barnstaple to Falmouth. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The soil is a strong clay, with some marsh and bog. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £310. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £243. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient structure with a granite tower, and was repaired in 1831. There are places of worship belonging to the Primitive Methodists, Brianites, and Thornites, also a National school. At a place called Headon are two ancient barrows. Degory Wheare, the first Camden Professor of History at Oxford, was a native.

JACOBSTOWE, a par. in the hund. of Black Torrington, co. Devon, 4 miles N. of Okehampton, and 4 S.E. of Hatherleigh. It is situated on the river Okement. There are some barrows in the neighbourhood. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £160. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £201. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a very small and ancient structure. The parochial charities produce £1 per annum. L. Burton, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

JAGO, or YAGO, ST., a par. in the bar. of South Naas, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Kilcullen. Naas is its post town. It is situated on the borders of co. Wicklow, and along the banks of the river Liffey. Moor Hill has an altitude of 671 feet. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Ballymore-Eustace, £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The ancient church was dedicated to St. James, from which the parish takes its name, and of which there are remains in the demesne of Annefield. It has Independent chapels at Brethnockstown and Inchebrislane, called also Grangia Monachorum. The principal seats are Ardenod, Boleybeg, and Annefield.

JAMES'S, ST., a par. in the co. of the city of Dublin, and the bars. of Castleknock and Uppercross, co. Dublin, situated on the Grand canal and the Liffey, close to the metropolis. See DUBLIN.

JAMES, ST., an ancient par. in co. Roxburgh, Scotland, now joined to Kelso.

JAMES, ST., a par. in the hund. of Barton-Regis, co. Gloucester. It is chiefly included within the city of Bristol.

JAMES, ST. See BROME, SOUTH, co. Wilts.

JAMES, ST., AND DUNBRODY, a par. in the bar. of Shelburne, co. Wexford, Ireland. [See DUNBRODY.]

JAMESTON, JAMESTOWN, or DAMHEAD, a post-office vil. in the par. of Bonhill, co. Dumbarton, Scotland, 4 miles N. of Dumbarton. It is a station on the Forth and Clyde Junction railway, and at a short distance from the Ballock ferry, over the Leven.

JAMESTON, a vil. in the par. of Manorbier, co. Pembroke, 4 miles S.E. of Pembroke.

JAMESTOWN, a small town in the par. of Kiltoghart, bar. and co. of Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 1 mile N.W. of Drumsna, and 2½ miles from Carrick-on-Shannon. It is situated on the bank of the Shannon, which is here crossed by a bridge of seven arches. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a National school. The town was incorporated by James I., and sent two members to parliament until the Union, when it was disfranchised. It was originally encompassed by a wall, some traces of which are still visible with a gateway at the S. side. There are also remains of a castle built by Sir Charles Coote in 1623. It was taken in 1645 by Earl Carlingford, and in 1689 by the Enniskilleners. The prison and barracks are now destroyed. Its fairs and market have fallen into disuse. There are traces of a Franciscan friary, which formerly stood in the town. Jamestown Lodge is the adjacent seat.

JAMESTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Taghboy, bar. of Athlone, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Mount Talbot.

JAMESTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Contin, co. Ross, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Dingwall.

JAMESTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Westerkirk, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 8 miles N.N.W. of Langholm. It is situated on the Meggot Water. An antimony mine was formerly worked, but is now abandoned. The village took its origin in the settling of the miners here, about 1790.

JANETOWN, or JEANTOWN, a post-office vil. and fishing station in the par. of Lochcarron, co. Ross, Scotland, 43 miles S.W. of Dingwall. It is situated on the N. shore of Loch Carron, and on the road from Stromeferry to Dingwall.

JARROW, a par. in the E. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 3 miles S.W. of South Shields, 7 N.E. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and 6 S. of Gateshead, its post town. It is situated on the river Tyne, and has a station on the York and Berwick railway. The par. contains the tnshps. and vils. of Heworth, Hedworth, Harton, Hepburn, Felling, Billquay, Windynook, Westoe, and Wardle. It was called by the Saxons Gyrwy, and appears to have derived its first importance from a monastery founded by Bishop Benedict, which was destroyed by the Danes, and afterwards restored by Bishop Walcher, and made a cell to St. Cuthbert's Priory, at Durham. The historian Bede, who was born in this parish, was educated at this monastery, having entered it at the age of nine years. Some traces of the monastic ruins are still visible. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the collieries. The soil is clayey, and chiefly arable. The living is a perpet. cur.,* val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, is a stone structure, with a tower containing two bells. It was rebuilt in 1783, with the exception of the tower and chancel. The register dates from 1572. In addition to the parish church there are two district churches at Heworth, and St. Alban's at Windy Nook, the livings of which are perpet. curs., val. £300 to £148. The parochial charities produce about £104 per annum. There are places of worship for Wesleyans, Primitive and New Connexion Methodists, Wesleyan Reformers, and United Presbyterians. There are National schools for both sexes, also a Sunday-school in connection with the church. Near the church is Bedeswell, where in ancient times children were dipped and wakes were held. Some Roman remains have been found here. Jarrow Grange is the principal residence. T. Brown, Esq., is lord of the manor.

JAY, a tnshp. in the par. of Leintwardine, co. Hereford, 7 miles W. of Ludlow. It is joined to Heath.

JED, a river rising in the Cheviots, under Carter Fell, in co. Roxburgh, Scotland, and after a course of 16 miles joins the Teviot. It abounds in red trout, and, passing by Jedburgh, waters a vale celebrated by Burns for its "Eden scenes."

JEDBURGH, a par. in co. Roxburgh, Scotland, containing, besides the town of Jedburgh, the vils. of Bongate, Bonjedward, Lanton, and Ulston. The parish is divided into N. and S. sections, lying about 1 mile apart at the least. The northern section is bounded by Ancrum, Crailing, Eckford, Hounam, Oxnam, Southdean, and Bedrule, and is about 6 miles long by 5 broad. The southern section, the original Jedhart, or Jedburgh, is bounded by Oxnam, co. Northumberland, and Southdean. It is of a circular form, and a little over 3 miles in diameter. The surface in the N. section is traversed by the valley of the Jed, and mounts up on either side of that stream to a height of 300 feet. In the W., the Dunion attains an altitude of 1,024 feet. The surface of the S. section is also varied in contour. The river Teviot describes part of the southern boundary, and the Oxnam water the eastern. The soil in the valleys is a rich loam, but that of the upper districts is clayey. For the last half century cultivation has rapidly increased, and the shepherd has given wide place to the ploughman. Nearly the whole of the surface was in former times covered by a forest called Jed Forest. The roads from Berwick to Carlisle, and from Edinburgh to Carlisle, traverse the parish. Jedburgh gives name to a presb. in the synod of Merse and Teviotdale, in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £324. Part of Jedburgh Abbey, originally founded by David I., was fitted up in 1793 as the parish church. There are also a Free and two United Presbyterian churches, besides Independent and Episcopalian chapels. There are two parish schools—one in the borough of Jedburgh, united to a grammar school, and Society schools, two under the patronage of the Marquis of Lothian, besides several private educational establishments. The ancient parishes of Jedworth, Old Jedworth, and Upper Crailing, constitute the present parish of Jedburgh. A quoad sacra parish has recently been constituted, which consists of the S. section of this parish, and parts of Southdean and Oxnam. Its church was erected in 1838. The ancient parishes of Jedworth are mentioned in history as early as 882. The seats of the parish are Edgerston, Mossburnford, Langlee, Hundalee, Hartrigge, Bonjeward. The Marquis of Lothian, Earl Minto, Chief Justice Lord Campbell, Rutherford of Edgerston, Mein of Hunthill, Ormiston of Glenburnhall, and Fair of Langlee, are the principal landowners. The river Jed, or Gad, which gives name to the parish, is supposed to derive its name from the British tribe Gadeni, whose territory was seated here. Gedwordo, or Jedworth, was the early form of spelling, and it is now known by the name of Jeddart among the people of the district. Jedburgh, like most border districts, has constantly been the scene of feuds and conflict. In 1575 a collision took place between a party of Scots and the English bordermen, when Sir George Heron was killed. Fernihurst Castle is an object of interest. There are some remains of peel towers and ancient camps, also artificial caves at Hundalee and Lintalee. About 2 miles from the town passes a Roman paved causeway, still very perfect. Sir David Brewster and John Aislie were natives, and Doctors Macknight and Somerville were both ministers of the parish. The rock structure of this district offers a wide field to the geologist. White and red sandstone and limestone are quarried. Iron ore occurs near the town, and coal exists, but is not at present worked. Two medicinal springs are found near the burgh.

JEDBURGH, a post and market town, royal borough, and the capital of co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 10 miles S.S.W. of Kelso, and 46 from Edinburgh. It is a station on the Edinburgh and Jedburgh Junction railway. It is situated on the left bank of the river Jed, and consists chiefly of four or five well-planned streets. The town extends over an area measuring about half a mile by a quarter. Many of the houses and public departments are well built. Two bridges cross the river in the town, and within a distance of a mile five others may be counted spanning the Jed. The principal modern buildings are—the gaol, which is a massive building occupying the site of an ancient castle; the county hall; dispensary, built in 1822 at the expense of the Marquis of Lothian. The places of worship are an Established church, Free church, two United Presbyterian churches, and an Episcopalian chapel. The borough obtained its charter of incorporation in the time of David I. It sends one member to parliament in conjunction with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick, and Lauder. It is governed by a provost, 3 bailies, dean of guild, treasurer, and 15 councillors. There are eight incorporated trades. The municipal constituency in 1854 was 163, and the parliamentary constituency 187. The population in 1861 was 3,428, and the number of inhabited houses 399. There are three branch banks, savings-bank, several insurance agencies, reading-rooms, public libraries, horticultural and religious societies; and quarter sessions are held in March, May, August, and October; sheriff courts, small-debt courts, and justice of peace courts sit during session. Jedburgh holds a tolerable position as a seat of manufacture: the principal branches are the woollen trade and stocking-weaving; boot-making is also extensively carried on. The orchards and gardens which adorn the outskirts produce large quantities of fruit. The ancient castle alluded to above stood upon the site occupied by the gaol. Its origin is not known, but it was a place of great strength, and was frequently made the resort of royalty. It was the birthplace of Alexander III., and the scene of his marriage and a ball, on which occasion a person disguised as a skeleton entered the room, causing a panic which agitated the entire kingdom. The house in which Queen Mary lay sick, after having visited Bothwell at Hermitage Castle, is still standing. Jedburgh Abbey, the chief attraction in the way of antiquities, is situated on the S. side of the town. Though a considerable portion of the building is entirely gone, sufficient remains to give an idea of its former grandeur. The nave has been restored, and now serves the purposes of a parish church. It is generally supposed to have been founded by David I., though some writers assign its origin to a much earlier period, and say that St. Kennoch was abbot in the year 1000. The most beautiful part of this ruin is a Norman door, which entered into the S. side of the church from the cloisters. The town was frequently sacked during the border wars, and was burnt in 1523 by the Earl of Surrey. During these periods Jedburgh lost all its ancient records—those existing extend only to 1619; but it seems to have been a place of importance as early as the 12th century. Previous to the Union the town trafficked extensively in the contraband trade, the decline of which at one time threatened to extinguish its trade altogether. The Jedburgh men were celebrated for their prowess in warfare. The shoemakers' and weavers' guilds have possession of war trophies taken from the English. Tuesday and Friday are market days. Cattle fairs are held every month, and statute fairs for hiring servants at Whitsuntide and Martinmas.

JEDBURGH, a district of co. Roxburgh, Scotland, includes the pars. of Ancrum, Bedrule, Minto, Oxnam, Crailing, Hobkirk, Jedburgh, and Southdean. The presb. of Jedburgh is in the synod of Merse, and comprehends the same parishes with Cavers, Eckford, Hownam, Kirkton, Wilton, and Hawick. The Free Church district includes Crailing, Hobkirk, Jedburgh, Southdean, and Hawick.

JEDWORTH, or OLD JEDBURGH, a vil. in the par. of Oxnam, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Jedburgh. It was founded in the middle of the 9th century by Bishop Ecgfred, of Lindisfarne, and was called by the Saxons Geddewords.

JEFFRESTON, a par. in the hund. of Narberth, co. Pembroke, 5 miles S.W. of Narberth, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated near Cresswell Quay. The inhabitants are principally employed in the coal and culm trade. Cressellay is the principal residence. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £134, in the patron. of the chapter. The church is dedicated to SS. Jeffry and Oswald.

JEMIMA, a vil. in the par. of Kirkmichael, co. Cromarty, Scotland. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in April, first Wednesday in August, and the last Tuesday in October.

JENKIN, a vil. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 5 miles N.E. of Macclesfield.

JERPOINTABBEY, a par. in the bar. of Gowran, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile W.S.W. of Thomastown. The parish lies along the river Nore, and was anciently the site of a corporate town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val., with Burnchurch, £700, in the patron. of the crown. It forms part of the Roman Catholic union of Thomastown. This parish takes its name from a Cistercian abbey which was founded here by Donogh O'Donoghoe, King of Ossory, in 1180. It was suppressed in the time of Henry VIII., and afterwards granted to the Earl of Ormonde. Felix O'Dullany, Bishop of Ossory, was buried here in 1202. The ruins of the abbey are still very interesting and extensive, and contain tombs of the founder, and of the families of Grace and Butler.

JERPOINTCHURCH, or JERPOINT EAST, a par. in the bar. of Knocktopher, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. See CHURCH JERPOINT.

JERPOINT WEST, a par. in the bars. of Gowran, Ida, and Knocktopher, co. Kilkenny, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Inistioge. It is situated near the river Nore, and consists of three detached portions.

JERSEY, the largest and most valuable of the Channel Islands, situated between 49° 9′ and 49° 16′ N. lat., and 1° 58′ and 2° 14′ W. long, distant about 15 miles from the N.W. coast of France, and 18 miles from Guernsey; its greatest length from E. to W. is about 12 miles, and its greatest breadth from N. to S. about 7 miles; it is about 47 miles in circuit; its area is 28,717 statute acres. The population of Jersey in 1861 was 55,613, having decreased since 1851, when it was 57,025, by 1,407; the number of inhabited houses in 1861 was 8,338, and of uninhabited, 367. What has been said respecting the early history of Guernsey applies also to that of Jersey. Jersey was called Cæsarea by the Romans. In the reign of Edward III. the island was attacked by Du Guesclin, Constable of France, but unsuccessfully. During the Wars of the Roses it was again attacked by the French under Pierre de Breze, and again without success. Henry VII., while Earl of Richmond, and, at a later period, Charles II., while an exile, found a refuge in Jersey. In 1779 an attempt to land on the island was unsuccessfully made by the Prince of Nassau. In 1781 the French, under Baron de Rullecourt, having taken possession of the town of St. Helier, were attacked by Major Pierson, and forced to surrender. Rullecourt and Major Pierson fell in the engagement. —The form of the island is quadrangular. The coast on the N. side is rugged and precipitous, rising to the height of from 100 to 200 feet; that on the S. side is generally low and shelving. It is much broken all round by small bays and coves—the chief of which are, Boulay, a bay on the N. side, where a small pier was erected some years ago by the States of Jersey; St. Catherine's Bay, a bay in the N.E., where a harbour of refuge has been constructed; Grouville Bay, in the S.E.; St. Aubin's Bay, and St. Brelade's Bay, in the S.; and St. Owen's Bay, a wide shallow bay, in the W.—Granite rocks are the principal formation of the highlands in the northern part, and granite, overlaid by schistose rocks, the principal formation of the southern part of the island. The rocks along the northern coast consist for the most part of sienite, which is quarried, and exported in large quantities to Guernsey, England, and France. It is of a reddish white colour, and is susceptible of a high polish. The surface of Jersey is undulating, and slopes from N. to S. The island is intersected in all directions by ravines and valleys. The valleys are watered by many streams, which serve to turn numerous corn-mills. The general direction of the valleys is from N. to S. They are narrow at the northern end, but expand into wide flats of pasture land as they approach the southern coast. The climate of Jersey, from its insular situation, and from its surface sloping towards the S., is milder than that of most other places under the same latitude, the mean temperature being 52°. Snow seldom falls, and continued frosts are of very rare occurrence. myrtles and other delicate shrubs grow in the open air. The fall of rain is large, and the dews are heavy. The island, particularly the western part, is frequently visited by violent gales.—The state of agriculture in Jersey, notwithstanding the minute division of property, arising from the custom of gavelkind, is good. The holdings seldom exceed 15 acres. The rent for good land is about £5 per acre. The soil is exceedingly productive, and the expense of cultivating it trifling. Wheat is the principal cereal raised. Barley is grown, and some oats. Potatoes are largely cultivated for exportation. Parsnips, for feeding bullocks, hogs, &c., are grown to a large extent. Lucerne is one of the most important crops. The principal manure used is a species of seaweed called vraic. Various kinds of fruit grow to perfection in Jersey, including the melon, grape, peach, apricot, and the Charmoutel pear. Much of the land is laid out in orchards, cider being made in large quantities. The island is well wooded, the principal trees being the chestnut, elm, and white oak. Great attention is paid to the breeding and rearing of cows, which are of the Alderney breed. Jersey butter is highly esteemed. Owing to the limited extent of pasturage, few sheep are to be met with in the island. The breed of horses has greatly improved of late years; they are small, but strong.—The trade of Jersey is extensive, and still increasing. The inhabitants enjoy peculiar commercial advantages, the most important of which are, the liberty of exporting the produce of the island to England, subject only to the same duties as are paid on the produce of Great Britain; and exemption from import duties. The chief articles of export are, cattle, cider, potatoes, and oysters; and of import, woollen goods, hardware, cutlery, glass, soap, and earthenware. Shipbuilding is carried on to a large extent, timber and cordage being admitted free of duty.—Jersey, like the other Channel islands, is governed by its own laws, which are founded on the ancient customs of Normandy. Acts of the English parliament do not apply to these islands, unless so specified. The States of Jersey consist of the lieutenant-governor, and the bailiff of the royal court, appointed by the crown; the 12 jurats of the royal court, elected for life by the ratepayers; the rectors of the 12 parishes; the 12 constables, elected every three years by the ratepayers; and the queen's attorney and solicitor-general, who have seats, but cannot vote. To the above-mentioned members were added, about ten years ago, 14 deputies, of whom three represent the parish of St. Helier's, and each of the eleven other parishes chooses one. The viscount also has a right to sit in the states, but has no vote. The bailiff and the 12 jurats constitute the court of judicature in civil and criminal cases: from their decisions an appeal lies to the queen in council.—Jersey is a deanery in the diocese of Winchester; the dean is one of the 12 rectors: the livings are small. The religion of the island is that of the Church of England. The 12 parishes into which Jersey is divided are—St. Helier, St. Owen, St. Lawrence, St. Clement, St. John, St. Brelade, Grouville, St. Mary, St. Martin, St. Saviour, St. Peter, and Trinity.—Jersey contains three towns, St. Helier, St. Aubin, and Gorey. The almost total exemption from taxation enjoyed by the inhabitants has induced a great many English to become permanent residents in the island. The language is a corrupt French, but English is generally understood. The roads through Jersey are numerous and good. They were formed by the direction of Sir George Don, who was governor from 1806 to 1810, previous to which the island was traversed by narrow lines, some of which still remain.—Several newspapers are published in the island, some in French and others in English. Jersey possesses a well-organised body of militia. The principal antiquities in the island are cromlechs and stone circles. The ancient manor houses are scattered throughout the island.

JERVAULX, or JOREVAL ABBEY, a hmlt. in the par. of East Witton, wap. of West Hang, North Riding co. York, 3 miles S.E. of Middleham. It is situated on the river Ure or Yore, and in the reign of Edward I. sent members to parliament. It is now an inconsiderable place, chiefly known as the seat of the Marquis of Ailesbury. The gateway and some minor ruins still remain of the Cistercian abbey, originally founded in 1145, but rebuilt twelve years later.

JESMOND, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Andrew, E. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles N.E. of Newcastle, within which borough it is included. It is a station on the Newcastle and Tynemouth section of the Blyth and Tyne railway. Here was a chapel and hospital dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and given by Edward VI. to the corporation of Newcastle, also a rood and holy well. The chapel has been converted into a barn, but the hospital has been rebuilt. The manor was formerly possessed by the Hiltons, and afterwards by the Stottes and Coulsons, of Jesmond House. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, in the patron. of the trustees. There is a girls' school, with a small endowment. In 1828 a stone coffin of six slab stones was found at Villa Real, containing human remains, and an urn.

JESUS COLLEGE, an ext. par. place in Cambridge University, co. Cambridge, which see.

JETHOU, ISLE OF, one of the Channel Islands, 4 miles E. of St. Peter's, Guernsey. It is separated from the island of Herm by a narrow strait, and is about 1 mile in circumference, being chiefly composed of granite, and very sterile.

JEVINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Willingdon, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 5 miles S.W. of Hailsham, 10 S.E. of Lewes, and 3 N.W. of Eastbourne, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated in a valley sheltered by the South Down hills. The land is fertile and chiefly arable. At the northern extremity of the parish is a limekiln. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £309. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £460. The church is a small ancient edifice dedicated to St. Andrew, with a massive square tower. In the chancel are monuments to the Markwick and Rochester families. The register dates from 1661. There is a National school and two almshouses for four poor persons. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum.

JEWS-LANE, a ward in the par. of St. Margaret, borough of King's Lynn, co. Norfolk.

JOCK'S LODGE, or PIERSHILL, a vil. in the par. of South Leith, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 1 mile E. of Edinburgh, on the road from thence to Berwick. Here are cavalry barracks, built in 1793.

JOHNBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Greystoke, ward of Leath, co. Cumberland, 6½ miles E. of Penrith, its nearest railway station. The land is principally pasturage. Henry Howard, Esq., is lord of the manor.

JOHN O'GROAT'S HOUSE, in the par. of Canisby, co. Caithness, Scotland, between Huna Ferry and Duncansby Head. It is the extreme northerly point of Scotland, and is said to have been the site of a house built in the time of James IV. by John de Groot, a Dutch settler, whose family having fallen out about the post of honour at table, one of its members erected a house with eight sides, and doors and table of corresponding shape, that each branch of the family might enter and be seated without giving precedence to the other. Some traces of this house are said to be discernible.

JOHNSHAVEN, a vil. and small port in the par. of Benholme, co. Kincardine, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Bervie. It is situated on a bay bearing its name, and has a small harbour. It is a coastguard station. Here is a Presbyterian church. The inhabitants are principally employed in the fishery and in linen weaving.

JOHN'S, ST., or IVERNOON, a par. in the bar. of Athlone, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 8 miles N.W. of Athlone, its post town. It lies along the borders of Lough Ree, and is 5 miles long by 4½ broad. The soil is generally good, with limestone subsoil. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with Killenvoy, £253, in the patron. of the bishop. There are public and private schools. The Roman Catholic chapel here is united to those of Killenvoy, Kilmain, and Raharra. The principal residences are St. John's, Carrenure, and John's Port. The parish is interesting as it contains the remains of a fortified house of Knights Templars, founded in the 13th century. It occupied a very strong position on a rocky peninsula jutting out into the lake, near which was an ancient town called Teacheon or Randown. This castle was fortified by the English in 1226, and the town was sacked a few years later by Phelim O'Conor. Besides these ruins there are remains of an ancient church and burial-ground; also of a seat at Kilmore Bay, and of a nunnery at Nun's Island. Potter's and pipe clay are found.

JOHN'S, ST., a par in the bar. of Carbery, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing part of the town of Sligo. It is 4½ miles in length, and 3½ in breadth. The surface of the rural district is somewhat mountainous, and consists of good arable land and some pasture. Part of Lough Gill lies within its limits. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with three others, £705, in the patron. of Trinity College, Dublin. The church was built in 1822, by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. It was subsequently repaired and enlarged by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. Here are Presbyterian, Independent, and two Methodist meeting-houses. This par. is the head of a Roman Catholic union, and contains three chapels. There is also a conventual chapel. The principal seats are Prospect, Oakfield, Marrino, Rathaller, Woodville, Kermsfort, Abbeyview, Cloverhill, and Carnsfoot. Limestone is abundant.

JOHN'S, ST., a par. in the bar. of Bantry, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles from Enniscorthy, its post town. The surface extends along the banks of the rivers Slaney and Boro, which last is navigable for barges at this point. It consists of good land, and is traversed by the road from Enniscorthy to Wexford. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with St. Mary's, Enniscorthy, £1,080, in the patron. of the bishop. In the Roman Catholic arrangement the parish belongs partly to the district of Enniscorthy, and partly to that of Davidstown. The principal seats are St. John's, Borodale, Sweetfarm, and Tomnalossett. The convent of St John's was founded in 1230, and was granted by Queen Elizabeth to Edmund Spenser, the poet, who had the manor assigned to him by the Earl of Ormonde. Near the site of the abbey are the ruins of the ancient parish church. There is a medicinal spring at John's Bridge.

JOHN'S, ST., a vil. in the par. of Wendron, hund. of Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 2 miles from Helston, and 15 S.W. of Truro. Here was formerly a small priory of the Knights of St. John.

JOHN'S, ST., CLACHAN, a vil. in the par. of Dalry, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, near New Galloway, now called Dalry.

JOHN, ST., a par. in the hund. of East, co. Cornwall, 6 miles S.E. of St. German's. The parish extends southward to the English Channel, and borders on Devonshire. The village, which is small, is situated at the head of the estuary called St. John's Lake, opposite to Devonport. The manor formerly belonged to the Champernowns, whose old seat is still standing. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £116. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £179. The church of St. John is a very small ancient structure, being only 56 feet in length by 18 wide. It contains tombs of the Beel family. There are almshouses for six persons, founded by Alice Brooking in 1680. Tregenhawke, formerly the property of the Trevilles, now belongs to Lord Graves.

JOHN, ST., a par. in the island of Jersey, Channel

Islands, 4 miles N.W. of St. Helier. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £120, in the patron. of the Governor of Jersey. The church is a small edifice.

JOHN, ST., a par. in the W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles W. of Newcastle, of which town it forms a suburb. The par. is situated on the Tyne, near the line of the Carlisle railway, and contains the tnshps. of Benwell, Elswick, and Westgate. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £300, in the patron. of the Vicar of Newcastle. The church of St. John is an ancient structure formerly belonging to Tynemouth Priory. There is also a district church, dedicated to St. James, at Benwell. The several Dissenting bodies have places of worship, and there are National schools. Some of the oldest collieries in England are situated in this parish. At Benwell, supposed to be the Roman Condercum, numerous Roman antiquities, as urns, coins, inscriptions, &c., have been found.

JOHN, ST., a chplry. and tnshp. in the par. of Crosthwaite, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 2 miles E. of Keswick. It is situated on the beck which flows out of Thirlemere through a vale, and with Castlerigg forms a separate tnshp. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £63, in the patron. of the Earl of Lonsdale and the landowners. The new church of St. John's is situated in a hollow.

JOHN, ST., or ST. JOHN'S, the name of several pars. within the cities and towns of Athy, Cashel, Covington, Dublin, Edinburgh, Forfar, Glasgow, Haddington, Kilkenny, Leith, Letwell, Limerick, Montrose, Peterborough, Swansea, Waterford, Wexford, and Winchester (which see).

JOHNSTON, a par. in the hund. of Roose, co. . embroke, 3 miles S.W. of Haverfordwest, its post town. It is a station on the South Wales section of the Great Western railway, where a branch line turns off to Milford. The principal residence is Johnston Hall, the seat of Lord Kensington. The living is a rect.* with the vic. of Steynton, in the dioc. of St. David's, joint val. £322, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is a small ancient structure.

JOHNSTONE, a vil. and post town in the par. of Abbey, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 2 miles W. of Paisley. It is a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The town is situated on the right bank of the river Black Cart, and on the Paisley and Glasgow canal. As late as 1785 this place was an obscure village, inhabited by about ten persons. But a cotton-mill being established, it rapidly grew into a busy place, and is at present an important seat of manufacture. The town is well laid out, consisting of a main street, market-square, and subordinate thoroughfares. The "Brig o' Johnston" carries the thoroughfare across the river. The inhabitants are employed in the numerous cotton mills, foundries, and collieries. There are two branch banks, insurance agencies, mechanics' institute, newsrooms, libraries, gasworks, and several societies for the furtherance of religion, &c. The places of worship are a Free church, two United Presbyterian churches, and a chapel-of-ease. There are likewise a town school and several Sunday-schools. Johnstone Castle is the seat of the Houston family, to whom the town is indebted for its prosperity. Milliken is the seat of Sir W. Napier, Bart. Cattle and horse fairs are held in January and July.

JOHNSTONE, a par. in the Annandale district of co. Dumfries, Scotland, 6 miles N.N.W. of Lockerby. It contains the post-office vil. of Johnstone Bridge. The parish extends between the rivers Annan and Kinnell, and consists of a middling soil, with some oak timber. It is generally flat, the highest ground being in the W. of the par. It is 5 miles long by three broad. It is traversed by the roads from Glasgow to London, and from Dumfries to Edinburgh. The Caledonian canal passes on the E. border. This par. is in the presb. of Lochmaben and synod of Dumfries. The minister has a stipend of £166. The church was erected in 1733, and has subsequently been enlarged. There are also a Free church, three schools, and two libraries. Raehills is the seat of the Johnstones, who have held the land from time immemorial. At the N. end of the parish stand the ruins of Lochwood Castle, the ancient seat of the lords of Annandale, supposed to have been built in the 14th century. Robert, natural brother to Lord John Maxwell, set fire to the castle in 1593. It was restored and occupied up to 1724. Lead ore exists, and sandstone is worked.

JOHNSTON'S FEWS, a vil. in the Fews district, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2½ miles S. of Newtown-Hamilton, on the Dundalk road. Here are traces of an encampment called Cloghameather, in which it is alleged the native forces detained a portion of Cromwell's army for a whole winter; also a barrack built with the design of holding in check the numerous robbers who overran the district about a century and a half ago.

JOHNSTOWN, a par. and vil. in the bar. of North Naas, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Though occasionally denominated as a par., it is ecclesiastically recognised as a townland in the par. of Kill, and dioc. of Kildare. Palmerstown is the demesne of the Earl of Mayo; the other seats are Kerdiffstown, Forenaughts, and Furness. The village is seated on the Morell rivulet, 2 miles N.E. of Naas, on the road to Dublin. Here is a girl's school supported by the Countess of Mayo; also a police station, a good inn, and two flour-mills. Near Furness are the remains of an ancient chapel, and traces of a fortification.

JOHNSTOWN, a post-office vil. in the par. of Fartagh, bar. of Galmoy, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 13 miles W.N.W. of Kilkenny. It stands on the road from Dublin to Cork. It contains a dispensary within the Kilkenny Poor-law Union, a neatly built church, a Roman Catholic chapel, and a chief police station. In the vicinity is the seat called Violet Hill, and the celebrated spa of Ballyspellin, immortalised by the pens of Sheridan and Swift. Coins have been discovered here dating from Henry VIII. to William III. Petty sessions are held once a fortnight, and fairs monthly.

JOHNSTOWN, a vil. in the par. and bar. of Arklow, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles W.S.W. of Arklow. It stands on the Wexford road and contains a Roman Catholic chapel and school.

JOHNSTOWN, or WATCH-HOUSE, a vil. in the par. of Moyacomb, bar. of Scarewalsh, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles from Clonegal, its post town. At Abbey Down are ruins of a monastery. It is seated near the confluence of the rivers Derry and Slaney. Several seats and a Roman Catholic chapel are in the neighbourhood. There is a slate quarry.

JOHNSTOWN-BRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Cadamstown, bar. of Carbury, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6½ miles N.W. of Kilcock. It is situated on the Dublin and Tullamore road. The village contains a police station and a dispensary. There is a Roman Catholic chapel. Metcalfe Park and Johnstown Bridge are the principal seats. This village was formerly a place of some importance, and had a weekly market. An old cross standing here marks the site of an abbey. Fairs are held in March, May, October, and December.

JOHNSTOWN, ST. a post-office vil. and decayed market town, in the par. of Taughboyne, bar. of Raphoe, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 8½ miles N.W. of Lifford. It is situated on the W. bank of the river Foyle, and contains a dispensary within the Derry Poor-law Union. There are a Presbyterian meeting-house and schools. This place sprang up at the plantation of Ulster, and Louis Duke of Lennox obtained a charter of incorporation for it from James I. Its market is now discontinued. A fair is held in November. In the vicinity are the remains of Montgevelin Castle, where James II. held his court during the siege of Londonderry.

JOHNSTOWN, ST., a vil. and decayed borough in the par. of Clanbroney, bar. of Granard, co. Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles W. of Granard. It is situated on a small stream called the Camolin. It is now a poor place, containing a police station, but was formerly incorporated under a charter of Charles II.

JOHNSTOWN, ST., or SCADDANSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Killenaule. Knocktopher is its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The parish, which is traversed by the Killenaule and Fethard road, consists of a fair soil, and lies partly within the celebrated vale of St. Johnstown. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Killenaule, £817, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a parish school and two or three private schools.

JOHNSWELL, a vil. in the par. of Rathcool, bar. of Gowran, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Kilkenny. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a police station.

JOHN'S-WOOD, ST., a suburban district in the par. and borough of Marylebone, 3½ miles W.N.W. of St. Paul's, London. It has communication with the City and West End by the Atlas omnibuses, which leave the Swiss Cottage every ten minutes, and in the Finchley-road is a station of the Blackwall, Kew, and Kingston railway. This place was formerly a small hamlet belonging to the priory of St. John, at Clerkenwell, but upon the formation of the Regent's Park it rapidly rose into importance, and is now chiefly inhabited by merchants, City men of business, professional men, and families with small independencies. It contains several public buildings, as the new colleges for the education of Dissenting ministers, in connection with the London University; the barracks, near the "Eyre Arms;" the Clergy Orphan Asylum for girls, police station of the S division; Marylebone almshouses; and Lord's cricket ground, where the best matches are played. St. John's Chapel was the burial-ground of the parish of St. Marylebone, but is now closed. In it is a tombstone to Joanna Southcote, with a curious inscription. There are several churches, but all modern. Christ Chapel, erected in 1814, is a proprietary chapel, with a conventional district attached to it by the Rector of Christ Church. It contains several monuments and tombs by Chantrey, Wyatt, and other eminent sculptors, and is adorned with Ionic columns. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of London, and in the patron. of trustees. St. Mark's, situated in Hamilton-terrace, was built in 1847, at the cost of near £10,000. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £600, in the patron. of the crown. All Saints' is also a perpet. cur., val. £400. St. Stephen's, Avenue-road, was built in 1849, and is in the patron. of the Bishop of London. There are besides several proprietary chapels, and places of worship belonging to the several bodies of Protestant Dissenters. Jackson, the painter; Terry, the actor; Sir E. Landseer, the animal painter; and Professor De Morgan, the eminent mathematician, have been residents here.

JONESBOROUGH, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Upper Orior, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles from Flurrybridge, its post town. It is a station on the Drogheda, Dundalk, and Portadown railway. The parish is 2 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface is mountainous and broken, and the soil of inferior quality. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £122, in the patron. of the primate. The church was built in 1772, and repaired in 1812 by the late Board of First Fruits. Jonesborough House is the principal residence. The village is situated on the road from Newry to Dundalk. It contains a dispensary within the Newry Poor-law Union, and a good inn. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballymascanlan. There are two or three pay day schools. The village was destroyed by fire in 1798. The ruins of Moyrath Castle are near the village, built in the 17th century; likewise a stone with an inscription.

JOPPA, a vil. in the par. of Duddingston, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 3 miles E. of Edinburgh. It is a station on the North British railway. The village is situated on the shore of the Forth. There are saltworks, and a quarry of freestone. A mineral spring attracts numerous visitors from the neighbouring retreat of Portobello.

JOPPA, a vil. in the par. of Coylton, co. Ayr, Scotland, 5 miles S.S.E. of Ayr.

JORDAN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Kimberworth, par. of Rotherham, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Rotherham. It is situated near the river Don.

JORDAN BANK, at the mouth of the Mersey, co. Lancaster, 2 miles W.S.W. of Formby Point. It lies between the Old and Victoria channels.

JORDANSTON, a par. in the hund. of Dewisland, co. Pembroke, 4 miles S.W. of Fishguard, its post town. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The principal residences are Jordanston House and Llangwarren. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £91. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Cwrda.

JOSS-STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Peter, Isle of Thanet, co. Kent, 1 mile from Margate.

JOYCE'S-COUNTRY. See CUNNEMARA, Ireland.

JULIAN, ST., a par. in the hunds. of Condover and Ford, co. Salop, 1 mile from Shrewsbury, within which borough it is included. It contains the hmlts. and tnshps. of Bayston, Colcham, Pulley, and Shelton.

JULIANSTOWN, a par. in the bars. of Lower and Upper Duleek, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Drogheda is its post town. It is 2¾ miles in length, by 2½ broad. The surface extends along the bank of the Nannywater. It is bounded on the W. by the sea, and is traversed by the road from Balbriggan to Drogheda. The soil is good. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with three others, £363. The church was built in 1770. The parish forms part of the Roman Catholic district of Stamullen, and has a chapel at Demanistown. There are a parish and one other school. The demesne of Ninch is the principal seat. The village contains a post-office and police station, and petty sessions are held once a fortnight. There is a dispensary within the Drogheda Poor-law Union. The bridge across the Nannywater was the scene of a battle fought in 1641, in which the Irish routed the royalists.

JULIOT, ST. a par. in the hund. of Lesnewith, co. Cornwall, 6 miles N.E. of Camelford. Here was a Benedictine priory, founded in the reign of Richard I. as a cell to Montacute, in Somersetshire. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £42. The church is a small ancient structure. There is a place of worship for Bryanites, and a National school.

JUNIPER GREEN, a post-office vil. in the par. of Colinton, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 3 miles S.S.W. of the metropolis, on the road from Slateford to Currie.

JURA, an island par. of the Hebrides, in the Islay district of co. Argyle, Scotland, 6 miles W. of Kintyre. The island of Jura is 24 miles long, and ranges between 2 and 8 miles in breadth. The surface is extremely rocky and rugged, the most remarkable elevations being the Paps of Jura, three round-topped summits attaining an elevation of 2,500 feet above sea-level. Ben-an-Oer, or the "mountain of gold," is the highest. The coast-line, which extends for about 50 miles, is extremely dangerous and rocky. The Sound of Jura is about 10 miles broad, and separates the island from the mainland of Argyle. Loch Tarbet penetrates more than half-way through the island. On the N.W. coast occurs the gulph of Corry Vreckan, where during ebb tide the current is so violent as to assume the character of a terrible whirlpool. The inhabitants principally reside on the E. side. The par. of Jura includes the islands of Collonsay, Ronsay, Scarba, Lunga, Balnahuaigh, Garveileach, Eileachan-naomh, with a few islets. It is in the presb. of Isla. The minister has a stipend of £158. The church is on the E. side of the Island of Jura, and was built in 1776. There are also a Free church, a parish school, and one or two other schools. Campbell of Jura, and Lord Murray, of Ardlussa, are the landowners, and have mansions on the island. Black cattle are extensively bred. Game and red deer abound.

Remains of ancient earthworks are met with in several places, and an encampment at Small Island Bay. The prevailing rock is white and red quartz. Iron ore and manganese are obtained, also a very fine slate. Sand for making glass is found on the island.

JUST, or JUEST, ST., a par. in the hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 7 miles W. of Penzance. This parish, which is of large extent, comprising above 7,000 acres, is situated near the Land's End, and is bounded on the W. and N. by the Bristol Channel. Its surface is extremely barren, consisting chiefly of granite and slate, but there is no place of equal extent in England, or probably in Europe, that has produced so many varieties of metallic and earthy minerals, or that displays so many interesting geological features. Tin and copper are extensively worked, and bismuth, asbestos, garnet, talc, hornblende, and opal, with many other minerals, are found. The principal mines are Botallack, Levant, Parknoweth, Huel Cock, Wheat, and others, some ten of which are or have been worked under the bed of the sea, which, in stormy weather, is heard by the miners breaking above like the sound of distant thunder. Several of these mines, chiefly of tin, appear to have been worked at a very remote period, which has led to the inference that this district was the true Cassiterides of the ancients from which the Phœnicians obtained their supplies of tin, and not the Scilly Isles, which do not appear to have ever produced that metal in any great quantity. In several parts of the parish are rock basins, and at Botallack and Tregaseal are some circles of stone called the Rock Circles. The Romans also appear to have had establishments in the vicinity, for at Leswydden two Roman paterœ, besides urns, &c., were found, and in the grounds of the parsonage a bronze figure of a bull two inches high, with various Roman coins, were discovered in 1832. In the time of Dr. Borlase, the county historian, who was born at Pendeen in this parish, the amphitheatre adjoining the town of Churchtown was nearly perfect, with its six tiers of stone benches, but they are now scarcely visible. Tradition relates that upon the conquest of Cornwall in the seventh century, Ethelbert, with six other Saxon kings, dined here at a stone called the Mayne, or at Mean in Sennen. There are ruins of ancient chapels at Park-an-Capel, near Cape Cornwall, and on the summit of Carn Brea Hill. The inhabitants, who are chiefly miners, are scattered in numerous villages, one of the principal being Pendeen, or Churchtown, where a market is held on Saturdays. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £484, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is an ancient structure. There are places of worship for Bryanites, Wesleyans, and Free Wesleyans, all of whom have their separate schools. There is a National school at Churchtown, established in 1828; also almshouses.

JUST, ST., IN ROSELAND, or ST. JEAST, a par. in the W. div. of the hund. of Powder, co. Cornwall, comprising the disfranchised borough of St. Mawes; it has also constant communication with Truro and Falmouth. The parish is bounded on the W. and S. by the river Fal, forming the eastern shore of Falmouth harbour, and on the S.E. by St. Mawes creek. Part of the lands formerly belonged to St. Anthony's Priory. Here stands St. Mawes Castle, built by Henry VIII. for the protection of the coast, and still kept in repair; and a little below it on the same cliff a modern battery of eight guns. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £520. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £425. The church of St. Just stands on the coast, backed by a mass of dark rock, and mantled with ivy. There is also a chapel-of-ease at St. Mawes, built by the Duke of Buckingham in 1812. There are places of worship for Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists and Bryanites. There is a small free school and a National school. On Bartini Hill are traces of a circular fortification, and at Rosecassa the ruins of an ancient chapel.

K.

KABER, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby Stephen, East ward, Westmoreland, 2 miles from Brough, and 2½ N.E. of Kirkby Stephen. It formerly belonged to the Kaberghs, from whom it takes its name. It then passed into the hands of the Fulthorps, and from them to the Wandesworth and Wadeson families. It is chiefly noted in history for the conspiracy denominated the "Kaber Rigg Plot," that took place upon the restoration of Charles II. There is a Primitive Methodist chapel and an endowed free school in the township.

KAILZIE, an ancient par. in co. Peebles, Scotland, now joined to Traquair and Innerleithen.

KALE, or CAYLE, a trout stream rising in the Cheviots, under Fairwood Fell, in co. Roxburgh, Scotland, and falling into the river Teviot at Eckford.

KAMES BAY and CASTLE, in co. Bute, Scotland, 3 miles N.W. of Rothsay.

KANE, or INISKIN, a par. in the bar. of Upper Dundalk, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.N.W. of Dundalk, which is its post town. The surface is nearly all under cultivation, and is crossed by the road from Dundalk to Newtown-Hamilton. The living is united to the benefice of Baronstown, in the dioc. of Armagh, the val. of which is £348, in the patron. of the Primate and the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church. The Roman Catholic chapel at Killen belongs to the Dundalk Roman Catholic union. There is a private school. Falmore Hall is in this parish. Limestone is quarried and burned. Druidical remains are seen at Killen Hill.

KANTURK, a quoad sacra par. and market and post town, in the par. of Clonfert, bar. of Duhallow, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The surface includes part of the vales of Allua and Dallua. The soil is fertile. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £112, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Clonfert. The church was erected in 1792. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilcorkeran. There are two classical and several day schools in the parish. The town is situated at the confluence of the rivers Dallua and Allua, on the road from Mallow to Newmarket, 16 miles S.W. of Doneraile, and 163 S.W. of Dublin. It is a station on the Killarney branch of the Dublin and Cork railway. It consists of several irregularly-built streets. Many of the houses are well built. A new street has been formed. Two very extensive corn-mills stand on the river Dallua, which is crossed by a bridge of five arches; and Allua is spanned by a bridge of six arches. There are a branch bank, sessions house, and bridewell. The parish church has a tower. There is also a Roman Catholic chapel. A chief police station is seated here. Petty sessions are held once a week, and general sessions in June and September. Serge-weaving, wool-combing, and brewing are carried on. Kanturk Castle was formerly a seat of Mac Donagh Carthy, one of the McCarthys, kings of Munster, to whom the district belonged. The completion of this mansion was prevented by royal command, and it was forfeited with the estates in the rebellion of 1641. Here is a dispensary in the Kanturk Poor-law Union, which lies within the counties of Cork and Kerry. It has 14 electoral divisions, and 29 guardians. The workhouse was designed to give shelter to 800 in-door paupers. Barry Yelverton, afterwards Lord Avonmore, was a native of this town. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held in March, May, July, September, November, and December, for cattle.

KATRINE, LOCH, a lake of the Highlands, in the par. of Buchanan, co. Stirling, lying along the border of the pars. of Aberfoil and Callander, co. Perth, Scotland. It is 10 miles long by 1 mile broad. The beautiful scenery of this district has been described to the world by Sir Walter Scott in "The Lady of the Lake."

KATTERLINE, an ancient par. in co. Kincardine, Scotland, now joined to Kinneff.

KAVOGUE, a stream in co. Kerry, Ireland. It falls into Killarney Lough.

KAY, a lough at the mouth of Valentia harbour, co. Kerry, Ireland.

KEA, a par. in the W. div. of the hund. of Powder, co. Cornwall, 3 miles S. of Truro, its post town, and 8½ N. of Falmouth. The parish, which is considerable, is bounded on the E. by the river Fal, on the W. by Gwennap, and on the N. by Kenwyn. It is intersected by the great road leading from Truro to Falmouth, and by the Redruth railway. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Landegey, but was also named Kea after St. Kea, who, it is said, sailed over from Ireland in a granite boat; or after Pope Caius or St. Kew, or Kea the Virgin. There are copper, tin, and black-jack mines—the latter, which is situated at Chacewater, is worked by the largest engine in the county. A large portion of the inhabitants is employed in the mines, the remainder in agriculture, and there is a smelting-house for silver. The land is chiefly arable, and very productive. There are some barrows in the neighbourhood. The living is a vic.* annexed to the vic.* of Kenwyn, in the dioc. of Exeter. The parish church is situated near the centre of the parish, on the side of a hill towards the E., and is dedicated to St. Kea. It has a pinnacled tower containing three bells. In the interior are some paintings by Mrs. Gwatkin Killiow, niece of Reynolds. This church was erected in 1802 in lieu of the old one, which was situated on the banks of the river Fal, where the old tower is still standing, and close to which a little church was erected in 1858. Besides the parish church there is a new district church at Baldhu, with a school attached, recently erected by Viscount Falmouth. At Kea Church-Town are National schools, and almshouses endowed by John Lanyon, in 1724, with £53 per annum. There are also chapels for Independents, Wesleyans, Baptists, and Bryanites. Guddern, the seat of the Bowdens, is a mansion situated in well-wooded grounds. Viscount Falmouth is lord of the manor, chief landowner, and lay impropriator of the great tithes. Carlyon is celebrated in story as the birthplace of the good knight Sir Tristram.

KEACLOCH, a mountain in co. Ross, Scotland, rising to the height of 3,600 feet. It lies between Lochs Broom and Greinord.

KEADBY, a vil. and tnshp. in the par. of Althorpe, W. div. of the hund. of Manley, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles E. of Crowle, and 12 W. of Glandford-Bridge. It is a station on the South Yorkshire railway. The village is small, and situated on the Keadby and Stainforth canal, near the river Trent. There is an almshouse for seven persons, erected by a bequest of William Dixon.

KEADUE, or KEADEW, a post-office vil. in the par. of Kilronan, bar. of Boyle, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 7 miles N.W. of Carrick-on-Shannon, and 9 N.E. of Boyle. It is situated on the road from Battlebridge to Ballyfornan, near the Arigna iron-works. It contains a dispensary within the Boyle Poor-law Union, also market and sessions houses. Castle-Tenison stands about 2 miles distant. Carolan, the bard, who was a native of this village, is buried in Kilronan old church.

KEADUE, an ancient par. in co. Cavan, Ireland, now joined to Kilmore.

KEADY, a par. in the bars. of Turaney and Armagh, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing the small post town of its name. The parish is 7 miles long and 3 broad. A small proportion of the surface consists of bog, water, and waste, and Lough Clay lies within the parish. It is traversed by the cross roads from Caledon to Dundalk, and from Castle-Shane to Markethill, and by the rivulet Callen. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £333, in the patron. of the primate. The church was built in 1776 by Primate Robinson, and was enlarged in 1822. Two Roman Catholic chapels are joined to that of Derrynoose. Here are two Presbyterian meeting-houses and a Methodist chapel. There are four public and nine or ten private schools. The principal seats are Violet Hill, Annvale, Greenmount, with others. The town stands on the cross roads noticed above, and on the river Callan. The town is a considerable seat of the linen manufacture, and has numerous bleach-greens, a spinning-mill, and corn-mills. Building stone is quarried, and lead was formerly worked. It contains a police station, sessions house, and market house. Petty sessions are held weekly. Friday is market day, and a corn market is held twice a week. Fairs are held on the second Friday in every month.

KEAL, EAST, a par. in the eastern div. of the soke of Bolingbroke, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles S.W. of Spilsby, its post town, and 5 W. of Firsby station. The village, which is small, is situated on the side of a hill, and commands an extensive view. The road from London to Louth passes at a short distance, as also the Forty-foot Drain, which is navigable for boats. The tithes have been commuted for land and money payments under an Enclosure Act obtained in 1773. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £495. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, was thoroughly repaired and redecorated in 1854, at considerable outlay. The charities amount to £7 10s. per annum, besides several cottages. The register commences in 1794. There is a National school for both sexes. J. H. Short, Esq., is lord of the manor, and one of the principal owners of the soil.

KEAL, WEST, a par. in the W. div. of the soke of Bolingbroke, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles S.W. of Spilsby, its post town. It contains the hmlt. of Keal-Coates. The soil is clay, alternating with sand and red loam. The village is small, and chiefly agricultural. The springs here are impregnated with iron. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £525. The church, situated on an eminence, is dedicated to St. Helen. It has a square tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a chapel for Wesleyans, also one at Keal-Coates. There is a National school. Colonel R. Amcotts is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

KEANLOCHBERVIE, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Eddrachillis, co. Sutherland, Scotland, 9 miles N. of Scourie.

KEANLOCHEW, an ancient par. in co. Dumbarton, Scotland, now joined to Gareloch.

KEARBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby Overblow, Upper div. of the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Kirkby Overblow, and 4 W. of Wetherby. There is a Wesleyan chapel.

KEARN, a par. in the district of Alford, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, now joined to Auchindoir.

KEARSLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Stamfordham, N.E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 10 miles N.E. of Hexham, and 4 N.W. of the parish church of Stamfordham.

KEARSLEY. See KERSLEY, co. Lancaster.

KEARTON, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Melbecks and par. of Grinton, North Riding co. York, 2 miles E. of Muker. It is situated near the river Swale.

KEASTWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkby Lonsdale, ward of Lonsdale, co. Westmoreland, 1 mile N.W. of Kirkby Lonsdale.

KECKWICK. See KEKEWICK, co. Chester.

KEDDINGTON, a par. in the Wold div. of the hund. of Louth-Eske, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 1½ mile N.E. of Louth, its post town and railway station. The village is small and situated on the river Lud. The Louth navigation passes through the parish. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1766. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £77. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a small structure, with turret containing one bell. The register dates from 1564. Adjoining the church is a Sunday-school. The parochial charities produce £2 per annum, besides 6 acres of land. Sir G. E. Welby, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

KEDINGTON, or KETTON, a par. in the hunds. of Risbridge and Hinckford, cos. Suffolk and Essex, 5 miles N.W. of Clare, and 2½ N.E. of Haverhill, its post town.

It is situated in the valley of the river Stour. The manor is mentioned in Domesday Book as Keditune; and at that period was held by the Baynards, and afterwards by the earls of Clare and the Barnardistones. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The surface is undulating and in some parts hilly. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £498. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, and contains many ancient tombs of the Barnardistones, of Kedington Hall, which is now taken down. The living was once held by Archbishop Tillotson. The charities produce about £39 per annum, of which £7 goes towards the support of a school. The tithes were commuted in 1840.

KEDLESTON, a par. in the hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 4½ miles N.W. of Derby, its post town, 5 S.W. of Belper, and 2 S.W. of Duffield. It is a small village, situated on a branch of the river Derwent, and is a meet for the Hoar-Cross hounds. The land is chiefly rich pasture, and the greater part of the parish is included within the limits of Kedleston Park. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £155. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient cruciform structure, with a low tower containing one bell. The interior contains several monuments to the Curzon family. There is a Roman Catholic chapel. Kedleston Hall, the residence of Lord Scarsdale, is situated in a well-wooded park, stocked with deer, and watered by a lake, over which is a bridge of three arches, forming one of the approaches to the Hall. The gallery contains a choice collection of paintings by the most renowned masters, and a series of sculptures of the ancient school. Lord Scarsdale is lord of the manor and sole landowner. Bath rooms have been built in connection with the sulphureous spring, the water of which is efficacious in cutaneous and scorbutic diseases.

KEEL, a vil. of the island of Achill, in the bar. of Burrishoole, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles from Dugort. It is situated on the S. side of the island.

KEEL, a tnshp. in the par. of Berriew, co. Montgomery, 4 miles N.W. of Montgomery.

KEEL, a tnshp. in the par. of Meifod, co. Montgomery, 5 miles N.E. of Welshpool.

KEELBY, a par. in the E. div. of the wap. of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 7 miles N.E. of Caistor, and 3 S.W. of Stallingborough railway station. Ulceby is its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the Keelby springs. The Roman road, Barton Street, passes through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £90. The church is dedicated to St. Bartholomew, and has a tower containing three bells. In the interior is an effigy of Alice Louth. The register dates from 1565. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have places of worship. There are 10 acres of land for the poor. G. Tomline, Esq., is lord of the manor. A pleasure fair is held on the 10th July.

KEELCOCHWEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Berriew, co. Montgomery, 4 miles N.W. of Montgomery.

KEELDER CASTLE, in co. Northumberland, 13 miles N.W. of Bellingham. It is a shooting seat of the Duke of Northumberland, situated on the White Keelder river.

KEELE, a par. in the N. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 2 miles W. of Newcastle-under-Lyme, and 2½ from the Madeley station on the London and North-Western railway. The village is considerable, and the inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the coal and iron works, and in the silk mills. The surface is undulating, and the land chiefly pasture. The soil is a stiff clay, producing excellent wheat crops. The road from Newcastle to Betley and Nantwich passes through the parish. At Silverdale are ironstone mines and collieries, and smelting furnaces worked by a blast of heated air. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £195. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has an embattled tower, and was rebuilt in 1790. The parochial charities produce about £17 per annum, of which £5 goes to the support of the National school. The Wesleyans and New Connexion Methodists have each a chapel. Keele Hall is a stone mansion, situated on rising ground, surrounded by a well-wooded park. It has been the seat of the Sneyd family upwards of two centuries. Ralph Sneyd, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

KEEM, a hmlt on the S. side of the Island of Achill, bar. of Burrishoole, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. Amethysts are found in this locality.

KEENAGH, a vil. in the par. of Kilcommock, bar. of Rathcline, co. Longford, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Ballymahon. It has a police station, and petty sessions are held in the village. There are two Roman Catholic chapels and a dispensary.

KEENLY, a grieveship in the par. of Allendale, co. Northumberland, 2 miles from Allendale.

KEENOUGHT, or KENAGHT, a bar. in co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is bounded on the N. by the Atlantic, on the W. by the half bar. of Coleraine, on the S. by co. Tyrone, and on the W. by Lough Foyle and the bar. of Tyrkeeran. Its length from N. to S. is 20 miles, and its breadth over 13. It contains the pars. of Aghanloo, Balteagh, Bovevagh, Drumachose, Dungiven, Magilligan, Tamlaghtfinlagan, and part of Banagher; likewise the towns of Newtownlimavady and Dungiven. This bar. lies wholly within the Poor-law Union of Newtownlimavady.

KEEPER, a mountain in co. Tipperary, Ireland, rising to the height of 2,265 feet.

KEER, a small stream rising in North Lancashire, and falling into Morecambe Bay.

KEERAGH or KEEROES ISLANDS, a cluster of small islands on the coast of South Wexford, Ireland, near the Saltees rocks.

KEEVIL, a par. in the hund. of Whorwelsdown and Melksham, co. Wilts, 4 miles E. of Trowbridge, its post town, 4 S. of Melksham, and 5 N.E. of Westbury. The par. is wholly agricultural, and contains the tythg. of Bulkindon. It is watered by a copious brook, which flows into the river Avon near Leamington. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1794. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £250, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, has a square embattled tower. There is a chapel for the Wesleyans, also a school with a small endowment. William W. B. Beach, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KEFNYMONARCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Kerry, co. Montgomery, 3 miles E. of Newtown.

KEGWORTH, a par. in the hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 11 miles S.E. of Derby, its post town, 2½ E. of Castle Donington, and 1 W. of the Kegworth station on the Midland Counties railway. It is situated on the river Soar, and contains the chplry. of Isley Walton. The village was formerly called Cogeworde, and was once a market town under the Hansteds, &c. A great portion of the inhabitants are employed in stocking making and the figuring of lace. There are corn-mills and two large ale breweries, for which the place is celebrated. The high road from London to Manchester passes through the village. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment, under an Enclosure Act, in 1778. The living is a rect. united with the cur. of Isley Walton, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £860, in the patron. of Christ's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a spired tower containing five bells. It was thoroughly restored in 1843, and in the interior are several stained windows and stone stalls. There is a chapel-of-ease at Isley Walton. The parochial charities produce about £64 per annum, £17 of which goes to Queen Elizabeth's free school. The Wesleyan Methodists, General Baptists, and Independents have places of worship. There is a National school for both sexes. John Bainbrigge Story, Esq., is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on 18th February, Easter Monday, 30th April, and 10th October.

KEIG, a par. and post-office vil. in the district of Alford, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 4 miles N.E. of Alford. It is 3 miles long and the same broad, and is bounded by Premnay, Leslie, Oyne, Monymusk, Tough, Alford, and Tullynessle. The surface lies along the N. bank of the river Don, and is diversified with hill and dale. This par. is in the presb. of Alford and synod of Aberdeen, in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £159. The church was built in 1835, and is a Gothic structure. There is also a Free church with school. Castle-Forbes is the seat of Lord Forbes, who is one of the principal landowners.

KEIGHLEY, a par., market and post town, in the E. div. of the wap. of Staincliff, West Riding co. York, 9½ miles S.W. of Bradford, and 212 N.W. of London. It is situated under Blackstone Edge, on the banks of the river Aire, here crossed by a stone bridge, and on the old road from Bradford to Skipton. It is a station on the Colne and Skipton branch of the Leeds and Bradford railway, and the Leeds and Liverpool canal passes within a short distance, thus affording communication with all parts of Lancashire and Yorkshire. The parish is very extensive, being 10 miles in length and 4 in breadth, with an area of upwards of 10,000 acres, most of which is in a high state of cultivation. It contains the vils. and hmlts. of Bogham, Braithwaite, Dockroyd, Eastwood, Exleyhead, Fell Lane, Hare Hill, Knowle, Laycock, Newsholme, Oakworth, Slippery Ford, Skyes, Thwaites, and Utley. Keighley is situated in the midst of a manufacturing district, its chief industry being worsted and cotton spinning, for which there are several extensive mills, affording employment to most of its inhabitants. The latter was introduced by the celebrated Sir Richard Arkwright, who erected the first cotton factory here in 1780. A great part of the machinery used in the several factories is manufactured in the town, and there are two paper mills and several large corn mills. The town, which stands in a valley near the confluence of the rivulets Worth and North Beck, has many houses built of stone, is well paved, lighted with gas, and plentifully supplied with water. It is the seat of a Poor-law Union, and the head of County Court and superintendent registry districts. Petty sessions and county courts are held weekly, and the Board of Guardians meets on Wednesdays. It is a polling place for the West Riding elections. The town is governed by a board of health, under whose control are the lighting, paving, and cleansing. It contains a court-house, sessions-house, market-place, mechanics' institute, working men's hall, Odd Fellows' hall, bank, savings-bank, and union poorhouse. There is also an agricultural society, which holds its annual meetings in September. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £358. The parish church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a Gothic structure built on the site of an older one. It has an octagonal tower containing a clock and eight bells, and in the interior was until recently a tomb bearing date 1023. In addition to the parish church, there are three district churches, viz. Ingrow with Hamworth, Eastwood, and Oakworth, the livings of all which are perpet. curs.* varying in val. from £150 to £145. The former is in the patron. of the bishop, and the latter two of the bishop and crown alternately. The parochial charities produce about £607 per annum, of which £342 was bequeathed by Mr. Bowcock for apprenticing boys of the parish; besides which are the endowments for the following schools:—Drake's free grammar school, £160, founded in 1713; Tonson's free school, £41; and Sarah Heaton's free school at Harehill, £33. There are chapels for Wesleyans, Baptists, and several other dissenting denominations. There are National schools for both sexes, also schools in connection with some of the chapels. Isaac Butterfield, a native of this place, who died in 1783, aged two years, weighed 8 stone, and was 3 feet high when he was only twenty months old. Many Roman coins were discovered at Elham Grange in 1775. Keighley supports two periodicals, the Keighley Visitor, published monthly, and Keighley Guardian, fortnightly. There is a cemetery for the use of the parish about a mile from the town, on the river's bank. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor. Wednesday is market day. Fairs are held on the 8th and 9th May, and the 7th, 8th, and 9th November.

KEILLESAY. See HELESAY, Western Isles, Scotland.

KEILLS, a vil. in the par. of North Knapdale, co. Argyll, Scotland. Keills promonitory stands out between the Sound of Jura and Loch Swin.

KEIL WATER, a small stream of the co. Fife, Scotland.

KEIMANEIGH, a pass in the Cork mountains, Ireland, near the Gougane Barra lough.

KEINTON-MANDEVILLE, a par. in the hund. of Catsash, co. Somerset, 4½ miles N.E. of Somerton, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Castle Cary railway station. It is situated on the road from London to Taunton, which follows the line of the Roman Fosseway. The river Brue runs on the N. side of the parish. Building stone is quarried here to a considerable extent. The soil is clay, and subsoil blue lias. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1804. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £112, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has an octagonal tower at the W. end, containing four bells. It was partly rebuilt in 1800, with the exception of the chancel, which is said to be 500 years old, and was further enlarged in 1841. The old registers have been burnt, but the present one dates from 1726. There is a National school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. The Wesleyans and Bible Christians have each a chapel. The Rev. D. W. Morrice is lord of the manor. A fair is held on the 3rd September for cattle.

KEIR, a par. in the district of Nithsdale, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 1 mile S.E. of Penpont. Thornhill is its post town. It is 8 miles long and about 2 broad, and is environed by Penpont, Closeburn, Kirkmahoe, Dunscore, Glencairn, and Tynron. The river Scaur traces part of the N. and N.E. border, and the river Nith flows from the N.E. to S.E. Keir Hill is a prominent summit on the S.W. side of the parish. The Glasgow and South-Western railway has a station within the parochial limits at Auldgirth Bridge, and the Dumfries and Penpont road traverses the interior. This par. is in the presb. of Penpont and synod of Dumfries. The minister has a stipend of £233. The church was built in 1814. Capenoch, Blackwood, and Barjarg, are the principal mansions. Limestone is quarried, and sandstone is very abundant.

KEISBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Lavington, wap. of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 1 mile S.E. of Lenton, and 3 N.E. of Corby. It is situated on the river Glen.

KEISLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Dufton, E. ward, co. Westmoreland, 1½ mile from Dufton, and 3 miles N.E. of Appleby.

KEISS, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Canisbay, co. Caithness, Scotland, 7 miles N. of Wick. It gives name to a small harbour in Sinclair Bay. The village is a small fishing station, and has an old castle of the Sinclairs. The par. is in the presb. of Caithness, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £120. The church is a small modern edifice. The principal residence is Keiss House.

KEITH, an ancient par. in the co. Haddington, now joined to Humbie.

KEITH, a par., post and market town, in the cos. Banff and Elgin, Scotland. The boundaries of this parish are, Rathven, Deskford, Grange, Cairney, Glass, Botriphnie, and Boharm. Its size is about 6 miles by 6. The surface is in a high state of cultivation, and is traversed by the river Isla, which has a fall near Old Keith. This par. is in the presb. of Strathbogie and synod of Moray. The minister has a stipend of £243. The church was built in 1816 on the site of the ancient church. Here are also a Free church, United Presbyterian church, Independent, Episcopal, and Roman Catholic chapels. The latter is a structure of the Doric order, after the style of St. Maria-de-Vittoria at Rome. It has a painting over the altar, presented by Charles X. of France, representing the Unbelief of St. Thomas. In the town are the parish school and Free Church school, and several others are in the parish. This parish anciently belonged to Kinloss Abbey, by grant of William the Lion. Edintore House is the principal residence. Several Druidical remains are observed in the parish. The town is situated on the banks of the Isla, 48 miles N.W. of Aberdeen, on the road from thence to Inverness. It is a station on the Elgin and Inverness branch of the Great North of Scotland railway. It consists of three distinct divisions, viz. Old Keith, New Keith, and Fife Keith. Old Keith is of unknown origin, but has existed certainly for near 600 years. It was formerly one of the principal towns of the county, but in modern times it sank into a mere village, and gave precedence to its neighbour, New Keith, which was commenced in the middle of the 18th century. It consists of three regular streets and a market square, and contains the townhall and a fine inn. Here are three branch banks, a savings-bank, insurance agencies, teetotal and literary societies, and a subscription library. There are a tobacco manufactory, wool-spinning and grain mills, besides other manufacturing establishments, among which are dye-works, tan-yard, and distillery. The town is lighted with gas. Fife Keith is situated on the other side of the Isla, which is crossed by a bridge. Old Keith was the scene of frequent collisions during 1645 and 1745. In 1645 Montrose made an ineffectual attempt to engage Baillie's army; and it is said that in 1667 Gordon of Glangarrich captured Peter Roy Macgregor, a Highland freebooter. Ferguson, the astronomer, was born here. At Keith Linn is an ancient seat of the Oliphants. Friday is market day. Fairs are held at New Keith on the first Tuesdays in April, June, September, and Martinmas, for cattle, and at Fife Keith on the first Tuesday in March, and second Thursdays in May, July, and October (old style). The celebrated "Summer Eve" fair was held in September.

KEITHALL, or MONKEIGIE AND KINKELL, a par. in the district of Garioch, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, near the burghs of Inverury and Kintore. The parish united is 6 miles long by 4 broad, and is bounded by the pars. of Bourtie, Chapel of Garioch, Udny, New Machar, and Fintray. The surface extends along the eastern banks of the rivers Don and Ury, and is hilly, with a fair proportion of fertile soil. Large mosses occur here and there. This par. is in the presb. of Garioch and synod of Aberdeen. The minister has a stipend of £217. The church was founded in 1771, and subsequently repaired. There is a meeting-house for the Society of Friends at Kinmuck. Kinkell and Keithall were united in 1754. Keithall House is the seat of the Earl of Kintore, who is principal landowner. Kinmuck Moor is the reputed scene of a battle with the Danes, and some traces of an encampment may still be seen. Kinkell church was the burial-place of numbers of the fallen in the battle of Harlaw, and the pope's legate is said to have lodged at Monk's Hillock chapel just before that event. The numerous cairns and Druidical remains which formerly existed have now disappeared. Arthur Johnston, the scholar and Latin poet, was born in this parish.

KEITH-FALL, a cascade on the river Ericht, co. Perth, Scotland, below Blair Gowrie.

KEITHICK, a demesne in the co. Perth, Scotland, near Cupar Angus.

KEITH-INCH, a headland on the E. side of Peterhead Bay, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It is situated in 1° 45′ W. long, and is the most easterly point of Scotland.

KEITHNEY WATER, a feeder of the river Deveron, rises above Drumblade, co. Aberdeen, Scotland.

KEITHTOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Fodderty, co. Cromarty, Scotland, 4 miles W. of Dingwall.

KEKEWICK, or KECKWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Runcorn, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 4 miles S.W. of Warrington, and 4 E. of Runcorn. It is situated on the Grand Junction railway and Bridgwater canal, both of which intersect this township. The soil is clay. Sir Richard Brooke, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

KELBROOK, a tnshp. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Thornton-in-Craven, wap. of Staincliffe, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Colne, and 5 S.W. of Skipton. It is skirted on the S.W. by the Leeds and Liverpool canal. The surface is undulating, commanding extensive views of Pendle Hill, &c. The inhabitants are engaged in the cotton mills and in agriculture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £120. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was erected in 1838. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, and there is a village school.

KELBURN CASTLE, co. Ayr, Scotland. It is situated in a glen near Largs, and is the seat of the Earl of Glasgow, who takes from this place the title of viscount.

KELBY, a parochial chplry. in the par. of Haydor, wap. of Aswardhurn, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 5½ miles S.W. of Sleaford, its post town, and 9 N.W. of the Grantham railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on an eminence. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Haydor, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a tower crowned with a spire. The interior contains a very ancient font. J. A. Houblon, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

KELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Shap, West ward, co. Westmoreland, 8 miles S.W. of Appleby.

KELD, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Muker, and par. of Grinton, North Riding co. York, 56 miles N.W. of York. It is situated in the moorlands under Shunner Fell.

KELDHOLME, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkby-Moorside, wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 1 mile E. of Kirkby, and 6½ miles N.W. of Pickering. Here was formerly a Cistercian nunnery, founded by Robert De Stuteville in the reign of Henry I.

KELFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Stillingfleet, wap. of Ouse and Derwent, East Riding co. York, 1½ mile from Stillingfleet, and 8½ miles from York. The village is situated on the river Ouse, which is here crossed by a ferry to Carwood. The soil is clayey, and the land chiefly arable. T. H. Preston is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, and there is a school with a small endowment. The principal residence is Kelfield Hall, the old seat of the Stillingtons.

KELFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Owston, hund. of Manley, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N.E. of Epworth. It is joined to the chplry. of West Butterwick.

KELHAM, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, co. Nottingham, 2 miles N.W. of Newark, its post town, and 4 N.E. of Southwell. It is situated at the bridge over the river Trent, which affords facility of water carriage to Newark. The village, which is small, is entirely agricultural. Charles I. slept here the evening before he gave himself up to the Scottish army, who encamped here in May, 1646. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £510. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Averham, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church, dedicated to St. Wilfred, has a lofty embattled tower containing a clock and three bells. The interior contains monuments to Lord and Lady Lexington. The edifice has recently been thoroughly restored. The charities produce £1 per annum. Kelham Hall is the principal residence.

KELHEAD, a vil. in the par. of Cumtrees, co. Dumfries, Scotland, known for its limeworks.

KELK, GREAT, a tnshp. in the par. of Foston-upon-the-Wolds, wap. of Dickering, East Riding co. York, 1½ mile S. of Lowthorpe, 6½ miles E. of Driffield, and 10 S.W. of Burlington. The Wesleyans have two chapels, in one of which a Sunday-school is also held. William St. Quintin, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KELK, LITTLE, an ext. par. place in the wap. of Dickering, East Riding co. York, 6 miles N.E. of Driffield. The village is wholly agricultural.

KELLAMERGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkham, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 2 miles S.W. of Kirkham. It is joined to Bryning to form a township.

KELLAN. See CELLAN, co. Cardigan.

KELLAS, a hmlt. in the par. of Murroes, co. Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles N.E. of Dundee.

KELLATON, or KELLINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Stokenham, co. Devon, 5 miles S.E. of Kingsbridge.

KELLAWAYS, or CALLOWS, a par. in the hund. of Chippenham, co. Wilts, 3 miles N.E. of Chippenham, its post town, and 33 N.W. of Salisbury. It is bounded on the W. by the river Avon, and contains the vil. of Avon. The Great Western railway passes through the parish. The surface is flat, and subject to frequent inundations, which has rendered it necessary to construct two causeways supported on arches of brick. The soil is a light mould on a substratum of gravel. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £46. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £82. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is a modern structure containing one bell. The Earl of Carnarvon is lord of the manor.

KELLETH, a hmlt. in the par. of Orton, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles S.E. of Orton. It is situated on the river Lune.

KELLET, NETHER, a tnshp. in the par. of Bolton, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 1¼ mile from Over Kellet, and 5 miles N. of Lancaster. There are some limestone quarries. In this township is a natural cavern called Donald Mill Hole, at the entrance of which is a mill worked by a stream which runs through a subterranean passage for nearly 3 miles.

KELLET, OVER, a chplry. in the par. of Bolton, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 1½ mile from the Carnforth railway station, and 6 N.E. of Lancaster. It is situated on the Lancaster canal, and contains the hmlt. of Capernhay. There is abundance of good limestone and freestone, which are extensively quarried for building purposes; also grit, which is raised for millstones. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £230. The church, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, is an ancient stone structure containing three bells. A proprietary chapel was also built here by George Manton, Esq. The charities produce £61 per annum, of which £46 is the endowment of the village school.

KELLEYTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Driffield, wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Great Driffield. It is joined to Emswell.

KELLING, a par. in the hund. of Holt, co. Norfolk, 3 miles N.E. of Holt, its post town. It is a small par. situated near the coast. A great portion of it is heath, and the remainder arable, with about 50 acres of plantation. There is a mineral spring. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £295 16*s.* The living is a rect.* united with the rect. of Salthouse, in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £406. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square embattled tower, containing one bell, and on the S. side is a chapel in ruins. Kelling Hall is the principal residence. The charities consist of 200 acres of land appropriated for the use of the cottagers upon the enclosure of the heath at the end of the last century. Mrs. Girdlestone is lady of the manor and chief landowner.

KELLINGLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Kellington, lower div. of the wap. of Osgoldcross, West Riding co. York, near the Whilley railway station, and 6 miles S.W. of Selby. It is situated near the river Aire.

KELLINGTON, a par. in the lower div. of the wap. of Osgoldcross, West Riding co. York, 6½ miles from Pontefract, its post town, and 1 from the Whitley railway station. It is situated on the river Aire, and contains the tnshps. of Kellington, Whitley, and Beighall; also the hmlts. of High and Low Eggbrough. The parish is noted for its superior breed of sheep and short-horned cattle, also the quality of its barley for malting purposes. The soil is a light sandy loam. A canal passes through the parish to Goole. The village, which is of considerable antiquity, at one time belonged to the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £300, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Edmund, is an ancient structure, with a low, square, western tower containing three bells. In the churchyard is an ancient stone with a cross rudely sculptured. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Earl Cathcart is the principal landowner.

KELLISTOWN, a par. in the bars. of Carlow and Forth, co. Forth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Carlow, its post town. It consists of two detached districts, one in each barony. The parish extends through the valley of the Burren, and is traversed by the road from Tullow to Carlow. The soil is good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £320, in the patron. of the crown and diocesan alternately. The church is a small edifice built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1810. It is part of the Roman Catholic district of Gilbertstown. Moyle is the seat of Captain B. M. Clintock, M.P. Here are ruins of the ancient church, near which formerly stood a round tower, removed in 1807. Here is also an ancient burial-place of the sept Mac Cummins.

KELLOE, a par. in the S. div. of the ward of Easington, co. Durham, 7 miles S.E. of Durham. It is situated near the Hartlepool and Clarence railways, and comprises the tnshps. of Kelloe, Cassop, Coxhoe, Quarrington, and the hmlt. of East Hetton. This par. has greatly increased in wealth and population since 1831, from the opening of new coal mines, in which the chief portion of the inhabitants are engaged. There are also brickfields, limeworks and corn-mills. Magnesian limestone is quarried for building purposes. The impropriation belongs to Sherburn Hospital. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £100. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £212, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. Helen, is an ancient structure, with square tower containing two bells, also a sundial. The chancel was built in 1854, at an outlay of £600, and has inserted at the E. end a window in three compartments, to the memory of Miss Wood, who died in 1856. In addition to the parish church there is a district church at Thornley, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £290, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kelloe. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels at Coxhoe, Cassop, Quarrington, and East Hetton, also day and Sunday schools. There is a partly endowed village school for girls. Coxhoe Hall is the principal residence.

KELLOE WATER, a feeder of the river Nith, rises near New Cumnock, in co. Dumfries, Scotland.

KELLS, a par. in co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, contains the post town of New Galloway. It is 15 miles long by 4 broad, and is bounded by Dalry, Carsphairn, Balmaclellan, Parton, Balmagie, Minnigaff, and Girthon. The surface consists for the greater part of lofty upland and bleak moor, and forms the south-western district of the Glenkens. The river Ken traces the boundary on the E. and the Dee on the W., while numerous minor streams wend their way through the interior to join these rivers. Loch Harrow, Loch Minnick, and Loch Dungeon occur in the N., Loch Ken and some others in the interior and in the S. There are remains of an ancient forest in the parish, supposed to have been a royal hunting ground. In the N. and N.W. are the Rhinns of Kells, a granite range attaining an altitude of 1,300 feet. Among these hills is a rocking stone of some 10 tons in weight. The road from Kirkcudbright to Ayr follows the Ken Valley. This par. is in the presb. of Kirkcudbright and synod of Galloway, in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £299. The church was erected in 1822. A portion of the ancient parish was detached in 1640 to go towards the formation of the parish of Carsphairn. Kenmure Castle is the seat of Viscount Kenmure; Glenlee that of Sir W. Miller. Moss Raploch was the scene of a victory gained over the English by Bruce. Here are ruins of Dindeulk Castle.

The lochs abound with trout and pike, and game is abundant. Lead and iron ores occur rather extensively, and copper exists, but not in sufficient quantities to be worked; slate is also quarried. Gordon, who wrote the "Independent Whig," and Robert Heron, another well-known author, were born in this parish.

KELLS, a division of the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, comprehending the bars. of Slane, Morgallion, Kells, Demifore, Lune, Navan, and Upper Moyfenragh.

KELLS, a bar. in co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Its boundaries are Shillelogher on the N., Knocktopher on the E., Iverk on the S., and co. Tipperary on the W. It is 9 miles long by over 8 broad. The surface is hilly in the S.W. King's river traverses a considerable part of the interior. This barony contains the pars. of Ballytobin, Coolaghmore, Killamerry, Kilmaganny, Kilree, Mallardstown, Tullahought, and parts of Dunnamaggan, Kells, and Stonecarthy, also the vil. of Windgap. It is partly within the poor-law unions of Callan and Carrick-on-Suir.

KELLS, a par. in the bars. of Shillelogher and Kells, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles S.S.W. of Kilkenny. Thomastown is its post town. The par. is 3½ miles long by 2 broad. The surface lies principally within the valley of King's river, and consists of good soil. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with six others, £551, in the patron. of the diocesan and of the Marquis of Ormonde alternately. The church was built in 1843. There is also an ancient church in the parish, and two Roman Catholic chapels. Here are a parish school, two day schools, and a Sunday-school. Garrynamanagh, Kellsborough, and Newtown are the principal residences. The village stands on the King's river; though formerly a town of some importance, and the site of an abbey, it is now a poor and obscure village. It was founded with the castle by Geoffrey Fitzrobert de Marisco, who built the priory in 1183. It afterwards came into the possession of the Birminghams, and was burnt in 1252 and 1327. It was occupied by Edward Bruce in 1316, and about the same time was fortified by Sir Eustace Le Poer. At the suppression of monasteries the priory, of which some remains still exist, was granted to the Earl of Ormonde. There is a police station.

KELLS, a bar. in two divs., Lower and Upper, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Its boundaries are the bars. of Slane and Morgallion on the N., Morgallion and Navan on the E., co. Westmeath and bar. of Lune on the S., and co. Cavan and bar. of Demifore on the W. Its length is over 15 miles, and greatest breadth 13. The surface is undulating, and is traversed by the rivers Blackwater and Moynalty. The soil is mostly rich. Lower Kells contains the pars. of Cruicetown, Emlagh, Kilbeg, Kilmainham-Wood, Moynalty, Newtown, and Staholmog, and parts of Enniskeen, Moybolgue, and Nobber; also the vil. of Carlonstown. Upper Kells contains the pars. of Burry, Dulane, Girley, Kells, Kilskeer, Teltown, and parts of Donaghpatrick, Loughan, and Rathboyne. The two divisions comprise above 85,720 acres.

KELLS, a par., market and post town, in the bar. of Upper Kells, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. The parish is 5 miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface is watered by the Blackwater and Moynalty rivers. The greater part is pasture. The land consists of a good and well-cultivated soil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with three others, £1,151, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, standing in the town, has a detached tower and spire. It was erected by Thomas, first earl of Bective, and was rebuilt, according to the authority of an inscription on the tower, in 1572, by Bishop Brady. It contains several monuments, one of which is in memory of Sir T. Taylor, ancestor of the Headford family. The Roman Catholic chapel has an altarpiece by Guido. There are parochial schools, and schools founded by Miss Catharine Dempsey, at a cost of £7,000, besides several other schools, and a Sunday-school. In this parish are the mansions of the Headford family, and of Archdeacon Stopford, on the banks of the Blackwater. Kells is an incorporated town (formerly a parliamentary borough), situated near the river Blackwater, and on the cross roads from Kingscourt to Mullingar, and from Dublin to Enniskillen, 9 miles N.W. of Nevan, and 39 from Dublin. It is a station on the Kells branch of the Dublin and Drogheda railway. It consists of four or five principal and well-built streets, and has a sessions-house, bridewell, branch bank, savings-bank, police-barracks, dispensary, &c. It publishes the Meath Herald. The town was chartered by Richard II., and returned two members to the Irish parliament. It is now governed by a sovereign, provosts, and 24 burgesses. The trade of Kells is not very considerable. In the centre of the town is an ancient stone cross richly chiselled. Near the church is a curious stone-roofed cell, in which it is alleged St. Columbkill dwelt. A lofty round tower stands in the churchyard, and at Hill of Lloyd is a pillar some hundred feet high, erected by Thomas Earl of Bective. Kells was anciently called Kenlesse, and was the site of a religious house of St. Columba. It gave name to a bishopric which was united to that of Meath in the 13th century. Shortly after the Anglo-Norman conquest, Hugh de Lacy, Lord of Meath, made it a central military station, threw a wall round it, and rebuilt the abbey, which was burnt in 1156. Kells Poor-law Union has 14 elect divisions, and lies within cos. Meath, Cavan, and Westmeath. The workhouse is constructed for 1,280 indoor paupers. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held in February, May, July, September, October, and November.

KELLS, a post-office vil. in the par. of Conor, in the bar. of Lower Antrim, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Ballymena. It is situated on the Glenwherry river, near the Connor and Belfast railway. A priory is said to have been founded here by O'Brien Carrog, before the Anglo-Norman period. Here is a police station. Fairs are held on the 10th January, 1st March, 27th May, 10th June, and 12th September.

KELLS, a coastguard station on the S. side of Dingle Bay, bar. of Iveragh, co. Kerry, prov. Munster, Ireland.

KELLY, a par. in the hund. of Lifton, co. Devon, 6 miles S.E. of Launceston, and 8 N.W. of Tavistock. Milton Abbot is its post town. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated near the river Tamar. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £250. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £266. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with a square tower containing six bells. Kelly House is the principal residence, and is the seat of Arthur Kelly, Esq., who is lord of the manor and owner of the whole of this parish, which has been in the possession of this family from the reign of Henry II.

KELLY CASTLE, in co. Forfar, Scotland, near Arbirlot. It formerly belonged to the Ochterlonies, but is now a ruin on the bank of the river Eliot.

KELLY BRIDGE PORT, a vil. in co. Renfrew, Scotland, near Innerkip. It is situated at the point where the Kelly Burn falls into the Frith of Clyde.

KELMARSH, a par. in the hund. of Rothwell, co. Northampton, 12 miles N. of Northampton its post town, 5 S. of Market Harborough, and 78 from London. It is a station on the Blisworth and Market Harborough branch of the London and North-Western railway. The Pytchley hounds meet here. The parish is traversed by the road from Northampton to Harborough. The surface is partly undulating and the land chiefly pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £671 10*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val £640. The church, dedicated to St. Luke, has a spire. There is a National school, recently erected by Lord Bateman. Kelmarsh Hall is the principal residence, and contains a good collection of pictures.

KELMSCOTT, a chplry. in the par. of Broadwell, hund. of Bampton, co. Oxford, 4 miles S.W. of Bampton. The vil. is small and situated on the river Thames. It is a meet for the Vale of Whitehorse hounds. The soil is rich and the land chiefly arable. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Broadwell, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. George, is a small ancient edifice with two bells on the top. William Hervey, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KELPIN-HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Batley, wap. of Lower Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Dewsbury.

KELSALE, a par. in the hund. of Hoxne, co. Suffolk, 1¼ mile N. of Saxmundham, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the declivity of a hill, and contains many well-built houses surrounded by gardens. The living is a rect.* united with that of Carlton, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £700. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient flint building, with tower containing a clock and eight bells. In the interior is a very ancient font, and the escutcheons of the Norfolk and Trusson families. The register dates from 1669. The charities produce £353 per annum, of which £50 goes to a free grammar school. There is also a free school for girls, and a Sunday-school.

KELSALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Tarvin, second div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, co. Chester, 4 miles N.W. of Tarporley, and 2 N.E. of Tarvin. Chester is its post town. It is a straggling village situated on the western border of the forest of Delemare. There is a mineral spring, and a quarry of excellent freestone. This place was formerly a military post of great importance, commanding the principal approach to Chester. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Tarvin, in the dioc. of Chester. The church was erected in 1844, and is partially endowed. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, with day and Sunday schools adjoining. Sir Philip Egerton is lord of the manor.

KELSEY, NORTH, a par. in the S. div. of the hund. of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles W. of Caistor, and 6 S. of Brigg, its post town. The village is half a mile W. of the station, on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire branch of railway. The parish, which is very extensive, is situated on a branch of the river Ancholme, about 2 miles from the Caistor canal. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1813. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £220, in the patron. of the prebend thereof. The church has been recently rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, which is very ancient, and contains three bells. The Wesleyans have a chapel, erected in 1848, and the Primitive Methodists one, built in 1838. There is a National school, partly supported by the scholars. There are a few small charities, with a share in Ashby Folville almshouses. Sir John Nelthorpe, Bart., is lord of the manor.

KELSEY, SOUTH, a par. in the N. div. of the hund. of Walshcroft, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles S.W. of Caistor, its post town, and 2 miles from the North Kelsey railway station, on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire line, also the same distance from the Moortown railway station, which is a hmlt. in the above par. It is of considerable extent, comprising the united pars. of St. Mary and St. Nicholas, and is situated on the river Ancholme, which has been much improved by the widening and deepening of its channel. The drainage of the lands has also been promoted by the construction of a canal communicating with the river. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1794. Here was formerly an alien priory, a cell to the abbey of Seize, in Normandy. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £687, in the patron. of the crown and J. Skipwith, Esq., alternately. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a modern structure with an ancient tower containing a clock and three bells. It has recently been thoroughly repaired. In the chancel is a stained-glass window representing the Birth, Crucifixion, and Resurrection, also the brass of a knight, bearing date 1430. The church of St Mary has gone to ruin. Bishop Ayscough, Henry VI.'s confessor, and Anne Askew, the martyr, were natives of this place. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel in the village, and the former have another at Moortown. There is a National school.

KELSHALL, a par. in the hund. of Odsey, co. Hertford, 4 miles S.W. of Royston, its post town, 5 N.W. of Buntingford, and 7 E. of Baldock. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1795. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £350, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Faith, is an ancient structure with a tower containing five bells. The interior contains several brasses and monuments. The register dates from 1539. There is a parochial school, chiefly supported by the rector, also a place of worship for Wesleyans.

KELSICK, or KELSWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Bromfield, Cumberland ward, co. Cumberland, 2 miles N.W. of Wigton. It is united with Dundraw to form a township.

KELSO, a district in co. Roxburgh, Scotland. It contains the pars. of Eckford, Ednam, Honnam, Linton, Makerstown, Roxburgh, Smailholm, Sprouston, Stitchel, Yetholm, Kelso, and Morebattle. The presb. of Kelso is in the synod of Merse, and includes the above pars., with the addition of Neuthorn and omission of Eckford and Smailholm. The Kelso Free Church district includes Eccles, Gordon, Lauder, Stow, Westruther, Kelso, Morebattle, and Neuthorn.

KELSO, a par., post and market town, in the district of Kelso, co. Roxburgh, Scotland. The par. also contains the vil. of Maxwellheugh. It is 4½ miles long by 3 broad, and is bounded by the pars. of Neuthorn, Stitchel, Ednam, Sprouston, Eckford, and Roxburgh. The river Tweed traces part of the W. and N.W. boundary. The Teviot enters the parish on the W., and joins the Tweed near the town. The Eden touches the parish on the N. The surface is fertile, and the greater part is under the plough. The road from Berwick to Carlisle, besides several other turnpike roads, traverse the parish. The par. is the head of a presb. in the synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The minister has a stipend of £321. The church was erected in 1773. There are a Free church, three United Presbyterian, Episcopalian, Baptist, and Independent chapels. There are two Free Church schools, the parochial school, and several others. Springwood and Pinnacle Hill are among the principal residences. The Duke of Roxburgh is principal landowner. Roxburgh and Hume castles are in ruins. This parish consists of the ancient districts of Kelso, Maxwell, and St. James's. The church belonged to the monks of Selkirk. A Franciscan convent anciently stood on the banks of the Teviot. Remains of a Roman tumulus were lately to be seen on the Wooden estate, where coffins and human bones have been found. The town, which is situated in the centre of the parish, about 10 miles N.E. of Jedburgh, and 52 S.E. of Edinburgh, occupies a spot at the confluence of the rivers Tweed and Teviot. It is a station on the Kelso branch of the North British railway. It was anciently called Calchow, or Decalco, in reference to a hill of chalk or gypsum which is a prominent feature in the district. It was a favourite resort of royalty in early times, and was the site of the wealthy abbey of Kelso, removed from Selkirk in 1128 by David I. The ruins of this pile form the chief architectural feature of the town, which consists of a square, and several diverging thoroughfares. A stone bridge of five arches, built by Rennie, after the design of Waterloo Bridge, London, connects the town with its suburb of Maxwellheugh. The townhall was erected in 1816. It also contains a school of art, grammar school, two banks, savings-bank, theatre, public library, literary societies, and dispensary. The town is the meet of the Caledonian hunt; an archery club is established, and the Kelso races are considered the principal in Scotland. It publishes the Kelso Mail and Kelso Chronicle, and is famed for the Ballantyne Press, which was first started here. It is the seat of a considerable trade, but few manufactures are carried on. The principal are skin-dressing, stocking and shoe making, also a large iron foundry and a distillery. It is a burgh of barony, governed by a baron, bailie, and commissioners of police. The Kelso cabinet-makers and upholsterers are celebrated for their skill. Here are three good inns, three or four branch banks, insurance agencies, a museum, besides libraries and scientific and literary institutions. A large public park has been laid out at the E. end of the town by the munificence of Mrs. Robertson, of Ednam House. A sheriff's small-debt court is held in February, April, June, August, October, and December; quarter sessions every month. Friday is market day. Fairs are held on the second Fridays in May and July, and on the 2nd November and 5th August—the latter is St. James's cattle fair, one of the largest of the border fairs. Races are run in the spring and autumn.

KELSPOKE, a vil. in the par. of Kingarth, co. Bute, Scotland, 6 miles S. of Rothsay. In the vicinity is Kelspoke Castle.

KELSTERN, a par. in the Wold div. of the hund. of Louth Eske, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5½ miles N.W. of Louth, its post town and nearest railway station. The par. contains the hmlt. of Lambcroft. To the E. there is a barrow. The soil is loamy and subsoil chalk. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. Faith, has a square tower. In the interior is a monument erected by Sir Francis Louth to his wife Elizabeth, which is curiously figured and inscribed, bearing date 1604. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans. The Right Hon. J. E. Denison is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

KELSTERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Northop, hund. of Coleshill, co. Flint, 3 miles S. of Flint.

KELSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanasaph, co. Flint, 5 miles N.W. of Holywell. It is situated at the mouth of the river Dee. There is an extensive brewery.

KELSTON, or KILVESTON, a par. in the hund. of Bath Forum, co. Somerset, 4 miles N.W. of Bath, and 8 E. of Bristol, its post town. It is situated on the river Avon, and formerly belonged to Shaftesbury Abbey. At the Dissolution it was given to the natural daughter of Henry VIII., from whom it passed to the Harringtons of Kelston House. A fountain was erected here in 1858, at the expense of Colonel Inigo Jones. The soil is clayey and the surface diversified with hills. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £240. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £296. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a stone structure with tower containing four bells. The church was rebuilt in 1860. In the interior are the tombs of Sir John Harrington, the poet, author of "Oceana," and godson to Queen Elizabeth, Henry Harrington, M.D., the famed musician, and Sir William Cockburn, Bart., Dean of York. The register dates from 1538. There is a parochial school, with the endowment of £5 per annum, for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. The principal residence is Kelston Park, situated on the banks of the river Avon.

KELTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Kelton, co. Rutland, 4 miles S.W. of Stamford. It is situated near the river Welland.

KELTON, a par. in co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, containing the post-office stations of Castle Douglas and Kelton Hill. It is 6 miles long by 3 broad, and is bounded by Crossmichael, Buittle, Kirkcudbright, and Balmaghie. The river Dee traces part of the W. boundary, and Castle Douglas Loch is within the parish. The surface towards the S. and S.E. is rather broken and rocky, but the greater part is pasture and fertile arable land. The road from Dumfries to Portpatrick traverses the interior. The par. is in the presb. of Kirkcudbright and synod of Galloway, in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £253. The church, situated at Kelton Hill, was erected in 1806, and has been recently repaired. There are Free and Presbyterian churches at Castle Douglas. Here are three parish schools, besides two or three private establishments. The old parishes of Kelton, Gelston, and Kirkconnock constitute the present parish. The chief residences are Gelston Castle, Carlingwark House, and Daldawn. In this parish are two ancient encampments —Thors Circle and the Gelston Cairn. At Carlingwark Loch several ancient urns and other relics have been found.

KELTON, a vil. and small subport to Dumfries, on the borders of the pars. of Dumfries and Carlaverock, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 1½ mile N. of Glencaple. It stands on the left bank of the Nith. Shipbuilding is carried on.

KELTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Lamplugh, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 6 miles E. of Whitehaven. It contains a great many scattered houses, also the hmlt. of Kirkland. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor and one of the chief landowners.

KELTON-HILL, a post-office vil. in the par. of Kelton, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 2½ miles S. of Castle-Douglas. It is known for the large horse fair which is annually held here.

KELTY, a vil. in the par. of Beath, co. Fife, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Kinross. It is a station on the Kinross-shire branch of the North British railway.

KELVEDON, a par. and post town in the hund. of Witham, co. Essex, 4 miles N.E. of Witham, 9½ S.W. of Colchester, and 3 S. of Coggeshall. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. The parish is situated on the north-western bank of the river Blackwater or Pant, and on the high road from London to Colchester. The manor formerly belonged to King Edward the Confessor, and is the place where the massacre of the Danes commenced. William III. visited Kelvedon in the years 1691 and 1692. The town, which is well paved and lighted with gas, consists chiefly of one street, nearly a mile in length, containing several well-built houses. The land is chiefly arable, and the soil is good sandy loam. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £615, and the vicarial for £381, and there are 67 acres of glebe. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £570, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is a stone edifice with a tower containing a clock and five bells. The interior has been thoroughly restored. The parochial charities produce about £17 per annum. There is a National school, also British and infant schools. Felix Hall is the principal residence. The Bishop of London and Sir T. B. Western, Bart., are lords of the manor, the latter being chief landowner.

KELVEDON-HATCH, a par. in the hund. of Ongar, co. Essex, 5 miles N. of Brentwood, its post town, 3 S. of Ongar, and 8 N. of Romford. It is situated near the river Roding, and assumed its present name prior to the reign of King Edward the Confessor. The parish is wholly agricultural. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and meadow, with a considerable extent of woodland, common, and waste. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £130. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £513. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure of brick, with tower containing one bell. In the interior are monuments and brasses to the families of Luther, Wright, and Dolby. The parochial charities produce about £27 per annum. There is a National school. Kelvedon Hall is the principal residence. It is situated in the midst of woods and plantations, and has a Roman Catholic chapel adjoining.

KELVIN, a feeder of the river Clyde, rises under Kelvin Head, co. Stirling, Scotland, and after traversing the borders of Lanark and Dumbarton, joins the Clyde below Glasgow.

KELVIN, a feeder of the river Roe, rises near Carntogher Hill, co. Londonderry, Ireland.

KEMAES. See KEMEYS, co. Pembroke.

KEMBACK, a par. in the district of St. Andrew's, co. Fife, Scotland, 3 miles E. of Cupar, its post town. It lies along the S. bank of the river Eden, and contains the vil. of Blebo-crags. It is 4 miles long by 1 mile broad, and is bounded by the pars. of Dairsie, Leuchars,

St. Andrew's, Ceres, and Cupar. The surface is diversified in contour, rising considerably on Kemback Hill. Dura Den is a ravine running through the parish, and traversed by the Kem burn, which falls into the Eden. The soil is variable in quality. The road from Ceres to St. Andrew's traverses the parish. This par. is in the presb. of St. Andrew's and synod of Fife, in the patron. of the United College of St. Andrew's. The minister has a stipend of £157. The church was built in 1814. There are also a Free church and two schools. Sandstone, ironstone, shale, and trap, occur among the rocks. Lead ore is found, but not in sufficient quantities to defray the expense of working. Kemback House is the principal seat. Salmon and trout abound in all the streams.

KEMBERTON, a par. in the hund. of Brimstree, co. Salop, 2½ miles S. of Shiffnal, its post town and nearest railway station, and 8 N. of Bridgnorth. The village is a small agricultural place. The soil is good, and the land chiefly arable. Coal is found, but not worked. The living is a rect.* with the vic. of Sutton Maddock annexed, joint val. £570, in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a plain brick building with a tower crowned with pinnacles and containing four bells. In the church is a marble tablet erected by the parishioners to the memory of their late rector, the Rev. John Williams. There is a day school for both sexes.

KEMBLE, a par. in the hund. of Malmesbury, co. Wilts, 5 miles S.W. of Cirencester, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Malmesbury. It has a station on the Great Western railway, which is called Tetbury Road Junction. One of the sources of the Thames is in this parish, and water is raised from it by a steam-engine for the supply of the Thames and Severn canal. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1772. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £249. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a tower crowned by a lofty steeple, which was struck by lightning in July, 1834. The chancel was rebuilt in 1840, when the church was greatly improved. The chantry contains a very antique triple window. There are several monuments, among which is that of a Knight Templar. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum. There is a free school. Robert Gordon, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KEMERTON, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Tewkesbury, co. Gloucester, 5 miles N.E. of Tewkesbury, its post town, and 1½ mile E. of Bredon railway station on the Birmingham and Bristol line. It is situated under Bredon Hill, and on the high road from Tewkesbury to Evesham. On the summit of the above hill are the remains of a Roman camp with a deep trench. There are some excellent stone quarries and several petrifying springs. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1772. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £560. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a stone structure with a square tower containing a clock and six bells. It was rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, in 1850. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum, the produce of 7 acres of land, left for the repair of the church, with the exception of a small portion, which goes with other small charities to the poor. There is a National school for both sexes, with an endowment of £6 10*s.* per annum, also a Roman Catholic school. The Wesleyans and Roman Catholics have each a chapel. The principal residences are Kemerton Court and Upper Court. The Rev. John Hopton, of Canon Frome, Herefordshire, is lord of the manor.

KEMESS, or CEMAES, a hund. in the co. Pembroke, contains the pars. of Bayvil, Castle-Blythe, Dinas, St. Dogmell's, Eglwyswrw, Fishguard, Henry's Moat, Llandilo, Llanfair-Nant-Gwyn, Llanfyrnach, Llangolman, Llanllawer, Llanychar, Llanychlwydog, Maenclochog, Meline, Monachlogddu, Monington, Morvil, Moylgrove, Nevern, Little Newcastle, Newport, Pontfaen, Puncheston, and Whitechurch. It was conquered in 1069 from Rhys-ap-Tewdwr, and gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Cardigan and dioc. of St. David's.

KEMEYS-COMMANDER, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Usk, co. Monmouth, 3 miles N.W. of Usk, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Pont-y-Pool. The parish is intersected by the river Usk. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £84. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £53. The church is a small structure dedicated to All Saints.

KEMEYS-INFERIOR, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Usk, co. Monmouth, 3 miles N.E. of Caerleon, and 5 S. of Usk. The parish is bounded on the N. by the river Usk, and is intersected by a high ridge of wooded hills running from W. to E. Above a third of the parish is woodland, but on the banks of the Usk are some tracts of rich grazing land. The village is very small, and wholly agricultural. There are several quarries of stone, which is used for paving and roofing. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £130. The church is a small edifice dedicated to All Saints.

KEMLYN or CAMLYN COVE, on the N. shore of the co. Anglesea, 7 miles N.W. of Llanerchymedd. It has anchorage in 3 fathoms water, but is obstructed by a dangerous ledge near the mouth of the harbour. Here is a quarry of marble known as "verd-antique."

KEMNAY, a par. and post-office vil. in the district of Garioch, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Inverury. It is a station on the Alford Valley branch of the Great North of Scotland railway. The parish is 4 miles long by 2 broad, and is bounded by Inverury, Skene, Monymusk, and Chapel of Garioch. The river Don, a good salmon stream, traces the border in the N. and N.W. The surface is generally flat, excepting at the Kembs, a hilly ridge extending about 2 miles through the parish. The soil is below the average quality. This par. is in the presb. of Garioch and synod of Aberdeen. The minister has a stipend of £159. The church, a modern structure, occupies the site of a more ancient building. There are parish schools and a library. The Great North of Scotland railway passes through the parish, and has stations in the neighbourhood. The principal seat is Kenmay House. There are two mineral springs near the Kembs, and a pillar of stone over 11 feet high.

KEMPLEY, a par. in the hund. of Botloe, co. Gloucester, 6 miles N.W. of Newent, 8 N.E. of Ross, and 15 N.W. of Gloucester. It is a scattered village, and is situated near the Gloucester and Hereford canal. The land is nearly equally divided between arable and pasture. The soil is rich and deep, consisting of a stiff red clay, mixed with loam. There are many orchards, producing excellent cider and perry. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £240. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £204, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Hereford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a tower crowned with a low spire, and containing three bells. In the interior is an ancient font and two monuments. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum, of which £5 goes to the support of Pyndar's school. The old manor Stonehouse, supposed to have been built in the 16th century, is now converted into a farmhouse. Earl Beauchamp is lord of the manor.

KEMPSEY, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 4 miles S. of Worcester, its post town, and 2 W. of the Wadborough railway station. The village, which is large, is situated on the S.E. bank of the river Severn. A monastery was founded here in 799, which, after it had flourished for nearly a century, was given to the bishops of Worcester, who had a palace here. At this palace Henry II. and Edward I. kept their courts, and Simon de Montfort slept with his prisoner, Henry III., prior to the battle of Evesham, in which he was defeated and slain. This par. includes the chplry. of Norton, The surface is generally level, but well wooded, and the meadows along the banks of the Severn are luxuriantly rich. In the vicinity are many good family residences. There are no remains of the bishop's palace, but the bishop's steward annually observes the ceremony of opening a court leet and baron. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £553, and the vicarial for £230. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £248, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is a plain cruciform structure dedicated to St. Mary, with a large tower containing six bells. In the interior is the monument of Edmund Wylde, representing the figure of an armed knight, over which are the branches of a horse-chestnut tree, growing from out of the top of the tomb. The church was rebuilt in 1799. Near the church are traces of a Roman camp of 15 acres. A Roman inscription has recently been found here. The charities produce about £61 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Bishop of Worcester is lord of the manor.

KEMPSFORD, a par. in the hund. of Brightwells-Barrow, co. Gloucester, 3 miles S. of Fairford, its post town. It is situated on the rivers Colne and Isis, and contains the hmlts. of Dunfield, Horcutt, and Welford. It was formerly a Roman settlement, and before the Norman Conquest was held by Earl Harold. At the time of the Domesday Survey it belonged to Ernulf de Hesding. The Thames and Severn canal passes through the parish. The soil of about half the land is gravel, and of the remainder a strong clay. The tithes were commuted for land and corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1801. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester, val. £700, in the patron. of the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, is an ancient structure with a tower containing a clock and six bells. It was built in the reign of Henry III. by Henry Plantagenet, Duke of Lancaster, whose arms may be seen, also his horse's shoe nailed on the door. There is a day school, with an endowment of £10 per annum. Sir Gilbert East, Bart., is lord of the manor.

KEMPSHOT, a tythg. in the par. of Winslade, upper half of the hund. of Basingstoke, co. Hants, 3½ miles S.W. of Basingstoke. It was formerly the seat of the Pinks, of whom Robert was warden of New College, Oxon, in Queen Elizabeth's time. The principal residence is Kempshot House.

KEMPSTON, a par. in the hund. of Redbornestoke, co. Bedford, 3 miles S.W. of Bedford, its post town. The village, which is large, is situated on the river Ouse. There is a meet at Kempston Wood for the Oakley hounds. It is mentioned in Domesday Survey as Camestone. Limestone is quarried for building purposes and for burning into lime. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1802. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £252. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is situated near the bank of the river Ouse. It has a tower containing five bells, on three of which are inscriptions. The porch, on the S. side, is supported by four pillars which have recently undergone repair, and open seats have been constructed in the aisles in lieu of the pews. It has a stone groined roof. An external staircase was added in the year 1837. During the repairs a curiously-formed cross was discovered, which was presented by the vicar to the Archæological Society of Bedfordshire. The chancel, which has just been entirely renovated, has a timbered roof, a memorial stained-glass window to the Fitzpatrick family, and a monument to the family of William Carter, bearing date 1605. In the vestry are two panels of very ancient paintings representing the Fall in Paradise. The parochial charities produce about £46 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a chapel.

KEMPSTON, a par. in the hund. of Launditch, co. Norfolk, 2 miles S.W. of Great Dunham railway station, 1¼ S. of Litcham, and 7 N.E. of Swaffham. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The land, which is chiefly arable, is in good cultivation. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £170, and the vicarial for £106 5*s*. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £167. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, is a plain thatched building with a tower covered in ivy, and situated within the demesne of the Lodge. In the interior is an ancient sculptured font, and a piscina. The Earl of Leicester is lord of the manor.

KEMPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Clunbury, co. Salop, 4 miles S.E. of Bishop's Castle. There is also a seat of this name in co. Middlesex, 3 miles W. of Kingston-on-Thames.

KEMP-TOWN, a suburb of Brighton, co. Sussex, 51 miles from London. It was built by T. Kemp, Esq., on the slope of East Cliff, overlooking the sea, and has a church, erected in 1849 at the sole expense of the Marquis of Bristol, for the clergy daughters' school at St. Mary's Hall. [See BRIGHTON.]

KEMSING, a par. in the hund. of Codsheath, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 3 miles N.E. of Sevenoaks, its post town and railway station. It is situated near the river Darent, under a range of chalk hills to the E. of Otford. It was formerly a market town, and had a castle built before the reign of Henry II., but is now a small agricultural village. Here is St. Edith's Holy Well, anciently supposed to possess miraculous efficacy. The land is chiefly in hops, and very productive. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £180, and the vicarial for £140. The living is a vic. united with the cur. of Seal, in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £396. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a stone structure with a shingle tower. The register dates from 1535. The church contains the brass of a priest bearing date 1320. The parochial charities consist of an endowment of £20 by Lady Smythe. There is a National school for boys and girls.

KEN, a river giving name to the district of Glenkens, through which it passes, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland. Its source is between the hills of Blacklarg and Longrig, on the borders of Ayrshire. Its course lies principally between the parishes of Carsphairn and Kells, and between Dalry, Balmaclellan, and Parton. It falls into the Dee at the S. end of Kells parish.

KEN, a river of co. Devon, rises under Haldon Hill, and joins the Exe at Powderham Castle.

KENAGH, or KENAUGHT, a vil. in the par. of Kilcommock, bar. of Ratheline, co. Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Killashee. There is a dispensary within the Longford Poor-law Union. The principal residence is Mosstown. It gives name to a rivulet which joins the river Camolin near Cloonlara.

KENAHAN, a vil. in the par. of Kilcar, bar. of Banagh, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland.

KENARDINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourne, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 7 miles S.W. of Ashford, its post town, 6 E. of Tenterden, and 22 from Canterbury. The village, which is small, consisting of a few straggling houses, is situated on high ground, but the southern part of the parish is low, and within the level of Romney Marsh. The Military canal passes in the vicinity. Alfred the Great is supposed to have encamped here in 893, and there are some Danish earthworks. Coppice wood grows in large quantities, but the cultivated land is good arable and pasture. This manor was assigned by William the Conqueror as part of the lands for the defence of Dover Castle. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £200. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £114. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small edifice built out of the ruins of a former one, which was much larger, and was destroyed by lightning in 1559. At the W. end is a small brick tower built in the last century, and containing one bell.

KENARTH, a par. in the hund. of Elvet, co. Carmarthen, 2 miles W. of Newcastle-Emlyn, its post town. It is a village situated near the river Teifi. The par. contains the hmlts. of Dolbryn, Emlyn, and Gellygally. It is noted for its 12 feet salmon leap, from which 100 fish are sometimes taken at a time. In this parish is situated the Newcastle union poorhouse. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £158, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is situated near the fall, and is dedicated to St. Llawddog.

KENBAAN, a headland and castle in the bar. of Carey, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2½ miles N.W. of Ballycastle. Its name signifies the "white head," so called from a very extraordinary mass of chalk perched in the face of the cliff. The castle was a fastness of the Mac-Alisters. There are several dry caves in the cliff, approachable by water only.

KENCHESTER, a par. in the hund. of Grimsworth, co. Hereford, 5 miles N.W. of Hereford, its post town, and 15 from Hay. It is situated between Credenhill and the river Wye. The village is very small, consisting of a few scattered houses. Here are the ruins of Magna Castra, the Ariconium of Camden, the walls of which are still to be traced. It formerly covered an area of 50 acres, with a temple at the eastern end, and a niche of Roman bricks called the "Chair." At the close of the last century a stone altar was dug up from the foundation of the northern wall, bearing an inscription to the Emperor Cæsar Marcus Aurelius, and at different periods large vaults, a hypocaust, with the leaden pipes entire, tesselated pavements, a mosaic floor, fragments of pottery and urns, with large bones, have been discovered. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £182. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure. There is a Sunday-school, also an institution endowed by the late Lady Southampton with a chapel and two schoolrooms, for the education of both sexes on the British system.

KENCOTT, a par. in the hund. of Bampton, co. Oxford, 5 miles N.E. of Lechlade, its post town, and 4 W. of Bampton. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The parish is almost entirely fertile arable land, in good cultivation. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1767. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £246. The church, dedicated to St. George, is a small ancient structure. It has a Norman doorway on the S. side, with a rudely-sculptured sagittarius shooting a dragon. There is a small charity for education. John Large, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KENDAL, a ward in the co. of Westmoreland, contains the towns of Ambleside and Milnthorpe, and the pars. of Beetham, Grasmere, Heversham, Windermere, and parts of Burton-in-Kendal, and Kendal, comprising an area of 147,441 acres. It gives name to a deanery in the dioc. of Carlisle.

KENDAL, or KIRKBY-IN-KENDAL, a par., post and market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the ward of its own name, co. Westmoreland, 46 miles S. of Carlisle, 22 N. of Lancaster, and the same distance S.W. of Appleby. It is situated on the river Kent and Lancaster canal, which here terminates in a spacious basin, surrounded by convenient wharfs. It has a station on the Kendal and Windermere branch of the Lancaster and Carlisle section of the London and North-Western railway. The par., which is very extensive, contains the tnshps. of Kirkland, Nethergraveship, Strickland Roger, Strickland Kettle, Crook, Dillicar, Dowker, Grayrigg, Helsington, New Hutton, Old Hutton, Kentmere, Lambrigg, Natland, Patton, Selside with Whitwell, Scalthwaitrigg, Skelsmergh, Longsleddale, Staveley, Nether Staveley, Over Staveley, Under Barrow, with Bradley Field, and Winster.—The town stands on the acclivity of a hill, near the banks of the river Kent, which is here crossed by three bridges. It is considered the most important town in Westmoreland, and consists principally of one long street running N. and S., with several smaller streets branching off to the E. and W. The houses are all built of mountain limestone, and roofed with a light blue slate. It is well paved, lighted with gas, and plentifully supplied with water. It is of great antiquity, and was held at the Conquest by Ivo de Talebois, from whom it passed to the Bruces, Rooses, and others, and latterly came into the possession of the Lowther family. It is believed to have been a Roman station, and many relics of the Romans have been discovered in the neighbourhood. The ruins of Kendal Castle, situated on a lofty eminence, on the E. bank of the river, command an extensive view of the town and surrounding country. In this castle Catherine Parr, the last queen of Henry VIII., was born.—The town was first incorporated by Queen Elizabeth, and has since received several charters from subsequent monarchs. Under the Reform Act it returns one member to parliament, the mayor being the returning officer. It is divided into three wards, and the municipal government is vested in a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 common councilmen, with the style of "mayor and burgesses of the borough of Kirkby-in-Kendal." The municipal and parliamentary boroughs are co-extensive, comprising, according to the census of 1861, 2,582 inhabited houses, with a population of 12,028. Petty sessions for the borough are held on Friday, and by the county magistrates on Saturday, in the townhall. The Easter and Michaelmas quarter sessions are held at Kendal, the Epiphany and Midsummer at Appleby, but the former are adjourned to Kendal. It contains assembly rooms, townhall, house of correction, union poor-house, market-house, erected in 1855, literary and scientific institutes, Christian and mechanic institutes, working men's news-room and library, gas works, water-works, two banks (the bank of Westmoreland and Kendal bank), and a savings-bank. The other public establishments are, the magnetic telegraph company, with offices in Whitehall Buildings, the government tax-office, inland revenue office, Kendal chamber of commerce, police office, and stamp office.—Kendal has long been noted for its manufacture of woollen cloths, which was first introduced by Flemish emigrants, who settled here in 1337, and has flourished ever since that period. There are also manufactures of linseys, railway wrappers, horse-cloths, clogs, bobbins, combs, carpets, fish-hooks, rope, woollen cords, and fancy trouser stuffs. There are several tanneries, iron and brass foundries, and manufactories for agricultural implements, which afford abundant employment to the inhabitants.—It is the seat of a Poor-law Union, and the head of County Court and superintendent registry districts. The cemetery, situated on the Park-side-road, was opened in 1855, and has two chapels. Another small cemetery is situated in Castle-street, and has a small chapel, used only by Dissenters.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £520, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. In addition to the parish church, there are the following district churches, the livings of all which are perpet. curs., varying in value from £200 to £70:—St. George's, St. Thomas's, and those at Crook, Burnside, Grayrigg, Helsington, Hugil, Kentmere, Long Sleddale, Natland, Staveley, New Hutton, Old Hutton, Under Barrow, Winster, and Selside. The parish church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a commodious stone edifice, with square embattled tower. It has recently undergone thorough repair, and is considered one of the finest churches in the kingdom. It has three chapels, formerly belonging to the Bellinghams, Stricklands, and Parrs, and contains many monuments, and several brasses. The district church of St. George is a stone structure, with two slender towers, surmounted by low spires. The church of St. Thomas is a modern stone structure, with tower, and stands at Strickland-gate. The parochial charities produce above £1,418 per annum. There are several endowed schools, the principal of which are Pennington's free grammar school, with an endowment of £38 per annum, and six exhibitions at Oxford—at this school, Dr. Shaw, the traveller, Dr. Fothergill, and Bishop Law were educated; Piper's National school, with an endowment of £80 per annum; Sande's hospital and blue-coat school, founded in 1670, for 8 poor widows, who have each a residence and weekly allowance, and the clothing and educating of 40 boys and 40 girls. At High-gate are almshouses for 12 unmarried women, founded by Mr. Dowker, called the Old Maids' Hospital. There is also a Sunday-school, called the Greencoat school, founded by W. Sleddall, besides British and infant schools. There are places of worship for Roman Catholics, Independents, Wesleyans, Presbyterians, Unitarians, Primitive Methodists, Congregationalists, Christian Brethren, Inghamites, and Quakers.—Among the antiquities of the place are the remains of two ancient chapels, and of St. Leonard's Hospital, which was given by William de Lancaster to Conyngeshead Priory, but now the property of the Lowthers. On Helse Hill are traces of a camp, and in the vicinity are several ancient mansions, as Dockwray Hall, formerly the seat of the Dockwray family, and Abbot's Hall, formerly belonging to St. Mary's Abbey, York.—During the year 1598, the plague carried off upwards of 2,500 inhabitants. James I. visited the town in 1616, and the Pretender passed through the place in 1745. Among the celebrated men born here may be mentioned Richard de Kendal, the grammarian, Bishop Potter, Dean Potter, his nephew, Shaw, the traveller, Sir G. Wharton, W. Walker, the astronomer, and Hudson and Wilson, the botanists.—Kendal supports two newspapers, called the Kendal Mercury and the Westmoreland Gazette, both published on Saturday. Kendal was the head of a barony, held at the Conquest by Ivo de Talebois, and now gives the title of baron to the Herbert family.—Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on the 22nd March, 29th April, 8th and 9th November for cattle and horses; and in June, July, and August, for wool and cheese; Whit-Saturday and Martinmas for the hiring of servants. Races take place in August.

KENDALSHIRE, a hmlt. in the par. of Westerleigh, co. Gloucester, 2 miles S.W. of Chipping Sodbury.

KENDERCHURCH, a par. in the hund. of Webtree, co. Hereford, 11 miles S.W. of Hereford, its post town, 2 S.E. of Abbey Dore, and 1 mile N.W. of Pontrilas railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Dore, and is wholly agricultural. The parish is crossed by the road from Hereford to Abergavenny, and also by a tram-road, which runs parallel with it. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture, with a small extent of woodland. The tithes were purchased by the landowners at the commencement of the present century. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £58. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, built on an eminence, and has lately been restored. It has a small belfry containing one bell. Colonel Scudamore is lord of the manor.

KENDROCHAD. See BRIDGEND, co. Perth.

KENELM, ST., a chplry. in the par. of Halesowen, hund. of Brimstree, co. Worcester, 2 miles S.W. of Halesowen. This place derives its name from Kenelm, King of Mercia, who, in 819, when seven years old, was murdered by his sister, Quendreda, and buried in Clent wood. It includes the tnshps. of Hunnington and Romsley. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £125, in the patron. of the Vicar of Halesowen. The church is a small structure, of the time of Henry III., with a pointed tower, and old Saxon door, belonging to the former church. Over the S. entrance is some ancient sculpture, and on the S. wall a sculptured figure of a child crowned, said to represent St. Kenelm, who was canonised after his death.

KENETHMONT. See KINNETHMONT, co. Aberdeen.

KENFIGG, a par. in the hund. of Newcastle, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles W. of Bridgend. It is situated on the coast, near Margam Abbey, which belonged to Jestyn-ap-Gurgam, and includes the tnshp. of Lower Kenfigg, and the ext. par. place of Skerr. In the parish is a freshwater lake, nearly 2 miles in circuit, and several rabbit warrens. The town and ancient castle were partially destroyed by an inundation, which took place in the 16th century. It is now an insignificant hamlet, but contains a townhall, and is nominally governed by a portreeve and recorder. Under the Reform Bill it includes part of Trissient, and is a contributory borough to Swansea in returning one member to parliament. The living is a vic. united with that of Pyle, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. There are traces of the Roman road Via Julia, and near it two ancient stones, one inscribed with the words "Pompeius Carantorius," followed by an inscription in Ogham characters.

KENFIGG, HIGHER, a hmlt. in the par. of Margam, co. Glamorgan, 3 miles from Kenfigg, and 7 W. of Bridgend.

KENILWORTH, a div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, contains the pars. of Ashow, Bagington, Bubbenhall, Cubbington, Harbury, Kenilworth, Leamington Priors, Leek-Wootton, Lillington, Milverton, Offchurch, Radford Semele, Stoneleigh, Ufton, Whitnash, with part of Bishop's Tachbrook, comprising about 38,000 acres.

KENILWORTH, a par. and small town in the Kenilworth div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 4 miles N. of Warwick, and 101 N.N.W. of London. It is a station on the London and North-Western branch line of railway. The par., which is of large extent, is situated in a champaign country between Coventry and Warwick, and contains the hmlt. of Redfern. It was anciently called Kenelworda, and was part of Stoneleigh prior to the Norman Conquest. After that event it was given by Henry I. to Geoffrey de Clinton, who founded an Austin priory for canons regular, which had a revenue at the Dissolution of £643 14*s.* 9½*d.* The same Geoffrey, shortly after the founding of the monastery, rebuilt the castle on the site of an earlier Saxon fortress. This castle was sold by his grandson to Henry III., who conferred it with the hand of his sister Eleanor on Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester, by whom it was greatly enlarged and strongly fortified. After the defeat of the earl at the battle of Evesham, the castle held out, under his younger son Simon, against all the royal forces, commanded by the king in person, for six months, but was at length reduced by famine. It was then conferred by the king on Prince Edmund, afterwards created Earl of Leicester, who in 1278 held a grand tournament within its walls, at which one hundred knights and many ladies wearing "silk mantles" assisted. In 1327 it was the scene of the abdication and imprisonment of Edward II. It was considerably enlarged by John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, whose son becoming king, the castle reverted to the crown. Queen Elizabeth gave it to her favourite, Dudley Earl of Leicester, by whom the gatehouse was built, and who also erected the gallery tower and Mortimer's tower at each extremity of the tilt-yard, and after having completed and embellished the castle at a prodigious expense, entertained the Queen and her whole court for seventeen days, as related in Sir Walter Scott's "Kenilworth," where the best account of the place is to be found. During the civil war of Charles I. it was taken possession of by Cromwell, and finally dismantled. The remains, covered with ivy, consisting of Cæsar's tower, the walls of which are 16 feet thick, built by Geoffrey de Clinton, the keep, banqueting-hall, 86 feet by 45, with three windows almost entire, &c., form the principal attraction of the town. It contains a bank, institute, reading society, and police station. Kenilworth was once noted for its extensive manufacture of combs, which of late has considerably decreased. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £280, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The parish church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient edifice, with a square embattled tower crowned with a spire. The church has several doorways, and contains a very antique font, also monuments and a crest of the Dudley family. In addition to the parish church there is a district church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £50, in the patron. of the trustees. The new church of St. John, erected by subscription at the cost of £3,000, was opened in 1852. It is a stone structure, with a tower containing one bell. The parochial charities produce about £137 per annum. The Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, Roman Catholics, and Unitarians have each a chapel. There are National, British, infant, and free schools. The views from Kenilworth Castle are most varied, forming one of the principal attractions of Kenilworth. The Earl of Clarendon is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Wednesday is market day, but little business is transacted. A cattle fair is held on the 1st April.

KENINGHAM, an ancient par. in co. Norfolk, now joined to Mulbarton.

KENLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Warlingham, second div. of the hund. of Tandridge, co. Surrey, 5 miles S.E. of Croydon, and 3 from Caterham. It is a station on the Caterham branch of the London and South-Eastern railway.

KENLEY, a par. in the hund. of Condover, co. Salop, 4 miles W. by N. of Much Wenlock. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated about 4 miles from the river Severn. The soil in some parts is rocky and bad, embracing the Lawley and Caradoc hills, and the celebrated Wrekin. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £119. The church is an ancient edifice, dedication unknown.

KENLEY-BOTTOM, a hmlt. in the par. of Bishop's Lydeard, co. Somerset, 5 miles N.W. of Taunton.

KENLOWRE, or PITMILLIE, a river of co. Fife, Scotland, rises at Cameron, and falls into St. Andrew's Bay, near Kingsbarns.

KENMARE, a par., seaport, and small town, in the bar. of Glanarought, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The parish, which is about 6 miles in length by the same in breadth, lies at the head of the Kenmare estuary, and partly within the valley of the river Roughty. The surface is wild and mountainous, with some bog. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. £341, in the patron. of the crown. The church was erected in 1814 by subscription and loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, to which are united those of Tuosist and Templenoe. Kenmare House is the residence of the agent of Lord Lansdowne. There are several other residences in the neighbourhood. A public school is supported by Lord Lansdowne, and another by the National Board; besides which there are several day schools. The town stands near the head of Kenmare Bay, on the road from Glengariff to Killarney, about 20 miles from the latter place, and 209 S.W. of Dublin. The river, or rather estuary, admits ships of the largest size nearly up to the town, and is crossed by a suspension bridge, erected by the Marquis of Lansdowne and the Board of Works. The town, which is an improving place, is a chief police station. General sessions are held in June and December, and petty sessions once a fortnight. The bridewell and workhouse are good buildings. The trade of Kenmare is quite local. Copper, lead, and limestone are worked in the vicinity. In the neighbourhood is a cave said to have been a retreat of Fingall, and from which the place took its ancient name of Nad-fion. It was refounded with the name of Nedeen by Sir W. Petty in 1670. A little to the W. of the town are the ruins of Dunkerron Castle, built by Owen O'Sullivan, and of Cappanacoss Castle, an ancient seat of O'Sullivan More. There are also two Druidical altars. Kenmare gives title of earl to the Brownes of Castlerosse. The Kenmare Poor-law Union lies wholly within the county of Kerry, and has a fever hospital and dispensary here. It has 7 electoral divisions, and 15 guardians. The market is discontinued. Fairs are held in February, April, May, July, August, September, November, and December.

KENMARE, a large bay or estuary belonging to cos. Cork and Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland.

KENMORE, a par. and post-office vil. in the district of Breadalbane, co. Perth, Scotland, 8 miles N.E. of Killin, containing Acharn, Bridgend, Blairmore, and Stronfernan. It is about 20 miles long by 9 broad, and consists of a main and two detached districts. The river Tay traverses the parish, and Loch Tay is principally within its limits. The river Lochy rises in the W. and joins the Dochart. The Lyon joins the Tay just before quitting the parish. The parish is surrounded by mountains, one of which, Benlawers, attains an altitude of 3,944 feet above sea-level. The hills are for the most part covered by extensive sheep-walks. The greater portion of the entire surface consists of moor and mountain. This par. is in the presb. of Weem and synod of Perth and Stirling. The minister has a stipend of £254. The church was erected in 1760, and is a cruciform structure. There are three Free churches and a Baptist chapel; also two or three private schools, and some half a dozen schools supported by the public. Near Drummond Hill stands Taymouth Castle, the demesne of the Marquis of Breadalbane. The park and grounds are about 13 miles in circumference. The late Prince Consort and her Majesty stayed three days here in 1842. The marquis holds nearly all the parish. On a peninsula stretching out into Loch Tay stands the village, 23 miles W.N.W. of Dunkeld. A bridge of five arches here spans the Tay. It is a spot much visited by tourists, and has an inn, in which Burns wrote over the fireplace some lines in praise of the surrounding scenery. On a small island in Loch Tay stand the ruins of a priory founded by Alexander I. in 1122. Here, says Sir Walter Scott, was buried Sibilla, daughter of Henry I. and wife of Alexander I. The island and ruins were occupied as a stronghold by the Campbells in the civil wars of Charles I., but they were routed by Montrose. It was recaptured by Monk in 1654. A carved monument stands on the Tay bank. Limestone, slate, and quartz rock are quarried. Lead and iron ores exist, but are not worked. Fairs are held in March, June, July, September, November, and December.

KENN, a par. in the hund. of Winterstoke, co. Somerset, 14 miles S.W. of Bristol, its post town, 2½ from Clevedon, and 2 W. of Yatton station on the Bristol and Exeter line. The village is small and situated in marshy ground. It formerly belonged to the Kenns, of whom was the nonjuring bishop, composer of the "Morning Hymn;" he was one of the seven prelates sent to the Tower by James II. The soil is loamy with subsoil clay. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £90. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, in the patron. of the Vicar of Yatton. The church is a stone structure partially rebuilt in 1861. In the interior are several ancient monuments, among which is that of Christopher Kenn. The register dates from 1543. There is a National school.

KENN, a par. in the hund. of Exminster, co. Devon, 4 miles S.E. of Exeter, its post town, and 2½ from the Exminster railway station. It is situated on the river Kenn, under Haldon Hill, and on the Plymouth road. There are several barrows in which Roman coins, &c., have been found. The village is considerable. The lord of the manor holds his court at Kenneford, where a portreeve and two constables are sworn in. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £750. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of Exeter. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £681. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing 6 bells. In the interior is a carved font, also several monuments. the parochial charities produce about £37 per annum. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship, and there is a Church of England school. Haldon House is situated in a park, and commands an extensive view of the surrounding scenery. The Woodlands and Bickham are residences within this parish.

KENNAIL, a lough in co. Cavan, Ireland. It is situated on the borders of Westmeath and Longford.

KENNARTH, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Harmon, hund. of Rhayader, co. Radnor, 4 miles N. of Rhayader. The village, which is considerable, is situated at a short distance from a branch of the river Wye. Slate abounds.

KENNEDY CASTLE, in co. Wigton, Scotland, 3 miles E. of Stranraer. It is situated on a small loch of its name, and was formerly a seat of the Earl of Stair, but was burnt in 1715, and is now a ruin.

KENNERLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Crediton, co. Devon, 5 miles N.W. of Crediton, its railway station and post town, and 13 from Exeter. It is a small village, situated on a stream of the river Creedy. The soil is loam and clay, but rather poor, with about 70 acres of moor and furze. The parish is intersected by the road from Exeter to South Molton. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £145, in the patron. of the Governors of Crediton charity. The church, dedicated to St. Clement, is a stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. It was repaired in 1847. There is a parochial school for both sexes. Sir S. H. Northcote Bart., is lord of the manor.

KENNET, a river rising under the Marlborough Downs in co. Wilts, and joining the Thames at Reading. On its banks are situated the towns of Hungerford, Marlborough, and Newbury. It is connected by a canal of 57 miles with the river Avon at Bath.

KENNET, a vil. in the par. of Clackmannan, co. Clackmannan, Scotland, 1 mile E. of Clackmannan. It is chiefly occupied by colliers. Kennet House stands about 1 mile distant from the Forth.

KENNET, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Selkley, co. Wilts, 5 miles S.W. of Marlborough, its post town. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated near the source of the river Kennet. The soil is light and chalky. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £58 10*s*. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £58. The church is a small ancient structure.

KENNET, EAST and WEST, tythgs. in the par. of Avebury, hund. of Selkley, co. Wilts, 5 miles W. of Marlborough. They anciently formed a distinct parish, and are mentioned in Domesday Book as Chenete. The village, which is situated on the road to Bath, is noted for its celebrated Kennet ale, which is brewed from a limpid spring of soft water, slightly impregnated with magnesia. At Silbury Hill, a little to the W. of the village, is a large barrow, and the sources of the Kennet.

KENNETHMONT, a station on the Great North of Scotland railway.

KENNETPANS, a vil. in the par. of Clackmannan, co. Clackmannan, Scotland, 2 miles W. of Kincardine. It has a harbour on the Forth.

KENNETT, a par. in the hund. of Staploe, co. Cambridge, 4 miles N.E. of Newmarket, its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Lark, and has a station on the Cambridge section of the Great Eastern railway. It was Fairfax's headquarters in June, 1647. The land is chiefly heathy. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £194. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £116. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient stone structure, and has recently been repaired. Kennett Hall is the principal residence.

KENNINGHALL, a par. and small market town in the hund. of Guiltcross, co. Norfolk, 4 miles E. of East Harling, its post town and railway station, 4 S.W. of Buckenham, and 18 S.W. of Norwich. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Cheninkhala, which signifies the "king's house," from the Saxon words, Cyning, "king," and halla, a "palace;" it having been the residence of the kings of East Anglia. After the Conquest it was held by the De Albinis, Monaltos, Mowbrays, and Howards, who had a manor house built on the site of the Saxon palace. It was forfeited to the crown by the attainder of Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk, in the reign of Henry VIII., and given to the Princess Mary. It is now converted into farms, and called Keninghall Place. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the extensive brick and tile kilns. The town is very small. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £250, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Stephen, is a commodious structure, with a massive square tower. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £67 per annum. The Wesleyans and Particular Baptists have places of worship. The Guiltcross union poorhouse is about 1½ mile S. of the town. A market for cattle is held every Monday in the yard belonging to the Crown Inn. Fairs are held on 18th July and 30th September for cattle and sheep. The Duke of Norfolk is lord of the manor.

KENNINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Chart, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 12 miles S.W. of Canterbury, and 2 N. of Ashford, its post town. It is a small village, situated near the line of the Canterbury railway, and the river Stour. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the brick, tile, and lime works. The land is partly in hops. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £205, and the vicarial for £197 12*s*. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £211, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing five bells. The register dates from 1671. There is a free school. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. An annual fair is held on 5th July.

KENNINGTON, a tnshp. and chplry. partly in the par. of Sunningwell, and partly in that of Radley, hund. of Hormer, co. Berks, 2 miles S. of Oxford, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Abingdon. It is situated on the river Isis, and near the line of the Great Western railway. The village is small, and chiefly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1802. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Sunningwell, in the dioc. of Oxford. The chapel-of-ease, dedicated to St. Swithin, fell down at the beginning of the present century, and was rebuilt in 1838.

KENNINGTON, a district par., and populous suburb of London, in the par. and borough of Lambeth, E. div. of the hund. of Brixton, co. Surrey, 2½ miles S. of St. Paul's. It is situated on the line of road leading from the metropolis towards Clapham and Brixton, and has recently vastly increased in population. It is a crown manor, held under the Duchy of Cornwall, and had a royal palace in the Saxon times. It was subsequently the residence of Edward the Black Prince, whose palace stood on the site of the old manor house in Park Place, once inhabited by Charles I. while Prince of Wales, but recently superseded by modern buildings. Henry III. kept Christmas here in 1231, and Edward III. in 1342. It includes the Oval, an area of nearly 10 acres, once cultivated as market gardens and nursery grounds, but now the Surrey cricket ground; and Kennington Common, formerly an unenclosed tract of ground, used as the place of execution for criminals convicted at the Surrey assizes, but now enclosed as a park. It was here that several of the adherents of the Pretender were executed as traitors in 1746, and the great Chartist meeting was held in 1848. The district is lighted with gas, and supplied with water from the South London Water-works, which are situated at Kingston. There are spacious assembly rooms, where public meetings are held, a savings-bank, a police station of the L division of the metropolitan police, a grammar school affiliated with the London University, and the licensed victuallers' schools. Here are also manufactories for oil of vitriol and wadding. It is a polling-place for the eastern division of the county of Surrey, and an electoral district of the borough of Lambeth. The custom of borough-English prevails in the manor, which was held by Alleyne, the actor, in the beginning of the 17th century. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £700, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Mark, is a spacious structure, erected in 1824 at the cost of £22,719. It has a tower and cupola at the W. end, and a Doric portico. There are several Episcopal chapels, besides St. James's and Carlisle chapels, within the district. There are many National, infant, and denominational schools. J. Calcott, the composer, and Sir A. Calcott, the painter, were natives.

KENNOWAY, a par. and post-office vil. in the district of Kirkcaldy, co. Fife, Scotland, containing the vil. of Baneton, and part of Star. It is over 3 miles in length, by 2 broad, and is bounded by Kettle, Scoonie, Wemyss, and Markinch. The surface is chiefly under cultivation, and is watered by several rivulets. This par. is in the presb. of Kirkcaldy, and synod of Fife, in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £243. The church was built in 1850; it is in the old

Norman style, and stands in the village. There is also a Presbyterian church. Auchtermairnie, Kingsdale, and Newtowndale are the chief residences. The village is situated in the S. part of the parish, on the road from Dysart to Ceres. It is lighted with gas, and enjoys a fair amount of trade. It takes its name from its position at the head of a ravine or glen. Weaving is carried on pretty extensively. There are in the parish two grain-mills, a saw and spinning mills. The Leven railway has a station in the neighbourhood. Maiden Castle is supposed to have been a British fort.

KENNYTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Langton, wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 3 miles E. of Malton.

KENRICK CHRISTIONYDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Ruabon, hund. of Bromfield, co. Denbigh.

KENRY, a bar. in the co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Its boundaries are the Shannon on the N., the river Maig on the E., Lower Connello on the S., and Deel on the W. It is 7 miles long, and its greatest breadth is over 6 miles. The surface is generally flat, excepting in the S. The bar. contains the pars. of Ardcanny, Chapel-Russell, Iveruss, and Kildimo, with part of the par. of Adare.

KENSALL GREEN, a district par. in the Kensington div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, 3 miles from Hyde Park corner, and 5 N.W. of St. Paul's, London. It is a station on the North London railway. At this point the West London branch line turns off from the North-Western railway. Many new villas and streets have recently been built. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of London, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a new structure, dedicated to St. John. There are National and ragged schools, educating between 600 and 700 children. Kensall Green cemetery, comprising an area of about 50 acres, is situated here, and is the burial-place of the Duke of Sussex, Princess Sophia, Scott's daughters Anne and Sophia, Thackeray, Leech, and many distinguished persons. Here is a Roman Catholic cemetery. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

KENSINGTON, a div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, contains the pars. of Acton, Chelsea, Chiswick, Ealing, Fulham, Hammersmith, Kensington, Twyford Abbey, and Willesden, comprising about 19,220 acres.

KENSINGTON, a par. and populous suburban district of London, in the Kensington div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, 4 miles W.S.W. of St. Paul's, London. It includes the populous neighbourhoods of Brompton, Earl's Court, Norland, Notting Hill, with parts of Little Chelsea, and Kensall Green. It was anciently an inconsiderable village, and is mentioned in Domesday Survey as Chenesitune, at which time it was possessed by Aubrey de Vere. Foxes were hunted here in the end of the 18th century. In the 16th and 17th centuries several mansions were erected, including Holland House, built by Sir Walter Cope, and enlarged by Inigo Jones; Campden House, erected by Baptist Hicks, Viscount Campden, and recently burnt; Hale House, once the residence of Oliver Cromwell; and Kensington Palace, originally the seat of the Finches, earls of Nottingham, but subsequently purchased by King William III., and converted into a royal palace. This building, which stands within the parish of St. Margaret, Westminster, is wanting in uniformity of design, consisting of three quadrangles of red brick, ornamented with quoins, columns, and cornices of stone. It contains an extensive suite of apartments, with staircase and ceilings by Kent, and a mantlepiece by Rysbrach. The pictures have been moved to Hampton Court, and the Duke of Sussex's library of rare bibles, &c., sold. This palace is surrounded by beautifully laid out grounds, by Wise, Bridgman, and Kent, with a flower garden by Loudon, together comprising more than 3 miles in circuit, which are now thrown open to the public on certain conditions. In this palace lived and died Queen Mary, Queen Anne, and her husband, Prince George of Denmark, George II., and his queen, Caroline, who contributed to improve it, and the Duke of Sussex, whose niece, Queen Victoria, was born in it in 1819. The other mansions are, Kensington House, once the seat of the Duke of Portsmouth, but afterwards a school; Kensington Gore, formerly the residence of Wilberforce, situated opposite the site of the Great Exhibition building of 1851; and Villa Maria, the residence of Canning. The older part of Kensington consists of several ranges of well-built houses, stretching for a considerable distance along the Great Western road, with numerous streets branching off from the main road to the N. and S. The newer portion includes Kensington-square, St. Mary Abbot's-terrace, Warwick-square, Addison-road, Notting-hill, Kensington Gravel Pits, and the ranges of building adjoining the Horticultural Societies' Gardens and the South Kensington Museum. Some portion of the parish is still in nursery and market gardens, but the greater portion is built over. It contains the station of the T division of the metropolitan police, a savings-bank, West Middlesex water-works, situated at Kensington Gravel Pits, the London and Westminster cemetery, three lunatic asylums, and union poorhouse. There are several mineral springs, and amongst the red gravel yellow amber has been found. Detachments of the foot guards and of the Lancers are stationed here in barracks. The Paddington and Kensington canals, and the West London and Great Western railways traverse the northern part of the parish, the last passing through a slightly curved tunnel of 320 yards in length. In Kensington Gardens is a large sheet of water called the Basin.—The illustrious Sir Isaac Newton resided here for some years, and died in a house at Pitt's Buildings. Many other men of eminence, as Addison, Charles Fox, Sir P. Perceval, and Lord Chancellor Camden, were residents.—The living is a vic.* united with the cur. of Christ Church and St. Paul's Temporary Church, in the dioc. of London, val. £1,242, in the patron. of the bishop. The mother church of St. Mary, or St. Mary Abbot, formerly belonged to Abingdon Abbey. It contains tombs of the Riches, Dr. Jortin, Goodall, the physician, the Countess of Warwick, wife of the poet Addison, Dean Hodges, Lord Molesworth, the Ponsonbys, and George, son of the statesman Canning, with some lines by him as an epitaph on his son. In addition to the parish church, there are ten district churches — St. Barnabas, Addison-road; St. Philip's, Earl's Court; St. John's, Notting-hill; St. Peter's, Notting-hill; All Saints', Notting-hill; St. James's, Norland; St. Andrew's, Norland; Holy Trinity, Brompton; St. Mary's, West Brompton; and St. Paul's, Onslow-square, the livings of all which are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £300 to £639. There is also a chapel-of-ease at Brompton, and places of worship belonging to the Roman Catholics and several of the denominations of Protestant Dissenters. The parochial charities produce £577 per annum, of which a part was left by Oliver Cromwell, besides £18, the endowment of Methwold's almshouses. There are two proprietary schools, Pemble's school, built by Vanbrugh, and several National, infant, and other schools, besides charitable institutions of all kinds for relief of the sick and poor. Kensington is a Poor-law Union and head of a superintendent registry, but belongs to Brompton New County Court district.

KENSTONE, a tnshp. in the par. of Hodnet, co. Salop, 5 miles E. of Wem.

KENSWICK, an ext. par. place in the lower div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 4 miles N.W. of Worcester. Here was formerly a chapel dedicated to St. John the Baptist.

KENSWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Dacorum, co. Herts, 4 miles S. of Dunstable, its post town and railway station, 1 N.W. of Markyate Street, and 5 W. of Luton. It is situated under Kensworth Hill, which is 904 feet in height, and was given by Edward the Confessor to St. Paul's Cathedral. The land is chiefly arable, and the soil loamy, alternating with a strong red clay and marl. The tithes were commuted for land and corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1798. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £180, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with embattled tower containing five bells. The church has been lately restored. The doorway within the tower has capitals representing birds and human heads, and the capitals of the western pillars exhibit the fable of the wolf and the crane on one side, and that of the eagle and the hare on the other. The charities produce about £18 per annum, which goes to the support of poor widows and a school. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans, also a day and Sunday schools.

KENT, a maritime co. at the south-eastern extremity of England, bounded on the N. by the estuary of the Thames and the German Ocean, on the E. by the German Ocean and the Straits of Dover, on the S. by Sussex, from which it is partly separated by the rivers Rother and Tees, and on the W. by Surrey. Its extreme length, from Deptford to the North Foreland, is about 63 miles, and its extreme breadth, from the North Foreland to Dungeness Point, about 43 miles. It is 170 miles in circuit. Its area, including the city and county of Canterbury, is 1,039,419 statute acres. Its population in 1861 was 733,887 (369,129 males and 364,758 females), having increased since 1851, when it was 615,766, by 66,413, or at the rate of 19 per cent. during the decennial period. The number of inhabited houses in 1861 was 126,221, and of uninhabited, 5,247.—Kent, from the numerous important events which have taken place within its limits, is one of the most interesting counties in England. It was on the Kentish coast that Julius Cæsar landed on the occasions of his two invasions of England, and it was in a great measure owing to the determined resistance offered to him by the men of Kent that he was prevented from obtaining a permanent footing in the island. At this period the inhabitants of Kent, from their more frequent intercourse with the Continent consequent on their close proximity to Gaul, were in a more advanced state of civilisation than those of the more inland parts of the island. In the reign of Claudius, Kent was brought under the Roman sway, and in that of Constantine, was included in the division Britannia Prima. It was called by the Romans Cantium, and still retains many traces of their continued occupation, in the ancient roads, bridges, forts, camps, &c., scattered over all parts of the county. On the departure of the Romans from Britain, it would seem to have been the theatre of a protracted civil war, and in 450 to have been overrun by the Jutes and Saxons, who, according to tradition, had been invited over by Vortigern to repel the attacks of the Picts and Scots. Five years later these hardy Northmen, under the command of their leader Hengist, subjugated the whole of the county, and laid the foundation of the Anglo-Saxon supremacy in England. Of the successors of Hengist, Ethelbert is the most worthy of notice. He invaded the territory of Ceawlin, king of Wessex, about the year 568, and suffered a severe defeat. In 589, he was elected Bretwalda, which dignity he enjoyed until his death in 616. During his reign Christianity was introduced among the Saxons in England by St. Augustine, and Ethelbert was one of his earliest converts. Augustine built a church (the precursor of the present cathedral) adjoining the royal palace, at Canterbury. This city then became and has since continued the ecclesiastical metropolis of England. Under the successors of Ethelbert, the crown of Kent lost the supremacy which it had obtained during the reign of that king. In the reign of Lothar, Ethelred, king of Mercia, invaded the county and destroyed Rochester; and, during the same reign, in 686 and 687, Kent was again invaded by Ceadwalla, king of Wessex. For about half a century previous to the consolidation of the various parts of England into one kingdom, by Egbert, Kent was under the supremacy of the kings of Mercia. Baldrid, the last sole king of Kent, was driven from his throne by Egbert, king of Wessex, about the year 823. From this period Kent was for some time governed by dukes and earls, and afterwards by sheriffs. In 832 the Danes made their first attack upon the coast of this county. During the reign of Ethelwulf their attacks became frequent: in one of these they were met and defeated at Sandwich by Athelstan, brother of Ethelwulf, and at that time governor of Kent. During the successive reigns of Ethelbert, Ethelred, and Alfred, the Danes still continued to infest this county. In the reign of Ethelred, surnamed the Unready, the Danes renewed their ravages with great fury, on most occasions exacting large sums of money as the price of their retreat. In one of their attacks they obtained possession by treachery of Canterbury, burned the city, and murdered the archbishop. In the brief contest between Canute and Edmund Ironsides, a great battle was fought at Otford, in this county, which resulted in favour of Edmund. During the reign of Edward the Confessor Kent was included in the earldom of Godwin. Kent was called by the Saxons Cantwaraland. At the battle of Hastings the men of Kent formed the van of the Anglo-Saxon army, it being their privilege to occupy that post. After the battle William the Conqueror marched to Dover, took possession of the castle, and hanged the governor; he then proceeded by Watling Street to London, conciliating the men of Kent on his way by granting them a continuance of their ancient privileges. In the reign of William Rufus, Odo Bishop of Bayeux raised this county in favour of Robert Duke of Normandy. When John was threatened with an invasion by Philip II. of France, he resigned his crown to Pandulph, the pope's legate, at Dover. Louis, the Dauphin of France, coming to the assistance of the barons, landed in the Isle of Thanet in 1216. He took Rochester, and reduced the greater part of the county to submission, but failed to obtain possession of Dover Castle, which was defended by Hubert de Burgh. In 1381 Wat Tyler's rebellion broke out in Kent. The insurgents attacked the Archbishop of Canterbury's house at Maidstone, and released John Balle, a follower of Wickliffe. In 1450 the insurrection headed by Jack Cade, broke out in this county. In the wars of the Roses, Kent was the scene of several contests. In 1554 Sir Thomas Wyatt's rebellion had its origin in Kent. In the civil war between Charles I. and the parliament, a battle was fought at Maidstone in 1648, in which the latter was victorious.—Kent has a great extent of coast. That portion of it on the northern side which bounds the estuaries of the Thames and the Medway, and that part of the county which is included between those two rivers, consist of marshland. Eastward of the Medway lies the Isle of Sheppey, separated from the mainland by the Swale, an arm of the estuary of the Medway, and containing the royal dockyard of Sheerness, and the decayed borough of Greenborough. The island is 10 miles in length, and 5 in breadth, and contains about 33 square miles. The coast on the northern side of the Isle of Sheppey is precipitous—the cliffs, which decay very rapidly, rising to a height of from 60 to 80 feet. The southern part of the island is a low flat. The isles of Harty and Elmley form subordinate portions of the Isle of Sheppey, with the exception of Harty Isle, which is included in the hundred of Faversham. The Isle of Sheppey constitutes a separate liberty. The coast between the Isle of Sheppey and the Isle of Thanet, with few interruptions, as at Herne Bay and Reculver, rises in clayey cliffs. The Isle of Thanet, containing the celebrated watering-places of Ramsgate, Margate, and Broadstairs, occupies the north-eastern corner of the county. E. of Margate is the North Foreland, where is a lighthouse. The coast of Thanet rises in chalk cliffs. From the Isle of Thanet to Walmer Castle the coast is low; at the latter point the cliffs recommence, continuing round the South Foreland to Folkestone, whence the coast gradually declines until it forms the extensive tract known as the Romney Marsh. Off the coast, between Thanet and the South Foreland, are the Goodwin Sands, between which and the mainland is the well-known roadstead of the Downs. The Goodwin Sands, supposed to be the remains of an island called Lomea, belonging to Earl Godwin, which was submerged in 1097, are about 10 miles in length, and from 3 to 4 miles in breadth, and are traversed by a channel navigable for small vessels, called the "Swashway." Between the north-western extremity of the Goodwin Sands and the shore is another sandbank, about 5 miles in length, called the Brake. The Downs are about 8 miles long and 6 wide. To the N. of and contiguous to the above are the Small Downs, which are sheltered by the Brake, as the Downs are by the Goodwin Sands. Off Margate are the Margate Sands, between which and the mainland are Margate Roads.—Kent is a hilly county. The chalk range of the North Downs enters the county near Westerham, and runs eastward. The principal hills in this range are Hollingbourn Hill, 616 feet high, between the Medway and the Stour; Paddlesworth Hill, 642 feet high, near Folkestone; Folkestone Hill, 575 feet high; and Dover Castle Hill, 400 feet high. The width of the chalk formation varies from 3 to 6 miles. The district lying between the chalk formation and the estuary of the Thames is occupied partly by plastic clay, and partly by London clay. The land between the estuaries of the Thames and the Medway, the Isle of Grain, and the Isle of Sheppey, belongs to the latter formation. Shooter's Hill, 446 feet high, is an insulated mass of London clay. S. of the North Downs, and skirting the chalk, is a strip of marl and green sand, from 2 to 7 miles in width: the greensand contains limestone, which is quarried near Maidstone, and is used for the purposes of roadmaking, building, and limemaking. A considerable quantity is exported to the West Indies, where it is used for refining sugar. The southern slope of this formation, the most elevated points of which rise to a height of from 600 to 800 feet, is called the "Ragstone Range" of hills. The next parallel belt through the middle of the county is the Weald clay, forming the nucleus of the district of the Weald of the S.E. of England. The Weald was formerly an immense forest, frequented only by deer and hogs. The Weald clay is succeeded by the ironsand, which, down to the end of the 17th century, was in great request; but the substitution of coal for billetwood has caused the manufacture of iron to be transferred to other parts of the country, where fuel and iron-ore are more abundant.—Kent has numerous rivers. The northern boundary of the county is formed by the Thames, which affords a grand channel of communication between that side of the county, the metropolis, and other parts. The Ravensbourne rises on Keston Common, and flows northward, past Bromley and Lewisham, into the Thames near Deptford. It supplies Deptford and Greenwich with water, and turns several mills. Its length is 10 miles. The Darent, or Dart, rises in Squerries Park, near Westerham, and runs parallel to the North Downs as far as River Head, near Sevenoaks, where it turns to the N., and flows through a pass in the Downs by Otford, Shoreham, Farningham, and Sutton to Dartford, and, after receiving the Cray, falls into the Thames. The Cray, famous for trout, rises near Orpington. The Medway rises on the northern border of Sussex, between East Grinstead and Crawley, and flows eastward, entering Kent near Ashurst; at Penshurst it receives the Eden; thence it flows by Tunbridge to Yalding, where it receives the Tees and the Beult. The Tees rises in Sussex, and flows by Lamberhurst. The Beult rises in the Weald, near Shadoxhurst, and flows north-westward to Yalding. From Yalding the Medway flows northward past Maidstone, Aylesford, Rochester, Strood, and Chatham, and falls into the Thames at Sheerness. The length of the course of the Medway is 60 miles, 40 of which are navigable. The tide flows up to Maidstone Bridge. The Stour has two branches, the Greater and the Lesser Stour. The Greater Stour rises near Lenham, flows to Ashford, where it is joined by another stream; thence it proceeds north-eastward by Canterbury to Sarre, where it divides into two branches, one of which falls into the Thames near Reculver, and the other into Pegwell Bay, below Sandwich: these two branches separate Thanet from the mainland. The Lesser Stour rises near Lyminge, flows past Elham and Burham, where it sometimes becomes dry, and flows into that arm of the Greater Stour which falls into Pegwell Bay. The channel which is formed by the Stour, and was formerly called Wantsume Channel, was anciently 3 or 4 miles wide. Both the Greater and the Lesser Stour contain excellent trout. The Rother rises in Sussex, and after forming the boundary of Kent, re-enters the former county, and finally falls into the sea at New Romney. In the reign of Edward I. this river forsook its ancient channel, and formed a new one by Rye and Winchelsea. The principal canal in the county is the Royal Military canal, which runs along the borders of Romney Marsh, from Hythe to the Rother.—The climate of Kent is mild and genial. The soil consists of gravel, chalk, and clay, and the alluvial soils along the Thames and Medway, and in Romney Marsh, which are very rich. In the chalk district are extensive sheep-downs. The soil of the Isle of Thanet, by a skilful application of manure, has been rendered very productive. The principal crops raised are wheat, oats, barley, rye, and canary and radish seed. Large quantities of hops are produced, about 50,000 acres being planted annually. Fruit and vegetables are very abundant—of the former the principal are apples, pears, plums, filberts, &c.; and of the latter, peas, asparagus, &c.: these are generally sent to the London markets. Kent is well wooded, producing much oak, beech, hop-poles, and billet-wood.—The principal manufactures of Kent are paper, ribbons, calico, linen, woollen cloths, bricks, tiles, pottery, cement, lime, and gunpowder. The county contains many mineral springs, the most remarkable being those of Tunbridge Wells and neighbourhood.—Kent is divided into 5 lathes, which are as follows:—Sutton-at-Hone lathe, comprising the western extremity of the county, and including 10 hundreds; Aylesford lathe, on the western side, coterminous with Sutton-at-Hone lathe, including 15 hundreds; Scray lathe, on the western side, coterminous with Aylesford lathe, including 14 hundreds; St. Augustine's lathe, comprising the north-eastern part of the county, and containing 14 hundreds; Shepway lathe, comprising the south-eastern part, and including 19 hundreds. Kent is partly in the diocese of Canterbury, partly in that of London, and partly in that of Rochester. That portion of the county which is in the diocese of Rochester constitutes the archdeaconry of Rochester.—The county is under the jurisdiction of a lord-lieutenant and sheriff: several parts, however, have their separate liberties—viz. the county of the city of Canterbury, the city of Rochester, the borough of Maidstone, the liberty of Romney Marsh, comprehending the hundreds of Langport, St. Martin, Poutney, and Worth, and part of those of Newchurch, Alvesbridge, and Street, and of the barony of Bircholt, under the jurisdiction of bailiffs and jurats, and the liberty of the Cinque Ports. For political purposes Kent is divided into two parts—East Kent and West Kent, each division returning two members; besides these, Canterbury, Rochester, the Cinque Ports of Dover and Sandwich, and the boroughs of Greenwich and Maidstone, return two each, and the Cinque Port of Hythe and the borough of Chatham return one each. The greater part of Kent is in the Home Circuit; that portion of it lying within 10 miles radius of London is (in criminal matters) in the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court. The assizes for the county are held at Maidstone. The county is divided by the Poor-law Commissioners into 27 unions: the management of the poor of the city of Canterbury, however, is under a local act.—The most remarkable antiquities in the county are Roman camps at Ospringe, Barham, Trenworth, Bonning, and Folkestone, besides which are tumuli at Woodnesborough, Shottington, Liminge, Chartham, Shebbertswold, Sutton Valence, Julaber's Grave. At Addington are the remains of a Druid circle. The principal Roman road through the county was Watling Street, running from Canterbury to London. Of monastic remains the most important are St. Augustine's, at Canterbury, Lesnes, Faversham, Reculver, Malling, West Langdon, and Bradsole. There are remains of priories at Aylesford, Horton, Folkestone, Bliston, and

Dover, and of a nunnery at Minster and preceptory at Swingfield.—Kent is intersected in all directions by railroads, the chief of which belong to the London, Chatham, and Dover railway company, and the South-Eastern railway company. The London, Chatham, and Dover railway has its termini at London Bridge, Victoria Station, Pimlico, and Blackfriars; it passes by Bromley, Beckley, Rochester, and Chatham (whence is a branch to Sheerness), Faversham (whence is a branch to Whitstable and Herne Bay, and another to Sevenoaks), Canterbury, and Dover; several other lines are now in course of construction in connection with this railway in various parts of the county. The South-Eastern railway has its London termini at London Bridge and Charing Cross; the main line runs eastward through the middle of the county; diverging from the Brighton line at Reigate, it enters Kent near Edenbridge, whence it proceeds by Tunbridge (whence is a branch by Tunbridge Wells and St. Leonard's), Paddockwood (whence is a branch to Maidstone), Ashford (whence is a branch N. to Canterbury, Whitstable, Ramsgate, Margate, and Deal, and S. to Rye and Hastings), Folkestone, to Dover.—The county is traversed by three main roads; the Dover road runs by Dartford, Gravesend, Rochester, Sittingbourne, and Canterbury, to Dover; its length is 71 miles. The Hythe road runs by Maidstone and Ashford to Hythe; its length is 65 miles. The Hastings road runs by Bromley, Sevenoaks, and Tunbridge.—The principal seats of the nobility and gentry in the county are—Bayham Abbey and Winderness Park, Marquis of Camden; Bifrons, Marquis of Conyngham; Montreal, Earl Amherst; Chevening Place, Earl Stanhope; Belmont, Lord Harris; Blackheath, Earl Dartmouth; The Mote, Earl of Romney; Cobham Hall, Earl of Darnley; Eastwell, Lord Winchilsea; South Park, Viscount Hardinge; Knole Park, Dowager Countess Amherst; Birling Manor, Hon. and Rev. Earl of Abergavenny; Chart Lodge, Lord Monson; Cliff House, Ramsgate, Dowager Lady Curtis; Godmersham Park, Lord St. Vincent; Holwood House, Lord Cranworth; Lees Court, Lord Sondes; Lenniker, Lord Kingsdown; Linchfield House, Dowager Lady Hampson; Linton Park, Lady Julia Cornwallis; Mereworth Castle, Viscount Falmouth; Penshurst Castle, Lord de L'Isle; Scott's Hall, Dowager Lady Knatchbull; Sissinghurst Park, Lady de Spaen; Smiths Hall, Dowager Lady Fitzherbert; Southwood House, Ramsgate, Dowager Countess Ashburnham; Torre Hill, Lord Kingsdown; Waldershare Park, Lady North; Belvedere House, Eardley, Bart.; Burrswood, Stirling, Bart.; Charlton House, Wilson, Bart.; Collingwood House, Sir John Herschel, Bart.; Crofton Hall, Sir R. M. Bromley, K.C.B.; East Cliff Lodge, Ramsgate, Sir Moses Montefiore; East Sutton Place, Filmer, Bart.; Evington, Honeywood, Bart.; Finchden, Lady Chatterton; Forest Hill, Lady Legge; Goodnestone Park, Bridges, Bart.; Great Bounds, Hardinge, Bart.; Hatch, Knatchbull, Bart.; High Elms, Lubbock, Bart.; Hothfield Park, Tufton, Bart.; Kennards, Shaw, Bart.; Leybourne, Hawley, Bart.; Lullingstone Castle, Dyke, Bart.; Oxenoth, Geary, Bart.; The Palace, Maidstone, Lady F. Riddell; Thurnham Court, Hampson, Bart.; Bedgebury, Beresford-Hope, Esq.; Broomhill, Alderman D. Salomons, M.P.; Gads Hill Place, Charles Dickens, Esq.; Langton House, O.W. H. Hamilton, Esq., besides numerous other seats of private gentry.

KENT, a river rising under Kent Fell, co. Westmoreland. It receives the waters of the Sprit and Mint, in its course of about 20 miles, and falls into Morecambe Bay.

KENTCHURCH, a par. in the hund. of Webtree, co. Hereford, 13 miles S.W. of Hereford, its post town, 14 W. of Ross, and 2 S.E. of Pontrilas railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Monnow. The land is chiefly arable, and the soil various. The railway crosses the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £348 1*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £246, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing five bells. In the interior are several monuments, one of which is to the Scudamore family. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There is a free school, endowed with £16 per annum, for both sexes. Kentchurch Court, the principal residence, is situated in a park abounding with deer, and is the seat of Colonel Scudamore, in whose family it has remained many centuries. The above gentleman is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

KENTFORD, a par. in the hund. of Risbridge, co. Suffolk, 4½ miles N.E. of Newmarket, and 1 from the Kennett railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Kennett, from which it derives its name. The road from Bury St. Edmund's passes through the parish, and a little to the E. may be traced the old Roman way Needham Street. The parish is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £172 10*s*. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £172, in the patron. of Trinity Hall, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small ancient structure, with tower containing three bells. The register is of ancient date, but is much mutilated. There is a day school, also a few charities. The Rev. William Godfrey is lord of the manor.

KENTISBEARE, a par. in the hund. of Hayridge, co. Devon, 8½ miles S.E. of Honiton, 9 N.E. of Tiverton, and 3 E. of Cullompton, its railway station and post town. It is situated near the Great Western railway and river Culme. The soil is sandy. The village is considerable. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £409 10*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £486. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a tower. In the interior is a screen and rood-loft, also several monuments and the brass of a man in armour. The parochial charities produce about £33 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The trustees of the late Earl of Egremont are lords of the manor.

KENTISBURY, a par. in the hund. of Braunton, co. Devon, 9 miles N.E. of Barnstable, its post town, and 3 S.E. of Combartin. It is a small irregular village, and wholly agricultural. There are numerous quarries of rough stone, and about 400 acres of common land. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £260. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £259. The church is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce £5 per annum, which goes to the support of Jones's free school.

KENTISFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Marnhull, co. Dorset, 3 miles N. of Sturminster.

KENTISH-KNOCK, a sandbank off the coast of Kent, near the estuary of the Thames, and outside the Long Sand, in N. lat. 51° 41′, and E. long. 1° 39′. A revolving light was put up on these sands in 1840, which is visible for about 10 miles.

KENTISH-TOWN, a suburban district and hmlt. of the par. of St. Pancras and borough of Marylebone, co. Middlesex, 3 miles N.W. of St. Paul's. It is a station on the Kew section of the North London railway. It was anciently called Kentistonne, and now constitutes the prebend of Kauntelow or Cantelows, in St. Paul's Cathedral. The greater part of the land is held under lease by the Marquis Camden through the Jeffreys. The town consists chiefly of a line of buildings extending along the road from Camden Town to Highgate Rise, and several good streets recently formed. To the S. passes the Paddington canal, on the banks of which are coal wharves, &c., also both sections of the North London railway. It contains the Governesses' Benevolent Institution, built by Wyatt in 1849, assembly rooms, police station, casino, and a brewery. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of London, val. £300, in the patron. of the Vicar of St. Pancras. The church is a modern building, with two pointed towers. There is another church recently built, dedicated to the Holy Trinity; also places of worship for Independents, Wesleyans, &c. There are National, British, and other schools.

KENTMERE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 9 miles N.W. of Kendal. It is situated on the river Kent, which has its source a little to the northward of the chapelry. It consists of a narrow vale, surrounded by lofty hills. Here was once a mere, or lake, formed by the river Kent, about a mile in length, from which the township took its name, but it is now drained and cultivated. Slate and limestone are quarried. There are several mills on the river, and a large reservoir has been made for the supply of water in dry weather. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £70. The chapel-of-ease is an ancient edifice, endowed by Queen Anne's bounty. Kentmere Tower was the birthplace of Bernard Gilpin, the Apostle of the North. This venerable pile, now a farmhouse, consists of a lofty quadrangular tower, four stories in height, built of rude ragstone. Over the summit of Hillbell, which rises to the height of 2,700 feet above the sea, are traces of a Roman road.

KENTON, a par. in the hund. of Exminster, co. Devon, 8 miles S.E. of Exeter, its post town, 5 N. of Dawlish, and 1½ from the Starcross railway station. It is situated at the junction of the rivers Ken and Exe, and contains the vils. of Cofton and Starcross. It was formerly held by the Heles, Hungerfords, Monk, Duke of Albemarle, &c., and subsequently passed to the Courtenays of Bordenham. It was once a borough and market town, and is still a populous village, extending along the road from Exeter to Dawlish. About two-thirds of the land is arable, the remainder pasture. The surface is hilly, and the soil rather light. Courts leet and baron are held annually by the lord of the manor. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £265, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury. The parish church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient red-stone structure, with a pinnacled lofty tower containing six bells. In the interior are a carved pulpit and screen. In addition to the parish church there is a district church at Starcross, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £210, also a district church at Cofton, the living of which is a cur. The tithes have been commuted. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. The Wesleyans have places of worship. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Earl of Devon is lord of the manor.

KENTON, a par. in the hund. of Loes, co. Suffolk, 2 miles N.E. of Debenham. Stonham is its post town. The village is small, and the inhabitants chiefly employed in agriculture. The surface is high tableland, and the soil clay alternated with sand and loam. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £147 4*s.* 8*d., and the vicarial for £148. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £137. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice, with a square embattled tower. It contains an ancient mural plate of the Garney family, with an inscription bearing date 1524. The charities produce £38 per annum, £25 of which is for the repair of the church, the remainder for the benefit of the poor of this parish and that of Debenham. Kenton Hall is the principal residence.

KENTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Harrow-on-the-Hill, co. Middlesex, 2 miles N.E. of Harrow.

KENTON, EAST and WEST, tnshps. in the par. of Gosforth, W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 3 miles N.W. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. It contains the hmlts. of Bank Top and Blacklaw. There is an endowed National school for both sexes.

KENTSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Lower Duleek, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Slane. It is situated on the road from Dublin to Londonderry. Navan is its post town. The surface consists of a good soil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with two others, £307, in the patron. of Lord Dunsany and the crown, alternately. The church was erected about a century ago. The steeple was added in 1797, at the expense of Sir James Somerville. The parish forms part of the Roman Catholic district of Blacklyon. A girls' school was founded by Lady Maria Somerville, and there is a hedge school in the parish.

KENWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellesmere, co. Salop, 3 miles S.E. of Ellesmere. It is united with Stockett and Whettall.

KENWICKS PARK and KENWICKS WOOD, tnshps. in the par. of Ellesmere, co. Salop, 4 miles S. of Ellesmere.

KENWITH CASTLE, an ancient camp in the hund. of Shebbear, co. Devon, 1 mile W. of Bideford. It is asserted by tradition to be the spot whence the Saxon Earl of Devon sallied out and defeated the Danes under Hubba, who was buried at Hubblestone.

KENWYN, a par. in the W. div. of the hund. of Powder, co. Cornwall, 1 mile from the Newham railway station, and 1 N.W. of Truro, its post town. The par., which is extensive, includes part of the municipal and parliamentary borough of Truro, with the tnshps. of Chacewater, Buldiu, and Tregavethan. It is intersected by the high road leading from Truro to St. Columb on one side, and by that from Truro to Redruth on the other. Baldher and Mithian, which are now formed into separate districts, were formerly parts of this parish. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the tin and copper mines, and in the Calenick and Cavedras smelting works. The land is chiefly arable. There are burrows on the Downs, also a well called St. Clare's. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £535, and the vicarial for £524 11*s.* The living is a vic.* annexed to that of St. Kea, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £793, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Cuby, is situated on an eminence, commanding an extensive view of the surrounding country; it has a tower containing a clock and eight bells. The chancel has a stained window. In addition to the parish church there are four district churches—viz. St. John's, St. George's, Baldhu, and Chacewater; the livings of all which are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £150 to £200. The register dates from 1613. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans have places of worship here.

KENYON, a tnshp. in the par. of Winwick, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 9 miles N. of Warrington, and 2 S.E. of Newton-in-Mackerfield. It is a station on the Manchester and Liverpool railway, which here effects a junction with the Bolton and Leigh and the Kenyon and Leigh lines. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of bricks. It gives the title of baron to Lord Kenyon, of Peel Hall.

KEPP, a vil. in the par. of Kippen, co. Perth, Scotland, 7 miles S. of Callander.

KEPPOCH, a demesne in co. Inverness, Scotland, 10 miles N.E. of Fort William. It is situated on the banks of the Spean, and belonged to the Macdonalds, who here defeated Macintosh of Glenspean.

KEPWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Over Silton, wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 8 miles N.E. of Thirsk, its railway station. It is a meet for the Sinnington hounds. The village is small, and chiefly agricultural. There are extensive quarries of freestone and limestone, also lime-kilns.

KERARA, an island in the par. of Kilbride, district of Lorn, co. Argyle, Scotland, about 4 miles from Mull, at which place there is a ferry station. It is about 3½ miles long by 2 broad. The surface consists chiefly of rocky hills. The bays of Ardintraive and Horseshoe form good harbours. Gylen Castle on the S. is, perhaps, the only attractive feature of the island, but the prospects from various points are remarkably fine. Alexander II. died here when about to invade the Western Isles.

KERDIFFSTOWN, an ancient par. in the bar. of North Naas, co. Kildare, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Naas. There is no village. The living is united with that of Kill. The church is in ruins.

KERDISTONE, a par. in the hund. of Eynsford, co. Norfolk, 6 miles S.W. of Aylsham, and 1½ mile N.W. of Keepham, its post town. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. annexed to the rect.* of Reepham, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

KERESLEY, a hmlt. in the par of St. Michael, county of the city of Coventry, co. Warwick, 2½ miles N.W. of Coventry, its post town. An Act for enclosing the waste lands was obtained in 1841. The village is considerable, but chiefly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The church has a tower containing five bells. It is dedicated to St. Thomas, and was erected in 1847. In 1852 a National school for both sexes was opened.

KERLOACH, one of the summits of the Grampians, in co. Kincardine, Scotland, near Strachan. It attains an height of 1,890 feet.

KERLOGNE, a par. in the bar. of Forth, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, part of the benefice of St. Patrick's, Wexford, which see.

KERMINCHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Swettenham, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 5 miles N.W. of Congleton. It is situated near the river Dane and Manchester railway. Kermincham Lodge is the principal residence.

KERNANSTOWN, an ancient par., now joined to Carlow, Ireland.

KERRIER, a hund. in the co. of Cornwall; contains the towns of Helston and Penryn, and the pars. of St. Anthony, Breage, Budock, Constantine, Cury, Falmouth, Germoe, St. Gluvias, Grade, Gunwalloe, Gwennap, St. Keverne, Landewednack, Mabe, Manaccan, St. Martin with Mawgan, Mawnan, Mullion, Mylor, Perran-Arworthal, Major and Minor Ruan, Stithney, St. Stithian's, and Wendron, comprising an area of 163,550 acres. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Cornwall, and dioc. of Exeter.

KERRY, a maritime co. of the prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is bounded by the mouth of the Shannon (which separates it from co. Clare) on the N., by cos. Limerick and Cork on the E., by co. Cork and the estuary of the Kenmare on the S., and by the ocean on the W. It lies between 51° 41′ and 52° 33′ N. lat., and 9° 7′ and 10° 30′ W. long. Its greatest length N. and S., from the Priest's Cap, on the Cork border, to Carrigfoyle, on the Shannon river, is a little short of 55 miles. Its greatest breadth E. and W., from Lisheen, co. Cork, to Dunmore Head, is 58 miles. The county extends over an area of 1,853 square miles, of which 414,614 acres are suitable for cultivation, 726,775 are uncultivated, 11,169 are in plantation, 807 are occupied by the sites of towns, &c., and 32,761 are under water, making in all an area of 1,186,126 acres. The coast line includes numerous indentations and inlets, and measures over 220 miles.—The name Kerry is said to be derived from Cair reeght, i.e. the "kingdom of Cair," who was a son of Fergus, King of Ulster. It was formerly part of the ancient kingdom of Desmond, governed by the MacCarthies. Raymond le Gros having joined Dermod MacCarthy in suppressing the rebellion of Cormac, his son, he received an extensive grant of land in the N. of the county, where Maurice, son of Raymond, settled in 1177, founded the family of Fitzmaurice, and gave name to the barony of Clanmaurice. In the close of the 13th century Thomas Fitzmaurice Fitzgerald was lord of Desmond. His sons were John, Earl of Kildare, and Maurice, Earl of Desmond. The estates of this family were forfeited by the rebellion of Gerald in the reign of Elizabeth. In 1641 the Irish took Tralee from the English, and held the county until they were routed in 1652 by Ludlow, when further confiscation took place. Among the new proprietors was Sir William Petty, who established the Kenmare iron works, which existed so long as the neighbouring supply of timber held out. The last rebellion gave cause for still further confiscation of lands, to the extent of 90,116 acres. The principal landowners are now the Marquis of Lansdowne, to whom it gives title of earl, Lord Kenmare, Lord Headley, Lord Ventry, and the Knight of Kerry.—In the northern portion of the county the surface is flat and open, and comprises the great bog district of the Cashen. The hill of Doon and Knockanore, with a few other low hills, alone diversify the contour of the surface in this district. The plain of Ardfert extends for about 16 square miles, passing Barra Head and Tralee Bay. To the E. of the district the Clanruddery mountains run for about 7½ miles N. and S. The Stacks range commences at Tralee Harbour, and extends northeasterly to the head waters of the river Feale. The principal summits of this range are Knockacur, Knockanadirive, Mount-Eagle-Loyal, Knocknagossy, Knockmanaghan, Knockfreaghan, Knockbrack, and Knockgnagh. From Castlemaine Harbour to the E., near the head waters of the Main and Brown Flesk, there stretches a very extensive plain of champaign country, embracing some of the most fertile parts of Kerry. Further to the S.W. the Slievemish mountains stretch away directly to the E. The principal summits of this range are Cahirconree and Bautregaun. The northern peninsulated district of the county is traversed throughout by a succession of alpine acclivities. The chief elevations are Ballyvalder, Cappaclough, Binsheehy, Binroe, Croskerdagh, Connor, and Sugarloaf. In the N. of the peninsula the Brandon attains the height of 3,126 feet. Passing over another extensive plain of level champaign country, of which Castle Island, Killarney, and the Paps, may be called the southern boundaries, we enter the great W. and S.W. highlands of the county, occupying the S. peninsular district. Some of the principal summits are Mangerton, in Glanerought, with the Devil's Punch-Bowl, and Glen of the Horse, Crohanne, Coombnie, Glenkeagh, and Caha mountains; in Dunkerrin, MacGillicuddy's Reeks, with Carn Tual, the highest peak in Ireland, Toomies, Glena-Purple, and Coomenagh; in Iveragh, Curragheen, Culleen, &c.—The coast, which is in general bold and cliff-bound, has two great indentations, the bays of Dingle and Tralee. In the N. is Tarbert Bay, with lighthouse, which has excellent harbourage. Ardmore Point and Bay next occur, near which are Crockeen Point and Carrigafoyle Island. Passing Beal Point and the caves of Ballybunian, we observe the mouth of the river Cashel, with its harbour. Rounding Kerry Head, Ballyheige Bay sweeps round with a curve, but is too open to offer safe anchorage. Here the coast assumes a change from bold cliff to low beach, with a continuous screen of upland, and thus continues as far as Brandon Bay. Tralee Bay and Harbour, with its canal to the town, and fishery pier, next occurs. It is well sheltered, and has from 2 to 3 fathoms of water, with Fenit Isle to the N. Brandon Bay offers good anchorage, and has a fishery pier. Brandon Head is its western extremity. From here to its termination the coast resumes, but on a grander scale, its former boldness of character. Smerwick Harbour indents the coast between Ballydavid and Dunourlin heads, and has good anchorage. Passing round the extremity of the peninsula of Corkaguiney, by Ferriter's Cove, the Blasquet islands, and Dunmore Head, we enter Dingle Bay, and follow its shores, taking in Ventry Harbour, Dingle Harbour, Castlemaine Haven (the head of the bay), and the estuary of the river Maine. Valentia Harbour, with lighthouse, is a channel separating the island of Valentia from the mainland, and has excellent and safe anchorage. Lamb Island lies in the N. entrance. Next to Dingle Bay are St. Finian's and Ballinaskelligs bays, with numerous small islands and headlands. Beyond these to the S. is the estuary of the Kenmare, or Kenmare Bay, which has the islands of Two Head, Rossmore, and Dunkerrin, and terminates at the town of Kenmare, which has a fishing harbour.—The rivers of Kerry are few and unimportant. The Cashen, whose head streams are the Geale, Feale, and Brick, flows in a north-westerly direction to the sea. The river Maine rises on both sides of Knockanadirive, and flows W.S.W. to Castlemaine. The Brown Flesk rises at Mount-Eagle-Loyal, and flows to the Maine. The Flesk rises in the co. Cork, and falls into the Lower Lake of Killarney. The Deanagh rises in the N. of Magonihy, and falls into Lower Lake Killarney. The Laune flows from that lake, and takes a N.W. course towards Castlemaine. Other streams are, the Carra, falling into the upper part of Dingle Bay; the Fertin, into Valentia Harbour; the Inny and Cunonara, into Ballinaskelligs Bay; Sneem, Blackwater, Finchy, and Roughty, into the Kenmare estuary; and the Sheen, falling into the head of Kenmare Bay. The lakes comprise the far-famed Lakes of Killarney [which see], Currane on the Iveragh coast, Derryana and Lannan on the Cununara, Ganvan, Gutane, the Devil's Punch-Bowl, and some other small pools. There are medicinal waters at Killarney, Iveragh, Valentia, Iraghticonnor, Ballybeg, Castlemaine, near Tralee, and Magherybeg.—The prevailing rocks in the mountain districts are red and grey conglomerates and sandstones, with superincumbent silicious flags. The valleys of the Feale, Main, and Roughty are the chief limestone districts. From Ardfert to Kerry Head argillaceous sandstone occurs, and further on, limestone, accompanied with alum and slate at Ballybunian. The great Munster coal district embraces a tract extending from Tralee towards the E. boundary. The iron mines of the county were formerly very considerable, Killarney being a great seat of smelting operations, but mining is now almost abandoned. Copper has been raised at Muckross and Ross Island, and lead ore is found at the Lower Lake of Killarney. Copper is also worked at Kenmare to some extent. A valuable slate for roofing is quarried at Valentia Island. Rottenstone is found at Bushfield, and various other clays and earths of commercial value. Castle Island produces Irish slate, or Lapis Hibernicus, "Kerry stones." A variety of hard crystals are found at Ballyheige and near Dingle. Amethysts are brought from Kerry Head, and other pretty though valueless crystals are found in the county.—The climate of Kerry is humid, and subject to storms along the coast; but inland, and in the neighbourhood of Killarney, it is warm, and vegetation most luxuriant. The soil in the S.W. has much bog, but is otherwise of rather a stiff loam consisting of decomposed clay slate. The southern districts have been greatly influenced by the agricultural improvements introduced upon Lord Headly's and the Marquis of Lansdowne's estates. In the N. the soil is stiff and clayey, and much of the land is in pasture. The soil of the midland districts is a rich loam, well adapted for grain crops and dairy farming. Of late years great progress has been made in the systems of agriculture; but the habitations of the poorer classes, who are in general Irish speaking, are still miserable huts. The large farmers are principally feeders for dairy produce, which is carried in large quantities to Tralee. Wheat, oats, barley, rye, peas, beans, potatoes, green crops, roots, flax, and clover, are also raised. The breeding of cows is particularly attended to. The native breed is small, but symmetrical, and easily fattened, and when kept for stock, are excellent milkers. The Kerry pony is small, and ill adapted for draught, while the horses of foreign breeds are light and active, but not powerful. Pigs and sheep are much mixed and crossed. The wild animals are not numerous. The gourder, or Irish ortelan, is said to be peculiar to the Blasquet islands. It is larger than a sparrow, web-footed, and is esteemed a great delicacy. Wild swans are sometimes seen in Corkaguiney. The mountains abound with grouse, eagles, hawks, pheasants, &c. Sea fowl are very plentiful along the coast. The arbutus, which grows naturally nowhere else in these latitudes, is found in the woods of Killarney and Bantry. The same may be said of the pinguicula, grandiflora, and numerous other indigenous plants, indicating the peculiar geniality of soil and climate. Oak, ash, and fir, form the principal plantations.—This county is divided into eight baronies, viz. Iraghticonner, N.E., Clanmaurice, N.W., Corkaguiney, W., Dunkerrin, S.S.W., Iveragh, S.W., Glanerought, S., Magunihy and Trughanacmy, midland. These baronies contain 87 parishes. The principal towns are, Tralee, the county town, Killarney, Dingle, Listowel, Cahirsiveen, Castleisland, Ardfert, Ballylongford, and Tarbert. The county is within the Munster circuit (the assizes being held at Tralee), and in the military district of Cork, of which the barrack station is at Tralee. There are 39 stations of constabulary, and coastguard stations at Ballyhigue, Dingle, Cahirsiveen, and West Cove. The county is governed by a lord-lieutenant, 19 deputies, and about 112 magistrates. It sends two members to parliament for the county, and one for the borough of Tralee. The constituency of the county in 1859 was 5,278, and of the borough 244: population in 1851, 238,239; in 1861, 201,800: net value of county property, £275,132. The Poor-law Unions are, Cahirsiveen, Dingle, Kenmare, Killarney, Listowel, and Tralee.—The trade of this county consists chiefly in the export of its farm produce, principally oats and butter. Woollens are manufactured for domestic use, and linen is woven at Dingle and its vicinity. The principal fishing stations are Dingle, Valentia, and Listowel. In 1850 there were 1,092 boats employed in the fisheries around the coast. The chief takes consist of turbot, cod, ling, hake, haddock, gurnet, pollock, plaice, soles, dorees, brill, mullet, mackerel, herrings, &c., also several varieties of shell fish, as oyster, crab, lobster, and scallops. Seals formerly resorted to the Kenmare estuary, but are now rarely seen. There are many objects of antiquarian interest, as the cyclopean fortresses of Cahirconree, Cahir-Donnel, and Staigue; the sepulchral monuments with Ogham inscriptions near Dingle; the stone cells at Kilmelchedor, Ventry, and Skellig; and the pillar towers at Lough Currane, Rattoo, and Ardfert, with a fragment of one at Aghadoe. There are vestiges of 13 different monastic buildings, of which the abbeys of Ardfert, O'Dorney, Derrynane, Lislaotin, and Mucross, are the most interesting; also of 30 feudal castles, and of ancient fortifications of every description, scattered over the county. The principal roads are from Tralee to Abbey O'Dorney, Ardfert, Lixna, Ballybunian, Listowel, Tarbert, Kilgoblin, Dingle, Dunmore Head, Castlemaine, Killorglin, Glinsk, Cahirsiveen, Valentia, and Killarney, from thence to Cork, Kenmare, Bantry, Castleisland, Limerick, and King Williamstown.

KERRY, a dioc. in the prov. of Munster, Ireland, comprising the co. of Kerry, and part of that of Cork. The Protestant diocese is co-extensive with the Roman Catholic, but is now called Ardfert and Aghadoe. In the Roman Catholic arrangement it is called Kerry, and contains 42 parishes. The bishop's parish is Killarney.

KERRY, a par. in the hund. and co. of Montgomery, 3 miles E. of Newtown, its post town. It is a station on the Kerry branch railway. The parish, which is extensive, is situated under the Kerry hills. It contains Trellan, Drevor, and 16 other tnshps. A small portion of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of flannel and baize, the remainder in agriculture and the rearing of cattle. It is a petty sessions town. The land is chiefly in pasture. The living is a vic.* with the curs. of Dolfor and Sarn annexed, in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £330, in the patron. of the Bishop of St. David's. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure. In the interior is an old font, also monuments of the Wilkinses, and one to Richard Jones, who founded a school here.

KERRY HEAD, a headland at the mouth of the river Shannon, co. Kerry, Ireland, 8 miles N.W. of Ardfert.

KERRYCROY, a vil. in the par. of Kingarth, Island of Bute, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Rothsay.

KERRYCURRIHY, a bar. in co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is bounded on the N. and E. by Cork harbour, on the S. by the Atlantic, and on the W. by the bars. of Kinsale and Kinnalea. It is 12 miles long by 6 broad. The surface is varied and picturesque. It contains the pars. of Barnahely, Kilmoney, Liscleary, Marmullane, Templebreedy, Monkstown, and parts of Ballinaboy, Killanully, Carrigaline, Kilpatrick; likewise the towns and vils. of Passage, Ballinassig, Loughbeg, Maulbaun, and Crosshaven.

KERSALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Kneesall, N. div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, co. Nottingham, 5 miles N. of Southwell, 5½ S.E. of Ollerton, and 6 W. of the Carlton railway station. Newark is its post town. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1778. There is a place of worship for the Primitive Methodists. The Duke of Newcastle is lord of the manor.

KERSALL, a hmlt. in the par. of Broughton, co. Lancaster 3 miles N.W. of Manchester.

KERSEY, a par. in the hund. of Cosford, co. Suffolk, 2 miles W. of Hadleigh, its post town and railway station, and 9 from Lavenham. Here are the remains of an Austin priory, which was founded at an early period, and at the Dissolution given by Edward VI. to King's College, Cambridge. This was formerly a considerable manufacturing place, but the population is now wholly agricultural. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £420. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £135, in the patron. of King's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, with a lofty tower containing six bells. The charities produce about £8 per annum, besides an almshouse.

KERSLEY, or KEARSLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Deane, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 5 miles S.E. of Great Bolton. The village is very considerable, and many of the inhabitants are engaged in the neighbouring factories and collieries. There are establishments for making vitriol and for spinning and bleaching yarn. There is an endowed school at High Style with an income of £300 per annum from land bequeathed by Henry Mather in 1757.

KERSWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Broadhembury, co. Devon, 4 miles N.W. of Honiton.

KERSWELL, ABBOT'S. See ABBOT'S KERSWELL, co. Devon.

KERSWELL, KING'S. See KINKERSWELL, co. Devon.

KESGRAVE, a par. in the hund. of Carlford, co. Suffolk, 3½ miles N.E. of Ipswich, its post town, and the same distance S.W. of Woodbridge. The land is chiefly arable, and partly laid out in hops. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a perpet. cur., annexed to that of Brightwell, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is a small brick building with a square tower. G. Tomline, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

KESH, a post-office vil. in the par. of Magheracul-money, bar. of Lurg, co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 14 miles N.N.W. of Enniskillen, and 118 from Dublin. It takes its name from the rivulet upon which it stands, and is the seat of a police station, and a dispensary within the Lowthertown Poor-law Union. The river Kesh rises near the borders of Tyrone, and falls into Lower Lough Erne.

KESH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Coolavin, co. Sligo, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Ballymote. It is situated near Lough Gara.

KESHCARRIGAN, a post-office vil. in the bar. of Leitrim, co. Leitrim, 4 miles S.E. of Drumshanbo.

KESHLIN, a lough 3 miles W. of the town of Monaghan, co. Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. In an adjacent bog an ancient habitation was discovered consisting of several chambers.

KESSINGLAND, a par. in the hund. of Mutford, co. Suffolk, 5 miles S. of Lowestoft, its post town and railway station, and 8 N.E. of Beccles. The village, which is considerable, was formerly a market town and a place of some importance. The North Sea, which bounds the parish on the E., is making great encroachments on the land, and has swept away some portion of the village, and the old town walls are embedded in the sand. There is a coastguard station, also a signal-station on the beech. The soil is clayey. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £405. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £428, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Edmund, is an ancient structure, with lofty square tower containing five bells. In the interior is an octagonal font, on the sides of which are carved the figures of St. Edmund and others. The living was for some time held by Whiston. The church, which formerly belonged to St. Clare's Nunnery, London, was rebuilt in 1694. The register commences in 1603. Near the church are remains of buildings called the Nunnery yard, but there is no record of any religious house. The charities produce about £70 per annum, a considerable portion of which was left for the repairs of the church. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a parochial school. John Morse, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KESSMOOR, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Grewellthorpe, par. of Kirkby-Malzeard, West Riding co. York, 7 miles N.W. of Ripon. It is situated near the river Ure.

KESSOCK, WESTER, a vil. and ferry station in the par. of Kilmuir, co. Inverness, Scotland, on Lough Beauly.

KESTEVEN, PARTS OF, a div. of co. Lincoln, contains the waps. of Aswardhurn, Aveland, Beltisloe, Boothby Graffo, Flaxwell, Langoe, Loveden, Ness, Winnibriggs; also the boroughs of Grantham and Stamford, and the market towns of Bourne, Corby, Folkingham, Market-Deeping, and Sleaford, comprising altogether about 445,550 acres. It constitutes with the parts of Holland the S. electoral division of Lincolnshire, returning two members to parliament for the county.

KESTON, a par. in the hund. of Ruxley, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 3 miles S. of Bromley, its post town and railway station on the Mid-Kent line, 2 N.W. of Down, and 13 from London. The village is situated on an eminence at the head of the river Ravensbourne. About half a mile E. of the parish is Holmwood Hill, the site of an extensive Roman camp, with earthen ramparts and ditches 2 miles in circumference, of which many parts are still remaining. It is supposed to have been the Roman station Noviomagus, and for its exploration a club has been formed designated the "Noviomagian Society of Antiquarians." Here is Holwood House, formerly the favourite residence of William Pitt, and now the seat of Lord Cranworth. Many implements of war have been found here, with Roman coins, &c. The remains of a temple 30 feet in circumference, the walls being composed of flint and stone, were discovered at Lower Warbank, on Blackness farm, in 1828, and in 1854 the remains of a Roman villa. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £235, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is a small structure. There is a National school; also places of worship for Wesleyans and Independents. Holwood House, Keston House, and Forest Hill, are the principal residences. Colonel Cater Lennard is lord of the manor.

KESWICK, a market town in the par. of Crosthwaite, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 13 miles S.E. of Cockermouth, 18 S.W. of Penrith, and 22 from Wigton. It is situated in the Vale of Derwentwater, on the river Greta, and is regarded as the capital of the Lake district. The township is included in the manor of Derwentwater, which formerly belonged to the Earl of Derwentwater, but was forfeited by him, and passed into the hands of the Governors of Greenwich Hospital. The manor with the lands was purchased by the late John Marshall, Esq. The town is very ancient and well built, the houses being chiefly of stone. It has a market, originally granted to it by charter of Edward I., and is governed by a local board of health. It is well paved, lighted with gas, and plentifully supplied with water, the latter from the celebrated mountain of Skiddaw, which crowns the lofty range of mountains that bounds the northern extremity of the vale. Petty sessions are held weekly, and the board of guardians meet fortnightly. County courts are held once a month. It is a polling place for the western division of the county. There are several good inns and first-class lodging houses for the accommodation of the numerous parties that make the town the principal station in their tour of the Lakes. The inhabitants are principally employed in the coarse woollen, hardware, and blacklead pencil manufactories. Brewing and tanning are also carried on. It contains a townhall, market house, in which there is a very ancient seal, formerly belonging to the Ratcliffe family, a public library and lecture hall, mechanics' institute, bank, savings-bank, and a museum, in which is stored a vast quantity of minerals and curiosities. In the townhall is exhibited a model of the mountains, valleys, lakes, rivers, tarns, &c., for many miles round. A court-baron is held on the 22nd of May. The living is a perpet. cur.*

in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £220, in the patron. of two trustees. There are two churches for the town—the old parish church of Crosthwaite, and that of St. John. The former is at a short distance to the N. of the town; the latter, dedicated to St. John, is situated at the southern extremity of the town, and was erected in 1839, including the parsonage house, at an expense of over £12,000, defrayed by the late John Marshall, Esq., M.P. for Leeds, and since endowed by his representatives. It has an embattled tower surmounted by a spire. There are chapels for Wesleyans and Independents. There is a free grammar school endowed with £100 per annum, and open to all the children of the parish. There are also day and Sunday schools. Lord Chief Justice Banks, whose wife so valiantly defended Corfe Castle, was a native of this place; and Southey, the poet, and Green, the painter, were residents. Within less than a mile of the town, and separated from it by rising ground, is Lake Derwentwater, nearly 3½ miles in length, by 1½ mile in breadth, remarkable for the transparency of its waters. On the lake are several islands, of the richest verdure, mostly covered with luxuriant foliage; also an island called the Floating Island, which occasionally rises from the bottom, but constantly adhering to the earth beneath, never changes its position; this last is covered with reeds and rushes, interspersed with a variety of aquatic plants. To the S. of the lake is the valley of Borrowdale; and near the south-eastern extremity are the falls of Lowdore, with the terrific crags of Gowder and Shepherd's, in the fissures of which are found almost every variety of forest trees, plants, and flowers, growing with wild luxuriance. Within this concave range of rugged cliffs is a powerful echo, so numerous in its reverberations that the discharge of a single cannon in this situation produces the effect of a park of artillery, the successive reverberations continuing with diminished force until they gradually die away. Among the many interesting places in the neighbourhood are the mountains of Skiddaw, 3,022 feet; Saddleback, 2,787 feet; and Helvellyn, 3,057 feet; Ullswater, Thirlemere, Borrowdale Fells, Buttermere, and the Vale of Newlands. Copper, garnets, and other stones are found in the mountains. At Castle Rigg is a Druidical circle of forty stones, some upwards of eight feet high. R. D. Marshall, Esq., is lord of the manor. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on the 11th October, the first Thursday after the 1st May, and two subsequent alternate Thursdays, for cattle and horses; also on the Saturday after the 29th October for rams and cheese. A statute fair for hiring servants is held at Whitsuntide and Martinmas.

KESWICK, a par. in the hund. of Humbleyard, co. Norfolk, 3 miles S.W. of Norwich, its post town. The London and Norwich line of railway passes through the parish. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated on the S. bank of the river Yare. The land is well cultivated. The living is a rect. annexed to the rect.* of Intwood, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is in ruins, and, from the round tower, still standing, appears to have been of great antiquity. — Gurney, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

KESWICK, EAST, a tnshp. in the par. of Harewood, lower div. of the wap. of Skyrack, West Riding co. York, 3 miles E. of Harewood, and 9 N.E. of Leeds. It is situated near the river Wharfe, which skirts the township on the N. Limestone is quarried and burnt into lime. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon. The church has recently been erected. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel, and there are Church and Wesleyan schools for both sexes. The Earl of Harewood is lord of the manor. On one of the farms is a stone wall, partly surrounded by a moat, the only remains of the mansion of the Gascoignes.

KETLEY, a tnshp. and district par. in the par. of Wellington, hund. of South Bradford, co. Salop, 1 mile S.E. of Wellington. It is a station on the Wellington and Severn Junction branch of the Great Western railway. The tnshp. is situated in the iron and coal mining district of Shropshire. It is traversed by a canal and tram rail, 1½ mile long, to Oaken Gates pits. Here are many ironstone and coal pits; also several blast furnaces for the smelting of iron. Fossils are frequently found in the coal and ironstone of the district. The village, which is very considerable is chiefly inhabited by miners. From the eminence on which the church stands a view is obtained of the Shropshire and Cheshire plains, with the Wrekin and Black mountains of Wales in the distance. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £158. The church is a stone structure, erected in 1839 at the sole expense of the Duke of Sutherland. There are chapels for Dissenters, and two schools with houses attached for the master and mistress.

KETSBY, a hmlt. in the par. of South Ormsby, wap. of Hill, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles W. of Alford, and 8 N.W. of Spilsby, its post town. It has a very ancient water-mill, which is mentioned in Domesday Book. The village is small and wholly agricultural. It once formed a distinct parish. The living is a rect. annexed to that of South Ormsby, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, has long been in ruins, and no traces of it are now visible. Captain Dallas Yorke is the sole landowner.

KETTERING, a par., post, and market town, in the hund. of Huxloe, co. Northampton, 14 miles N.E. of Northampton, and 11. S.E. of Market Harborough. It is situated on a small stream that empties itself into the Ise brook, a branch of the river Nen, and is a station on the Midland railway. It was called by the Saxons Kateringes, and was given by Edwy to Elfsige, but was afterwards granted to Peterborough Abbey. The parish, which is extensive, is chiefly arable, and is in a high state of cultivation. There is some good building stone. The town is very ancient, and the monks of Peterborough obtained a charter for a market in the reign of Henry III. It is the head of a Poor-law Union, superintendent registry, and County Court districts, Petty sessions are held fortnightly. It contains a townhall and corn exchange, temperance hall, police station, public library, sessions house, two banks, and a savings-bank. The inhabitants are employed in the stay factories, also the mustard, chicory, clothes, sewing-machine, and agricultural implement manufactories, and as boot and shoemakers, which last trade is extensively carried on; silk shag for hats, velvets, plushes, &c., are also manufactured. A few persons are engaged in the weaving of ribbons and persians and the brush manufactories. The town is a polling place and the place of election for the northern division of the shire. Courts leet and baron are held annually for the appointment of constables and other officers. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £786. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a stone structure, with a high tower crowned by a spire. The parochial charities produce about £259 per annum. There are chapels for Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, and Quakers. There are several schools in the parish, including National and British schools for both sexes, a free school for boys, and also for girls. At Geddington, 3 miles to the N.E. of the town is a stone cross erected by Edward I. to his queen Eleanor. Many Roman relics have been found here, including urns and coins of Trajan, &c. Gill, the expositor, and Andrew Fuller, the Baptist divine, died in this town. Boughton House, 2 miles N.E. of the town, the seat of the Duke of Buccleuch, contains some fine paintings, including two cartoons by Raphael. Market day is Friday. Fairs are held on the Thursday before Easter, Old Michaelmas, and St. Thomas's Day, and the Friday before Whitsuntide.

KETTERINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Humbleyard, in the co. of Norfolk, 3½ miles N.E. of Wymondham, its post town, and railway station, and 6 S.W. from Norwich. At the Conquest it was held by Robert de Vaux, from whom it passed to the Greys, Hevinghams, and Atkynses. On the road from Carlton to Hethersett is a tumulus, in which many Roman remains have been found. About half the land is arable, the remainder pasture, heath, and woodland. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £196. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing five bells. It is situated in the park, and was embellished with painted windows of ancient and modern stained glass in 1837 at the cost of £300. In the interior are several ancient brasses, and a tomb of Nicholas Heveningham, one of the regicide judges of Charles I. The register commences in 1557. Sir John Peter Boileau, Bart., is lord of the manor, and resides at Ketteringham Hall, an Elizabethan mansion, containing some paintings and valuable antiquities.

KETTINS, a par. in cos. Forfar and Perth, Scotland. It has a detached district in the latter county, the main district being about 6 miles distant in the former county. This par. lies under the Sidlaw hills, in the neighbourhood of the river Isla, and contains the vil. of its name, besides Peatie, Campmuir, Ford of Pitcur, and Ley of Haliburton. Cupar-Angus is its post town. The entire parish is about 5 miles long, and near 4 broad. The surface of the larger portion is flat and well cultivated; that of the lesser is hilly, with heath and woodland. Two small streams have part of their course in this parish, and unite near Cupar-Angus. The road from that town to Dundee passes through the interior, and the Scottish Midland and Newtyle railways afford communication with the surrounding district. This par. is in the presb. of Meigle, and synod of Angus and Mearns, in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £236. The church was erected in 1768. The ancient church was subject to the Redfriars of Peebles, and had six chapels in the locality. The principal residences are Lintrose, and Haliburton House, the seat of the Marquis of Huntly, the chief landowner. Linen-weaving and bleaching are carried on to some extent by the inhabitants for the Dundee market. There are supposed Roman remains at Campmuir, and at Baldowrie a carved pillar 6 feet high, of Danish origin. In the S. of the parish stood Dores Castle, the alleged residence of Macbeth. A curious artificial cave was discovered some years ago at Lintrose. Cairns and tumuli are observed in places.

KETTLE, or KING'S KETTLE, a par. and post-office vil. in the district of Cupar, co. Fife, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Cupar, containing the vils. of Balmalcolm, Bankton Park, Coalton, Holekettle, Muirhead, and Myreside. It is a station on the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee railway. The parish is over 8 miles in length, and its greatest width is 3 miles. The surface is hilly in the S. of the Stratheaden district, but flat in the valley of the Eden, which river traces part of the northern border. There is some extent of heath and pasture. The arable parts are fertile. The parish is crossed by the roads from Kirkcaldy to Newburgh, and from Leven to Auchtermuchty. This par. is in the presb. of Cupar and synod of Fife, in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £269. The church was built in 1834, and is a Gothic structure with tower. There are also Free and United Presbyterian churches, and a parochial and two or three private schools. The ancient parish was called Lathrisk, and belonged to the monks of St. Andrew's. The place was anciently written Catul and Katul. A great number of the inhabitants are linen-weavers. At Clatto there are remains of a tower said to have belonged to a family of robbers named Seaton, who it is said fell upon their victims from a subterranean passage which communicated with the tower and the old road from Cupar to Kinghorn. There are camps at Bandon and the Down hills, and at Knock of Clathe is a tumulus. Several barrows occur in other parts of the parish. Limestone, sandstone, whinstone, ironstone, and coal are all worked.

KETTLEBASTON, a par. in the hund. of Cosford, co. Suffolk, 7 miles N.W. of Hadleigh, and 2 N.W. of Bildeston, its post town. It is situated near the river Brett, and was formerly held by the De la Poles by the service of carrying a sceptre at the coronation. The parish, which is small, is tolerably cultivated and principally arable. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £223. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice with tower containing three bells. In the interior is an ancient brass, also a monument to Lady Jermey. The register dates from 1578. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a National school. Mrs. Beechcroft is lady of the manor. Kettlebaston Hall is an ancient building, and was formerly the seat of the Waldegraves, Lemans, &c.

KETTLEBURGH, a par. in the hund. of Loes, co. Suffolk, 2½ miles S.W. of Framlingham, its post town, and 4 from Wickham Market. It is situated near the river Deben. The land is principally arable and meadow, and the soil clayey. The village is small, but neatly built. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £405. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £405. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient edifice with tower containing three bells. The register commences in 1560. The parochial charities produce about £22 per annum, which is distributed in coals to the poor. The Duke of Hamilton is lord of the manor. Kettleburgh Hall is the principal residence. Several Roman relics have been found.

KETTLEBY and KETTLEBY THORPE, hmlts. in the pars. of Bigby and Wrawby, wap. of Yarborough, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N.E. of Glandford-Brigg.

KETTLENESS, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Lythe, North Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Whitby. It is situated near Runswick Abbey, and is remarkable for a cliff which took fire and burnt for two years. Here are alum works belonging to the Marquis of Normanby.

KETTLESHULME, a tnshp. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 7 miles N.E. of Macclesfield. The village is small, and principally agricultural. There are stone quarries, and candle-wicks are manufactured. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The charities produce about £2 per annum. The Earl of Derby is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

KETTLESING, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Felliscliffe, par. of Hampsthwaite, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Ripley.

KETTLESTONE, a par. in the hund. of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 4 miles S.E. of Walsingham, and 3½ N.E. of Fakenham, its post town and railway station. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £290. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £193, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has an octagonal tower. The register dates from 1540. The parochial charities produce about £36 per annum, of which £4 goes to the almshouses. Scott Chad, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KETTLETHORPE, a par. in the wap. of Well, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 9½ miles N.W. of Lincoln, 9 S. of Gainsborough, and 3 W. of the Saxelby station. Newark is its post town. It is situated on the river Trent, and contains the tnshp. of Fenton and the hmlt. of Langheston. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1766. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £569. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a stone building with square tower. There is a parochial school, also a Wesleyan chapel at Fenton. The charities produce £20 per annum, arising from lands bequeathed by the Rev. John Becke in 1597.

KETTLETOFT, a small bay on the W. side of Sanda Island, Orkney Isles, coast of Scotland.

KETTLEWELL, a ward in the par. of St. Margaret, borough of King's Lynn, co. Norfolk.

KETTLEWELL, a par. in the E. div. of the wap. of Staincliffe, West Riding co. York, 16 miles N. of Skipton, its post town. It is situated on the river Wharfe, between the Great Whernside and Hardflask mountains, and contains the tnshp. of Starbottom. It was nearly inundated by the overflow of the river in 1686. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the lead mines and in the smelting-works. The land is chiefly pasture, meadow, and moorland, and is used for grazing purposes. Coal is abundant in the mountains. The town, which is small and irregularly built, is situated in a deep valley. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £120. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a modern structure rebuilt in 1820 on the site of an older one, and has a square tower. In the interior is an ancient font bearing date 1100, and several mural monuments. A large portion of the register has been lost. The parochial charities produce £7 per annum, the endowment of Swale's school for boys and girls. The Wesleyans have a chapel. There is a literary and scientific institution. There is a market for corn on Thursdays. Fairs are held on the 6th July, 2nd September, and 23rd October for cattle.

KETTON, a par. in the hund. of East, co. Rutland, 3 miles S.W. of Stamford. It is a station on the Peterborough and Leicester section of the Midland railway. The par. is situated on the rivers Welland and Chater, and contains the hmlts. of Geeston and Kelthorpe. There are extensive quarries of freestone, which is largely exported. The soil is clay and loam, and the substratum limestone. The tithes were commuted for money payments under an Enclosure Act in 1768. The living is a vic. with the cur. of Tixover annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £107, in the patron. of the Prebendary of Ketton. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is of the 13th century, with a tower and spire. There is a place of worship for Independents, also a National school partly endowed.

KETTON. See KEDINGTON, co. Essex.

KEVENCALONOG, a tnshp. in the pars. of Clun and Bettus, co. Salop, 6 miles S.W. of Bishop's Castle.

KEVENLEE. See CEFNLLYS, co. Radnor.

KEVERNE, ST., a par. in the hund. of Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 10 miles S.E. of Helston. This parish, which is of large extent, is situated on the shore of the English Channel, by which it is bounded on the E. and S., and opposite the Manacle rocks. It contains three small fishing coves or harbours, called Coverack, Porthonstock, and Porthalloe, or Pralla. At the first of these is a good pier, affording shelter to the small vessels engaged in the coasting trade and in the pilchard fishery. It was here that the Despatch was lost in 1809. The villagers are chiefly engaged in fishing and agriculture. A yellow clay is found here, much esteemed for castings in silver, brass, and lead. The prevailing rocks are serpentine, soapstone, shale, and magnesian limestone. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £512. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £383. The church belonged to Beaulieu Abbey, and was struck by lightning in 1770. It has a tower surmounted by a spire, and contains several interesting monuments, among which is one to the memory of Major-General Cavendish, Captain Dunkenfield, and 61 men of a regiment who perished in a storm off the coast in 1809. There are places of worship for Baptists, Bryanites, and Wesleyans, also a school with a small endowment. Charles Incledon, the celebrated singer, was a native. Fairs are held on the 5th March, 19th June, and 2nd October.

KEVERSTONE and RABY, joint tnshps. in the par. of Staindrop, S. div. of the ward of Darlington, co. Durham, 6 miles E. of Barnard Castle.

KEW, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Kingston, co. Surrey, 2 miles N.W. of Richmond, and 6 miles from Hyde Park corner. It has stations on the North London railway, and on the loop line of the London and South-Western, which here forms a junction. It is situated on the bank of the Thames, opposite Brentford, to which it is united by a stone bridge of nine arches, and has a steamboat pier. Previous to 1770 it formed a hamlet of Kingston parish, but was then made parochial. Kew House, the old seat of the Capels, was leased by Frederick Prince of Wales, father of George III., who pulled it down in 1789, and then converted the red brick house of Sir R. Portman into what is now Kew Palace. In it most of his family were born, and his queen died. The village of Kew is small, but has recently been much improved by the enclosing of Kew Green with iron posts and rails. The gardens, which occupy nearly a third of the parish, being 75 acres in extent, form the great attraction of the place, and were thrown freely open to the public in 1840. They are said to be the finest botanic gardens in the world, containing a great variety of choice exotics. The palm house contains above 40,300 superficial feet of glass, or nearly an acre. Its total length is 362 feet 6 inches, by 100 feet wide, and in the centre is 69 feet high to the top of the lantern. It is raised to a heat of 80 degrees by means of 12 boilers placed in the vaults, with 4½ miles of iron pipes, and has a water-tank in the tower at a height of 75 feet, so that an artificial shower can be thrown over the tops of the plants. The cost, including the tunnel and tower, was about £33,000. There are besides several other conservatories, including a temperate house, built at the cost of £10,000, 212 feet long by 137 wide; also a smaller conservatory 500 feet long, and the large conservatory near the gates, originally erected at Buckingham Palace. The gardens also contain a pinetum, Australian house, New Zealand house, botanic museum, Chinese pagoda, temple of Æolus, temple of the Sun, built in 1761, from designs by Sir W. Chambers, and an observatory for magnetic and meteorological observations, placed at the disposal of the British Association for the Promotion of Science by the government. This last building is in the adjoining grounds of Old Richmond Park. The arboretum, which is 5 acres in extent, contains the Turkey oak, cedar of Lebanon, cork tree, manna ash, Mexican cypress, and a willow grown from a cutting of that which formerly shaded the tomb of Bonaparte at St. Helena. There were no less than 480,070 visitors to Kew Gardens in 1861, by far the largest number in any year; 189,462 came on Sundays; 13,399 on one Sunday in June, the largest attendance on any day in the year. The following year saw the erection of the magnificent spar of Douglas pine, 159 feet long, a superb pole, unrivalled in Europe for height, symmetry, and excellence of material. It was presented by Mr. E. Stamp. Standing among fine trees, which, however, are not much more than half its height, it serves to show the public the enormous size of the timber trees of our new colony of British Columbia. The cinchonas (trees yielding quinine) sent to the Neilgherrie hills, Sir W. J. Hooker says, are flourishing, and there are now upwards of 8,000 plants in most vigorous growth, while there are 2,170 more at Kew, which will be ready for transmission to India at the proper season.—The living is a vic. with the cur. of Petersham annexed, in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £401, in the patron. of King's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Anne, was originally built in 1714, and has been twice enlarged, once by George III., and subsequently by George IV. in 1837. It contains George III.'s organ, and has in the churchyard the tombs of the eminent artists Gainsborough, Zoffany, and Meyer; of W. Aiton, author of "Hortus Kewensis," &c. The charities produce about £51 per annum. Sir Peter Lely and Stephen Duck, the poet, were residents here.

KEWAGUE, a vil. in the par. of Braddan, Isle of Man, 2 miles N.W. of Douglas.

KEW, ST., a par. in the hund. of Trigg, co. Cornwall, 4 miles N.E. of Wadebridge, and 7 N.W. of Bodmin. This parish, which is of large extent, is bounded on the S. by the river Amble, a branch of the Camel, navigable to Amble Bridge. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Languit. The soil is very fertile, and there are quarries of stone for the roads. In the vicinity are several ancient barrows and beacons. The rectorial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £734, and the vicarial for £521 9*s*. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £401. The church of St. Kew is an ancient edifice, consisting of a nave with N. and S. aisles. In the windows are some interesting remains of painted glass, and in the N. aisle is an altar-tomb with the recumbent effigy of Honor Webber, of Middle Amble.

In the churchyard was formerly a small chapel dedicated to St. Wenn. There are places of worship for Wesleyans. Trewane, the old seat of the Nicholls, is now a farmhouse.

KEWSTOKE, a par. in the hund. of Winterstoke, co. Somerset, 8 miles N.W. of Axbridge, 20 S.W. of Bristol, and 2 from Weston-super-Mare, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the Bristol Channel, and is indented on the W. by Sand Bay. Here are the ruins of Wordspring Priory, founded in 1210 by William de Courtny, part of which has been converted into a farmhouse. Through the wood from Kewstoke to Weston the view of the surrounding country is very extensive. Stone is quarried for building purposes, and lead and iron ore are found in abundance. The soil is loamy, and subsoil clay. The Bristol and Exeter railway passes through the parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £330, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, is a stone structure with a square embattled tower containing five bells. It has a highly enriched Norman arch, and a sculptured stone pulpit. The church has been recently restored. The register dates from 1568. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a National school for children of both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. John Hellier, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KEXBOROUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Darton, wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 8 miles S. of Wakefield, and 1 mile W. of Darton. The village, which is small, is situated on a gentle acclivity sloping to the river Dearne. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the coal mines and in weaving. There is an endowed school, and a small chapel for Wesleyans. The land is very fertile, and planted in many parts with fine timber. At Swithen is an establishment for bleaching webs and damasks. The principal residences are Birthwaite Hall and Haigh Hall: the former, an old seat of the Burdetts, with towers and turrets; the latter is the property of T. Wentworth Beaumont, Esq., to whom the estate belongs.

KEXBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Catton, wap. of Ouse, East Riding co. York, 6 miles S.E. of York, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Derwent, which is here crossed by a bridge. The township is of considerable extent, and but sparsely inhabited. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £120, in the patron. of Lord Wenlock. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, is a modern structure with a spire. In the interior is a stained-glass window. There is a parochial school supported by Lord Wenlock, who is lord of the manor and owner of nearly the whole of the soil.

KEXBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Upton, wap. of Well, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles S.E. of Gainsborough, its post town, and 3 N. of the Marton railway station. The Methodists and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. Kexby Bridge House is the principal residence. W. Hutton, Esq., is lord of the manor. On the enclosure of the parish 55 acres of land were awarded to the poor, in lieu of their right of common.

KEYALOUGH, 3 miles N.E. of Boyle, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is 4 miles long by 3 broad. The district exhibits much beauty of scenery. The lake is studed with numerous islets, many of which have remains of ancient buildings upon them. The principal of these are Trinity Island, which has remains of an abbey founded in the 7th century and rebuilt in the 13th and 15th centuries, during which period the annals of Lough Key were written. Inchmacnerin Cell and MacDermot's Castle are also attractive objects.

KEYHAM, a chplry. in the par. of Rothley, hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 6 miles N.E. of Leicester, its post town. It is a small irregular village situated on a branch of the river Sour. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Rothley, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small ancient structure, with a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £42 per annum; and there is an endowed free school with £15 per annum. The trustees of the late Sir James Parker are lords of the manor.

KEYHAM, a steamer factory adjoining Devonport dockyard, co. Devon. These works occupy above 15 acres, and have cost the government £1,200,000. There is a wrought iron caison to the dock, 82 feet by 42, and 13½ thick.

KEYHAVEN, a tythg. in the par. of Milford, hund. of Christchurch, co. Southampton, 3 miles S.W. of Lymington. It is situated on the coast opposite Hurst Castle.

KEYINGHAM, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Patrington, and 5 E. of Hedon, its post town. It is a station on the Hull and Holderness section of the North-Eastern railway. The village is situated on an eminence adjoining the Keyingham Level Drain, which runs into the Humber. The parish includes Salthaugh Grange. The soil is marshy clay, and the land chiefly arable. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the corn mills and brickfields. There are some remains of an ancient cross. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £92, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient stone structure, with tower crowned by an octagonal spire and containing three bells. There are several marble tablets. The register commences in 1604. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum for educational purposes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. There are National, Sunday, and infant schools. Keyingham Creek, which formerly extended to Salthaugh, and divided this parish from Sunk Island, is now nearly closed. In the village are the remains of two ancient crosses. There is also a holy well called St. Philip's Well, noted for the cure of scorbutic diseases; and on a farm in the neighbourhood is a well of warm water. Sometime since was discovered the baptismal font of Andrew Marvel. At the residence of S. J. Owst, Esq., is a collection of antiquities and paintings.

KEYLIBER ISSA and UCHA, tnshps. in the par. of Kerry, co. Montgomery, 2 miles E. of Newtown.

KEYMER, a par. in the hund. of Buttinghill, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 5 miles S. of Cuckfield, and 10 N. of Brighton. It has three stations on the London and Brighton railway, viz. Keymer Junction, Hassock's Gate, and Burgess Hill. There are extensive brick and tile kilns, also brown ware potteries at St. John's Common. Valebridge is within the bounds of this parish, which consists chiefly of downland in the southern portions, and in the northern of arable, pasture, and woodland. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Clayton, in the dioc. of Chichester. The old church is an ancient edifice with a Norman chancel arch. A new church, dedicated to St. John, a red brick and stone structure, has been recently erected for this district. It contains about 700 sittings, and has a district assigned to it, comprising parts of the pars. of Keymer and Clayton. There are National schools.

KEYNE, ST., a par. in the hund. of West, co. Cornwall, 2 miles S. of Liskeard. This place was anciently called Lametton, but changed its name in consequence of a well dedicated to St. Keyne, or Keyna, the daughter of Brychan, prince of Brecknock, of which tradition says, whoever first drinks, husband or wife, gets the mastery for life. The surface is diversified with hills and the low grounds are watered by the river Looe. The soil is generally a stiff yellow clay. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £140. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £198. The church, dedicated to St. Kayne, is a small plain edifice, and near it is St. Kayne's Well. The roof of the enclosure supports in a singular manner five trees, two of oak, two of ash, and one of elm.

KEYNSHAM, a hund. in co. Somerset. It contains the pars. of Brislington, Burnett, Chelwood, Compton-Dando, Farmborough, Keynsham, Marksbury, Nempnett Thrubwell, Pensford, Priston, Publow, Queen

Charlton, Saltford, Stanton-Drew, Stanton-Prior, and Whitchurch, comprising 24,520 acres.

KEYNSHAM, a par. and small town in the hund. of the same name, co. Somerset, 7 miles N.W. of Bath, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Bristol. It is a station on the Great Western railway. The town is situated near the junction of the rivers Chew and Avon, which last is navigable hence to Bath, and across which there is a fifteen arched bridge. The market, which was on Thursday, has long been discontinued. There are malt-houses and breweries, and a portion of the inhabitants are engaged in flax spinning. Wood for dyeing and parsley piert are grown here, and there is a mineral spring. On the river are some mills belonging to a brass and copper company at Bristol. A court-leet is held for the hundred. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £135, and the vicarial for £170, and those belonging to the trustees of the Bristol charities for £116 7*s*. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £124. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure, with a lofty tower containing eight bells. It has two screens, also a chapel. It contains effigies of the Brydges. The charities produce about £205, of which £85 goes to the support of Brydge's school and almshouses. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a chapel. On the S.E. of the church formerly stood Keynsham Abbey, founded in 1170 by William Earl of Gloucester for Black Canons, and was endowed with the hund. of Keynsham. A great portion of the remains of this abbey were used in 1634 for restoring the parish church. The Chandos estate has lately been sold by auction, and the advowson of the church purchased by the Rev. W. Gyles.

KEYSOE, a par. in the hund. of Stodden, co. Bedford, 9 miles N. of Bedford, and 4 S.W. of Kimbolton, its post town. The village is small and scattered. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture, and 350 acres of woodland, chiefly planted with oak. The road from Bedford to Kimbolton passes through the parish. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1803. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £175, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice with a lofty spire. The interior contains an ancient font with an inscription. There is a National school built in 1840. The Baptists have two places of worship. John Crawley, Esq., is lord of the manor. On the glebe land is a strong chalybeate spring.

KEYSTON, a par. in the hund. of Leightonstone, co. Huntingdon, 4 miles S.E. of Thrapston, its post town, 6 N.W. of Kimbolton, and 70 from London. It is a small and scattered village. The land is chiefly common. The road from Thrapston to Huntingdon passes through the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £381 15*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has a tower crowned by a lofty spire. William Elderkin, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KEY-STREET, a hmlt. in the hund. of Chatham and Gillingham, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 7 miles S.E. of Chatham. It is situated near the river Medway, and is a meet for the Tickham hounds.

KEYTHORPE, a lib. in the par. of Tugby, hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 8 miles N.E. of Market Harborough. It is a meet for the Quorndon hounds.

KEYWORTH, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Rushcliffe, co. Nottingham, 7 miles S.E. of Nottingham, its post town, 8 S.W. of Bingham, and 13 N.W. of Melton Mowbray. The village, which is small, is situated on an eminence to the N. of the Wolds, and a portion of the inhabitants are employed in framework knitting. The land is chiefly arable and pasture. The surface is hilly, and the soil a stiff clay. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1798. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £134. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is a very ancient structure with a tower surmounted by an octagonal spire. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. There is a school for children of both sexes. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship.

KIBBLESTONE, a tnshp. and lib. in the par. of Stone, S. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford. This was anciently a large park, containing several spacious fish-ponds, one of which supplies a stream that falls into the Trent at Walton-Bridge, turning in its course several mills for grinding flints used at the potteries. At Meaford, in this township, is the old mansion in which Earl St. Vincent was born. There is a petrifying spring.

KIBBLESWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Chester-le-Street, middle div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 4 miles S. of Gateshead. The township is of considerable extent, and but sparsely inhabited.

KIBBOR, a hund. in co. Glamorgan, contains the pars. of Caira, Llandaff, Llanedarn, Llanishen, Lisvane, and Routh.

KIBWORTH-BEAUCHAMP, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 6 miles N.W. of Harborough, its post town, 9 S.E. of Leicester, and 7 E. of Countesthorpe. It is a station on the Midland railway. The par. is situated on the Union canal, and contains the chplry. of Kibworth Harcourt. The inhabitants are engaged in framework knitting. The land is chiefly in pasture. The surface is gently undulating, and the soil a rich loam alternating with clay and sand. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1778. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £818, in the patron. of Merton College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Wilfred, has a square embattled tower containing five bells. The tower, or spire, was rebuilt in lieu of the old one, which fell down in 1825. In the interior are a piscina, stone stalls, carved pulpit, &c. There is also a district church at Smeeton Westerby, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £150, in the patron. of the Rector of Kibworth. Doddridge first preached here before going to Northampton, and Dr. Aikin, the celebrated physician, was a native of this place. The charities produce about £263 per annum, of which £255 is the endowment of the free grammar school, founded in 1709 by Sir Nathaniel Edwards. There is also an endowment of £1,000, left by the Rev. Jeremiah Goodman in 1836, for Thursday evening lectures, held in the parish church, with an additional sum of £100 to the head-master, the interest to be distributed among the poor. There is a National school. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Wesleyan Reformers have places of worship. Sir Henry Halford, M.P., is lord of the manor.

KIBWORTH-HARCOURT, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Kibworth-Beauchamp, hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 6 miles N.W. of Harborough. Near this place is a moated camp 366 feet in circumference, the ramparts of which are still 54 feet in height: here is also a large barrow. There are chapels for Independents and Baptists, also a Sunday-school and library. The village is considerable.

KIDBROOKE, a lib., anciently a par., in the hund. of Blackheath, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 2 miles S.W. of Woolwich. It is situated on the northern side of Blackheath, and contains the hmlts. of Upper and Lower Kidbrooke, containing several gentlemen's houses and villas. It formerly belonged to St. Mary Overy's Convent, in Southwark, and gave title of baron to the Marquis of Bristol. In old records the church, which has long been demolished, is described as a rectory. A proprietary chapel was erected on the N. side by Dr. Greenlaw.

KID CREW, an island in the bar. of Erris, co. Mayo, Ireland. It is situated on the E. side of the entrance to Broadhaven Bay.

KIDDERMINSTER, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Lower Halfshire, co. Worcester, 15 miles N. of Worcester, and 125 N.W. of London. It is a station on the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton railway, which skirts the eastern side of the town. The parish is bounded on the W. by the navigable river Severn, and is intersected by the river Stour and the Staffordshire and Worcestershire canal. It contains, besides the borough of Kidderminster, including Kidderminster Foreign, with its 15 hmlts. beyond the borough, the chplries. of Stourport, or Lower Mitton, and Wribbenhall. The substratum is sandstone, and the surface hilly, but well cultivated. The town is built on rising ground on the banks of the river Stour, here spanned by a bridge of five arches—from which circumstance it is said to derive its name chid, in British signifying a "hill," and dur, "water." It was called by the Saxons Chiderminster, and was originally a royal manor, but was given by Henry II. to the Bassetts, from whom it afterwards passed to the Beauchamps, Nevilles, Cookseys, Blounts, Foleys, and Waller, the poet, and is now the property of the Earl of Dudley. It returned members to parliament in the reign of Edward I., and was first chartered by Charles I. It is a borough by prescription, and under the Municipal Act of 1835 is divided into three wards, governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors, with the style of "high bailiff and commonalty of the borough of Kidderminster." The municipal revenue is about £1,261, and the population in 1861, 15,399, against 18,462 in 1851, having decreased in the decennial period by 3,063. The boundaries of the municipal and parliamentary boroughs are co-extensive, and were but slightly altered at the passing of the Reform Act, since which time it has returned one member to parliament. The town, which is well built, contains several good streets, some of the houses being cut into the sandstone rock on which it stands. The principal buildings are—the townhall, a large brick structure with police station and cells for prisoners attached; the public rooms and corn exchange, situated in Vicar-street, a noble block of building completed in 1855, and containing a music hall 90 feet by 45, a corn exchange 60 feet by 35, with several other rooms of smaller dimensions, appropriated to the free library, school of design, newsroom, chess-room, &c.—the whole forms a compact and ornamental structure, lit from the roof and sides, and containing a majestic organ, built by Hill, of London, at a cost of £800; besides these may be mentioned the old market-house, which had a cross in Leland's time, assembly rooms, union poorhouse, infirmary, two banks, a savings-bank, and large manufactory for damask silk for upholsterers' uses. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the manufacture of carpets, which was first introduced in 1735. The varieties principally made are Scotch, tapestry, or Venetian, and Brussels, which last are woven by steam-power; also finger-rugs, woollen and worsted goods, silk coverings for buttons, and waistcoat pieces. There are besides iron foundries, malting-houses, breweries, a paper-mill, wire-works, dye-works, brickfields, and tanneries.—Kidderminster is the head of a Poor-law Union, embracing eight parishes in Worcestershire, two in Staffordshire, and one in Salop. It is also the seat of a new County Court, which meets every three weeks, and of a superintendent registry. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeaconry and diocese of Worcester, and the title of baron to the Foleys of Witley Castle. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Trimpley annexed, in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £900. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a spacious structure, with a square tower supported by massive buttresses, and crowned with decorated battlements and pinnacles, and containing a peal of eight bells. The church, which was restored by Egington, has a W. window of painted glass, and several illuminated windows in the chancel. It contains several ancient brasses and effigies—one being of a Crusader; also monuments to the Blount and Cooksey families, and one to the father of Lord Chancellor Somers. In addition to the parish church there are four district churches—viz. St. George, St. John, Lower Mitton, and Wribbenhall, the livings of all which are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £150 to £300. St. George's is a modern edifice with a lofty and richly ornamented tower, erected by a grant of £16,131 from the parliamentary commissioners, augmented by £2,000 voluntary subscription. The Baptists, Independents, Roman Catholics, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Unitarians have chapels; in the last-named is the celebrated pulpit of Richard Baxter, the Nonconformist minister, who held the living until the period of the Restoration. The free grammar school, founded in the reign of Charles I., and formerly a chapel, has an income from endowment of £523. There are besides National schools partially endowed, and schools founded by Pearsall and White, also almshouses endowed by Blount, Clare, and Higgins. The parochial charities, including those mentioned above, produce about £1,225 per annum.—The parish of Kidderminster is divided into three districts—the borough of Kidderminster, the Foreign of Kidderminster, and the hamlet of Stourport, each having separate churchwardens and overseers, and maintaining their own poor. Within the parish is Caldwell Tower, the remnant of a castle built in the reign of Henry IV., also traces of a camp at Warsall Hill. Richard de Kidderminster, the literary opponent of Luther, Dr. L. Carpenter, and Knibb, the missionary, were born here. Market days are Thursday and Saturday—the former for corn, meat, fish, &c., the latter for vegetables and provisions. Fairs are held on the last Monday in January, 13th April, 28th May, 20th June, 4th September, and the last Monday in November.

KIDDERMINSTER FOREIGN, a suburb of the borough of Kidderminster, in the lower div. of Halfshire, co. Worcester. [See KIDDERMINSTER.]

KIDDERMOOR-GREEN, a lib. in the tnshp. of Brewood, co. Stafford, 1 mile W. of Brewood.

KIDDINGTON, or CUDDINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Wootton, co. Oxford, 4½ miles N.W. of Woodstock, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the small river Glyme, and a branch of the old Roman road Akeman Street. It contains the hmlts. of Nether and Over Kiddington. It was anciently called Ceudenton, and was given by Offa to Worcester Abbey. At the Norman Conquest it came into the hands of Musard, from whom it passed to the Salceys, Willescotes, and others. The surface is boldly undulating, and the soil is generally a stone brash. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £375. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is situated at Nether Kiddington, and was built in 1400 on the site of a Norman one. It has a tower containing four bells. There is a parochial school. At Over Kiddington are the remains of an old cross, and a Roman camp at Hill Wood. Here is a meet for the Heythrop hounds. Warton, the poet-laureate, was once rector of this parish, of which he wrote the history.

KIDLAND LEE, an ext. par. place in the W. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 10 miles N.W. of Rothbury. It is an extensive tract of country, being 10 miles in length by 8 in width, containing the hmlts. of Whiteburn Shank, Milkhope, Barrow Burn, and Rowhope. On the N. of the river Alvine is Mernmerkirk Hill, with its ruins. It is sheltered on the E. by Milkhope, which has some traces of Roman encampments, and on the W. by Heigh Rig. The whole of this mountain range is let to wealthy farmers residing elsewhere, but who are severally represented by their shepherds. Sir Thomas Digby Legard, Bart., of Ganton Hall, Yorkshire, is chief landowner.

KIDLAW, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkharle, co. Northumberland, 10 miles E. of Bellingham.

KIDLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Wootton, co. Oxford, 4½ miles N. of Oxford, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Woodstock. The parish, which is considerable, is situated on the river Cherwell and the Oxford canal. It contains the tnshps. of Gosford and Water Eaton, and the hmlt. of Thrup. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Water Eaton annexed, in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £279, in the patron. of the rectorship of Exeter College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a cruciform structure with a square tower crowned by a spire. In the interior is a stained-glass window and several very ancient tombs, also some oak pews curiously carved. The charities produce £26 per annum, of which £13 goes to the endowment of Morton almshouses, and £4 towards the support of the free school. There is a chapel for Wesleyans.

KIDSGROVE, a vil. in the par. of Wolstanton, co. Stafford, 2 miles N.E. of Newcastle-under-Lyme, and 3 from Burslem. There is a station at Kidsgrove Junction, on the North Staffordshire railway. It is situated on the Grand Trunk canal. The inhabitants are engaged in the potteries. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church is a small modern edifice. There is a village school.

KIDSTY PIKE, a double-headed peak at the head of Hawes Water, co. Westmoreland.

KIDWELLY, a hund. in the co. Carmarthen, contains the pars. of Ishmael, Kidwelly, Llandefeilog, Llangendeirne, and Llangwnnor.

KIDWELLY, or CYDWELI, a par., market town, and ancient borough in the above hund., 10 miles S. of Carmarthen, and 234¼ from London by the Great Western and South Wales railways, on which latter it is a station. It is situated in Carmarthen Bay, on the river Gwendraethfechan, and the Pembrey canal, which runs down from Pont Yates to the harbour. It contains the vil. of Kiffsthy and the decayed port and borough of Kidwelly, which formerly enjoyed some prosperity, but is now almost decayed, owing to the port having become sanded up. It is an excise collection for South Wales, and has a small export trade. Its population in 1851 was 1,563, and in 1861 1,654. It is governed by a mayor, 12 aldermen, and 12 councillors. The town is irregularly laid out, and contains several old houses, which appear to date as early as Edward I. and Edward III., built after the Flemish style. It contains a townhall, the ruins of an old gateway, and the remains of a castle, situated on the right bank of the river; this last was originally built by Maurice de Londres before 1113, and taken several times during the 12th and 13th centuries. Though a ruin, it is tolerably perfect, the towers, gateway, and chapel being still in good condition, with the exception of one tower, which has fallen. It is held, together with the honour, by Earl Cawdor, who inherited it through the Vaughans. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the tin works and in the coasting trade. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £120. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is situated in New Kidwelly, and belonged to the Benedictine priory, founded in 1130 by Bishop Roger as a cell to Sherborne Abbey. It is a cruciform building, with a tower and spire 165 feet high, and has been recently new-roofed. In the interior are some mutilated effigies, and in a niche over the doorway an original statue of the Virgin and Child. There are three chapels for Protestant Dissenters, and a National school. Market day is Friday. Fairs are held on the 24th May, 1st August, and 29th October.

KIFFIC, or KYFFIG. See CYFFIC, co. Carmarthen.

KIFTSGATE, a hund. in two divs., upper and lower, in the co. Gloucester. The upper contains the pars. of Aston-sub-Edge, Batsford, Chipping Campden, Cow-Honeybourne, Dorsington, Ebrington, Longboro', Mauston-Sicca, Mickleton, Pebworth, Quinton, Saintbury, Seasoncote, Upper Swell, Weston-sub-Edge, Willersey, and parts of Condicote, Ilmington, and Weston-upon-Avon, comprising an area of 38,450 acres. Kiftsgate lower hund. contains the pars. of Ashton-Somerville, Buckland, Charlton Abbots, Childs-Wickham, Didbrook, Dumbleton, Power Guyting and Temple Guyting, Hailes, Hawling, Rowell, Snowshill, Stanley Pontlarge, Stanton, Studeley-Manor, Toddington, Twining, Winchcombe, and Wormington, comprising an area of 46,840 acres.

KILARROW, a par. in the island of Islay, co. Argyle, Scotland, containing the post town Bowmore, and the vils. of Bridgend and Port-Askaig. It is 15 miles long by 8 broad. This par. is in the presb. of Islay and Jura, and synod of Argyle, in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £158. The church was erected in 1767, and was enlarged some sixty years later. There are also a Free church, Independent chapel, and Baptist meeting-house. There are the parish and parliamentary schools, besides some others. Bowmore being the chief village, the parish is often known by that name.

KILBAGIE, a hmlt. in the par. and co. of Clackmannan, Scotland, 1 mile from Clackmannan, and 32 miles from Edinburgh. It is situated near the rivers Forth and Devon, and contains a large distillery.

KILBAHA, a vil. and fishing station in the par. of Kilballyowen, bar. of Moyarta, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Loop Head, and 17 W. of Kilrush. It is situated at the mouth of the Shannon, and has a small harbour.

KILBALLYOWEN, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Moyarta, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 12 miles W. of Kilrush, its post town, containing the vils. of Cross Kilbaha, Kiltrellig, Ross, Tullig. It is 7 miles long by 5 broad, and lies near the extremity of the Moyarta peninsula, which has Loophead and a lighthouse. The soil is good. The mouth of the Shannon washes it on the S. Dunmore and Kilclogher heads are presented to the sea, and Kilbaha Bay indents the coast in the estuary of the Shannon. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, with part of the benefice of Kilrush. The Roman Catholic chapel belongs to the Donaha district. Ruins of the old church are seen in the burial-ground. There are also church ruins at Ross. Kilballyowen House and Kilballyowen Lodge are the chief residences. Here are remains of Clehansevan Castle, demolished by a storm in 1802. Traces of a signal tower are seen at Fodera Hill. The coast is curiously wave-worn in many parts. The Clehansevan spouting holes and the natural arches at Ross are interesting instances of the action of the sea. There is a medicinal spring at Fierd.

KILBANE, a vil. in the par. of Killokennedy, bar. of Lower Tulla, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Broadford.

KILBARCHAN, a par. and post town in co. Renfrew, Scotland, containing also the vil. of Linwood, and part of Brigg of Weir. The par. is 8 miles long by 3 broad, and is bounded by Hauston, Erskine, Inchinnan Abbey, Paisley and Kilmalcolm. The river Black Cart traces the boundary on the E. and S. The Locker flows on the S.W., and the Gryfe on the N. The surface is flat and fertile in the E., but becomes gently elevated towards the W. There is a considerable area of moss. This par. is in the presb. of Paisley, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister has a stipend of £300. The church stands in the town, and was built in 1724. There are likewise a Free church, United Presbyterian church, Chartist meeting-house, and five schools in the parish. The ancient church, dedicated to St. Barchan, belonged to the monks of Paisley, and had two subordinate chapels, one of which was at Ranfurly, on a site now occupied by Prieston farm. The principal landowner is Sir Robert Napier, of Milliken House, which stands on the Black Cart. Other residences are Blackstone House, Craigends, Clippens, and Glentyan House. On the S. side of a rising ground in the middle of the parish stands the town, 1½ mile from Johnstone, and 5 miles from Paisley. It is well built, and lighted with gas. Weaving is carried on to a large extent, there being upwards of 1,300 looms in operation in and about the village. The schoolhouse, erected in 1755, has a steeple with a statue of Habbie Simon, the famous piper. There are two public libraries, friendly societies, masons' lodge, agricultural, and several other societies. An annual horse fair is held in December. Milliken Park is a station on the South-Western and Glasgow railway. The town was made a burgh of barony in about 1710. Robert Allen, the poetical weaver, was a native of this town. Ranfurly Castle, now in ruins, was the seat of the Knox family; it passed from them in 1665. Near this ruin is a mound, supposed to be a Roman outpost of the camp at Paisley. There are remains of an encampment at Barr Hill, and about two miles from the town is the Clochodrick stone, said to be of Druidical origin. Coal and limestone are worked to some extent. There is also a freestone quarry.

KILBARRACK, a par. in the bar. of Coolock, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Dublin. The par. is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. Baldoyle is its post town. The soil is good. The living is part of the benefice of Howth, in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £173, in the patron. of the bishop. Kilbarrack House is the principal seat. On the Howth road are the ruins of an ecclesiastical establishment, frequently called the Abbey of Kilbarrack. The old burial-ground is still sometimes used.

KILBARRON, a par. in the bar. of Tirhugh, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing the greater part of Ballyshannon, its post town. The par. is over 6 miles long by 3 broad. The surface lies along the margin of the river Erne, and is traversed by the road from Enniskillen to Ballyshannon. It consists of good soil, with some mountain and waste land. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Raphoe, val. £407. The church was built in 1745, and serves as a landmark to vessels making for the harbour. There are two Methodist meeting-houses, a Presbyterian church, and a Roman Catholic chapel, united to that of Castle Ard. There are seven Sunday and several daily schools in the parish. Lapufa and Camlin may be mentioned among numerous seats. This parish was the site of a church founded by St. Columb. It was a seat of the O'Clerys, remains of whose castle may yet be seen. Sand, whinstone, and coal occur in this parish. The river Abbey abounds with fish. Seals, dog-fish, and sometimes whales visit the coast. Numerous Danish raths are observed.

KILBARRON, a par. in the bars. of Leitrim and Lower Ormond, cos. Galway and Tipperary, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles W. of Borrisokane. Roscrea is its post town. The par. lies near the margin of Lough Derg, and is 5½ miles long by 4½ broad. The surface is varied, and consists of a good soil. The road from Killaloe to Portumna traverses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. £111, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1822 by the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Finnoe and Terryglass. There are one public and three private schools. Curraghmore, Castlecambre, Springmount, Annagh Castle, Annagh Lodge, Long Lane, Waterloo Lodge, Garrane, Kilgarvon, Broofield, and Moon, are among the principal mansions. There are church ruins on the island of Ilanmore, and within the parish are remains of the castles of Cushlawn, Thullahawn, Cushlawn-Thigge-Burht, and Ballycollaton.

KILBARRY, a par. in the bar. of Gualtiere, co. Waterford, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Waterford, its post town. This par. is over 3 miles in length by nearly 2 in breadth. The living is an impropriate cur. in the dioc. of Waterford. Here stood a preceptory of Knights Templars, which was founded in the 12th century, of which there are still some remains.

KILBARRYMEADEN, a par. in the bar. of Decies-without-Drum, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of the town of Kilmacthomas. The par. is 3 miles long by near 2 broad, and contains the vil. of Kells. The surface consists of coarse boggy land, with slight elevations in the N. The living is a suspended vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. £79, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two day schools and a Roman Catholic chapel. Gardenmorris, and Georgestown are the principal seats. The parish takes its name from being the site of a church built by St. Baramedan; the site is believed by the peasantry to be sacred, and to possess miraculous qualities. A holy well has numerous devotees. Near Dunbrattan is a cave containing a rough-hewn image of the patron saint of the parish. Near this place is the reputed scene of a defeat of the Danes by Raymond le Gros. Limestone, copper and lead ores are found.

KILBEACANTY, or KILVECONTY, a par. in the bar. of Kiltartan, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 1 mile N.E. of Gort, its post town. The par. is 6 miles long by 3 broad. The surface consists chiefly of the lower spurs of the Slievebaughta mountains, and contains but little good land. It is traversed by the road from Gort to Portumna. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kilmacduagh, val. with Kilmacduagh, £522. in the patron. of the crown. Forthill, Lisbrine, Russaun, Ballyturn, Annagh, and Chevy Chase are the principal residences. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, and two or three day schools.

KILBEACON, a par. in the bar. of Knocktopher, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of Knocktopher. Mullinavat is its post town. It is 1¾ mile long by 1 broad. The surface consists for the most part of rough boggy land, and is traversed by the road from Knocktopher to Waterford. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with two others, £214, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1826. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Kilmacow and Dunkit. Three day schools are in the parish. Here are remains of the Earlsrath fort.

KILBEAGH, a par. in the bar. of Costello, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles E. of Swineford, its post town. The par. is 10 miles long by 4 broad, and has a surface consisting for the most part of dreary moor and bogs, with a few unimportant elevations. The rivulets Owengarve, Sonnagh, and Mullaghanoe take their course through the interior, which is also traversed by the roads from Ballaghadireen to Foxford, and from Ballinrobe to Tubbercurry. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Achonry, val. with Kilconduff, £320, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two Roman Catholic chapels (united) and two hedge-schools. Donmore is the neighbouring seat.

KILBEAR, a hmlt. in the par. of Okehampton, co. Devon, 2 miles N.W. of Okehampton.

KILBEG, or KILMAINHAMBEG, a par. in the bar. of Lower Kells, co. Meath, prov. of Meath, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Kells, its post town, containing the vil. of Carlanstown. It is 3 miles long and over 2 broad. The surface consists of a fair soil, and is crossed by the road from Kells to Ardee. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Newtown, £359, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is an old structure. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Stahalmony. There is a day school. Kilbeg, Ardlonan, Marvalstown, and Horath are the chief residences. Walter de Lacy, Lord of Meath, founded here a commandery for Knights of St. John of Jerusalem in the time of Richard I., which formed a cell to the priory of Kilmainham. Faint traces of this establishment are visible.

KILBEGGAN, a par. post and market town in the bar. of Moycashel, co. Westmeath, prov. of Meath, Ireland. The par. is 4 miles long by 3½ broad. It is 3 miles S.W. of Mullingar, and 56 from Dublin. The surface is flat and boggy, but comprises a fair proportion of arable land. It is traversed by the Dublin road and a branch of the Grand canal. The river Upper Brosna drains the southern district. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £53, in the patron. of the Bishop of Meath. The church was erected in 1764. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Rahue. There are National and six or seven other day schools. Balmont, Loughangore, and Meeldrum are the principal residences. Though containing a large number of miserable tenements, the town on the whole presents a comfortable appearance. The surrounding country is devoid of any interesting features. The most prominent buildings are the church, Roman Catholic chapel, Methodist chapel, and market-house. It was formerly a borough, chartered by James I., and returned two members to parliament before the Union. The government is now vested in the portreeve. The trade of Kilbeggan is very trifling, its staple being butter and corn. There are a brewery, distillery, flour and snuff mills. It is a chief police station and sessions town. Petty sessions are held every fortnight. There are a loan fund, and a dispensary within the Tullamore Poor-law Union. Coola House is the principal residence in the vicinity. Early in the 7th century St. Columb is said to have founded a religious establishment here, which was succeeded by a Cistercian abbey built in 1200 by D'Alton, the Anglo-Norman. It was granted in the 17th century to Oliver Lambert. In 1798 a regiment of Col. Blake's defeated the rebel Macmanus just outside the town. It is also the alleged scene of a battle with the Danes in 972. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on 6th January, 25th March, 16th June, 15th August, 29th September, and 28th October.

KILBEGNET, a par. in the half bar. of Ballymoe, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 9 miles N.E. of Newtown-Bellew. Athleague is its post town. It is 4½ miles long by 3½ broad. The surface consists chiefly of a level tract lying along the river Suck. There is much bog. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with Athleague, £178, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, and four or five day schools. Fairfield and Millford are the principal seats, and Creggs the chief village.

KILBEHENY, a par. in the bar. of Coshlea, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 9 miles S.E of Kilfinnane. Mitchellstown is its post town. The greater part of its boundary is described by the river Funcheon. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Emley, val. £320, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, and two day schools. Galtee Lodge is the beautiful seat of the Earl of Kingston.

KILBELFAD, a par. in the bar. of Tirawley, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Ballina, its post town. The par. is 8 miles long by 3 broad, and lies between Lough Conn and the river Moy. The surface abounds in lake scenery. There is also a good deal of bog and waste. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killala, val. with Kilmoremoy, £777, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballinahaglish. There is a National school at Cloughans, and three or four hedge-schools within the parish. Carramore is the seat of Colonel Jackson. Several islets lie in the lakes, on which are ruins of fortifications and ancient castles. Granite and limestone prevail in some parts.

KILBENNAN, a par. in the bar. of Dunmore, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Tuam, its post town. The par. is 5 miles long by 3 broad. There is a good deal of bog. The Clare river traverses part of the surface, as also does the road from Ballinasloe to Westport. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Tuam, £622, in the patron. of the bishop. Fartamore, Castlegrove, Newborough, Pollacorrane, and Clonkeely are the chief residences. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilconla. There are two day schools; also remains of a round tower, near which stood a monastery.

KILBERRY, a par. in the co. Argyle, Scotland, joined to Kilcalmonell, which see.

KILBERRY, a par. in the bar. of Narragh and Reban West, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Athy. It is 5 miles long by 3½ broad. The surface lies along the bank of the river Barrow. There is a large extent of pasture. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £28, in the patron. of the Dean of St. Patrick's. The church was erected in 1836 by means of a sum raised by subscription, and a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. There are three day schools and one Sunday-school. Barrowford, Shrowlan, and Geraldine are the principal residences. There are ruins of a church and of two castles.

KILBERRY, a par. in the bar. of Morgallion, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Navan, its post town. The par. contains the vils. of Kilberry and Wilkinstown. It is 2 miles long, and the same broad. The surface consists generally of a good soil, with some bog. The roads from Slane to Kells, and from Dublin to Clones, traverse the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Donaghpatrick, £380. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Oristown. There are two day schools.

KILBIRNIE, a par. and post town in the district of Cunninghame, co. Ayr, Scotland. The par. is 6 miles long by 5 broad, and is bounded by co. Renfrew, and the pars. of Beith, Dalry, and Largs. The Garnock Water runs through the interior, and the Routen burn drains the N.E. Kilbirnie Loch is a large sheet of water abounding with fish. The Hill of Staik rises 1,691 feet above sea-level. There is a very large proportion of pasture land. This par. is in the presb. of Irvine and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister has a stipend of £193. The church is an old building, and has been repaired at various times. It contains some curious oak carving. There are Free and Presbyterian churches and schools, and a Society school at Glengarnock. The ancient church was dedicated to St. Birnie, and belonged to the monastery of Kilwinning. The present parish comprehends the three ancient baronies of Kilbirnie, Glengarnock, and Ladyland. The mansion at Ladyland superseded the ancient residence, which was pulled down in 1815. The town is situated on the right bank of the Garnock, 9 miles N. of Irvine, and 13 from Paisley. It is a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. It consists principally of one street, containing many new and neat-built houses, and is lighted with gas. Two large flax and one linen thread mill employ a considerable number of the inhabitants. The Glengarnock iron-works are very extensive, as are also those of Kilbirnie. There are two branch banks. Glengarnock Castle, now a ruin, is supposed to have been the seat of the De Morville family in the time of Alexander I. Here are also the ruins of Kilbirnie Castle, once the seat of the Crawfords, viscounts of Garnock. It was destroyed by fire, together with an adjoining mansion, about a century and a half ago. Limestone and paving stone are quarried. A fair is held in the town in May.

KILBIXY, a par. in the par. of Moygoish, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Mullingar. Ballinacarry is its post town. It is 3½ miles long, by 2 broad. It lies between Lough Iron and the course of the Royal canal. It consists partially of good soil, and is traversed by the road from Dublin to Stokestown. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £112, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in the pointed style, built principally by the late Lord Sunderlin, on the Baronstown estate. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Templeoran. There are four day schools. Baronstown is the principal residence. Kilbixy was anciently a borough, and had a castle built by Hugh de Lacy in 1192; also St. Bridget's Leper Hospital, and a priory founded by Geoffrey Constantine, and granted to the family of Piers in 1590. Limestone is quarried.

KILBOLANE, a par. in the bars. of Orrery and Kilmore, and Upper Connello, cos. Cork and Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Charleville, its post town, containing the vil. of Millford. The par. is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface is varied, and consists of a middling soil. Some of the head-streams of the river Awbeg traverse the interior towards the S. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with Knocktemple, £193, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected by local subscription in 1834. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, which are united to Knocktemple; also a National, and one or two other day schools. Kilbolane Castle, of which the ruins alone remain, is alleged to have been built, soon after the Anglo-Norman invasion, by the Cogan family.

KILBONANE, a par. in the bar. of East Muskerry, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Bandon, its post town. It is 2½ miles long by 2 broad. The greater part of the surface consists of good land; the remainder is boggy waste. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £162, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1834. The parish is part of the Roman Catholic district of Kilmurry. There are parochial and several private schools. Lodge, Aherlow, and New Grove are the principal residences. Remains of the old church are still visible. Limestone is quarried at Aherlow.

KILBONANE, a par. in the bar. of Magunihy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Milltown, its post town. It is situated on the road from Milltown to Killarney, at the confluence of the rivers Laune and Gweestin. It is about 3½ miles long by 2 broad. The soil is clayey, with a large proportion of bog. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Molahiffe, £285. Divine service is performed in a private house. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Molahiffe and Kilcredane. There are three or four day schools. Limestone is quarried at Listry. Remains of Laune Castle and of the old church are visible.

KILBOURNE, a tnshp. in the par. of Horsley, hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 3 miles S.E. of Belper, its post town, 3 N.E. of Duffield, and 7 N.E. of Derby. The village, which is small, is situated on the Alfreton and Derby road. The inhabitants are principally employed in framework knitting. There is an abundant supply of coal of excellent quality, for which Kilbourne is famed. There are places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyans, with a Sunday-school. There is also a girls' school. Kilbourne Hall, the principal residence, is situated in a spacious park, the gardens of which contain a number of yew-trees of considerable antiquity, which are formed into the shape of birds.

KILBOY, several seats of this name — one near Cloyne, co. Cork; another near Nenagh, co. Tipperary, Ireland.

KILBOYNE, a seat of the O'Malleys, in the co. Mayo, Ireland, near Castlebar.

KILBRADRAN, or KILBRODERAN, a par. in the bars. of Lower Connello and Shanid, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Rathkeale. Limerick is its post town. The parish lies along the W. bank of the river Deel. It is 3 miles long by 1 mile broad, and consists principally of good land. The road from Askeaton to Newcastle traverses the interior; and a bridge, erected in 1747, spans the river. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Limerick (at present suspended), in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilcoleman. There is a private school. Ruins of the old church and of Rathgonin Castle still exist. Limestone rock prevails.

KILBRAGH, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Fethard. Templemore is its post town. It is 2 miles long by half a mile broad. The living is part of the benefice of Fethard, in the dioc. of Cashel.

KILBRANDON AND KILCHATTAN, a united par. in the district of Lorn, co. Argyle, Scotland, sometimes called Choan, or Cuan. It contains the island and post-office station of Easdale, besides the islands of Torsay, Luing, Seil, and Shuna, and the vils. of Ellenabaich, Colipool, Millbay, and Toberonochy. The par., which is 10 miles long by 6 broad, is bounded by the Sounds of Mull, Clachan, and Jura, the Atlantic ocean, and the par. of Kilninver. The surface consists principally of hilly pasture. Several good harbours indent the coast. This par. is in the presb. of Lorn, and synod of Argyle. The minister has a stipend of £173. The church stands on Seil Island, and was erected over a century ago. There are a Free church and school, Presbyterian church, and Independent chapel; likewise two parish schools. The ancient parishes of Kilbrandon, Kilchattan, Kilbride, and Kilchoan, constitute the present parish. Ardmaddy Castle is the seat of the Marquis of Breadalbane, who is the chief landowner. Ardincaple House is another residence. A bridge connects the mainland with Seil Island. Marble is worked at Ardmaddy. Silver, copper, and other ores are found, also slate, lime, and whinstone. The parish takes its name from St. Brandon, the patron saint of Bute. There is an abundance of fish and sea fowl, and the wild cat is occasionally met with.

KILBREEDY. See KILBRIDE, Ireland.

KILBREEDY MAJOR, a par. in the bar. of Small County and Coshlea, co. Limerick, prov. Munster, Ireland, 2 miles W.S.W. of Kilmallock, its post town. The surface consists for the most part of good arable soil, resting on a limestone bottom. It is traversed by the river Maig, and the road from Kilmallock to Charleville. The living is joined to the benefice of Kilmallock, in the dioc. of Limerick. Several raths occur on the hills.

KILBREEDY MINOR, a par. in the bar. of Coshma, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Kilmallock. Bruff is its post town. The surface consists chiefly of pasture, with a proportion of good arable soil. The river Maig drains it towards the N. The living is a suspended rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Limerick. This parish forms part of the Roman Catholic district of Effin. Ruins of the old church still exist.

KILBREW, a par. in the bar. of Ratoath, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Dunshaughlin, its post town. The par. is 2 miles long, and 1 mile broad. The surface consists of a first-rate soil, and is traversed by the road from Dunshaughlin to Garristown. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Tryvett, £315, in the patron. of the crown. The church was erected about a century ago. It has been subsequently enlarged, with the addition of a tower. This parish forms part of the Roman Catholic district of Creckstown. Kilbrew House is the adjacent residence.

KILBRIDE, an ancient par. in the district of Lorn, co. Argyle, Scotland, now joined to Kilmore.

KILBRIDE, a par. in the bar. of Upper Antrim, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Ballyclare. Doagh is its post town. The par. is 4½ miles long, by 1½ mile broad. The surface is mountainous, has a fair proportion of good arable land, and is traversed by the road from Ballymena to Doagh. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Connor, val. with Donegore, £295, in the bishop. The school-house serves as a place of Divine worship. There are four day schools, and two Sunday-schools. Holestone is the principal residence.

KILBRIDE, or CASTLECORR, a par. in the bars. of Clanmahon and Fore, cos. Cavan and Meath, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing the vil. of Mount-Nugent. Oldcastle is its post town. It is 7 miles long, by 3 broad. The surface consists of a tolerably good soil, and is crossed by the road from Dublin to Enniskillen. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £354. The church was erected in 1809, and has subsequently been repaired. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Killeagh. There are one public and four private schools. Castlecorr and Farrenconnell are the principal residences.

KILBRIDE, a par. in the bar. of Ida, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles E. of Mullinavat. New Ross is its post town. It is 1 mile long, and barely that broad. It is traversed by the road from Innistiogue to Waterford. The living is part of the suspended benefice of Kilcoan, in the dioc. of Ossory. This par. is part of the Roman Catholic district of Slieuruagh. There are ruins of a church.

KILBRIDE, a par. in the bar. of Newcastle, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Clondalkin, its post town. It is near 2 miles long and over 1 mile broad. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Clondalkin, £430, in the patron. of the archbishop. In the Roman Catholic arrangement the parish is united to Lucan, Clondalkin, and Palmerstown. Kilbery House and Baldonnel House are the principal residences. There are ruins of the old church and of Kilbride Castle. There is a powder-mill in the E. of the parish.

KILBRIDE, a par. in the bar. of Ballycowan, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing the town of Tullamore, its post town. The par. is 4½ miles long by 3 broad. The surface consists of a second-rate soil, with some bog. It is traversed by the Grand canal and by the rivers Silver and Clodagh. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £125, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a Gothic edifice erected near Tullamore in 1818. The Roman Catholic chapel is a commodious building united to that of Durrow. There are meeting-houses for Wesleyans and Quakers, also 20 day schools. Charleville is the residence of the Earl of Charleville. There are castle ruins at Aharne, Atighinanagh, Ballesillenury, and Shrahikane, also ruins of a castle built by Sir Jasper Herbert in 1226. There are several chalybeate springs.

KILBRIDE, or KILBRIDE LANGAN, a par. in the bar. of Kilcoursey, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing its post town, Clara, and the vil. of Charlestown. The surface extends along the bank of the river Brosna, and is traversed by the road from Tullamore to Athlone. It consists for the most part of an inferior soil. The par. is 3½ miles long by 3 broad. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Ardnurcher, £359, in the patron. of the crown. The church is at Clara. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Clara. There are meeting-houses for Baptists and Wesleyans, also parochial and seven or eight private schools. Kilcoursey is the principal residence.

KILBRIDE, a par. in the bars. of South Ballintober and Roscommon, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Roscommon, its post town. The par. is about 5 miles in length and the same in breadth. The surface consists of a fair soil, with a considerable proportion of bog. It is traversed by the road from Roscommon to Tulsk. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with Roscommon, £203, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel belongs to the Kilgeffin district. There are a public and several private schools. The chief residences are, Durham, Drumduff, and Hollywell. There are three police stations within the parochial limits. Limestone is abundant.

KILBRIDE, a par. in the bar. of Dunboyne, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Dunboyne. The par. is 3 miles long by 1½ mile broad. It is situated on the road from Dublin to Ratoath. The arable land is good; there is likewise some extent of pasture. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Dunboyne, £275, in the patron. of the crown. The church is in ruins. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Dunboyne. There is a private day school. There are traces of a Danish fort at Ballintra.

KILBRIDE, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Tramore. Waterford is its post town. The par. is 2½ miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface lies along the coast of Tramore Bay. It is part of the Roman Catholic district of Dunhill. There is a day school. The ruins of Cullen Castle stand near the village.

KILBRIDE, or KILBREEDY, a par. in the bar. of Tirawley, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 1 mile N.E. of Ballycastle. Killalla is its post town. The surface extends along the coast of Killalla Bay, and includes Downpatrick Head. It consists for the greater part of bleak mountainous moorland. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killalla, val. with Dunfeeny, £196, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a hedge-school.

KILBRIDE, a par. in the bar. of Fartullagh, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Mullingar, its post town. The par. is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface consists chiefly of good arable and pasture land, with a considerable proportion of bog. The road from Mullingar to Rochfortbridge traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £19. This parish forms part of the Roman Catholic district of Fartullagh. Kilbride, Whitewell, Frenchgrove, and Dunbodan Park, are the principal residences in the vicinity.

KILBRIDE, a par. on the E. side of the island of Arran, co. Bute, Scotland, containing the post-office vils. of Brodick (with its bay), Corrie, and Lamblash, including also Holy Isle. It is 14 miles long by 5 broad, extending from Lough Ranza to Dippin-point. The surface is hilly, rising 2,865 feet at Goatfell. This par. is in the presb. of Kintyre and synod of Argyle. The minister has a stipend of £274. The church, which stands at Lamblash, was erected in 1773. There is a chapel-of-ease at Brodick, and Free churches at Kilbride and Loch Ranza, besides an Independent chapel at Glensannox. An endowed school has been established at Brodick, and there are two public libraries in the parish. Scotch pebbles are found at Goatfell. Granite, slate, building stone, and limestone are worked. The Duke of Hamilton is the chief landowner.

KILBRIDE, a par. in the bar. of Scarawalsh, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Ballycanen, and 4 from Ferns, its post town. The parish is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface consists of a good soil. It is traversed by the road from Gorey to Oulart. The living is a rect. united to the benefice of Ferns, in the dioc. of Ferns. This parish forms part of the Roman Catholic district of Ferns, and has a chapel at Clorogue. There are a Quaker meeting-house and a private day school. Rockspring and Ballymore are the chief residences. Near the latter mansion are the ruins of an ancient church, standing on an elevated spot, and adjoining it is the "Giant's Bed." Jasper has been found, and excellent building stone is worked. Large quantities of butter are sent to the neighbouring markets.

KILBRIDE, a par. in the bar. of Arklow, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Arklow, its post town. The par. is 3½ miles long by 2 broad. The surface extends along the bank of the river Ovoca and the sea-coast. It consists generally of a good and well-cultivated soil. The road from Arklow to Wicklow traverses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val with Templemichael, £221, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is in the later English style, and was erected in 1834, by the Earl of Wicklow. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Newbridge and Baranisky. There are parochial, one or two day schools, and a Sunday-school. Shelton Abbey, partly within the parish, is the seat of the Earl Wicklow. Several other residences adorn the neighbourhood. A coastguard station is established in this parish. A fine view is obtained from an eminence, crowned by the ruins of the ancient church. In the burial-ground is a mausoleum of the Howards.

KILBRIDE, a par. in the bar. of Lower Talbotstown, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Blessington, its post town, on the road from thence to Wicklow. The par. is 9 miles long by 2 broad. The surface is mountainous, and very much diversified in contour. There is much bog and pasture land. Mounts Butler, Seefingan, and Dowry, are the most prominent summits. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Blessington, £395, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is in the later English style, and was erected in 1834 by the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Blessington. There are two private schools. Kippure Lodge and Kilbride Cottage are among the principal residences. A considerable quantity of granite is quarried. Iron ore is found at the Butter Mountain. There are two ancient burial-grounds in the parish, and several raths.

KILBRIDE, EAST, a par. and post town, in Middle ward, co. Lanark, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Hamilton, and 8 S. of Glasgow. The par. is 10 miles long by 3 broad, and is bounded by co. Ayr, and the pars. of Carmunnock, Blantyre, and Avondale. It contains the vils. of Aldhouse, Crosshill, Jackton, Braehead, Nerston, Kittockside, and Maxwelltown, and part of Busby. The surface is hilly, and has a large tract of moorland. Eldrig attains an altitude of 1,600 ft. The river White Cart traces part of the W. border. The other streams in the parish are the Powmillon, Kittock, and the Rotten Calder. The road from Glasgow to Muirkirk, and from Eaglesham to Hamilton, traverse the parish. This par. is in the presb. of Hamilton and synod of Glasgow and Ayr, in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £340. The church was built in 1744, and stands in the town. Its steeple is a remnant of the old church. There are likewise Free and United Presbyterian churches, and a parish school, with two branches. In the village are parochial and subscription libraries, and two friendly societies. The ancient parish of Torrance is incorporated with this parish. The church formerly belonged to the bishops of Glasgow. The village, which stands on the Glasgow and Muirkirk road, is a place of small importance, chiefly inhabited by weavers for the Glasgow houses. Dunlop cheese is made here. An annual fair is held for cattle in May. Calderwood is the seat of the Maxwells, who are the ancient heritors. A large tract of land in this parish anciently belonged to the Comyns, and afterwards to the Dunrod family. Crossbasket House, Lawmuir House, Limekilns House, Kirktonholm, and Cleughern Lodge are the other principal mansions. The two great doctors, J. and W. Hunter, were born at Long Calderwood. Mount Cameron is the spot where the well-known Mrs. Cameron, who was so strongly attached to the Stuart cause, resided, and was buried. Numerous fossils have been found, and limestone and iron ore exists.

KILBRIDEGLYNN, a par. in the bar. of Shelmaliere West, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Taghmon. The par. is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface lies at the foot of the Forth mountains, and consists of a middling soil. The rocks called Carrickfoyle and Raven are conspicuous features. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Killurin, £411, in the patron. of the bishop. This parish forms part of the Roman Catholic district of Glynn.

KILBRIDE, PASS OF, KILBRIDE PILATE, or PACE KILBRIDE, a par. in the bar. of Fartullagh, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Rochfortbridge. Kinnegad is its post town. The par. is 2½ miles long by 1½ mile broad, and includes the vil. of Milltown. The soil is of middling quality. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Enniscoffey, £129, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel at Milltown is united to that of Fartullagh. Gaulston Park is the demesne of Lord Kilmaine. The village occupies the site of a stronghold, built by the Tyrrel family, and wrested from them by Colonel Hewson in 1651. On the Kilmaine demesne there is a larch-tree, planted by Dean Swift. Near the village are ruins of a church, and traces of an entrenchment.

KILBRIDE, WEST, a par. and post-office village in the dist. of Cunninghame, co. Ayr, Scotland, 9 miles N.W. of Irvine. The parish lies along the coast of the Frith of Clyde, and is 6 miles long, by 3 broad. The surface is hilly, particularly in the E., where Kaim attains an altitude of 1,000 feet. There is a large proportion of moorland. Kilbride and Southannan burns traverse the interior, besides some others; as also does the road from Saltcoats to Greenock. The Ardrossan railway and harbour afford ready communication. This par. is in the presb. of Irvine, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister has a stipend of £260. The church was erected in 1732. There are Free and United Presbyterian churches, also Free Church schools, a public library, and two friendly societies. The church was anciently subordinate to Kilwinnig, and had several chapels. Southannan is the seat of the Earl of Eglinton. The town, a poor irregularly built place, stands upon the Greenock road, in a sheltered spot on the Kilbride burn, which turns two grain-mills. The inhabitants are principally weavers of the poorest description, working for the Glasgow and Paisley houses. Kirton Hall was the birth-place of Robert Simpson, the mathematician. On a prominent part of the coast, near Ardnell, or the "Three Sisters' Cliff," stands the ruin of Portincross Castle, where one of the Spanish Armada went down. Remains of a watch-tower are seen on Auld Hill. Law Castle, near the village, was an ancient seat of the earls of Kilmarnock. On the banks of the Southannan burn, which has a cascade, are the ruins of an old seat of the Semples. The prevailing rocks are sandstone and basalt, but millstones are also obtained at Kaim.

KILBRIN, a par. in the bar. of Duhallow, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles N.W. of Mallow, its post town. The par. is 4½ miles long by 3½ broad. The surface, which lies along the river Allua, is hilly, with a fair soil. It is traversed by the road from Liscarrol to Mallow. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with Liscarrol, £417, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is at Ballygraddy, and was built in 1788 by the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballyclough. There are an endowed school and two private day schools. Castlecor is the chief residence. Limestone is worked. The burial-ground of the ancient church is still in use.

KILBRINE. See KILBRYAN, co. Roscommon.

KILBRITTAIN, a par. in the bar. of East Carbery, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Bandon, its post town. The par. is 3 miles long by 1 mile broad. Its southern extremity is a short distance from Courtmacsherry Bay. The surface is rather hilly, and consists mostly of a light soil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £312, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a parish school, in which Divine service is held. The parish is included in the Roman Catholic union of Rathclarin, and was formerly part of the Courceys' territory. There are ruins of a castle which was taken by MacCarty Reagh, and which was subsequently garrisoned by the Bandon men. The present castle is the seat of Colonel Stawell. Good slate is quarried.

KILBRITTAIN, a vil. in the par. of Rathclarin, bar. of East Carbery, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. There is a police station in the neighbourhood. A turkey fair is held on the 22nd November.

KILBRODERAN. See KILBRADRAN, co. Limerick.

KILBROGAN, a par. in the bar. of Kinalmeaky, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, contains a portion of its post town, Bandon. The par. is 5 miles long by 3 broad, and extends along the N. bank of the river Bandon. The surface is varied, but consists of a second-rate soil, with some pasture land. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £578, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is at Bandon. There is likewise a chapel-of-ease in the parish. The Roman Catholic chapel belongs to the Bandon district. There are twelve public schools in the parish. In this locality are many seats; among them may be mentioned Rough Grove and Mount Pleasant. Freestone and slate are quarried.

KILBRONEY, a par. in the bar. of Orrery and Kilmore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Buttevant is its post town. The par. is 2 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The soil is good. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with Buttevant, £129, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a ruin, standing in an old burial-ground. The parish is included in the Roman Catholic district of Buttevant. There are ruins of Ballinguile Castle, and remains of an old residence of the Fitzjameses.

KILBRONEY, a par. in the bar. of Iveagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, contains Rosstrevor, its post town. The parish, which is 6 miles long by 4 broad, extends along the N. shore of Carlingford Bay, beneath the S. extremity of the Mourne mountains. Slieve-Bane attains an altitude of 1,595 feet. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dromore, val. £116, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is at Rosstrevor, is a cruciform structure, built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1814. There are two Roman Catholic chapels and seven day schools. The Lodge and Ballyedmond may be mentioned among numerous seats. Green Castle, now in ruins, was built by Walter de Burgh, Earl of Ulster, and demolished by the Irish in 1343. It was subsequently rebuilt, and was dismantled by Cromwell. There are also remains of Rosstrevor Castle and Castle Roe. The ruins of Kilbroney church stand on the Hillstown road. A large cave was opened in 1834, in which sepulchral relics were discovered. The Cloughmerne is the remaining portion of a cromlech. Lead ore exists among the hills.

KILBRYAN, a par. in the bar. of Boyle, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Boyle, its post town. The par. is 5 miles long by 1½ mile broad. It contains a great portion of Lough Key. This lough, with its islands, is the most attractive feature of the parish. On Trinity Island there are ruins of an abbey founded in the 7th century, where the annals of Lough Key were kept. On Inchmacnerin are monastic ruins supposed to be those of an establishment founded by St. Columb; and on Castle Island are the remains of MacDermot's castle. Church Island also contains ruins. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. £90, in the patron. of the bishop. This parish belongs to the Roman Catholic district of Boyle. There are three day schools. Rockingham is the seat of Lord Lorton.

KILBUCHO, a par. in the co. Peebles, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Broughton. It covers a surface of about 5,000 acres, and is hilly, with much heath. Carden Hill has an altitude of 1,400 feet. The Biggar-water, which flows on the N., is here joined by the Kilbucho-water, which comes round from the S.E. At Corscrine is the site of the English encampment previous to the battle of Biggar. Kilbucho is the chief residence. The ancient barony belonged to the Grahams of Dalkeith and Abercorn. There is a well dedicated to St. Bede. This par. is ecclesiastically joined to Broughton and Glenholm. [See BROUGHTON.]

KILBURN, a hmlt. and suburban district in the pars. of Hampstead and Willesden, Holborn div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, 2½ miles from Hyde Park corner, and 4 N.W. of St. Paul's, London. It has stations on the West London, and London and North-Western railways. The Great Western railway and the Grand Junction canal also pass near the village. It was anciently called Cuneburn, from its situation at the head of a bourne or brook which feeds the Serpentine; and was the site of a Benedictine nunnery, founded on the site of Godwyn's hermitage, as a cell to Westminster Abbey. The revenues of the priory at the Dissolution were estimated at £121 16*s*. The village, which is situated on the ancient Watling Street and on the road to Edgware, contains some good houses. It has recently been greatly extended by the erection of new streets and shops, and has at the N.E. end an extensive ale and porter brewery. There is a medicinal spring near the site of the priory, called Kilburn Wells, formerly of much note, the water of which possesses aperient properties. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of London. The church has a turret and cupola. There are National and infant schools. Goldsmith's cottage, in the London road, in which he wrote the "Vicar of Wakefield" and the "Deserted Village," was pulled down in 1837.

KILBURN, a par. and tnshp. in the wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 2 miles N. of Coxwold, and 6 S.E. of Thirsk. Easingwold is its post town. The par., which is extensive, comprises the tnshps. of Kilburn, Oldstead, Thorpe-le-Willows, and Wass, with the hmlt. of Hood-Grange. The soil is clayey, with gravel in parts. The village is situated on the slope of an acclivity, at the foot of which runs a rivulet. The impropriate tithes, belonging to the Archbishop of York, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £405. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £99, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a plain ancient structure, with a tower. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There is a school for children of both sexes, built and endowed by the archbishop of York, a Sunday-school is also held. At Hood-Grange was formerly a Cistercian priory, founded as a cell to the abbey of Newburgh by Robert de Mowbray in 1138. The walls of the church have been converted into a barn. An ancient stone font was dug up here, having a square base, and four grotesque figures supporting the angles. The Archbishop of York is lord of the manor.

KILBURN, a station on the Derby and Ripley branch of the Midland railway, 3 miles from Ripley, and 7¼ from Derby.

KILBURNE, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Waterford, its post town. The par. is near 2 miles in length and the same in breadth. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Waterford, forming part of the corps of the deanery and part of the precentorship of Waterford Cathedral. There is a public school. Butlerstown Castle, Butlerstown House, and Evergreen Cottage are the principal residences of the neighbourhood.

KILBY, a par. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 6½ miles S.E. of Leicester, its post town, 3 from the Wigston station on the Midland railway, and 10½ N.E. of Lutterworth. The village, which is small, is situated on the Union canal and a branch of the river Soar. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the framework knitting and in agriculture. About half a mile from the village is a commodious wharf. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £63. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a plain edifice, with a low tower. There is a Sunday-school, also a place of worship for the Independents.

KILCADZOW, a vil. in the par. of Carluke, co. Lanark, Scotland, 3 miles N. of Lanark.

KILCALMONELL-WITH-KILBERRY, a par. in the district of Kintyre, co. Argyle, Scotland, containing the post town of West Tarbert. It is 14 miles long by 4 broad. The surface is very hilly, including the Sliobhghoil, or "Hill of Love." Loch Tarbert lies on the W. and Loch Fyne on the E. There is a bold coast line open to the Atlantic, the most conspicuous features along which are Stornoway Bay and Ardpatrick Head. There is a considerable tract of woodland. This par. is in the presb. of Kintyre and synod of Argyle. The minister has a stipend of £218. Both divisions have a church. There are a Free church, a chapel-of-ease, and an Independent chapel; also two parish schools, and six private ones. The Duke of Argyll is one of the principal landowners. There are remains of several forts and of Tarbert Castle. Seals and otters frequent these parts, and there is abundance of fish and fowl.

KILCAR, a par. in the bar. of Banagh, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles W. of Killybegs, its post town. The par. is near 6 miles in length, and the same in breadth. The surface extends along the N. side of Donegal Bay, beneath the Slieve League Mountain. It is mountainous and boggy. The river Glen falls into Teelin Bay. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Raphoe, val. £357, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1828. There is a Roman Catholic chapel; also a parochial and three other schools. The dispensary is within the Glenties Poor-law Union. This parish is the reputed site of a monastery presided over by St. Carthach about the 6th century.

KILCARA, a par. in the bar. of Clanmaurice, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles S.W. of Listowel. It contains the vils. of Ballinageragh and part of Lixnaw. The par. is about 4 miles in length, by the same in breadth. It is situated on the rivers Feale and Brick. The road from Listowel to Ardfert traverses the interior. The soil is generally good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Duagh, £262. This parish is part of the Roman Catholic district of Lixnaw. Limestone is extensively worked for agricultural purposes.

KILCARAGH, a par. in the bar. of Gaultiere, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Waterford, its post town. The parish lies along the banks of the river Suir, and on the road from Waterford to Passage. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Waterford, forming part of the benefice of Trinity, and in the patron. of the crown.

KILCARN, a par. in the bar. of Skreen, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Navan, its post town. The par. is 1½ mile long by 1 broad. It lies along the E. bank of the river Boyne. The surface consists of a good soil; and is traversed by the road from Dublin to Enniskillen. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Skryne, £507, in the patron. of the crown. The church is in ruins. It is part of the Roman Catholic district of Athlumney, and has a chapel. Kilcarn House is the principal residence. There are large corn-mills.

KILCARRA, a vil. in the par. of Campbeltown, and district of Kintyre, co. Argyle, Scotland. On it stands Campbeltown lighthouse.

KILCARRIG, a vil. in the par. of Dunleckny, bar. of East Idrone, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is situated on the bank of the river Barrow, not far from Leighlinbridge.

KILCASH, a par. in the bar. of Iffa and Offa East, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles N.E. of Clonmel. Waterford is its post town. It is 2 miles long, and nearly the same in breadth. The surface, which lies beneath the Slievenaman mountains, is hilly, consisting of poor land. It is traversed by the road from Clonmel to Dublin. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. £49, in the patron. of the crown. The church is a modern erection. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilsheelin. There are two National and six or seven other day schools. This parish is the site of an ancient seat of the Ormonde family; also of an ancient church. A fair is held on the 5th August.

KILCASKAN, a par. in the bars. of Bear and Glanarought, cos. Cork and Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 10 miles E.N.E. of Castletown-Bearhaven, its post town. This par. is 16 miles long by 8 broad. A considerable portion of the surface lies on the N.W. shore of Bantry Bay. It is a mountainous and wild district, containing the summits of Hungry Hill, Esk, and Ghoul. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ross, val. £285, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1810 by the late Board of First Fruits. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, also eight private schools. There are police and coastguard stations in the parish. The Lodge is the seat of the Earl of Bantry. There are ruins of a church situated among the hills; also of a fort at Drumlane. Slate, iron, and copper are worked.

KILCATHERINE, a par. in the bar. of Bear, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Castletown-Bearhaven, its post town. It contains the vils. of Caherkeen, Coulagh, and Eyeries. The surface forms part of the peninsula stretching between the Kenmare estuary and Bantry Bay. The greater part of the parish is wildly mountainous and boggy. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ross, united with Bearhaven or Killeconenagh. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, and seven private day schools. At Allihies are large copper mines in operation. There are remains of an old church at Quoilah Bay, also a stone called a "gollane."

KILCAVAN, a par. in the bar. of Bargy, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Taghmon. Wexford is its post town. It is about 1 mile in length, and the same in breadth. The surface consists of a fair soil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £230, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1820. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Bannow. There are six daily schools and a Sunday-school; also an Augustine convent at Gransstown, in which Dr. Doyle was educated. Ballongton and Harristown are the principal residences.

KILCAVAN, a par. in the bars. of Ballaghkeen and Gorey, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Gorey, its post town. The par. is 3 miles long by 2½ broad. Tara Hill is a prominent feature. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Gorey, £809, in the patron. of the crown. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Ballyfad and Kilmichaelogue. There is a day school. Ballinastragh is the seat of Sir T. Esmonde. There are ruins of an old church and of Little Limerick Castle, an ancient seat of the Esmondes. Building stone is worked. Fairs are held on the 5th April, 21st August, and 12th November.

KILCHATTAN, an ancient par. in co. Argyle, Scotland, now joined to Kilbrandon.

KILCHATTAN, a post-office vil. standing on the bay of its name in the par. of Kingarth, co. Bute, Scotland, 5 miles S. of Rothesay. The bay opens out opposite the Great Cumbrae, and has anchorage varying from 11 to 15 fathoms in depth.

KILCHENZIE, an ancient par. in co. Argyle, Scotland, now joined to Killean.

KILCHOLUMKILL, an ancient par. in co. Argyle, Scotland, now joined to Morven.

KILCHOMAN, a par. in the district of Islay, co. Argyle, Scotland, containing the post-office vil. of Port Charlotte and the vils. of Portnahaven and Port Wemyss. It lies between lochs Gruinard and Indaal, on the S.W. side of the island of Islay. The par. is 20 miles long by 6 broad. Near Rhinus Point is the Isle of Orsay, upon which a lighthouse is erected. This par. is in the presb. of Islay and Jura, in the synod of Argyle, in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £158. The church was built in 1825. There is also a government and a Free church, and an Independent chapel. There are four schools supported by public associations, and several private schools. Here are the remains of six ancient churches and burial-grounds. An old castle of the Macdonalds stands near Lough Gurim, and in the parish are several obelisks. The cod-fishery is pursued with considerable success.

KILCHONAN, an ancient par. in co. Perth, Scotland, now joined to Fortingall.

KILCHREEST, a par. in the bars. of Dunkellin and Loughrea, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of its post town, Loughrea. The parish is a little over 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface is varied and has a considerable extent of woodland. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kilmacduagh, val. with Killinane, £452, in the patron. of the Marquis of Clanricarde and the bishop alternately. Woodville is the principal residence in the parish. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a public school, and a private school.

KILCHREEST AND ISLANDS, a par. in the bar. of Clonderalaw, co. Clare, prov. Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Killadyser, containing the vil. of Ballynacally. Kildysart is its post town. It is 5 miles long by 2 broad, and lies at the confluence of the rivers Fergus and Shannon. The surface consists of soils of various quality. The road from Kildysart to Ennis traverses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Kildysart, £451. There are a Roman Catholic chapel; also four day schools. Paradise and Fort Fergus are the principal residences. There are ruins of Dangan Castle and of an ancient church. Inismoor is the principal island [which see].

KILCHRENAN-WITH-DALAVICH, a par. and post-office vil. in the district of Lorn, co. Argyle, Scotland, 8 miles N.W. of Inveraty. The united par. is 12 miles long by 8 broad. It extends along both shores of Loch Awe. The surface is hilly and heathy [see also DALAVICH]. This par. is in the presb. of Lorn and synod of Argyle. The minister has a stipend of £171. Each division of the parish has its church, erected about a century ago. There is Free Church accommodation; also three parish schools, a girls' industrial school, and a parish library. Eridine House and Sonachan House are the principal mansions. The Marquis of Breadalbane and Campbell of Sonachan are the two principal landowners.

KILCHRIST, an ancient par. in Ross, Scotland, now joined to Urray.

KILCHURN, a ruined castle on the banks of Loch Awe, co. Argyle, Scotland, 2 miles W. of Dalmally. It was originally built by Sir Colin Campbell, in 1440, and strengthened in 1745 against the Pretender, but is now a ruin belonging to the Duke of Argyll.

KILCLEAGH, a par. in the bar. of Clonlonan, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing the greater part of its post town, Moate. It is 7 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 2½ miles. The surface is varied but well cultivated. The river Shannon passes in the vicinity, and the road from Dublin to Galway traverses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £312, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1782, and has been subsequently enlarged. There are two Roman Catholic chapels and a Quakers' meeting-house; also four public and seven private schools. Castle Daly, Ballymahown, and Newbridge are the principal residences. The ruins of Clonlonan Castle are in this parish.

KILCLEEHEEN. See KILCULLIHEEN, co. Waterford.

KILCLIEF, a par. in the bar. of Lecale, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. Strangford is its post town. The par. is 2½ miles in length and the same in breadth. The surface consists mostly of good land. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Down, val. £180, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a small modern building near the sea. The parish gives name to a Roman Catholic district, and contains a chapel. There is a parish school. Kilclief Castle, of which some remains exist, was formerly a seat of the bishops of Down. There are ruins of a lepers' hospital. The parish is the reputed site of an abbey presided over by St. Eugene and St. Neill. In the vicinity is Strangford Lough.

KILCLONAGH, a par. in the bar. of Eliogarty, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Thurles, its post town. The par. is barely a mile in length, and about half a mile in breadth. The surface is boggy, with a fair proportion of good land. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Moyne, £441, in the patron. of the bishop. There is one private school.

KILCLONBROOK, or CREMORGAN. See KILCOLMANBROOK, Queen's County.

KILCLONE, a par. in the bar. of Upper Deece, co. Meath, prov. Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Kilcock, its post town. It is 2½ miles long by 2 broad. The soil is middling. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Raddonstown, £363, in the patron. of the crown. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Raddonstown and Butlerstown. There is a private day-school. Mulhussey Castle is the principal seat.

KILCLONFERT, a par. in the bar. of Lower Philipstown, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Philipstown, its post town. The par. is 7 miles long by 3 broad. It lies near the course of the Grand canal. There is a good deal of bog. The living is a suspended rect. in the dioc. of Kildare, in the patron. of the crown. The church is in ruins. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Philipstown. There are public, private, and Sunday schools. Kilduff, Cloncarl and Mount Briscoe are the principal mansions.

KILCLOONEY, a par. in the bars. of Lower Fews and Orior, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing part of Markethill, its post town. The par. is 6 miles long by 4 broad, and includes the vil. of Cairnmhanaghan. The surface is rather hilly and boggy. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £741, in the patron. of the primate. The church is a small edifice erected in 1794 by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Lisnadil and Armaghbreague. There are two Presbyterian meeting-houses, and eight public day schools. Cotton and linen weaving occupy some of the inhabitants. There are some traces of the old church, which was burnt in 1641. Clay, slate, and building stone are quarried, and lead ore and coal are found.

KILCLOONY, a par. in the bar. of Clonmacnowen, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing part of its post town, Ballinasloe, also part of the vil. of Cleaghmore. The par. is 3 miles long by 2½ broad. It lies along the W. bank of the river Suck at the termination of the Grand canal. The surface is traversed by the great roads from Dublin to Galway and Westport. There is some bog. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. with Creagh, £216, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which stands at Ballinasloe, was built about 1790, and has subsequently been enlarged. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Creagh. There are two Methodist meeting-houses in the parish; also a private and six public schools. Garbally is the residence of the Earl of Clancarty. Previous to the battle of Aughrim the English encamped here. The bridge of Millea Cheán was the scene of a fierce encounter. There is a chalybeate spring at Poolboy.

KILCOAN, a par. in the bar. of Ida, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Mullinavat. Listerlin is its post town. The par. is 2½ miles in length by 1 mile broad. The living is a suspended rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, and patron. of the bishop. This parish is part of the Roman Catholic district of Sliernagh.

KILCOAN. See KILCOWAN, co. Wexford.

KILCOCK, a par., market and post town in the bars. of Ikeathy and Oughterany, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is a station on the Dublin and Galway railway. The par. is 4 miles in length, and over 2 in breadth. The surface consists of a good soil, and is traversed by the Royal canal and the Dublin and Galway road. The town, which is irregularly built, stands on a small stream called the Ryewater, and contains a brewery and a distillery. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with three others, £320, in the patron. of the crown. The church, which is old, stands in the town. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Cloncurry. There are two public and two private schools. Courtown and Laragh are the principal seats. The dispensary is situated within the Celbridge Poor-law Union. Annual races are held in the vicinity of the town. Market day is Wednesday. Fairs are held in every month except January.

KILCOCKAN, or KILCROHANE, a par. in the bars. of Coshmore and Coshbride, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles S. of Cappoquin. Youghal is its post town. The par. is 4 miles long by 2 broad. The surface extends along the E. side of the Blackwater. The soil is indifferent. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with Templemichael, £98, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Templemichael. Strancally Castle is a Gothic structure surrounded by fine grounds. The ancient castle, now in ruins, was a seat of the Desmonds, and was granted to Sir Walter Raleigh after its forfeiture.

KILCOE, a par. in the bar. of West Carbery, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Skibbereen, its post town. It is 3½ miles long by 2½ broad. The surface lies towards the head of Roaringwater Bay. It consists partly of excellent soil, but there is a large proportion of rocky waste. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ross, val. with the chapel-of-ease of Clear, £260, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Abbeystrowry and Aughadown. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits. There are three day schools. On a tongue of land stretching out into the bay stand the ruins of Kilcoe Castle, built by the MacCartys. Clay slate is the prevailing rock.

KILCOLAGH, a par. in the bar. of Frenchpark, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Frenchpark. Elphin is its post town. The par. is 5 miles long by 2 broad, and includes Lough Bally. The surface has much bog and a proportion of good land. Here are two hedge-schools.

KILCOLGAN, a par. and post town in the bar. of Dunkellin, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is 4½ miles long and the same broad, and includes several islands in Galway Bay. The road from Galway to Gort and Ennis traverses the interior. The surface consists of a light soil. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmacduagh, val. with ten others, £275, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is an old building, was repaired in 1820. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, and several day-schools, also a dispensary within the Galway Poor-law Union. This parish is the reputed site of a monastery founded in the 6th century. A coastguard station is established here.

KILCOLMAN, a par. in the bars. of Magunihy and Trughanacmy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing part of its post town, Milltown. This par. is 4½ miles long and 3 broad, and contains the vil. of Brakhill. The surface, which lies principally within the Maine and Lane valleys, consists of excellent soil, and is traversed by the roads from Tralee to Killarney, and from Castle-Island to Cahirsiveen. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. £66. The church was built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilbonane. There are a Methodist meeting-house and four day schools. Kilcolman Abbey is the seat of Sir John Godfrey. Killah Abbey, in the neighbourhood, was founded by Geoffrey de Mariscis for monks of the order of St. Augustine, in the time of Henry III.

KILCOLMAN, a par. in the bars. of Ballybritt and Clonlisk, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2½ miles S.E. of Birr, its post town. It is 5 miles long and 4 broad. The surface is watered towards the W. by the Little Brosna, and consists of middling soil. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. £161, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Etagh. Here are six day schools. The principal seats are Rathmore, Dromoyle, and Sharavogue. This parish is the alleged site of a monastic establishment founded by St. Colman at the close of the 6th century. Two convents are also said to have stood here.

KILCOLMAN, a par. in the bar. of Clanmorris, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing its post town, Claremorris. It is 7 miles long and over 6 broad. The surface is much diversified, and includes a large area of bog. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. £260, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1828 by a gift and loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are two Roman Catholic chapels and a Wesleyan meeting-house, also several day schools. There are ruins of an old church and a castle.

KILCOLMAN, a par. in the bars. of Costello, Frenchpark, and Coolavin, cos. Mayo, Roscommon, and Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing Ballaghaderreen, its post town. It is 8 miles long and 6 broad, and includes a part of Lough Garra. The surface has a large extent of moor and bog, and is traversed by the road from Longford to Ballina. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Achonry, val. with Castle-More, £232, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1798 by the late Board of First Fruits. There are two Roman Catholic chapels united to that of Kilmoree. There is a school under the National Board, and four or five others. Edmondstown and Coolarin are the principal residences.

KILCOLMAN, a par. in the bar. of Shanid, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is 3 miles long and near 2 broad. The soil is for the most part poor. The living is a suspended rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, in the patron. of the bishop. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Clounagh, also a day school.

KILCOLMAN, a vil. in the par. of Ringrone, in the bar. of Courceys, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles W. of Bandon. It is situated on the banks of the river Bandon.

KILCOLMANBANE, a par. in the bars. of Cullenagh and East Maryborough, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2½ miles S.E. of Maryborough, its post town. It is 3 miles long and 2 broad. The surface is boggy, and is traversed by the Maryborough and Ballinakill road. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. with Maryborough, £485, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two day schools. Ballyknocken, Rathleague, Sheffield, and Woodville are the principal residences.

KILCOLMAN CASTLE, in co. Cork, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Doneraile. It was the seat of the poet Spenser, on the bank of the "gentle Mulla," and the place where he wrote his "Faerie Queen," "Colin Clout's come home again," "State of Ireland," &c. It was burnt by the Earl of Tyrone in 1598, and is now a ruin.

KILCOLMANBROOK, KILCLONBROOK, or CREMORGAN, a par. in the bar. of Cullenagh, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Maryborough, its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface consists generally of good land, with some bog, and is traversed by the road from Monastereven to Kilkenny. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £29, in the patron. of the bishop. Cremorgan House is the principal residence.

KILCOLUMB, a par. in the bar. of Ida, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing the vil. of Ballincrea, 5 miles N.E. of Waterford, its post town. The par. is 4 miles long and about the same broad, and is bordered on either side by the river Barrow and the road from Waterford to Innistiogue. The surface is hilly, but contains a fair proportion of pasture land and good arable soil. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Dunkill, £436, in the patron. of the crown. Here are a day and a Sunday school. Rochestown and Rathinure are the principal residences.

KILCOMB, a par. in the bar. of Scarawalsh, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Camolin is its post town. The par. is near 4 miles long and 2 broad. It is situated on the banks of the river Bann. The surface consists of good land, and is traversed by the road from Gorey to Ferns. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Tomb, £526, in the patron. of the bishop. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Ferns, likewise two day schools in the parish. The demesne of Camden is within the limits of this parish.

KILCOMENA. See KILLACONENAGH, co. Cork.

KILCOMENTY, a par. in the bars. of Owney and Arra, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, near Newport-Tip, its post town. It is 3 miles long and the same broad. The surface is hilly, containing some of the lower elevations of the Keeper mountains. It is traversed by the road from Birr to Limerick. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Newport, £822, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Kilnearath and Kilvolane. Here are a National school and four private day schools. Cragg, Birdhill, Annaholty, and Parteen are the principal residences.

KILCOMIN, a par. in the bar. of Clonlisk, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, near Shinrone, its post town. It is 3 miles long and near 2 broad. The little Brosna passes through the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Shinrone, £487, in the patron. of the bishop. Here are a day and a Sunday school. Oakwood, Rutland, and Glass, are the principal residences. The site now occupied by the hamlet is the alleged site of a religious establishment founded in the 7th century by St. Cumin.

KILCOMMOCK, a par. in the bars. of Moydow, Rathcline, and Shrule, co. Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing Keenagh, its post town. It is 6 miles long and 4 broad, and includes part of Lough Bannow. The surface is boggy, and the soil of middling quality. The interior is traversed by the road from Dublin to Strokestown, and by the Royal canal. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardagh, val. £437, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1837, at the sole cost of the Countess Dowager of Boss. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and Dissenting meeting-house, also several day schools. Mosstown is the principal residence.

KILCOMMON, a par. in the bar. of Erris, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing Belmullet, its post town. It is 30 miles long by 16 broad, and includes part of Lough Curramore. The surface, which is hilly and much diversified in contour, is watered by the river Owenmore. The principal summits are, Knockaduff, Signaltower, Knocknalower, Slievetyagh, Glencastle, Knocknascollop, Knocklattercus, with some others. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Killala, val. £264, in the patron. of the bishop. Divine service is performed at Belmullet Court House. There are 4 Roman Catholic chapels and 14 day schools.

KILCOMMON, a par. in the bar. of Kilmaine, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing Hollymount, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 2 broad. The surface is very varied, but includes a fair proportion of good soil. It is drained by the river Robe. The road from Dublin to Westport traverses the parish. The living (also called Hollymount) is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with two others, £515, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is situated without the parochial limits, was repaired in 1818 by a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. Here are two Roman Catholic chapels and eight day schools. Hollymount House and Annfield are among the principal residences.

KILCOMMON, a par. in the bars. of Arklow and Newcastle, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Wicklow is its post town. It is 4 miles long and 3 broad. The surface lies partly along the left bank of the river Avonmore. The living is a chplry. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Wicklow, £655, in the patron. of the archbishop. There are three day schools. Fairview Cottage is the principal residence.

KILCOMMON, a par. in the bar. of South Ballinacor, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing Tinahely, its post town. It is 5 miles long and 3 broad. The surface is mountainous and boggy, but the arable soil is productive. There are four principal summits in the parish, and the road from Wicklow to Newtown Barry traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Crosspatrick, £500, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is ancient, was repaired in 1821 by a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Crosspatrick. There are two day schools. Ballybeg is the principal residence.

KILCONDUFF, a par. in the bar. of Gallen, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing Swineford, its post town. Its surface has a large extent of moor and bog, and cultivation is much behindhand. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Achonry, val. with two others, £320, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1810 by the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Meelick. There are seven day schools. Brabazon Park is the demesne of Sir William Brabazon, Bart. The road from Ballina to Ballaghdireen crosses the parish.

KILCONICKNY, a par. in the bars. of Athenry, Dunkellin, and Loughrea, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. Croughwell is its post town. It is 3 miles long and 2½ broad. The surface consists of a fair soil, with good pasture. It is traversed by the road from Dublin to Galway. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. with three others, £310, in the patron. of the bishop. There are three Roman Catholic chapels in the union, also two Sunday and three day schools. Lurgan is the principal residence. There are ruins of four castles, also of a church and chapel.

KILCONIERIN, a par. in the bars. of Athenry, Dunkellin, and Loughrea, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. Croughwell is its post town. It is 4 miles long and 3½ broad. The surface consists of good arable land and pasture. It is watered by the early course of the Carnamart stream. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. with Kilconickny, £310, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Lickerrig. The principal residences are, Holly-Park House, Tallyho Lodge, and Moyode Castle.

KILCONLA, a par. in the bar. of Dunmore, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Tuam, its post town. It is 4 miles long and over 3 broad. The surface is flat and boggy, and is traversed by the road from Dublin to Westport. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Tuam, £622, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1821 by the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilbannon. There are two day schools.

KILCONLY, a par. in the bar. of Iraghticonnor, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Ballybunian is its post town. The parish is situated at the mouth of the Shannon, facing Carrigaholt Bay. The living is a preb. and in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. £68, in the patron. of the bishop. There are three day schools. Beale Castle, Devil's Castle, and Leek Castle, formerly stood on the coast.

KILCONNELL, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles E. of Cashel. It is 1 mile long by half a mile broad. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Fethard, £1,076, in the patron. of the bishop.

KILCONNELL, a bar. in the co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is 13 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 11 miles. Its boundaries are, Killain on the N. and N.E., co. Roscommon on the E., Clonmacnoon on the S.E., Athenry on the S., and Tyaquin on the W. The surface is generally hilly, with some bog. The river Suck traces the eastern boundary. It contains the par. of Kilconnell, and parts of Ahascragh, Aughrim, Ballymacward, Fohanagh, Grange, Kilgerrill, Killaan, Killallaghtan, Killosolan, Killimordally, Kiltullagh, and Monivea. This barony lies within the Poor-law Union of Ballinasloe and Loughrea.

KILCONNELL, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of Kilconnell, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. The parish is 4 miles long and 3 broad. The surface is flat and cold, and is traversed by the road from Ballinasloe to Galway, upon which stands the town. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Clonfert. A private house in the town is used for Divine worship. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Aughrim. There are three day schools. The town is a poor place, and the alleged site of a religious house founded by St. Conal. A friary was also founded here by William O'Kelly in 1400, of which there are ruins still remaining. Fairs are held in May, August, and November.

KILCONNY, a vil. in the bar. of Lower Loughtee, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, near Belturbet.

KILCONQUHAR, a par. in the district of St. Andrew's, co. Fife, Scotland, 6 miles S.W. of St. Andrew's. It contains the post town of Colinsburgh and the burgh of Earlsferry. It is a station on the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee railway. The par. is 8 miles long by 2 broad. Its boundaries are the Frith of Forth, and the pars. of Elie, Largo, Cameron, and St. Monance. The surface is diversified with hill and dale, and is traversed by several excellent roads. The soil is fertile. Dunniekier-Law and Kincraig Hill are the principal elevations. Near the village is Kilconquhar Loch, a piece of water much frequented by swans. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in weaving and tanning. This par. is in the presb. of St. Andrew's and synod of Fife. The minister has a stipend of £315. The church is a Gothic structure erected in 1821. There are besides, a chapel-of-ease, two United Presbyterian churches, and an Independent chapel, also four or five schools. Kilconquhar House is the seat of Sir John Trotter Bethune, Bart., the principal landowner. Balcarres is the residence of Sir Coutts T. Lindsay, another heritor. At Kincraig Hill are several caves, one of which is the reputed hiding-place of Macduff from the pursuit of Macbeth. Limestone, marble, and coal are obtained.

KILCONRY, a par. in the bar. of Bunratty Lower, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Newmarket. The par. is 3 miles long by 2 broad, and forms the extremity of a peninsula running out between the mouths of the rivers Shannon and Fergus. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Iraddery, £509. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Tomfinlough and Bunratty.

KILCONWAY, a bar. in the co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is 13 miles long by 9 broad, and is bounded by Dunluce, Glenarm, Antrim, and Toome. The rivulet Maine passes through the barony. It contains the pars. of Dundermot, Dunaghy, Finvoy, Newtown-Crumlin, and Rasharkin, and parts of Ahogill, Ballymoney, Killagan, and Loughgeel. It is within the Poor-law Unions of Ballymena and Ballymoney.

KILCOO, a par. in the bar. of Upper Iveagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing Newcastle, its post town. It is 6 miles long and the same broad, and lies on Dundrum Bay. The surface includes part of the Mourne mountains and the Slieve Donard, which attains an altitude of 2,449 feet. The road from Newry to Downpatrick traverses the interior. The living is a rect. united to Kilkeel, in the dioc. of Down. The tower was added to the church by the late Board of First Fruits in 1812. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and seven day schools.

KILCOOLE, a par. in the bar. of Newcastle, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Delgany is its post town. It is a station on the Dublin and Wicklow railway. The par. is 4 miles long and 2 broad. The surface is marshy on the coast, but hilly in the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Delgany, £500, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is in ruins. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Newcastle. There are four daily schools and a Sunday-school. Several residences adorn the neighbourhood, among which may be mentioned Altadore, Finny Park, and Ballygannon.

KILCOOLEY, a par. in the bar. of Roscommon, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Tulsk, on the road from thence to Strokestown, its post town. The soil is good. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elfin, val. with Ardclare, £126, in the patron. of the bishop. There are four or five day schools.

KILCOOLY, a par. in the bar. of Leitrim, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Loughrea. Kilcolgan is its post town. The par. is 2½ miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface is somewhat rocky. It has a fair proportion of good land, and is crossed by the road from Loughrea to Banagher. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmacduagh, val. with Kilcolgan, £275, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Kilmeen and Leitrim. There is a day school.

KILCOOLY, a par. in the bars. of Crannagh, Eliogarty and Slievardagh, cos. Kilkenny and Tipperary, provs. of Leinster and Munster, Ireland. Thurles is its post town. It is 6 miles long by 4 broad, and contains the vil. of New Birmingham. The surface is somewhat hilly, but the soil is good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. £395, in the patron. of the crown. The church was erected in 1829 by the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Buolick. There is a Methodist meeting-house in the parish, also National and one other day school. Kilcooly Abbey stands near the remains of an abbey founded by Donagh O'Brien in 1200. The dispensary is within the Ballnyonty and Kilcooly Poor-law Union. Fairs are held in April and October.

KILCOOLY, a par. in the bar. of Upper Navan, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1½ mile N.E. of Trim, its post town. It is a little over a mile in length, by the same in breadth. The parish lies on the left bank of the Boyne. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Trim, £559, in the patron. of the bishop.

KILCOONA, a par. in the bar. of Clare, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Headford, its post town. It is 4 miles long and near 3 broad, and lies on the E. shore of the bay of Loughcorrib. The road from Ballinrobe to Galway traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Headford, £834, in the patron. of the bishop. Here is a day school.

KILCOP, a par. in the bar. of Gaultiere, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5½ miles S.E. of Waterford, and 4 N. of Dunmore. It is a mile long and half a mile broad. This parish is generally considered part of Crooke [which see].

KILCORBAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Stradbally, bar. of Dunkellin, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Oranmore. There are ruins of St. Corban's chapel, said to have been founded in 732, and afterwards granted to a body of Dominican friars by the Bishop of Clonfert.

KILCORCORAN, or KILCORKERAN, a par. in the bar. of Duhallow, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel and a day school.

KILCORGAN. See KILCOLGAN, co. Galway.

KILCORKEY, a par. in the bar. of Castlereagh, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing the vil. of Bellanagare, 4 miles N.E. of Castlereagh. It is 3½ miles long by the same in breadth. The surface is slightly hilly. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, also three day schools. Bellanagare is the seat of The O'Connor Don, M.P.

KILCORMICK, a par. in the bars. of Ballaghkeen and Gorey, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Oulart, its post town. It is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The surface, which consists generally of a fertile soil, is drained on the W. by a small stream falling into the Slaney, and towards the E. by the Awinbanna. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £437, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1766, and has subsequently been enlarged. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Clone. There are four day schools and a Sunday-school. Mount George is the principal residence. The rebellion of 1798 was commenced here under Murphy the priest.

KILCORNAN, a par. in the bar. of Kenry, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, near Pallaksenry, its post town. It contains the vil. of Stonehall. The parish, which is about 4 miles square, lies along the S. shore of the estuary of the Shannon. The soil is good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £570. The church was erected in 1830 by the aid of the late Board of First Fruits and John Waller, Esq. There are two Roman Catholic chapels united to that of Cappa, also four daily schools. This district was the ancient seat of the O'Donovans. The castle was forfeited by the Desmonds to the Waller family, and in 1641 fell into the hands of Ireton. There are ruins of Carrigonan-Castle, and likewise of two churches.

KILCORNAN, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles W. of Tipperary. Dromkeen is its post town. It is 1½ mile long by 1 broad. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Emly, val. with Dromkeen, £480, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in ruins. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel. Loughney Castle formerly stood here.

KILCORNEY, a par. in the bar. of Burren, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Kilfinora. Ennistymond is its post town. It is 3½ miles long by 2 broad. The surface is rocky and broken. There are ruins of a castle, a cromlech, and some interesting caves.

KILCORNEY, a par. in the bar. of Muskerry West, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles E. of Millstreet. Mallow is its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface is hilly, and includes a part of the Muskerry mountains. The interior is watered by the Racool rivulet, a tributary to the Blackwater. The living is a suspended rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Clonmeen. There are two hedge-schools. A Danish fort is seen at Downour. The parish is also the site of an ancient monastic establishment. Kilcorney House is the principal residence.

KILCOURSEY, a bar. in King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is 6 miles in length and breadth, and is bounded by the bars. of Garry Castle and Ballycowan, and by the co. of Westmeath. The surface is flat and boggy, and is traversed by the river Brosna. It contains the par. of Kilbride-Langan, and parts of those of Ardnurcher, Kilcumreragh, and Kilmanaghan, with the vils. of Charlestown and Clara. This barony lies within the Poor-law Union of Tullamore. It was the ancient district called Muintir Hagan, and gives title of viscount to Earl Cavan.

KILCOWAN, a par. in the bar. of Bargy, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, near Bridgetown, its post town. It is 1 mile long and about the same broad. The surface consists of good soil. It lies towards the head of Ballyteigue Bay, and is crossed by the road to Wexford from Clonmines. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Mulrankin, £500, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a day school. Baldwinstown Castle is within the limits of the parish.

KILCOWANMORE, a par. in the bar. of Bantry, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Enniscorthy. Taghmon is its post town. The surface consists of part of the Boro Valley. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Owenduff, £92. Here is a day school.

KILCOWEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanllwchaiarn, co. Montgomery, 5 miles S.W. of Aberayron. It is situated on New Quay Bay.

KILCREA CASTLE, in the bar. of Muskerry, co. Cork, Ireland, 8 miles N. of Bandon. It is a ruin on the banks of the river Bride, and formerly belonged to the McCarthys. There are also the remains of an ancient friary near the old bridge.

KILCREDAN, a par. in the bar. of Imokilly, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of Castle Martyr, its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad, and lies towards the N. of Ballycottin Bay. The soil is mostly good. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with two others, £364, in the patron. of the crown. The church is over 200 years old. The Roman Catholic chapel is at Kilmacdonough. Here are two day schools. Ballycrenan Castle, standing near the coast, was the seat of the Carews.

KILCREDANE, a par. in the bar. of Magunihy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N. of Killarney. Milltown is its post town. It is about 1 mile square, and consists of a soil varying in quality. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Molahiffe, £285. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Molahiffe and Kilbonane. There are two hedge-schools.

KILCREDAUN, a coastguard station and fishing village in the bar. of Moyarta, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Carrigaholt. It is situated on a small promontory at the mouth of the Shannon, to the W. of Carrigaholt Bay. A lighthouse was built here in 1834, and the light is visible at a distance of 16 miles.

KILCREGGAN, a post-office vil. in Rosemeath, co. Dumbarton, Scotland, 3 miles E. of Strone. A watering-place on the E. side of the opening to Loch Long.

KILCROAN, a par. in the bar. of Ballymoe, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Glennamaddy. Athleague is its post town. It is 4 miles long by 3 broad, and contains the vils. of Tober and Cornamucklagh. The surface lies along the W. bank of the river Suck, and is crossed by the road from Ballymoe to Dunmore. The soil is good, and there is much bog. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with Donamon, £157, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilbeguet. There are a Sunday and two day schools. Glinsk is the residence of Sir Joseph Burke, Bart.

KILCROHANE, a par. in the bar. of Dunkerron, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing Sneem, its post town. It is 14 miles long by 6 broad, and extends along the coast of the Kenmare estuary, between the river Blackwater and Hoghead. The surface is a tract of wild mountain and bog. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with one other, £355, in the patron. of the crown. The church was built in 1810 by the late Board of First Fruits. There are four united Roman Catholic chapels in the parish, likewise several day schools. The principal mansion is Derynane, late the residence of Daniel O'Connell. A remarkable fort stands upon the coast, called the Estaigue-an-ar, and near the village are the ruins of the abbey of Darynaney.

KILCROHANE, a par. in the bar. of West Carbery, co. Cork, 6 miles S.W. of Bantry, and 7 N. of Skull. The parish, which is often considered a part of Durrus, is situated on the coast near Sheep's Head, between Bantry and Dunmanus bays. The surface is generally hilly and bare. The living is a vic. united to the rect. of Durrus. The principal residence is Donovan's Cove, near the ruins of the old castle of the O'Donovans.

KILCROHANE. See KILCOCKAN, co. Waterford.

KILCRONAGHAN, a par. in the bar. of Dunkerron South, co. Kerry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing its post town, Tobermore. It is 5 miles long and 3 broad. The surface is mountainous and boggy. The parish is bounded on the E. and N. by the rivulet Moyola, and is traversed by the road from Moneymore to Dungiven. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £412, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an old building. Here are Presbyterian and other Dissenting meeting-houses, also six Sunday, and several day schools. Fort William is the seat of the Rev. J. S. Knox.

KILCROW, a small lough in co. Monaghan, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Cootehill. On its banks is Kilcrow House.

KILCRUMP, a hmlt. in the par. of Whitchurch, co. Waterford, Ireland, 4 miles W. of Dungarvan. There are quarries of black marble.

KILCRUMPER, a par. in the bars. of Condons and Clangibbon, and Fermoy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, near Kilworth, its post town. It is 3 miles long and 2 broad. The surface consists of a peninsula formed by the confluence of the rivers Blackwater and Tuncheon. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with Kilworth, £712, in the patron. of the bishop. Here is a day school. Ballinacarriga is the principal residence. Limestone is quarried.

KILCULLANE, a par. in the bar. of Smallcounty, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Crumper. It contains Herbertstown, its post town. It is 1 mile long by half a mile broad. The surface consists of good land, and is watered by the river Commogue. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Emly, united with Cahercorney. Kilcullane House is the seat of Viscount Guillamore. Hurley Castle is in the neighbourhood. This parish came to the Bourchier family from the Desmonds.

KILCULLEN, a bar. in co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is 5 miles long and 4 broad. It is bounded by Connell, Southness, and co. Wicklow, and contains the par. of Kilcullen, with part of Tully. It lies within the Poor-law Union of Nass.

KILCULLEN, a par. in the bar. of Kilcullen, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing the greater part of the post town Kilcullen-Bridge, and the whole of the vil. of Old Kilcullen. The par. is 5 miles long by 3 broad. It lies within the valley of the Liffey. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £375, in the patron. of the Chancellor of Christ Church. The church was built in 1815, partly by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, a Sunday and several day schools. Castle Martin and Halverstown are the principal residences. The hamlet of Old Kilcullen was formerly a walled market town and a place of some importance, but fell into rapid decay on the building of the village of Kilcullen-Bridge [which see]. It is now interesting as containing several monuments of antiquity. A monastery was founded here by St. Patrick in the 5th century. The town was sacked by the Danes in 1037. The wall was thrown round it in 1319 by the Fitz Eustaces and the Fitz Martins, who also founded an abbey in 1460. It was granted to Spenser the poet. The town was occupied by the parliamentarians in 1647, and General Dundas defeated the rebels here in 1798. There are remains of a round tower and a cross near the abbey.

KILCULLEN-BRIDGE, a post and market town in the pars. of Carnalway and Kilcullen, bars. of South Naas and Kilcullen, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Old Kilcullen, and 26 from Dublin. It is situated on the river Liffey, and the road from Dublin to Carlow. The bridge was erected in 1319 by Maurice Jakis. There are a fever hospital, dispensary within the Naas Poor-law Union, and a police station. Petty sessions are held occasionally. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on the 2nd February, 25th March, 22nd June, 8th September, 2nd October, and 8th December.

KILCULLIKEEN, a par. in the bar. of Gaultiere, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1 mile N.E. of Waterford, its post town, and partly within the limits of that city. It is 3 miles long and 1 mile broad. The surface, which consists of a fair soil, extends along the banks of the Suir. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Macully, £107, in the patron. of the Bishop of Cashel. The church was built in 1823 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Rathpatrick and Kilmakevogue. Here are two day schools. New Park is the residence of Sir J. Newport, Bart. The parish is the site of a nunnery founded by Dermot Mac-Murrough in 1151; it formed a cell to the nunnery of St. Mary de Hogges, at Dublin.

KILCULLY, a par. in the bar. of Cork, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Cork, its post town. The surface consists chiefly of good pasture land, and is traversed by the road from Cork to Mallow. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £96, in the patron. of the bishop. Divine service is held in a private house. Kilcully House is the neighbouring residence.

KILCUMMER, a par. in the bar. of Fermoy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Castletownroche, its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface is somewhat mountainous, and extends along the banks of the rivers Awbeg and Blackwater. The village is situated beneath the Nagle mountains. Here is a day school. Renny was formerly a residence of Spenser. Fairs are held in April, July, September, and December.

KILCUMMIN, a par. in the bar. of Moycullen, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing the post town of Oughterard. The par. is 16 miles long and 9 broad. It lies between Lough Corrib and Kilkerrin Bay. The interior is mountainous and boggy. The road from Galway to Clifden traverses the interior. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £201, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in Oughterard in 1810 by the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Killeen. Here are several day schools. Lemonfield is the residence of Captain O'Flaherty.

KILCUMMIN, a par. in the bar. of Tirawley, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Ballay Castle. It contains the vil. of Rathlacken, its post town. It is 1½ mile long and half a mile broad. The parish is situated on Killala Bay, near Kilcummin Head. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killala, val. with Lackan, £198. The French landed, in 1798, at a small creek in this parish.

KILCUMMIN, a par. in the bar. of Magunihy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Killarney, its post town. The surface lies principally within the valley of the river Flesk, and forms part of a mountainous and wild district. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Killarney, £534, in the patron. of the crown and the Earl of Kenmare. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, united to that of Killarney, and three day schools. Shannagh is a residence situated in the E. of the parish. There is a monastery at Rathmore. Limestone is quarried in this parish.

KILCUMMIN. See KILCOMMON, Ireland.

KILCUMMIN, or KILLIEWHEMEN. See FORT AUGUSTUS, co. Inverness, Scotland.

KILCUMNY, or DRUMCREE, a par. in the bar. of Delvin, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Castletowndelvin. It contains Collinstown and Drumcree, its post town. It is 2½ miles long by 2 broad. The surface is somewhat boggy and cold, and is traversed by the road from Dublin to Granard. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with three others, £215, in the patron. of the crown and the Bishop of Drogheda. The church was built in 1812 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are two day schools. Limestone is the prevailing rock.

KILCUMRERAGH, a par. in the bars. of Kilcoursey, Clonlonan, and Moycashel, King's County and co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Clara. Kilbeggan is its post town. It is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The road from Dublin to Galway passes through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Ardnurcher, £359, in the patron. of the crown. There is a Roman Catholic chapel and two day schools. Ballintubber, Rosemount, Ballybeg, and Primrose Lodge are the principal residences.

KILCUNNY. See KILCONNY.

KILDA, ST., or HIRTA, the most westerly of the Western Isles of Scotland. It lies in 57° 50′ N. lat., and 7° 40′ W. long. It is situated about 29 miles from the mainland, and 37 miles S.W. of the Flannan Isles. It belongs to the par. of Harris, and co. of Inverness. Its size is about 3 miles long by 2 broad, and it has anchorage in 4 to 7 fathoms on the N.E. side. The only accessible landing-point is on the S.E. side, the remainder of the coast being surrounded by precipitous cliffs. The surface of the island is rocky, and has four prominent hills, the highest of which is 1,380 feet above sea-level. Some rocky islets lie off the coast, the principal of which are Soa and Borera. The inhabitants occupy a small cluster of huts on the S.E. side, and are maintained by their scanty crops and by snaring the sea-fowl which swarm on the rocks. Feathers, sheep, and butter are paid as rent. Gaelic is the prevailing language. There is a church, but no minister, or medical man. The Christian Knowledge Society have a school and missionary station. A resident baron bailie exercises jurisdiction over this little world.

KILDACOMMOGE, a par. in the bars. of Carra and Gallen, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Castlebar, its post town. The parish is in three detached portions, lying close together, and measuring in the whole 4½ miles long by 4 broad. The surface lies principally within the valley of the Castlebar river. It is hilly, and includes the skirts of Spullagadon and Slieve-Conn hills. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Castlebar, £614, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Furlough. There are two day schools.

KILDALE, a par. in the W. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 6 miles E. of Stokesley, its post town, and 6 from Guiseborough. It is a station on the North Yorkshire and Cleveland railway. An oratory was commenced here in 1312 for the brotherhood of Crutched Friars, but was abandoned by order of Archbishop Grenfield. Here was also a castle of the Percys. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1775. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, val. £120. The church, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, is an ancient Saxon building, with a tower containing one bell. The charities produce £1 per annum. There is a parochial school for children of both sexes, also a Sunday-school.

KILDALKEY, a par. in the bar. of Lune, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S. of Athboy, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface is drained towards the E. by the Athboy stream. The soil is generally good. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £100, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Athboy. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Killaconnigan. There are two day schools. Moyrath is the seat of the Nugent family, and Kildalkey House was the seat of the Rev. J. O'Connell. The village stands on the road from Trim to Castletowndelvin.

KILDALLAN, a par. in the bar. of Tullyhunco, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Killashandra. Ardloher is its post town. The par. is 5 miles long by 3 broad. It contains part of Lough Oughter, and is crossed by the road from Killeshandra to Ballyconnel. The soil is generally indifferent. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kilmore, val. £485, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1816, partly by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Tomregan. There are a Presbyterian meeting-house, and several day schools. Carn Cottage is the principal residence.

KILDALLOCK. See KILDOLLAGH, cos. Antrim and Londonderry.

KILDALTON, a par. in the district of Islay, co. Argyle, Scotland. Bowmore is its post town. It is situated on the S.E. part of the island of Islay, and comprises several small islands, the chief of which are Texa-Cavrach and Inersay. The par. is 15 miles long by 6 broad, and contains the vil. of Port-Ellen. The surface is hilly, and includes four lochs within its limits. The principal features along the coast are M'Arture's Head, Ardmore Point, Lough Knock, Lagavuline Harbour, Lowdinas Bay, and the Mull of Oe. This par. is in the presb. of Islay and Jura, and synod of Argyle, in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £158. The church was erected in 1824. There are besides a government church and a Free church, also several schools, but not parochial. The castle called Dun-naohmaig, belonging to the Macdonalds, in Islay, is in ruins. There are remains of two Danish forts, and of three or four churches. Here is a monument to the memory of a Mrs. Campbell, also two pillar towers near Lough Knock, called the Two Sisters; and at Kilnaughten are two pillar crosses.

KILDANGAN, a par. in the bar. of Offaly West, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Kildare. It is 1 mile long by half a mile broad, and extends along the E. bank of the river Barrow. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with Nurney, £152, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Nurney and Monastereven. There are ruins of an ancient castle formerly belonging to the Fitzgerald family.

KILDARE, an inland co. in the prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It lies between 52° 50′ and 53° 25′ N. lat., and between 6° 27′ and 7° 10′ W. long. It is 40 miles in length from N. to S., and 27 in breadth from E. to W. Its boundaries are co. Meath on the N., cos. Dublin and Wicklow on the E., co. Carlow on the S., and Queen's County, King's County, and Westmeath on the W. It covers an area of 653 square miles, or 418,436 acres, of which 356,787 are arable lands, 51,854 are not cultivated, 8,288 are in plantation, 1,017 are under water, and 490 are occupied by the sites of towns. The general character of the surface is flat. The principal rising grounds are the Rathcoole hills, which form the western skirts of the Dublin mountains. At the S. end of the Bog of Allen are the Red Hill, Dunmurry Hill, Grange Hill, and the hill of Allen. S. of this point the surface maintains an unbroken level till it reaches the spurs of the Wicklow mountains on the S.E., which divide the southern part of the county into two parts, on the E. declining to the river Liffey, and on the W. to the Barrow. N. of the Dunmurry range a portion of the great Bog of Allen extends over some 36,000 acres. The Royal canal passes along the N. border of the county, and sometimes enters the county of Meath. The Grand canal crosses the entire county, sending off branches to Naas, Milltown, and Athy, where it joins the Barrow river. This river enters on the W. side of Kildare, and takes a southerly course, passing Monastereven, to the S.W. boundary of the county. The Feagile, Blackwood, Finnery, Griese, and Leer are tributaries to the Barrow. The river Liffey enters Kildare on the eastern border, and first takes a westerly course, and afterwards flows N.N.E. to Leixlip. The Morrel, Rye, and several small rivulets are tributaries to this river within the county. The river Boyne has its source in Kildare, near the western boundary, and passes out into the county of Meath. About 20 square miles of the great granite district of Wicklow and Carlow occupy a portion of the S.E. extremity of this county. A strip of schistose rock, about 5 miles in breadth, stretches along the eastern frontier. The hill of Allen and the Dunmurry hills are chiefly composed of greenstone, porphyry, and crystalline greenstone, containing hornblende and felspar. In the other parts of the county the prevailing rock is mountain limestone, but so much embedded in bog as to be little available for agricultural purposes. There are appearances of copper at Dunmurry Hill. Owing to the vast expanse of bog within the county, the climate is found to be more moist than in any other inland county of Ireland. Dense and humid mists hang over the N.W. district almost without intermission.—The system of agriculture is rapidly improving, though in many places it is still very imperfectly carried out. Up to the commencement of the present century the exhausting plan was everywhere adhered to. The principal crops raised are oats, wheat, potatoes, turnips, barley, rye, clover, &c. The soil is a rich stiff loam in the more fertile districts, but bog and rock in others. The fences are chiefly constructed of stone and turf. The farms range in size from 15 to 300 acres. The breeds of cattle and sheep are from introductions of the first class.—The whole of the county, excepting a small portion in the N., anciently belonged to the kingdom of Leinster, and was divided into the districts of Imail under the O'Tooles, Hy-Failge under the O'Connors, and Hy-Ceallen under the Mackellys. In 1296 it was constituted a county, and John Fitzmaurice Fitzgerald was created Earl of Kildare in 1316. In 1534, Gerald, the then earl, being summoned to England to answer certain charges, his son stirred up a rebellion, and the lands were forfeited to the crown. The line was restored in a younger brother in 1552. The battle of Kilrush was fought in 1642, when a Roman Catholic army of 15,000 was defeated by the royalists under the Earl of Ormonde.—The population of the county in 1851 was 95,724, and in 1861, 90,946. It returns two members to parliament (ten before the Union), and had a constituency in 1859 of 3,143. It is governed by a lieutenant and custos rotulorum, vice-lieutenant, sheriff, and 14 deputies, with about 70 magistrates. It is in the Home circuit, the assizes being held at Naas, and within the south-eastern or Curragh military district. The military stations are at Athy, Naas, Newbridge, and the Curragh encampment. Naas is the chief police station, presiding over 45 others. The greater part of the inhabitants are agriculturists, but some few are occupied in the paper, cotton, and woollen-mills. The corn trade is very extensive, and numerous mills are in full operation.—This co. is divided into 14 bars., viz.—Carbury, Clane, Connell, Ikeathy and Oughterany, Kilcullen, Kilkea, Moone, North and South Naas, Narragh, East and West Reban, East and West Offaly, and North and South Salt, which comprise 116 pars. The principal towns are Athy and Naas, where the assizes and sessions are held, Maynooth, Kildare, Kilcock, Monastereven, Timoline, Rathangan, Leixlip, Kilcullen-Bridge, and Newbridge. The principal seats are Carton, of the Duke of Leinster; Moore Abbey, of the Marquis of Drogheda; Bishop's Court, Earl Clonmel; Palmerstown, Earl Mayo; Lyons House, Lord Cloncurry; Bert House, Lord Downes; Rusborough, Earl Milltown; Belan House, Lord Aldborough; Carbery Castle, Viscount Harberton. The objects of interest to the antiquarian are—Kildare cathedral and round tower, Castle-Dermot Abbey, Newbridge Abbey, Naas monasteries; stone crosses at Moone, Castle-Dermot, and Old Kilcullen; the castles of Leixlip, Donadea, Kilkea, Castle-Dermot, Kildare, Rheban, Maynooth, Corrifig, Timolin, Ballyteague, and Woodstock; pillar stones at Harristown, Mullaghmast, Punch's-town, Forenaught, and Kilgowan; pillar towers at Kildare, Castle-Dermot, Old Kilcullen, Oughterard, and Taghadoe; also earthworks, raths, moats, and tumuli, which are numerous in all parts of the county. The principal communications of the county, besides the canals already alluded to, are the Great Southern and Western railway, which crosses it; and the roads from Kildare to Newbridge, Naas, Clane, Celbridge, Leixlip, Maynooth, Ballymore Eustace, and Blessington; from Kildare to Kilrush, Athy, Ballytore, Timolin, Castle-Dermot, and on to Carlow.

KILDARE, a par., post and market town, in the bars. of Connell and East Offaly, co. Kildare, prov. Leinster, Ireland, 31 miles from Dublin. It is a station on the Carlow branch of the Great Southern and Western railway, and stands on the mail coach road to Limerick. The parish consists of a main body and a detached district; the length of the former is 5 miles, and its greatest breadth 3; the length of the latter is 2 miles, and its greatest breadth 1 mile. The most elevated ground is in the S. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kildare, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The cathedral we shall notice below. There are two Roman Catholic chapels and several day schools. The town of Kildare is the seat of a diocese, and was once a parliamentary borough. Its name, Kill-dara, signifies "the church of the oak." It is said to have been founded in the 6th century, and was constantly ravaged by the Danes and by the kings of Leinster. It was taken afterwards by the English, who built a strong castle, improved the place, and held a parliament here in 1339. It was chartered by James II., and was governed by a sovereign, two portreeves, &c., but is now under the jurisdiction of the county magistrates. It is a police station, and petty sessions are held once a fortnight. The town consists of one principal street, with several branching thoroughfares. Its commanding position and numerous ancient buildings at first sight impresses the stranger with a feeling of its importance, but on closer inspection we find it a poor place, without trade, accommodation, or beauty. One of the most conspicuous features of the town is its round tower, which is in a very perfect state, and is 132 feet in height. The addition of a modern embattled summit by no means adds to the interest of this venerable object. The cathedral, which stands at a short distance from the tower, seems to have been originally founded at a remote period. It was restored in the 13th century by Bishop Ralph, and was repaired in the time of Henry VII., but is now in a ruinous condition. The choir is used as the parish church, and contains the family tombs of the earls of Kildare and the dukes of Leinster. In the churchyard are the remains of an ancient stone cross, and near the pillar tower are the vestiges of a small chapel, ascribed to St. Bridget, and called the "fire-house." A Roman Catholic chapel, a chapel attached to a Carmelite friary, and another connected with the Presentation convent, are the other places of worship. The public buildings are the market-house, county infirmary, built by the Duke of Leinster, National schools, school under the dean and chapter, and turf club-house. The Curragh of Kildare is among the finest commons in Europe. Races are held on it four times a year. The town is the property of the Duke of Leinster, to whom it gives title of marquis. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on the 12th May, 29th June, 19th September, 29th October, and 21st December. The diocese of Kildare is now joined to that of Dublin. It includes 43 benefices. The chapter consists of a dean, archdeacon, eight prebendaries, precentor, chancellor, treasurer, and four canons. The Roman Catholic diocese takes with it that of Leighlin, and comprises 46 parishes, Carlow being the episcopal seat.

KILDARRACK, a vil. in the par. of Kirkcowan, co. Wigton, Scotland, 8 miles N.E. of Glenluce.

KILDAVIN, a par. in the bar. of Forth, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Wexford, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface includes part of the Forth mountains in the N., and is traversed by the road from Wexford to Baldwinstown. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, but forms part of the benefice of St. Patrick's, Wexford. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Rathmacnee and Killeen. Johnstown is the chief residence. Rathlannan Castle is in the parish.

KILDAVIN, a vil. in the par. of Barragh, bar. of St. Mullins Upper, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Clonegall. It is situated on the Derry rivulet. Limestone pebble is obtained in large quantities.

KILDEAN, a hmlt. in the par. and co. of Stirling, Scotland. It is situated near the bridge by which the English crossed the Forth at the battle of Stirling.

KILDELLIG, a par. in the bar. of Clarmallagh, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Rathdowney, its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. The soil is generally good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a day-school. Near the village is the site of a monastery which was destroyed by the Danes in 885.

KILDEMOCK, a par. in the bar. of Ardee, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Ardee, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface is tame, consisting of a fair soil, and is crossed by the road from Ardee to Dublin. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. with Ardee, £898, in the patron. of the primate. Drakestown is the chief residence.

KILDERRY, a par. in the bar. of Gowran, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Kilkenny, its post town. It is 2¼ miles long by 1¼ mile broad. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. £120, in the patron. of the bishop.

KILDIMO, a par. and seat of a post-office in the bar. of Kenry, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Adare. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface consists of good land, and lies along the W. bank of the river Maig. It is traversed by the road from Limerick to Askeaton. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £115, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Limerick. The church was erected in 1725. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ardcanny. There are six day schools. Bollane House is the neighbouring residence. There are remains of a Knights Templars' house, built by the O'Donovans in 1290; also of Cullan Castle, founded early in the 16th century by the Fitzgeralds.

KILDOLLAGH, or KILDALLOCK, a par. in the bar. of Upper Dunluce, N.E. liberties of Coleraine, cos. Antrim and Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Coleraine, its post town. It is near 2 miles square. The soil is productive, and is drained towards the river Bann. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Connor, val. £55, in the patron. of the bishop. There are Sunday and day schools.

KILDONAN, a par. in co. Sutherland, Scotland, containing the post village of Helmsdale. It is about 25 miles long, and its extreme breadth is 16. The par. is bounded by the co. of Caithness, the ocean, and the pars. of Clyne, Loth, Farr, and Reay. The surface is generally mountainous. The best arable land is found in the Strath of Kildonan and the valley of the river Helmsdale. Several small lakes, abounding with fish, and numerous burns, diversify the interior. The latter give name to the straths Iligh, Frigh, Tilney, and Beg. This par. is in the presb. of Dornoch, and synod of Sutherland and Caithness. The minister has a stipend of £158. The church has been lately built at Helmsdale, where there is also a Free church. In the village are three public schools, besides several schools about the parish. The district is subject to destructive floods. There are several Pictish forts, tumuli, and cairns at Suinalhugh. At this last named spot the Danish invaders Suenus and Aulver Roster fought in the 12th century. Sheep breeding is extensively carried on, and game is abundant.

KILDONAN CASTLE, in the Isle of Arran, co. Bute, Scotland. It is situated on the S. side of the island, opposite Pladda lighthouse, and is now in ruins.

KILDORRERY, a par. in the bars. of Condons, Clangibbon, and Fermoy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 23 miles N. of Cork, and 135 from Dublin. Mallow is its post town. It is 3 miles long and 1½ mile broad. The surface forms a peninsula between the river Funcheon and a small stream falling into that river. It is crossed by the road from Mitchelstown to Mallow, and consists of a fertile soil. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with Nathlash, £209, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Molagga. Fairs are held in the village on the 1st May, 27th June, 3rd September, and 27th November for horses.

KILDRESS, a par. in the bar. of Upper Dungannon, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Cookstown, its post town. It is 8 miles long by 6 broad. The surface in the W. and midland districts is mountainous and moorish, the best land being found in the E. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val £645, in the patron. of the primate. The church was built in 1818. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Dunamore. There is also a Presbyterian meeting-house, and two or three day schools. Oaklands is the principal residence. Granite, limestone, building stone, and basalt prevail.

KILDROUGHT, a par. in the bar. of North Salt, co. Kildare, Ireland, 11 miles W. of Dublin, and 1 mile from the Hazelhatch station of the Great Southern and Western railway. It is situated on the river Liffey, which is here spanned by a bridge, and near the Royal canal. It contains the post and market town of Celbridge [which see]. The land is highly cultivated, and many of the inhabitants are engaged in the cotton and woollen factories. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with five others, £400, in the patron. of the crown. The church is a modern edifice standing in the town of Celbridge, as does also the Roman Catholic chapel. There is a free school, with an income from an endowment of £310, founded by the Conolly family. There are several seats in the neighbourhood.

KILDRUM, a par. in the bar. of Corkaguiny, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Dingle. Newcastle is its post town. It lies between Dingle and Ventry harbours. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. £30, in the patron. of the bishop. Burnham House is the seat of Lord Ventry. There are remains of two old forts.

KILDRUMFERTON. See CROSSERLOUGH, co. Cavan.

KILDRUMMY, a par. in the district of Alford, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 6 miles W. of Alford. Mossat is its post town. It is 7 miles long by 4 broad. The surface lies within the valley of the Don, and is entirely screened by well-wooded hills. It consists of a fertile soil. This par. is in the presb. of Alford and synod of Aberdeen, in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £159. The church stands near the river. The principal residences are, Ward House, Clova, and Brux. The most attractive object is the ruin of Kildrummy Castle, which formerly belonged to the Stuarts, and afterwards to the earls of Marr, by whom it was forfeited in 1715. This ruin occupies an elevated site, and consists principally of a tower and chapel, with subterraneous passages. There are Pictish dwellings, and a stone pillar 9 feet high, on the moor. "Rock cork" is met with. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in February and May, Friday after the third Tuesday in July, and the Thursday after the second Tuesday in August.

KILDRUMSHERDAN, a par. in the bar. of Tullygarvey, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Cootehill, its post town. It contains the vils. of Clementstown and Tullyvin. It is 6 miles long by 4 broad. The surface has a considerable extent of mountain and bog, and is traversed by the road from Dublin to Clones. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmore, val. £597, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1795 by the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ashfield. Annalee is the principal residence. There are ten day schools. Some remains of old fortifications still exist.

KILDWICK, a par. and tnshp. in the E. div. of the wap. of Staincliff, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Skipton, and 5 N.W. of Keighley. Leeds is its post town. It is situated on the river Aire and the Leeds and Liverpool canal, and is a station on the Midland railway. It contains the tnshps. of Bradley, Cononley, Cowling, Farnhill, Glusburn, Silsden, Steeton, and Sutton. The land is chiefly pasture, and many of the inhabitants are employed in the woollen mills and the spinning of yarn. There are also an iron foundry and forges for the manufacture of machinery. Freestone is extensively quarried. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1773. The living is a vic.* with the curs. of Cononley and Sutton annexed, in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £357, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is of great antiquity, and has a square tower containing six bells. In the interior is a stained-glass E. window, also shields of stained glass of the Rycroft family. The oak roof is much admired. There is a monument of Robert de Styveton, a Knight Templar of the 14th century. In addition to the parish church, there are two district churches at Cowling and Silsden, the livings of both which are perpet. curs. varying in val. from £121 to £150. The parochial charities produce £56 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. Miss Currer is lady of the manor, and resides at Eshton Hall. Kildwick Hall has been in the possession of the Currer family for upwards of three centuries.

KILDYSART. See KILLADYSERT, co. Clare.

KILEDMOND, a vil. in the par. of Kiltennel, bar. of East Idrone, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles E.N.E. of Borris. It is situated at the foot of Mount Leinster. Fairs are held on the 12th March and 15th July.

KILFANE, a par. in the bar. of Gowran, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Thomastown, its post town. It is 2 miles long and the same broad. The surface consists of a poor soil, and is crossed by the road from Dublin to Waterford. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with two others, £465, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1832 by the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and four day schools. Kilfane House is the principal residence. There are ruins of a castle and of a religious house called St. Phian's church.

KILFARBOY, a par. in the bar. of Ibrickan, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing its post town, Milltown-Malbay. It is 5 miles long by 4 broad. The surface lies along the coast between the bays of Liscanor and Doonbeg, and includes Spanish Point, where one of the ships of the Armada was sunk. It is generally mountainous, with bog. The surface rises to an elevation of 1,282 feet at Slievecallan. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Kildysert, £259, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a cromlech, and an "altoir na Griene," or sun altar, also an ogham stone at Slievecallan, which was discovered in 1784. Slate, iron, and building stone occur.

KILFAUGHNABEG, a par. in the bar. of Carbery East, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Ross Carbery, its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad, and extends along the E. side towards the head of Glandore Harbour. The interior is traversed by the road from Ross Carbery to Skibbereen. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ross, val. £115, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilmacabea. There are two day schools. Glandore is the principal residence. Slate, manganese, and copper are found.

KILFEAKLE, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Tipperary, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface consists generally of a good soil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Tipperary, £810, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Religmurry. There are two day schools. Kilfeakle House is the principal residence.

KILFEARAGH, a par. in the bar. of Moyarta, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing the town of Kilkee, its post town, and the vil. of Lisdeen. It is 6 miles long and 4 broad. The surface lies along Poulnasharry Bay and the Atlantic Ocean. It has a bold and rocky coast, indented by Kilkee Bay and Moore Creek. The surface is somewhat hilly. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with others, £258, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient building. There are two Roman Catholic chapels and a National school for boys and girls.

KILFEAROW. See KILFERAGH, co. Kilkenny.

KILFEDANE. See KILFIDDANNE, co. Clare.

KILFEIGHNY, a par. in the bar. of Clanmaurice, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Listowel. Drummoree is its post town. The surface is hilly, and the soil middling, with much bog. A small stream falling into the river Brick drains it towards the W. It is traversed by the road from Listowel to Tralee. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. £108, in the patron. of the bishop. Banemore is the principal residence.

KILFENNY. See KILFINNY, co. Limerick.

KILFENORA, a par. and post town in the bar. of Corcomroe, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 15 miles N.W. of Ennis. The par. is 5½ miles long by 5 broad. There is some mountain and bog within the limits, but the greater part consists of good pasture land. The interior is traversed by the road from Ennistimon to Burren. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Kilfenora, val. £504, in the patron. of the crown. The cathedral is an ancient building. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kiltoraght. There are National and one or two day schools. The town is situated on the road from Ennistimon to Burren, about 147 miles from Dublin. It is the seat of a diocese, and was formerly a market town and a place of some importance. It contains a dispensary within the Ennistimon Poor-law Union. Its ancient name was Fenabore, or Edumabrach, and is said to have been the site of an abbey which was destroyed in 1055 by Murrough O'Brien. A hospital was also founded at Kilcarragh. The cathedral has a supposed monument to St. Fachnan, who is said to have established the diocese, now joined to those of Clonfert, Killaloe, and Kilmacduagh. The see lies within the baronies of Burren and Corcomroe, and comprehends seven benefices. The dean, archdeacon, precentor, and treasurer, constitute the chapter. The two dioceses of Kilfenora and Kilmacduagh have between them an ecclesiastical income of more than £3,700, while the former contains only 251 members of the Established Church, and the latter 435 Churchmen. The Roman Catholic diocese is united to Kilmacduagh. Fairs are held on Wednesday before Whit-Sunday and the 9th October.

KILFERAGH, or KILFEAROW, a par. in the bar. of Shillelogher, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Kilkenny, its post town. It lies along the right bank of the river Nore. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Burnchurch, £700, in the patron. of the crown. Kilferagh is the principal residence.

KILFERGUS, a par. in the bar. of Shanid, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing its post town, Glin. It is 4 miles long and 4 broad. This parish lies along the mouth of the Shannon, and is crossed by the road from Limerick to Tralee. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick. The church was erected in 1815. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Loughill. There are seven day schools. Glynn is the seat of the Knight of Glynn. Stone, clay, slate, iron, and coal are found.

KILFIAN, a par. in the bar. of Tirawley, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing the vil. of Kincon. Crossmolina is its post town. It is 9 miles long and 8 broad. The surface is boggy and cold, and consists of a poor soil. It is traversed by the road from Killala to Crossmolina. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killala, val. £493, in the patron. of the bishop. Greenwood and Farm Hill are the principal residences. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel. It is alleged that St. Finian founded a monastery here. Limestone and iron occur.

KILFIDDANE, or KILFEDANE, a par. in the bar. of Clonderalaw, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Knock. Kildysart is its post town. The par. is 7 miles long and 3 broad. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Fergus and Shannon. The road from Ennis to Kilrush passes through the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Kilmurry-Clonderalaw, £318, in the patron. of the bishop. Here are two Roman Catholic chapels and five day schools.

KILFINAGHTA, a par. in the bar. of Lower Bunratty, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing part of Sixmilebridge, its post town, and the vil. of Ivarstown. It is 4 miles long by 3 broad. About half the surface is mountainous and boggy, the remainder arable, but of variable quality. In the S.E. is a hill attaining the altitude of 1,010 feet. The principal rivulets are Gourna and Ougarnee. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with six others, £277, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is of unknown date. There are two Roman Catholic chapels and three hedge-schools. The principal seats are Mount Ivers and Castlecrine. The road from Dublin to Ennis passes to the S. There are ruins of an ancient church at Ballysheen. The old castles of Cappa, Crine, Mountcashel, and Ballycullen, are within the limits of the parish. Slate is quarried.

KILFINAN, a par. and post-office vil. in the district of Cowal, co. Argyle, Scotland, 22 miles S.S.W. of Inverary. It is situated between the Kyles of Bute and Loch Fyne, and extends for near 17 miles in length. The southern district is called Kerry, and the northern Otter. The coast is indented by the bays of Kilfinan and Achlick. The surface, which is rugged, is drained by four streams traversing the interior. Several small lochs abounding with fish diversify the scene. This par. is in the presb. of Dunoon and synod of Argyle. The minister has a stipend of £221. The church was rebuilt in 1759. There are likewise a Free church, parochial and private schools. The principal residences are, Ardlamont, Ballimore House, Otter House, and Ardmarnock House. Lamont of Lamont, Campbell of Ballimore, Rankin of Otter, Nicol of Ardmarnock, and M'Allister of Loup are the principal landowners. Smuggling was formerly carried on extensively here. The herring fishery employs a considerable number of the inhabitants. Along the coast are Druidical remains, cairns, barrows, tumuli, &c. Mica slate is the prevailing rock.

KILFINICHEN AND KILVICKEON, a par. in the district of Mull, co. Argyle, Scotland. It is about 22 miles long by 10 broad, comprising Ross, Broluss, Ardmeanach, with the islands of Iona, Eorsa, and Inniskenneth, and the S.W. part of the island of Mull, besides several small outlying islands. Iona and Bonessan are post-office villages within this parish. The sea-lochs of Scridain and Lahich indent the coast, and Loch Na-Keel separates this parish from that of Kilninian. The surface is generally flat and barren. Several mountain streams traverse the district, and three lochs occur within the interior. The principal summit is Benmore, which attains an altitude of 3,168 feet. This par. is in the presb. of Mull and synod of Argyle. The minister has a stipend of £181. There are two churches, one at Bonessan, the other at Ardmeanach; also a Free church in Iona, a Free Church preaching station at Kilfinichen, and a Baptist meeting-house. There are two parish and several non-parochial schools. Kilfinichen House, Pennycross House, and Inchkenneth are the principal residences. The Duke of Argyll is the principal landowner. Fish abound in all the streams. Granite, whinstone, slate, limestone, and marble are the prevailing rocks, and coal occurs in some districts.

KILFINNANE, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of Coshlea, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland. 19 miles S. of Limerick, and 146 from Dublin. The par. is 3 miles square. The southern division consists of that part of the Galtee mountains called the Castle Oliver hills. The remaining parts of the surface consist generally of fertile lands. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. with another, £241. The church is a commodious structure, re-erected in 1760. There is a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Ardpatrick. There are a National and two daily schools. Spa Hill is the principal residence. The parish is traversed by the road from Kilmallock to Fermoy, upon which stands the village. It contains a market-house, court-house, bridewell, fever hospital, and a dispensary within the Kilmallock Poor-law Union. There is a police station, and petty sessions are held once a fortnight. In 1740 several palatine families removed here from Rathkeale. Some of the inhabitants find occupation in cotton and linen weaving. Adjacent to the church are the ruins of a castle built by the Roche family; also of another called Castle Oliver. In the parish are a rath, three forts, and a curious cave. The Danes Fort is situated outside the town, and consists of a mound 50 feet in diameter at the base, with some ramparts. There is a chalybeate spring to the E. of the town. Sandstone, lime, and iron occur. Tuesday is market day. Fairs are held on the 19th May, 9th August, and 25th October.

KILFINNY, a par. in the bar. of Upper Connello, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Croom. Loughill is its post town. The surface is hilly. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. with Loughill, £108, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, united to that of Croagh; also a day school. In this parish are ruins of the old church, of Cormac Mac Einery's castle, which was reduced in 1641, and of Finnitertown, a seat of the Purcell family. Fairs are held on the 15th May, 14th July, 12th September, and 22nd December.

KILFINTINAN AND ISLANDS, a par. in the bar. of Lower Bunratty, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing part of the post town of Sixmilebridge. The par. is 3 miles long by 2 broad, and extends along the stream Ougarnee to the Shannon. The surface is about half poor land, the remainder fair arable soil. It is traversed by the road from Limerick to Ennis. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £52. There are two united Roman Catholic chapels, and four day schools. Crasloe Wood is the principal seat. Colonel Wyndham is lord of the manor.

KILFINURA, a fishing vil. in the par. of Ballinahaglish, bar. of Trughanacmy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles W. of Tralee. It is a pilot and coastguard station.

KILFITHMONE, or FITHMONE, a par. in the bar. of Eliogarty, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles N.E. of Thurles. Borrisoleagh is its post town. It is 1½ mile long by 1 broad. The soil is generally good. The interior is traversed by the road from Templemore to Borrisoleagh. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with two others, £275, in the patron. of the bishop. Fithmoyne is the principal residence. The church was built in 1832, by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There is a day school.

KILFLYN, a par. in the bar. of Coshlea, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Kilfinnane. Kilmallock is its post town. The par. is 3 miles long by 2 broad, and contains the vil. of Ballyorgan. The surface, which is mountainous, is traversed by the road from Kilmallock to Fermoy. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £141, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1811. A Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Glenroe. There are two day schools. This district was settled by several palatine families from Rathkeale in 1740. There are remains of a monastery founded by St. Finian in the 6th century, and rebuilt in 1296 by the Fitzgeralds. Some people, in search of a supposed treasure, undermined the foundation of this building, and a large portion of it fell in 1835. Slate is quarried.

KILFLYN, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Clanmaurice, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles N.N.E. of Tralee, its post town. A moiety of the surface is mountainous and boggy, the remaining half arable and pasture. A small stream, which drains it in the W., falls into the river Brick. The interior is traversed by the road from Tralee to Limerick. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with six others, £271. The church was built in 1811, by the late Board of First Fruits. There is a Roman Catholic chapel and a hedge-school. Grotto House is the principal residence. The village, which stands on the Tralee and Listowel road, contains a dispensary within the Listowel Poor-law Union. Limestone is prevalent.

KILFOBRICK. See KILFARBOY, co. Clare.

KILFREE, a par. in the bar. of Coolavin, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles S. of Ballymote. Ballinasloe is its post town. It is 4 miles in length and breadth, and contains the vil. of Gorteen. The surface includes a considerable proportion of moor and upland, with some good arable soil. Part of Lough Gara is in the S.E., and the river Owenmore touches it on the northern border. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Achonry, val. with Killaraght, £404, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, built in 1826, is a plain building with square tower. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilshalvee. There are one public and two private schools. The village is the seat of a police station. There are remains of a friary at Knockmore, founded by O'Gara in the 14th century, likewise the romains of the O'Gara's castle. Limestone is abundant.

KILFRUSH, a par. in the bar. of Smallcounty, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Bruff, its post town. It is about 1 mile in length and breadth. The soil is generally good. The road from Kilmallock to Tipperary traverses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Emly, val. with Aney, £492, in the patron. of the crown pro tem. Kilfrush House is the principal residence. Limestone is abundant.

KILGALLIGAN, a headland on the E. side of Broadhaven Bay, co. Mayo, Ireland.

KILGAMY, an ancient castle in co. Waterford, Ireland, about 5 miles from Clonmell. It is now in ruins.

KILGARRIF, or KILGARIFF, a par. in the bars. of East Carbery, Ibane, and Barryroe, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It contains the post town Clonakilty. The par. is 3½ miles long by 1 mile broad. It is situated at the head of Clonakilty Bay. The greater part of the surface consists of good arable land, with some bog and broken upland. The coast is varied, and exhibits many interesting features. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ross, val. with two others, £335, in the patron. of the crown. The church, situated in Clonakilty, was erected in 1818, partly by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Templeomanus. The Wesleyans have a meeting-house. There are Sunday and several day schools. Kilgariff House is one of the many residences which adorn this locality. Blue slate is quarried, and there are indications of copper.

KILGARRYLANDER, a par. in the bar. of Trughanacmy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Tralee. Milltown is its post town. It is 4 miles long by 2 broad. The surface is about half mountainous, comprising part of the Slievemish mountains, and the remainder is indifferent land. The parish is bordered on the S. by Castlemaine harbour and the mouth of the river Maine. It is traversed by the road from Killarney to Dingle. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Kiltallagh, £410, in the patron. of the crown. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and three hedge-schools. Keel is the principal residence.

KILGARVAN, a par. in the bar. of Gallen, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Ballina, its post town. It is about 5 miles square. The surface is very mountainous, including part of the Slieve Gamph range. There is a large proportion of bog and marsh. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killala, val. with Kilmoremoy, £777, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and two day schools. Sallymount is the chief seat.

KILGARVAN, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Glanarought, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles N.E.E. of Kenmare, its post town. The par. is 10 miles long by 6 broad. The surface is mountainous, and is traversed by the Roughty rivulet, along whose valley passes the road from Macroom to Kenmare. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. £206, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1815 by the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic church is united to that of Killaha. There are National and three other day schools. Near Ardtully is the field of Callan, where the MacCarthys conquered the Fitzgeralds in 1261, and John Fitz Thomas was killed. Adjacent to this spot are traces of a building said to have been the Monaster-ni-Oriel, or Abbey of Oriel, also Ardtully Castle. A curious displacement of rock, technically called a "fault," is observed in the Roughty glen, where the one side is limestone, the other grit. Among the mountains is a stone which bears the imprint of numerous human feet. Copper occurs among the hills. In the village is a police station, and petty sessions are held once in three weeks.

KILGARVAN. See KILLYGARVAN, co. Donegal.

KILGARVAN, a par. in the bar. of West Shelmaliere, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Taghmon, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The highest ground is at Camorous Hill, which rises to the height of 598 feet. The parish is traversed by the road from New Ross to Wexford. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Horetown, £362, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Taghmon and Coolstuff. There is a hedge-school.

KILGEE, or CILGIL, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanyre, co. Radnor, 6 miles S.E. of Rhayader. It is situated on the river Ithon.

KILGEEVER, KILGAVOWER, or KILGIVOUR, a par. in the bar. of Murrisk, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 11 miles W.S.W. of Westport. It contains the post vils. of Lewisburgh and Bundurra. The par. is 10 miles in length and breadth, and includes the islands of Innisboffin, Innisturk, and Clare. It extends N. and S. from Clew Bay to Killery Harbour. The surface is mountainous and wild. The principal summits are Croagh Patrick, Knockishane, Munacrea, Farranamore, Doughmore, and Muilrea. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. £120, in the patron. of the archdeacon. The church was built in 1794 by the late Board of First Fruits. There are Roman Catholic chapels at Lewisburgh and Devlin, which, with a house used as a Roman Catholic chapel, are mutually united. There are also Roman Catholic chapels on Clare Island and Innisturk. In the parish are fourteen day schools, six of which were enlarged by the National Board, and several Sunday-schools.

KILGEFIN, a par. in the bar. of South Ballintober, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Roscommon. Kilroosky is its post town. It is 3½ miles long by 3 broad, and contains part of the hill of Slievebawn, which has an altitude of 857 feet. The surface comprises a considerable proportion of bog and indifferent land. It is traversed by the road from Athlone to Strokestown. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. £97, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1824 by the late Board of First Fruits. A Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Clontuskert. There are four day schools.

KILGERRAN, a hund. in co. Pembroke, contains the pars. of Bridell, Chapel-Colman, Clydey, Kilgerran, Llanfihangel-Penbedw, Llantood, Manerdivy, Penrith, and part of Kilrhedin.

KILGERRAN, a par. in the hund. of the same name, co. Pembroke, 2 miles S.E. of Cardigan. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the river Teifi. The inhabitants are engaged in the slate quarries, boot and shoe making, and in the fisheries. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £138. The church is a small plain structure. There are National and other schools.

KILGERRILL, a par. in the bars. of Clonmacnowen and Kilconnel, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Ballinasloe, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface is very boggy, and the soil generally poor. It is traversed by the road from Ballinasloe to Galway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. with Aughrim, £352, in the patron. of the Marquis of Clanricarde and the bishop alternately. Fairfield is the principal residence. There is a hedge-school.

KILGIVOUR. See KILGEEVER, co. Mayo.

KILGLASS, a par. in the bars. of Ardagh, Moydow, and Shrule, co. Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Edgeworthstown. Lenamore is its post town. The surface is hilly, and comprises a considerable proportion of bog. The soil is varied in quality, with limestone subsoil. The Kenagh rivulet drains the greater part of the interior. The parish is traversed by the road from Dublin to Lanesborough. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardagh, val. with two others, £377, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1815, by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits, and a sum raised by local assessment. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Rathrea. There are four day schools. This parish is the alleged site of a nunnery presided over by St. Echea.

KILGLASS, a par. in the bars. of North Ballintober and Roscommon, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Strokestown. Rooskey is its post town. It is 6 miles long by 4 broad, and includes the loughs Kilglass, Gillstown, Bodarig, and Boffin—the two latter being expansions of the Shannon. The surface consists generally of good soil, with some bog. The road from Strokestown to Rooskey passes through the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. £275, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1825 by the late Board of First Fruits. There are two united Roman Catholic chapels, and fourteen daily schools.

KILGLASS, a par. in the bar. of Tireragh, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Easky. Ballina is its post town. The par. is 4 miles long by 3 broad, and includes part of Lough Scarrow. The surface is hilly, extending along the W. side of Killala Bay. There is some bog, but the greater part is good pasture and arable lands. Several small streams intersect the interior and fall into the bay. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killala, val. with Castleconnor, £372, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1830, principally by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Castleconnor. There are nine day schools. Kinneard, Kilglass, and Oghill are the principal residences.

KILGLASSAN, a vil. in the bar. of Kilmaine, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Hollymount. It is situated on the road to Tuam.

KILGOBBAN, a par. in the bar. of Corkaguiny, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing the vil. of Cappaclough. Tralee is its post town. The par. is 4 miles long by 2 broad. Tralee Bay bounds it on the N. The surface is mountainous, containing part of the Cahirconree mountains. The soil is mostly good. The road from Tralee to Dingle passes through the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. £356, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1825 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballinvoker. There are two hedge-schools.

KILGOBBIN, a par. in the bar. of Rathdown, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S. of the metropolis, containing the vil. of Stepaside. The parish is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface is mountainous. In the S.W. are the Threerock Mountain, attaining the altitude of 1,479 feet, and the Tworock Mountain, 1,763 feet. The road from Dublin to Enniskerry passes through the interior. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Kilternan, £190, in the patron. of the archbishop and archdeacon. There is a day school. Kilgobbin House and Kilgobbin Cottage are the principal residences. The village of Kilgobbin stands at the foot of the Threerock mountain. Near it are the ruins of a castle built by the Walshes of Carrickmaine, and fortified in the time of Charles I. It entirely commands the pass of the Scalp. A cross stands near the ancient church.

KILGOBBIN. See CREGORA, co. Limerick.

KILGOBNET, a par. in the bar. of Decies-without-Drum, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Dungarvan, its post town. It is 7 miles long by 5 broad, and extends from near Dungarvan Bay to the base of the Cummeragh mountains. The soil is indifferent. There is much wild mountain country. The par. is included within the dioc. of Lismore. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, united to that of Colligan, also three day schools. Fairs are held on the 22nd February, 3rd May, 11th June, 1st November, and 27th November.

KILGOLAGH, a vil. in the bar. of Clanmahon, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Mount Nugent. It stands on the right bank of the river Inny, not far from Lough Sheelin.

KILGORMAN, a par. in the bar. of Gorey, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Gorey, its post town. The par. is 3½ miles long by 3 broad, and includes part of Lough Kilpatrick. The surface lies along the coast of the Irish Sea, and comprises Kilmichael Point. The soil is good. The road from Dublin to Wexford passes through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Inch, £374, in the patron. of the archbishop. A Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Inch. Hyde Park, Castletown, Rivulet House, Ahar, and Ashwood are the principal residences. It is alleged that St. Gorman was abbot of a religious establishment here.

KILGORY, a lough in co. Clare, Ireland, about 3 miles from O'Callaghan's Mills. On its banks is Kilgory House, late the seat of M. O'Connell.

KILGOURAN, a bog in co. Galway, Ireland, 5 miles N. of Tuam.

KILGRANT, or POWERSTOWN, a par. in the bars. of Iffa and Offa East, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Clonmel, its post town. It is 2 miles long by the same in breadth. The surface, which lies within the valley of the river Suir, is very fertile. It is crossed by the road from Clonmel to Waterford. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with Kilcash, £49, in the patron. of the crown. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Kilcash and Kilsheelan. Annerville is the principal residence.

KILGRIM-BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of East Witton, and wap. of West Hang, North Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Middleham. It is situated on the river Ure.

KILGROGAN, a par. in the bars. of Orrery and Kilmore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Charleville. It is a diminutive parish, comprising only 231 acres.

KILGULLANE, a par. in the bars. of Condons-with-Clangibbon and Fermoy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.S.W. of Mitchelstown, its post town. It is near 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. The land is generally good. The road from Mitchelstown to Castletownroche traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with Glanworth, £578, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a day-school.

KILGWRRWG, or KILGOOROOG, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Ragland, co. Monmouth, 5 miles N.W. of Chepstow, and 6 S.E. of Usk. The parish is of small extent and wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £57, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Llandaff.

KILGWYN, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Nevern, co. Pembroke, 2 miles N.E. of Newport. It is situated near the small river Nevern, which rises in the Vrenny Vawr hills, and falls into the sea at Newport.

KILHAM, a par. in the wap. of Dickering, East Riding co. York, 6 miles N.E. of Driffield, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Bridlington. It is situated on the Wolds, at the head of the river Hull, which has its source in this parish. It was formerly a market town, but is now only a small village consisting of one straggling street of about 1 mile in length. The land is chiefly arable, and the soil various, with about 350 acres of woodland. There is a large brewery, and bricks are made here. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1771. At Hempit Hole is a remarkable intermittent spring, and near the Rudston road is a mineral spring. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £300, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone building with a massive square tower, strengthened with angular buttresses, and containing a clock and three bells. In the church are a Norman doorway, sedilia, and piscina. There are several tablets to the Anderson, Thompson, and other families. The charities produce £38 per annum, of which £30 goes to the support of D'Arcy's grammar school, founded in 1633. The Wesleyans, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship, and there are National schools for both sexes; also a mechanics' institute, with library. W. S. D. Duesbery, Esq., is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on the 21st August and 12th November for cattle.

KILHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk Newton, W. div. of Glendale ward, co. Northumberland, 7 miles N.W. of Wooler. The tnshp. is very extensive, including a range of hills of the same name, with the vil. of Kilham and the hmlt. of Thornington. The village is situated at the N. side of the hills, and consists of only a few houses. The soil is light and subsoil gravelly. The Earl of Tankerville is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

KILHENDRE, a hmlt. in the par. of Ellesmere, hund. of Pimhill, co. Salop, 4 miles N.W. of Ellesmere, and 18 from Shrewsbury.

KILHENY. See KILLEANY, co. Clare.

KILHERNIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanboidy, hund. of Derllys, co. Carmarthen, 13 miles N.W. of Carmarthen. It is situated near a branch of the river Taff and the old Roman road Via Julia. At a place called Dôl Wilym is a cromlech composed of five stones, one of which is near 30 feet round; and at a short distance is a Druidical circle above 20 yards in diameter.

KILIE-AYRON, or CILIE-AERON, a par. partly in the lower div. of the hund. of Ilar, and partly in that of Troedyraur, co. Cardigan, 4 miles S.E. of Aberaeron. It is situated on the river Aeron. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. Stone is quarried. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £100, pat. the bishop. The church is a small structure of stone.

KILKEA AND MOONE, a bar. in the co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Its boundaries are, Narragh and Rheban on the N., co. Wicklow on the E., co. Carlow on the S. and S.E., and King's County on the W. It is 9 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 8 miles. The Griss and Leir tributaries of the Barrow drain intersect the interior. This bar. contains the pars. of Ardree, Ballaghmoon, Belan, Castledermot, Dunmanoge, Graney, Grangerosnolvan, Kilkea, Killelan, and parts of Kineagh, Moone, Narraghmore, Painestown, St. Michael's, and Tankardstown.

KILKEA, a par. in the bar. of Kilkea and Moone, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland; 2 miles N.W. of Castle-Dermot, its post town. The parish is near 3 miles long and over 2 broad. The little stream called the Griss, and the road from Castle-Dermot to Athy, intersect the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Castle-Dermot, £489, in the patron. of the archbishop. There are two day schools. Kilkea Castle is the residence of the Caulfield family. The original structure was founded by Hugh de Lacy, Earl of Ulster. It afterwards passed into the Kildare family. Near the castle are the ruins of an old church. Kilkea Lodge is a modern residence.

KILKEARY, a par. in the bar. of Upper Ormond, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Nenagh, its post town. It is 2 miles in length by the same in breadth. The soil is fertile. The road from Nenagh to Thurles traverses the interior. The living is a rect. united with Ballinaclough, in the dioc. of Killaloe, and in the patron. of the crown. Grenanstown and Ballinamona House are the principal residences.

KILKEASY, or KILCASEY, a par. in the bar. of Knocktopher, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S. of Knocktopher, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Knocktopher, £510, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Derrynahensy, Newmarket, Higginstown, and Kells. There are Roman Catholic and day schools. Rockhall is the principal residence. In this parish are the ruins of Knockmoylan Castle.

KILKEE, or DOOGH, a seaport town and watering-place in the par. of Kilfearagh, bar. of Moyarta, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 30 miles S.W. of Ennis, and 170 from Dublin. It is a bathing-place and fishing station situated on the creek of Malbay. Since the introduction of steam-vessels this place has risen from the obscurity of a humble village to a flourishing town and watering-place, having, according to the census of 1861, a population of 2,031. It is a coastguard station and petty sessions town. It contains a newly erected church, Roman Catholic chapel, and dispensary, within the Kilrush Poor-law Union. The population consists of 1,898 Roman Catholics, 126 Established Church, and 7 Presbyterians.

KILKEEDY, a par. in the bar. of Inchiquin, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Corrofin. Gort is its post town. The par. is 6 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface is broken and rocky, with but a small proportion of useful land. It includes Lough Buneagh and several small pieces of water. The interior is traversed by the road from Corrofin to Gort. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Kilnaboy, £253, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1793 by the late Board of First Fruits. There are two Roman Catholic chapels and a hedge-school. Rockvale, Derryowen, and Rockforest, are the principal seats. In the parish are ruins of several ancient castles.

KILKEEDY, a par. in the bar. of Pubblebrien, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Limerick. It contains the principal part of the vil. of St. Patrick's Well. Clarina is its post town. The par. is 5 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface stretches along the right bank of the river Maigue. The interior is crossed by the road from Limerick to Askeaton. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £769, in the patron. of the crown. The church was built in 1814 by a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. It has been subsequently enlarged. There are two united Roman Catholic chapels and six day schools in the parish. Elm Park is the seat of Lord Clarina. Tervoe and Cooper Hill are other seats. Carrigagunnell Castle, the stronghold of the O'Briens, the ancient heritors, stood on a rocky eminence overhanging the Shannon, and was blown up in 1689.

KILKEEL, a par. and post town in the bar. of Mourne, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 24 miles S.W. of Downpatrick, and 66 N.E. of Dublin. The par. is nearly 11 miles in length and over 6 in breadth. The surface, which is very mountainous, extends between the coast and the Mourne mountains. The land is of indifferent quality. The road from Newry to Kilkeel follows the coast. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Down, united with Kilcoo and Kilmegan. The church, built in 1815, is a Gothic building standing in the town. There are a Roman Catholic and two Presbyterian chapels, and one Moravian meeting-house. The free school, recently erected, stands in the town; there are besides seventeen day schools and three Sunday-schools. Mourne Park is the seat of the Earl of Kilmorey. The town stands on a small stream called the Kilkeel. It is a place of little commercial importance, but numerous hands are employed in the manufacture of muslin for houses in Glasgow and Belfast. It contains a court-house, and petty sessions are held once a month; manor courts every third Friday. The dispensary is within the Kilkeel Poor-law Union, which lies wholly within the county of Down, and contains 10 electoral divisions, with 16 guardians. The poor-house has accommodation for 390 in-door paupers. Market day is Wednesday. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in every month for pigs and sheep.

KILKEEVAN, a par. in the bar. of Castlerea, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing the post town of Castlerea. The par. is 8 miles long by 5 broad. In the centre and W. the surface is wild and boggy, including Lough Aelvyn. In the E. it is drained by the river Suck, and presents a more cultivated appearance. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with another, £466, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1819 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and several day schools. Cloonalis is the seat of The O'Connor Don, M.P. Dealfield is another residence.

KILKELLANE. See KILCULLANE, co. Limerick.

KILKELLY, a vil. in the par. of Kilmovee, bar. of Costello, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 9 miles N.W. of Ballyhaunis. There is a remarkable echo in the neighbourhood.

KILKENNY, an inland co. in the prov. of Leinster, Ireland, bounded on the N. by Queen's County, on the E. by Carlow and Wexford, on the S. by Waterford, and on the W. by Tipperary. Its greatest length N. and S. is 46 miles, and greatest breadth E. and W. 24. It comprises an area of 796 square miles, and contains a population, by the census of 1861, of 124,515. According to Ptolemy it was originally inhabited by the Brigantes and Caucoi, and it subsequently became part of the kingdom of Ossory. In 1247, when Leinster was divided among the daughters of William, Earl of Pembroke, Kilkenny was allotted to his third child, Isabella, and through her descended to the earls of Ormonde. Its early history was occupied in struggles between the houses of Ormonde and Desmonde. In the rebellion of 1641 Kilkenny fell into the power of the Irish. At the accession of William III. most of the leading county families, the Graces, the Walshes, the Butlers, the O'Shears, &c., revolted, espousing the Jacobite cause, and suffered severely from various confiscations.—Kilkenny returns three members to parliament, two for the county, which in 1859 had a constituency of 5,347, and one for its city, with a constituency of 585.—The communication through the county is good. A mail-coach road runs from Dublin to Cashel, and another connecting the town of Kilkenny with Dublin, Waterford, and Clonmel. There are also a branch railway to Carlow from the Great Southern and Western line, continued to Kilkenny, and a line to Waterford. This county is chiefly in the diocese of Ossory, but a small part in that of Leighlin. It is divided, for purposes of civil jurisdiction, into ten baronies, viz. Callan, Crannagh, Fassadinin, Galmoy, Gowran, Ida, Iverk, Kells, Knocktopher, and Shillelogher, and contains 140 parishes.—The chief rivers which irrigate this county are, the Nore, passing through the middle, the Barrow on the E., the Suir on the S., also the Dinan, Munster, and Kings'-river. The three first-named rivers are navigable for a considerable distance, and were formerly famous for salmon, but owing to the mills on their banks, the quantity has greatly decreased. The scenery of Kilkenny is more picturesque than grand.—The soil being argillaceous, affords very good pasture ground, which adds greatly to the beauty of the scenery by the intensity of its verdure. The hills are of minor importance in the features of the county, being only the extension of the Wicklow group, forming the hills of Brandon, between the Barrow and the Nore, and finally terminate in the small elevations which unite towards the S. the mountains of Waterford. The chief crops are, wheat, barley, and potatoes, nearly 470,102 acres out of the 509,732 which the county comprises being arable; of the remainder 21,126 are uncultivated, 13,899 in plantations, and 3,056 under water, besides about 1,549 in roads, towns, &c. Scientific farming has made considerable progress of late years, but there is room for manifest improvement in the culture of agricultural produce. Irrigation is but little attended to, and the land in the hilly tracts, which by some slight care and attention would yield good crops, is neglected. As regards cattle, the native horses are generally active, and the breed of sheep and pigs has been greatly improved, though less care is paid to the rearing of these animals than in the adjoining counties. Kilkenny is very deficient in woods and plantations, of which there are only 13,899 acres. Perhaps the banks of the Nore are the only exceptions to this general want of timber. This county is rich in coal. Its coal-fields may be estimated at 6 miles in length by 5 in breadth, but the coal is of inferior quality, being sulphureous, and chiefly used for smelting and smiths' work. The principal collieries are at Castlecomer, Clough, and Newtown. The substratum is chiefly limestone, with clay, slate, and sandstone, but iron, marble, manganese, and marl are also found. There are chalybeate springs at Ballyspellin. The soil is light, loamy, and very fertile in the valleys. The climate, owing to the general slope of the surface to the S.E., causing the waters to run off rapidly, is very dry and healthy. The occupations of the people are almost entirely agricultural, and but few manufactures are carried on, the only articles of export being flour, beer, whisky, and leather. The woollen manufacture and the linen trade, once so important, are now almost extinct. Its chief industry is in the flour mills, of which there are great numbers. The grain is sent to Dublin. The condition of the poor is wretched in the extreme, all articles of food and clothing being very expensive.—The principal towns are, Kilkenny, with a population in 1861 of 14,174, and Callan, with 2,322. The former is the county town, where the assizes are held, and here also is the headquarters of the police force. It is in the Leinster circuit, and in the south-eastern or Curragh military district. The barrack stations are at Kilkenny and Castlecomer.—The county contains numerous traces of antiquity. On the summit of Tory Hill is a circular space covered with stones, and bearing a curious inscription. There are various cromlechs, the most remarkable of which is at Kilmogue. Raths are very numerous, especially at Galmoy and near the Nore. At Earlsrath is a large fort enclosed by a fosse, and at Callan, Kilkenny, and Castlecomer, are extensive moats. In this county were two very celebrated monasteries of the Cistercian order, one at Jerpoint and the other at Graig; also numerous castles, the chief of which is Grandison Castle, in Iverk.—Among the resident landowners are, Viscount Clifden, Sir Charles Cuffe, Bart., the Earl of Desart, Lord Mountgarret, Viscount Ashbrook, the Earl of Bessborough, James Aylward, George Bryan, &c.

KILKENNY, a county of a city, market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, and the capital of the county of Kilkenny, in the prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 73 miles S.W. of Dublin. It has stations on the Kilkenny branch of the Great Southern and Western and on the Waterford and Kilkenny railways. It comprises an area of 26½ square miles, or 17,012 acres, and contains a population, by the census of 1861, of 17,441 within the parliamentary, and 13,019 within the municipal limits, having decreased above 6,000 since 1851. It returns one member to Parliament, and had in 1859 a constituency of 585. Its name is derived by some from the word Kyle-ken-ni, "the wooded head or hill near the river;" and by others, with more probability, from the dedication of its church to St. Canice, on the removal of the ancient see of Ossory to this town, in 1052. Little is known of its history till the invasion of Strongbow in 1172, when he and his followers erected here a fortress which was attacked and destroyed in 1193, by Donald O'Brien, king of Thormond. On the marriage of Strongbow with the daughter of Dermot Macmurrough, king of Leinster, this portion of the territory was granted to him, and so descended to his successor, William Le Mareschal, who founded the present castle, and also restored the town, which became one of the principal residences of his descendants, and the head of the palatinate of Kilkenny. At this time arose that part of the present city called Kilkenny, in contradistinction to the original town on the opposite bank, called Irishtown; each had its separate government, the former under the lords of the castle, and the latter under the bishops of Ossory. It became soon important as a place of assembly. In 1294 here was held a great council of the barons of the English pale, and in 1309 a parliament assembled in the town, enacting severe laws against the English settlers who adopted the Irish customs. The celebrated Statute of Kilkenny, by which the Brehon law was abolished, was passed in the parliament held here in 1367. In 1399 Richard II., on his journey through the S. of Ireland, was received here and entertained by the Earl of Ormond, to whose family Kilkenny had passed by purchase. In 1400 the town was encompassed by a wall, and the townsmen received a grant of tolls for murage. In the contest between the houses of York and Lancaster, it was besieged and taken by the Earl of Desmond, a Lancastrian. At the outbreak of the parliamentary war, in 1641, parliaments and vice-royal courts were no longer assembled here, but it became instead the chief quarters of the Roman Catholic party appointed to manage affairs. In 1650 it was attacked by Cromwell, and after a brave defence succumbed, the parliamentary general complimenting the citizens on their skill and gallantry.—The town is well built, and has a prosperous and cheerful appearance. It is divided into two unequal portions by the river Nore. The larger portion containing the castle is on the western bank, and near the northern extremity is that part called Irishtown, where stands the cathedral. The streets are irregular, but its castle, cathedral, and other remains of ancient edifices, give it a venerable and imposing magnificence. Kilkenny proper is by far the most handsome and modern part of this city. The houses are large and built mostly of stone. Its chief buildings are the cathedral, two parish churches, seven Roman Catholic chapels, two monasteries, a convent, Presbyterian, and Methodist meeting houses, two colleges, the county-court house, the county and city prisons, county infirmary, fever hospital, the Tholsel barracks, workhouse, and Kilkenny Castle, the residence of the Marquis of Ormonde. The Horticultural Society holds here two meetings a year. The Kilkenny hunt is considered the most celebrated in Ireland. Along the bank of the Nore is a promenade called the Mall, extending above a mile in length, and which has recently been much improved. The river is spanned by two bridges, called St. John's Bridge and Green's Bridge. Here is the headquarters of a military district, which embraces Kilkenny, Waterford, Wexford, Carlow, and Queen's County, with parts of Wicklow, and Tipperary. It is also the headquarters of the district police, and the station of a resident magistrate. The net annual value of property under the Tenement Valuation Act is £17,488.—There were until recently two municipal corporations, that of the English town or city of Kilkenny, first incorporated by William Le Mareschal the elder, and that of Irishtown, or St. Canice, incorporated by King Edward IV. The corporation of the city of Kilkenny was styled "the mayor and citizens of the city of Kilkenny," and had a revenue of upwards of £2,000 per annum. That of Irishtown bore the style of "the portreeve, burgesses, and commons of the borough of Irishtown," and had an income of £15. By the Municipal Reform Act they have been formed into one borough. The corporation consists of a mayor, 2 sheriffs, 18 aldermen, 36 common-councilmen, and a number of freemen. The mayor is chosen annually, and is custos rotulorum, and holds a court of conscience weekly, in which debts not exceeding £2 may be recovered. Assizes for the county are held in the new court-house; quarter and petty sessions are also held in the town.—The ancient castle of Kilkenny is situated on an eminence overlooking the Nore. It forms two sides of a quadrangle containing three of the round towers of the ancient castle. It has been greatly improved by the Ormonde family latterly. Several of its rooms are hung with rich tapestry, and it contains a fine collection of paintings. Next to the castle in interest is the cathedral church of St. Canice. It is situated on a gentle elevation at the western extremity of the town, and is a spacious cruciform building, in the early English style of architecture, with a low, massy tower supported on columns of black marble, and lofty pointed arches. The exterior walls are embattled, and at the W. end the pinnacles form two spires. The length is 226 feet, and breadth 123 feet. The interior is very imposing: the nave is separated from the aisles by a range of five clustered columns, and lighted by a large W. window and five clerestory windows. The choir has a groined ceiling, and, with the chancel, is 77 feet long; it has oak fittings and a fine E. window. At the end of the S. transept is the consistory court; and to the N. of it is the chapter house. The principal monument is that of Bishop David, much defaced; in the transept is a stone seat called the chair of St. Kieran. Near the cathedral is the episcopal palace, a large handsome residence; also the deanery. The diocese, which is one of the five constituting the ecclesiastical province of Dublin, comprehends the county of the city of Kilkenny, the whole of the barony of Ossory, the parish of Seir-Kyran, and most of the county of Kilkenny. The annual revenue is £3,859. The number of parishes in the diocese is 146. The chapter consists of a dean, precentor, chancellor, treasurer, archdeacon, and seven prebendaries. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this diocese is a separate bishopric, and comprises 32 parochial benefices. The county of the city comprehends the pars. of St. Mary, St. Patrick, St. John, and St. Canice, comprising 17,012 acres, of which 921 are in the city, and 16,091 in the rural district. The par. of St. Mary is a perpet cur., its church a cruciform structure with a spire; the par. of St. Patrick is a rect.; that of St. John a vic.; and that of St. Canice a vic. and rect. In the Roman Catholic divisions the par. of St. Mary is the head of a district, and close to its church is the residence of the Roman Catholic bishop; here also are situated the Presentation Convent, the Capuchin Friary, and Dominican Abbey. Here is a grammar school called the College of Kilkenny, founded by the Earl of Ormonde; it has had the honour of educating, amongst others, Swift, Congreve, Farquhar, &c. There is also a Roman Catholic college, for the education of young men for the priesthood.—The manufactures of blankets, coarse woollens, and linen have greatly declined, but there are breweries, tanneries, and flour-mills in the city and its vicinity. The Kilkenny marble quarries are extensively worked, yielding a black marble for chimney-pieces and ornamental purposes, which is largely exported. Coal is also raised in the neighbourhood for local consumption, and burns without smoke or flame. The Bank of Ireland, and the Provincial and National banks have branches in Kilkenny, and there is a savings-bank. The local charities include an almshouse for eight poor women, the Ormonde poorhouse, St. James's Asylum, and the county infirmary and fever hospital, mentioned above. The remains of the abbey church are extensive; there are also remains of a Franciscan abbey, built in the 12th century.—Two newspapers are published in the town, the Kilkenny Moderator and the Kilkenny Journal. The chief seats in the immediate vicinity are Kilcreen, Castle Blunden, Rose Hill, Orchardton, Bonnetstown, &c. Annual races take place in September. Market days are Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs are held on the 5th and 28th March, 8th June, 22nd October, and on the first Thursday in each month.

KILKENNY, WEST, a bar. in co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Its boundaries are co. Longford on the N., the bar. of Rathconrath on the E., the bars. of Clonlonan and Brawney on the S., and Lough Ree on the W. It is 7 miles long by 5½ broad. The surface is generally well adapted to cultivation. This bar. contains the pars. of Bunowen, Drumraney, West Kilkenny, and part of Noughaval. It is the ancient Machaire Cuirckny.

KILKENNY, WEST, a par. in the bar. of the same name, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 17 miles N.E. of Athlone. Ballytore is its post town. It is 4½ miles long by 3½ broad, and comprises loughs Ree and Mackeegan. The soil, which is light, rests upon a substratum of limestone and gravel. It contains the vils. of Glassan and Auburn, the latter celebrated by Goldsmith, whose chair and reading-desk are still preserved at Auburn House. The interior is traversed by the road from Athlone to Ballymahon. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £242. The church is ancient, having once belonged to a monastic establishment. There is a Wesleyan meeting-house. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Tang in Noughaval. There are three day schools. In this parish are Auburn House, and several other mansions; also the ruins of a hospital for Crutched Friars, founded in the 13th century by the Dillon family. The castle of the Dillons, to whom the territory anciently belonged, was destroyed by Cromwell. The living was held by Goldsmith's father, and his brother Henry was curate.

KILKERRAN BAY, in the bar. of Ballynahinch, co. Galway, Ireland. It is about 10 miles long by 5 wide at the mouth, and has anchorage in six fathoms water. Off the coast is Birr Island.

KILKERRAN, a vil. in the district of Carrick, co. Ayr, Scotland, 4 miles from Maybole and 8 from Girvan. It is a station of the Maybole and Girvan branch of the Glasgow and South-Western railway.

KILKERRANMORE, a par. in the bars. of East Carbery, Ibane, and Barryroe, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Clonakilty, its post town. The par. is 5½ miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface lies along the W. coast of Clonakilty Bay. The soil is generally good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ross, val. with another, £265, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is situated at Castle Ventry. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ross. There are four day schools. Slate is prevalent.

KILKERRIN, a par. in the bar. of Tiaquin, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Newtown Bellew. Moylough is its post town. The par. is 5 miles long by 4 broad. The surface consists of a considerable tract of bog, and some good arable land. The parish is crossed by the road from Ballinamore to Dunmore. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with two others, £417, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1784. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Mahanagh and Larkin. There are Sunday and five day schools. Newforest, Cappagh, and Carrowleana are the principal seats. There is also a small place of this name near Clonakilty, in co. Cork.

KILKEVAN. See KILCARVAN, co. Wexford.

KILKEWYDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Forden, co. Montgomery, 3 miles N. of Montgomery.

KILKHAMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Stratton, co. Cornwall, 4 miles N.E. of Stratton, its post town, and 20 from Bideford. It is situated on the high road leading from Stratton to Bideford, and is separated from the county of Devon by the river Tamar. It was the seat of the Grenvilles from the Conquest till the 17th century. Upon the site of the ancient mansion, John, Earl of Bath, erected, soon after the Restoration, the mansion of Stowe, which, within little more than half a century, was demolished. The buildings are said to have occupied above 3 acres. The village, which is still considerable, was formerly a market town. The reservoir of the Bude canal, covering 70 acres, is partly within this parish. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £50, and the rectorial for £607. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £487. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient structure, with a pinnacled tower containing five bells. The interior has a carved ceiling and pulpit, and several monuments to the Grenville family, and other families of distinction. The parochial charities produce about £39 per annum. The Rev. James Hervey, while curate of this church, wrote his "Meditations." There is a National school for both sexes; also chapels for the Wesleyans and Bible Christians. Fairs are held on Holy Thursday, and the third following Thursday, and 26th August.

KILKIERAN, a par. in the bar. of Gowran, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Kilkenny. It is 1½ mile in length by 1 broad. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Rathcoole, £82, in the patron. of the dean and chapter.

KILKILLOGE, a vil. in the par. of Ahamlish, bar. of Carbury, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 9 miles N. of Sligo. It is situated near the coast.

KILKILVERY, a par. in the bar. of Clare, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing the minor portion of the town of Headford. The par. is 2½ miles long by 2 broad. The surface comprises some good arable land, bog, and turbary. It is intersected by the road from Galway to Ballinrobe. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Headford, £834, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is modern. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Donaghpatrick. There is a day school. Ross Lodge, Moyne Hill, and Dalysfort House are the principal residences.

KILKINDUFF. See KILCONDUFF, co. Mayo.

KILKINNIKIN, a vil. in the par. of Kilnamanagh, bar. of Bear, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Castletown-Bearhaven.

KILKISHEN, a vil. in the par. of Clonlea, bar. of Lower Tulla, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N. of Sixmilebridge. Kilkishen Castle is a modern mansion, in the vicinity of the ancient castle.

KILKREDANE, a lighthouse on the Shannon, in co. Clare, Ireland. It is 135 feet high, and the light may be seen for 16 miles.

KILKYRAN. See KILKIERAN, co. Kilkenny.

KILL-, for names compounded with this prefix, which signifies "church," see also KIL-.

KILL, a par. and post-office vil. in the bars. of South Naas and South Salt, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Naas, its post town. The Naas and Salt sections are separated by a distance of about 4 miles. The former section is 2 miles long by 1½ mile broad, the latter 3½ miles long by 2 broad. It contains the vil. of Kill, situated near the Grand Canal, and on the road from Dublin to Carlow. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ross, val. with two others, £430, in the patron. of the crown. The church was erected in 1822, by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic Chapel is united to that of Lyons. There are five day schools in the parish, one of which has a share in Erasmus Smith's charity. This parish was the site of a commandery of Knights Hospitallers, founded by the Fitzgerald family.

KILL, a vil. in the par. of Kilbarrymeaden, bar. of Decies-without-Drum, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.N.E. of Bonmahon. Garden Morris and Georgestown are seats in the vicinity.

KILL, or KILL OF THE GRANGE, a par. and post-office station in the bar. of Rathdown, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Kingstown. The par. is 2½ miles long by 1½ mile broad. It contains the vils. of Galloping Green and Killiney. The surface lies on the S. side of Dublin Bay, and the soil is in a high state of cultivation. The parish is traversed by the road from Dublin to Bray. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Monkstown, £474, in the patron. of the archbishop. The parish formerly belonged to Christ's Church, Dublin. Kill Abbey and Newton Park may be mentioned amongst the numerous residences. There are remains of a very ancient church.

KILLAALDUFF. See KILLARDRY, co. Tipperary.

KILLAAN, or KILLANE, a par. in the bars. of Kilconnell and Loughrea, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Kilconnell, its post town. It is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The upper part of the river Carnamart drains the surface in the W. The par. is traversed by the road from Ballinasloe to Galway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Clonfert, joined with Kilconnell, £777. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Bullane. There are one National and two other day schools. Killaan House and Woodlawn are the principal residences. The dispensary is within the Ballinasloe Poor-law Union.

KILLABBAN, or KILLEBAN, a par. in the bars. of Ballyadams and Slievemargy, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles S.E. of Stradbally. Baltinglass is its post town. It is 9 miles long by 5½ broad, and contains the vils. of Ballylinan, Arles, and Ballickmoyler. The surface comprises a proportion of moorland and some fertile soil along the river Barrow, which flows on the E. boundary. The upland district is rather rich in mineral productions, including coal, lime, and building stone. The Dowglass is a small stream of the interior. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £967, in the patron. of the crown. The church was erected in 1801. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Ballylinan and Arles. There are four Sunday and several day schools. Cooper Hill and Ashfield are among the principal residences. Hovendon Castle is in ruins.

KILLACONENAGH, or KILLAGHANENAGH, a par. in the bar. of Bear, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing its post town Castletown-Bearhaven. The par. which is 8 miles long by 3 broad, includes the Great Bear Island. It is situated at Bearhaven, on Bantry Bay, and consists mainly of the southern spurs of the Slievemish mountains, which rise to the height of 1,214 ft. at Miskush. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ross, val. with two others, £385, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1812 by the late Board of First Fruits. There are Roman Catholic chapels at Castletown and Bear Island, united to that of Kilnamanagh. There are a Sunday and five day schools. Dunboy Castle and Cameatringane are the principal residences. The castles of the O'Sullivans and M'Carthys are in ruins.

KILLACONNIGAN, a par. in the bar. of Lune, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles W. of Trim, containing Ballivor, its post town. The par. is 5 miles long by 3½ broad. The surface is boggy, and the cultivated land principally arable. It is traversed by the road from Trim to Mullingar. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £123. The church was erected in 1821 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Earl of Darnley provided a handsome gateway and communion service. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kildalkey. There are four day schools, one of which was founded by the Earl of Darnley. Elmgrove, Parkstown, and Kilmur are the principal seats. Limestone is abundant.

KILLADERRY, or PHILIPSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Lower Philipstown, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing its post town, Philipstown. The par. is 3 miles long and the same broad. It is situated on the Grand canal. The surface comprises a considerable proportion of bog. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with another, £197. The church was built in the middle of the last century by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits, and local subscriptions. There are two Wesleyan meeting-houses, and a Roman Catholic chapel; the latter is united to that of Kill. There are four day schools and a Sunday-school.

KILLADOON, a par. in the bar. of North Salt, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.S.W. of Celbridge, its post town. The par. is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. It extends along the left bank of the river Liffey. The soil is good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Kildrought, £439, in the patron. of the crown. Killadoon House is the demesne of the Earl of Leitrim.

KILLADOON, a par. in the bar. of Tirerrill, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Ballinafad. Boyle is its post town. It is about 2½ miles in length and breadth, and contains part of Lough Arrow. The surface consists of arable soil, and is traversed by the road from Carrick-on-Shannon to Sligo. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with Kilmactraney, £79, in the patron. of the bishop. Kingsborough is the only seat. There are two hedge-schools. A convent was founded here by the MacDonoghs in 1427, of which there are still ruins.

KILLADREENAN, a vil. in the bar. of Newcastle, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles from Newtown Mount Kennedy. Here are ruins of a church, once the burial-place of the O'Toole family. Killadreenan Cottage stands in the vicinity.

KILLADYSERT, or KILDYSERT AND ISLANDS, a par. and post vil. in the bar. of Clonderalaw, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 13 miles S. of Ennis, and 149 from Dublin. The par. is 7 miles long by 4 broad. It is situated at the confluence of the estuaries of the Shannon and Fergus, and includes the island of Innishark, with several islets. The soil is of medium quality. The road from Ennis to Kilrush follows the coast. Loughs Gortglass and Cloonsnaghta are two small lakes in the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with two others, £451. The church was erected in 1814 by the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and two hedge-schools. Opposite Innishark stands the village, containing a police station, where petty sessions are held. Many of the inhabitants are occupied in bringing provisions for the Limerick market. Part of the demesne of Cahiracon is within this parish. Fairs are held on the 22nd May, 15th July, and 27th August.

KILLAG, a par. in the bar. of Bargy, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Bridgetown. Taghmon is its post town. This par. is near 2 miles long, and barely 1 mile broad. It is situated on Lough Ballyteigne. The surface consists of a fertile soil, and is well cultivated. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Mulrankin, £500, in the patron. of the bishop. There is one day school. Richfield is the seat of the Loftuses.

KILLAGAN, a par. in the bars. of Kilconway and Upper Dunluce, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 7 miles S.E. of Ballymoney, its post town. The par. is near 4 miles long by 2 broad, and contains the vil. of Cloughmills. It lies towards the head of the river Maine, and consists principally of pasture, with a large extent of bog. It is traversed by the road from Ballymena to Coleraine. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Connor, val. with Connor, £206, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Sunday and two day schools.

KILLAGH, a par. in the bar. of Delvin, co. Westmeath, prov. of Meath, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Castletowndelvin, its post town. It is 1½ mile long and barely 1 mile broad. There is a considerable area of bog. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. A tributary to the Boyne river flows in the S. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, united with Kilcumney. Killagh House and Dardistown are the principal residences.

KILLAGH. See also KILLEAD, KILCOLEMAN, and KILLEAGH.

KILLAGHANENAGH. See KILLACONENAGH, co. Cork.

KILLAGHIN. See KILLAHAN, co. Kerry.

KILLAGHOLEHANE, or KILLALIATHAN, a par. in the bar. of Glenquin, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles S.E. of Newcastle. Drumcollogher is its post town. The par. is 2 miles long and 1 mile broad. It contains the vil. of Broadford. The surface is mountainous, and the soil indifferent. The road from Newcastle to Mallow passes along the eastern boundary. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £30. The church was erected in 1812 by the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Drumcollogher. There is a day school. Springfield Castle is the mansion of Lord Muskerry. Banmore is another residence. Limestone, iron, and coal occur.

KILLAGHTEE, a par. in the bar. of Banagh, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles E.S.E. of Killybegs. Donegal is its post town. It is 10 miles long by 4 broad, and contains the vil. of Dunkineely. The surface forms a peninsula lying between the bays of Macawine and Inver. It is partly wild and mountainous, but comprises a good proportion of serviceable land. The road from Donegal to Killybegs traverses the interior. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Raphoe, val. £420, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1825 by the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Killybegs. The Wesleyans have a meeting-house. There are six or seven day schools. A light is displayed on the coast at St. John's Point. The fisheries give employment to a good number of the inhabitants.

KILLAGHTON. See KILLALAGHTAN, co. Galway.

KILLAHA, a par. in the bar. of Magunihy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles E.S.E. of Killarney, its post town. It is 10 miles long by 5 broad, and lies within the valley of the river Flesk. The greater part of the surface is wild and mountainous, comprising part of the Derrynasaggart mountains, with much bog. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Kilgarvan, £206, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Kilgarvan, also three day schools. Killaha House is the principal residence.

KILLAHAN, or KILLAGHIN, a par. in the bar. of Clanmaurice, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.N.E. of Ardfert. Tralee is its post town. The surface is moorish and cold. The head waters of the river Brick drain it towards the N., and Ardfert and Listowel traverse it in the E. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Kilflyn, £271. There is a police station.

KILLAHURLER, a par. in the bar. of Arklow, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles W. of Arklow, its post town. The parish, which is 2 miles in length and the same in breadth, comprises some upland in the southern district. The soil is generally good. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Arklow, £228, in the patron. of the archbishop. Gold has been found in the vicinity.

KILLAHY, a par. in the bar. of Crannagh, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Freshford. The par. is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. The living is an impropriate rect. in the dioc. of Ferns. There are ruins of the old church and of Killahy Castle, the ancient seat of the Grace family.

KILLAHY, a par. in the bar. of Knocktopher, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S. of Knocktopher, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface comprises a considerable proportion of rock and bog. The road from Kilkenny to Waterford traverses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Kilbeacon, £214, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a day school.

KILLAKEE, a seat in the co. Dublin, Ireland, 3 miles S. of Rathfarnham.

KILLALA, a par., small market town, and seat of a diocese, in the bar. of Tirawley, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 26 miles N. of Castlebar, and 131 from Dublin. It is situated at the mouth of the river Moy, in Killala Bay. A Franciscan friary was founded here in 1460, of which there are still some remains. In 1798 the French, under General Humbert, landed here, and were joined by many of the peasantry. The town consists of three streets radiating from the summit of a hill, on which stands the old cathedral dedicated to St. Patrick. The houses in the chief streets are well built. The only important buildings are, the cathedral, two Roman Catholic chapels, a Methodist chapel, a dispensary, and a round tower 83 feet high, of which the walls are almost perfect. The manufacture of coarse linen is carried on to a small extent, but the principal occupation is in the exportation of grain and in the coasting trade. Killala owns a considerable fishery which employs over 300 men. It has coastguard and police stations, and is a petty sessions town. The harbour is good, and affords safe anchorage for vessels drawing 12 feet of water. The Poor-law Union was formed in 1849, and contains eight electoral divisions in the county of Mayo. The episcopal see of Killala was founded by St. Patrick in 441 when propagating Christianity in the province of Connaught. In 1198 Pope Innocent III. confirmed all the ancient possessions of the see. The sees of Achonry and Killala were held together from 1591 till they became annexed to the see of Tuam. The temporalities were then vested in the ecclesiastical commissioners, consisting of 33,669 acres of bishops' lands, with a revenue of £2,601. The diocese is one of the six forming the ecclesiastical province of Tuam, and comprises part of Sligo and part of Mayo. The chapter consists of a dean, precentor, archdeacon, and five prebendaries. The number of parishes in the diocese is 27, constituting 15 benefices, of which 7 are unions. The cathedral, which is also the parish church, is an ancient edifice with a lofty spire. The living is a rect. held by the Dean of Killala, val. £700, in the patron. of the crown. In the Roman Catholic arrangement Killala constitutes a bishopric in the province of Tuam, containing 23 parochial benefices. The bishop's seat is at Killala. The principal residences in the vicinity are, Killala Lodge, Killala Castle, formerly the episcopal palace, Summerhill, and Farmhill. At Castlereagh are ruins of the old castle of the Bourkes, and a mile to the W. of the town is Carricknanass Castle. At the mouth of the river Moy are remains of the Franciscan friary, including the church and portions of the convent. Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on the 6th May, 17th August, and 8th November.

KILLALLAGHTAN, or KILLAGHTON, a par. in the bars. of Clonmacnowen and Kilconnell, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Kilconnell. The par. is 7 miles long by 3 broad. The land is chiefly used for grazing purposes. The road from Ballinasloe to Galway crosses it in the E. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. with Aughrim, £352, in the patron. of the Marquis of Clanricarde and bishop alternately. There is a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Kilrickhill. There are two day schools. Killagh, Sprucehill, and Cartron, are the principal residences.

KILLALIATHAN. See KILLAGHOLEHANE, co. Limerick.

KILLALLAN, an ancient par. in the co. Renfrew, Scotland, now joined to Houston.

KILLALLON, a par. in the bar. of Fore, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.S.W. of Crossakeel. Athboy is its post town. The par. is 3 miles long by 2 broad, and includes part of Lough Newtown. The surface consists of a medium soil. It is traversed by the road from Crossakeel to Mullingar. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £343, in the patron. of the bishop and Marquis of Drogheda alternately. The church is at Killua. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Clonmellon. There is a day school in the parish. Lakefield is the principal demesne.

KILLALOAN, or KILLOLOAN, a par. partly in the bar. of East Iffa and Offa, co. Tipperary, and partly in that of Upperthird, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles E. of Clonmel, its post town. The par. is 4½ miles long by 2 broad. It consists of a fertile part of the valley of the river Suir. It is mountainous in the Waterford division. The interior is traversed by the road from Waterford to Clonmel. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. £46, in the patron. of the crown. The church was erected in 1827 by the late Board of First Fruits. There are three day schools, one of which was founded by the National Board. Newtown Nenner is the principal residence. In this parish are the ruins of Darintar Castle, also some Druidical remains.

KILLALOE, a par. and post town and the seat of a diocese, chiefly in the bar. of Tulla, but partly in the North Riding of co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 22 miles E. of Ennis, and 12 N.E. of Limerick. The Midland Great Western railway has a station for Killaloe viâ the Shannon. It is also a principal station of the Inland Steam Navigation Company. This place was anciently called Laonia, and its present name is supposed to be a contraction of Kill-da-Lua, or "Church of St. Lua," from the foundation of an abbey in the 6th century by a saint of that name. As commanding an important pass it was anciently of consequence in a military point of view, and was the capital of the O'Briens of Thomond, one of whom, in 1054, erected here a wooden bridge over the Shannon, which was burnt seven years afterwards by the O'Connors. In 1089 the town was burnt down by the people of Connaught, and in 1177 fealty was sworn by the native chiefs to the king of England. In 1367, at the recall of the Duke of Clarence, it was destroyed by Murroh-na-Borough. In 1691 Sarsfield intercepted the artillery of William III. on its way to the siege of Limerick.—This town, once a market town, is situated on the western bank of the Shannon, near the falls of Killaloe, and at the bottom of Lough Derg, under Slieve Bernagh and the Arra mountains. It is connected with Ballina on the Tipperary side by an ancient bridge of nineteen arches. It offers little that is attractive, consisting of one square and several small streets, with a population in 1861 of 1,672. The houses are in general of mean appearance, scattered along the slopes of the hills and towards the new pier. It is, however, by no means deficient in prosperity. A good trade is carried on by packet and passenger boats with Limerick, and many of the inhabitants are engaged in the salmon, trout, and other fisheries. Agricultural produce of all kinds, slates from Lough Derg, and marble are largely exported. The marble mills, slate yard, and Limerick packet station and docks are below the bridge, the steamboat pier and docks about half a mile above it. Formerly the natural navigation of the Shannon was interrupted at Killaloe by ledges of rocks, or rapids, which are 21 feet in a mile here. This has been remedied by the Board of Inland Navigation constructing a canal avoiding the rocks, and uniting with the river beyond the falls.—The town contains infantry barracks, a chief police station, four Roman Catholic chapels, a place of worship for Presbyterians, and a Wesleyan meeting-house.—The population consists of 1,478 Roman Catholics, 184 Established Church, 2 Presbyterians, and 8 Methodists. The chief building is the venerable cathedral, an ancient cruciform structure with a square central tower, said to have been rebuilt in 1160 by Donald O'Brien. It is 200 feet long, with a fine E. window, and many Norman traces. The see of Killaloe was founded by Pope John IV. in 639, and its first bishop was St. Lua. The church became a great resort for pilgrims, and here Connor O'Brien, king of Thomond, died whilst on his pilgrimage. The cathedral was built by the king of Limerick in 1160. At the end of the 12th century the ancient bishopric of Roscrea was permanently joined to this see, and in 1752 the see of Kilfenora was added. Under the Church Temporalities Act the united sees of Clonfert and Kilmacduagh have also been annexed to Killaloe. This is one of the twelve dioceses constituting the ecclesiastical province of Cashel, and includes parts of Queen's County, Limerick, Galway, and King's County, with a large portion of Tipperary, and the greater part of Clare. The lands belonging to the see comprise 7,528 statute acres, and the revenue was £4,041. The chapter consists of a dean, precentor, chancellor, treasurer, archdeacon, and 6 prebendaries. The total number of parishes in the diocese is 108; but the number of benefices 68, of which 29 are unions. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £90, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The cathedral serves as the parish church. Near it is the oratory of St. Molua, one of the oldest ecclesiastical edifices in Ireland, but now in ruins. In the Roman Catholic arrangement the diocese of Killaloe is in the province of Cashel, and contains 53 parishes.—Near the town is Clarrisford House, the episcopal palace, and at Sixmilebridge is Deer Park, the seat of the Roman Catholic bishop. In the vicinity are several gentlemen's seats, commanding views of the lake of Lough Derg, and a rath, said to have formerly been the castle of Brian Boroihme, monarch of all Ireland. Fairs are held on 5th April, 24th May, 3rd September, and 20th October.

KILLALOE, or GRANGOOLY, a par. in the bars. of Callan-with-Crannagh and Shillelogher, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Callan, its post town. It is about 3 miles in length and the same in breadth. It is situated on the banks of the King's river. The soil is generally good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Callan, £1,845, in the patron. of the Marquis of Ormonde. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Ballycallan and Kilmanagh. There are a Sunday and two day schools. Harley Park and Whitehouse are the principal residences. There is a police station in the village.

KILLAMARSH, a par. in the hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 2 miles N.E. of Eckington, its post town and railway station, 8 N.E. of Chesterfield, and 9 S.E. of Sheffield. It is situated on the Chesterfield canal, near the Leeds railway. There are extensive collieries and iron forges, also brickfields, which together employ the chief part of its inhabitants. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Chinewoldemaresc. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is a stone structure with a square tower. The chancel has been entirely rebuilt, and contains an E. window by Warrington. The church is situated on the outskirts of the village. The parochial charities produce about £91 per annum, £22 of which is the endowment of a free school.

KILLAMERY, a par. in the bar. of Kells, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.S.W. of Callan, its post town. The par. is 4 miles long by 3 broad, and contains the vil. of Windgap. The soil is indifferent. The road from Dublin to Cork passes through the interior. The living is a prebendary in the dioc. of Ossory, val. £221, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1815 by the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Tullahought. There are three day schools. Garryrichen is the demesne of the Marquis of Ormonde. This parish is the alleged site of a monastery presided over by St. Gebban.

KILLAN, a vil. in the bar. of Omagh, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 8 miles N.E. of Kesh. It is situated on the Londonderry and Enniskillen road.

KILLANE. See KILLEANY, ARRAN ISLES, and KILLAAN, co. Galway, Ireland.

KILLANEAR. See KILNANARE, co. Kerry.

KILLANEY, a par. in the bar. of Upper Castlereagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Ballynahinch. Lisburn is its post town. The par. is 2 miles square. The soil is excellent, and the road from Lisburn to Ballynahinch crosses the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Down, val. £95, in the patron. of the Marquis of Downshire. Divine service is performed in a schoolroom. There is a Presbyterian meeting-house, also a Sunday and three day schools.

KILLANN, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Bantry, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 8 miles W. of Enniscorthy. The par. is 5 miles long by 4 broad. The surface is mountainous, particularly in the W., where the Blackstairs mountains attain an altitude of 2,409 feet. The rivulet Boro drains it towards the E. The interior is traversed by the road from Newtownbarry to New Ross. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £355, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1832 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Cloughbown. There are six day schools. Woodbrook is a seat in the neighbourhood. St. Anne's Well stands near the church. Slate is quarried.

KILLANNIN, a par. in the bar. of Moycullen, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 10 miles N.W. of Galway. Spiddal is its post town. The parish, which is 18 miles long by 9 broad, extends between Galway Bay and Lough Corrib. It includes the islands of Garomna and Lettermore. The only available land for tillage is found in the E., the remaining parts being a mere wilderness. The road from Galway to Clifden passes near the eastern border. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. £33, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two Roman Catholic chapels and four day schools in the parish. Ross is a demesne in the eastern district. Bunown was the ancient seat of the family of O'Flaherty.

KILLANNY, a par. partly in the bar. of Farney, co. Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, and partly in the bar. of Ardee, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles W. of Louth. Dundalk is its post town. The par. is 3 miles square. The surface is somewhat boggy, and is drained towards the S.E. by the river Glyde. In the interior are several lakes. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Clogher, val. £485, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was rebuilt in 1789. There are two united Roman Catholic chapels, also five hedge-schools. Moynalty, Ballymacknay, and Aghafad are the principal residences.

KILLANULLY, a par. in the bars. of Cork and Kerrycurrihy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S.S.E. of Cork, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad, and lies along the N. bank of the river Annabuoy. The soil is generally very fertile. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £129, in the patron. of the bishop. Public worship is held in a schoolroom. There are Sunday and day schools.

KILLANUMMERY, a par. in the bar. of Drumahaire, co. Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Drumahaire, its post town. It is near 6 miles long by 4 broad. The surface is hilly. The river Bonnet traces part of the N. border. The soil is mostly poor. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardagh, val. with Killery, £145, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1822 by means of a sum lent by the late Board of First Fruits. There is a Roman Catholic chapel; also seven day schools. Friarstown is the principal residence. Limestone prevails, with coal and iron in parts.

KILLARAGHT, a par. in the bar. of Coolavin, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Ballinafad, its post town. It is 5 miles in length and breadth, and extends along the E. shore of Lough Garra. The soil is good. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Achonry, val. with two others, £404, in the patron. of the bishop. The church of the benefice is at Kilfree. There is a hedge-school. Ratarmon is the chief seat. This parish is the reputed site of a nunnery, founded in 470 by St. Patrick for St. Athracta.

KILLARARAN. See KILLEROBAN, co. Galway, Ireland.

KILLARD, a par. in the bar. of Ibrickan, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.N.E. of Kilkee, its post town. The par. is 8 miles long by 2 broad. It lies near the coast between Lough Donnel and Farrihy Bay, and contains the vil. of Doonbeg. On the coast are Doonbeg Bay, Donegal Point, Killard Point, Carronmore Point, and Ballard Point. There is a very large extent of reclaimable bog. The soil is good. The parish is crossed by the road from Kilkee to Ennistimon. The living is a vic., with Kilmacduane, in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. £166, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1833 by the late Board of First Fruits. There are two Roman Catholic Chapels, united to those of Lisden and Kilkee, and six day schools. Ballard House is the principal residence. Slate and building stone are worked. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries. In the famine of 1848 the village was entirely depopulated.

KILLARD POINT, a headland on the S. side of Lough Strongford, co. Down, Ireland.

KILDARDRY, or KILLAALDAFF, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Tipperrary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Cahir, its post town. The parish is about 3 miles square, and is situated near the river Aharlow. The soil it mostly poor. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, in the patron. of the bishop. Kilmogler House, Toureen House, and Maguire's Castle are within this parish. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Galbally. There are two day schools.

KILLARE, a par. in the bar. of Rathconrath, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing part of the town of Ballymore, its post town. The par. is 5 miles long by 3 broad, and includes part of Lough Sunderlin. The roads from Mullingar to Athlone, and fron Longford to Kilbeggan, pass through the parish. The living is an impropriate cur. in the dioc. of Meath joined to Ballymore, in the patron. of the crown. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballymore. There are four day-schools. Killare House is the principal residence. This par. is supposed to be the Laberus of Ptolemy, and near this spot is the ancient hill of Usenach. There are some church ruins, said to be those of a monastery founded in the 6th century, and dedicated to SS. Aidan and Brigid. There are likewise vestiges of a castle erected by Sir Hugh de Lacy in 1181, and subsequently possessed by the Geoghegans and Shaens.

KILLARGA, a par. and seat of a post-office in the bar. of Dromahaire, co. Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles S.S.W. of Manor Hamilton. The parish is 5 miles in length, and 3 in breadth. It lies within the valley of the Bonnet river, and includes Lough Belhavel and several small lakes. The surface is bare and hilly, comprising a portion of the Bardaldieg hills. The road from Manor Hamilton to Carrick-on-Shannon traverses the interior. The village is considerable. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Kilmore, val. £418, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1830, partly by a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, and eight day schools.

KILLARGLIN, a vil. near Castlemaine Harbour, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Lake Garra.

KILLARNEY, a par. in the bar. of Gowran, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Thomastown. The living is a rect. wholly appropriated to St. Canice Cathedral, in the dioc. of Ossory. There are remains of the castle of the Graces.

KILLARNEY, a par. and market town in the bar. of Magunihy, co. Kerry, Ireland, 12 miles N. of Kenmare, and 186 from Dublin, by the Killarney branch of the Great Southern and Western railway, on which it is a station. The par., which is of large extent, contains, besides the town of Killarney, the vil. of Cloghreen, with Muckross Abbey on the lower lake of Killarney, under Mangerton mountain. The town contained in 1861 a population of 5,187. It is said to have derived its origin from the iron smelting works in its neighbourhood, and from the copper mines of Ross and Muckross. Its present prosperity is principally owing to its contiguity to the celebrated lakes of its name. It consists of two principal streets, with several smaller streets branching from them. At the S. end of the main street is the best part of the town, called Kenmare-place, near which is the entrance to the estate of Lord Kenmare, by whom the streets have been paved, and the town otherwise improved. The appearance of the town is neat, and in summer presents a very animated appearance, being thronged with tourists, who come to visit the lakes. The principal buildings are the court-house, with a bridewell attached, a market-house, theatre, fever hospital, dispensary, reading-rooms, nunnery, two banks, savings-bank, police station, almshouse, and union workhouse. It is a polling place for the county elections, and quarter sessions are held in the town; also petty sessions every Tuesday. Races are occasionally held in the vicinity of the town, and regattas take place on the lake. A stag hunt is frequent in the mountains of Glena, which abound with native red-deer. Balls are given in the old court-house during the season, to which illustrious strangers are invited. The scenery around is delightful, affording magnificent views of mountain and glen. Commerce does not flourish to any great degree, but there is a thriving local trade. Tanning, for which the neighbouring oak woods are favourable, is slightly carried on. Linen is made in the neighbourhood and sold at the market, and there are two breweries and a snuff manufactory, also large flour mills. A variety of ornamental articles are made for visitors to carry away as souvenirs, from the arbutus tree, which grows here wild as in Italy. The Poor-law Union contains twelve electoral divs. in the county of Kerry. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe, val. with the vic. of Kilcummin, £500. The church contains several mural tablets of ancient date. There are also a place of worship for Dissenters, and two Roman Catholic chapels. In the town is a first-class classical school. The population comprises 5,052 Roman Catholics, 120 Established Church, 4 Presbyterians, and 11 Methodists. Quarries of limestone and slate are worked to a great extent; lead and copper ores are also obtained in great quantities. There is a considerable extent of bog, which is used for fuel. The chief seats of the surrounding gentry are, Kenmare House, of the Earl of Kenmare; Muckross, of Mr. Herbert; Flesk Castle, Castle Lough, Flesk Priory, Courtayne Castle, &c. About two miles from the town is an old rath called the Druids Circle. Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on the 4th July, 8th August, 7th October, 11th November, and 28th December.

KILLARNEY, LAKES OF, in co. Kerry, Ireland. Of all the lakes of Ireland those of Killarney are the most interesting. They are situated about 2 miles from the town, on the confines of a chain of lofty mountains, and close to that range which forms the most elevated point in Ireland. These lakes form an immense reservoir, and their surplus waters are discharged through the harbour of Castlemaine into the Atlantic by the river Laune, their only outlet. They consist of the Lower, Middle, and Upper lakes. The Lower Lake is 6 miles long and 3 broad, and is bounded by the mountain of Glena and the Tomies mountain. Its largest island is called Ross Island, containing about 80 acres, with the ruins of Ross Castle, founded by the O'Donoghues, and giving the titles of viscount and baron of Castlerosse to the Earl of Kenmare. The shores of Ross are ornamented with all kinds of plantations. To the N. is the O'Donoghue's Prison, a rock rising about 30 feet above the lake's surface. To the W. of Ross Island is that of Innisfallen, the most beautiful in all the Lower Lake, and immortalised by Moore in the melody, "Sweet Innisfallen, fare thee well." It is very fertile and luxuriantly clothed with woods, which embosom the ruins of an abbey founded in the 6th century. Near the abbey is an ancient oratory with a Norman doorway. Between the Glena and Tomies mountains is O'Sullivan's Cascade, consisting of three falls in a descent of 70 feet. The bay of Glena is a spot of most enchanting beauty, and has a fine echo. The northern shore of the Muckross peninsula is bold and rocky, and studded with islands. The Middle or Torc Lake, so named from the mountain bounding it on the S., is separated from the Lower Lake by the islands of Dinis and Brickeen, and the peninsula of Muckross. It is about 2 miles long and 1 broad. At its northern end are "Devil's Island," a rock of considerable height, and "Bay." The peninsula of Muckross is thickly covered with wood, and forms part of the estate of Mr. Herbert. On its S. side Torc Mountain rises in majestic grandeur, with its wooded slopes. On its eastern side is Glaunna-Coppul, the "Glen of the Horse," entirely surrounded by precipitous rocks. East of the peninsula are seen the interesting ruins of Muckross Abbey. It was built in 1440, rebuilt in 1626, and consisted of a nave, choir, transept, and cloisters. In the interior are tombs of the MacCarthys and the O'Donoghues of the glens. The Upper Lake is about 3 miles to the E. of the Middle Lake, with which it communicates by a channel whose current is so rapid as to render navigation against its stream very difficult. Near the old bridge is an eddy called "O'Sullivan's Punchbowl." The stream is studded with islands, one of which is called the "Man-of-War," from its supposed similitude. A lofty rock, called the "Eagle's Nest," rises abruptly from the river, its base covered with wood. A very fine echo is produced here. The entrance to the Upper Lake, which is very contracted, is called "Coleman's Leap." This lake is surrounded with mountains and studded with islands, causing the scenery to differ from that of the other two lakes. To its S. the Cromiglaun Mountain rises from its very shore; to the W. of this mountain is Derrycunnihy, where falls the cascade of that name. To the N. of the lake are Gheramine and the Purple Mountain; and N.E. is the Long Range. The chief island is Rossburkie, rising from a rocky base and covered with wood; the names of the rest are Eagle's, Ronayne's, McCarthy's, Duck, and Arbutus islands.

The construction of the new road to Kenmare, passing between the Torc Mountain, greatly facilitates the view. Of the three lakes the scenery of the Lower is the most beautiful, the Middle the most picturesque, and the Upper the most sublime. They are unrivalled by any of equal extent in Europe.

KILLARY, KILLEARY, or KILLARVEY, a par. in the bar. of Lower Slane, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.S.E. of Nobber. Pilltown is its post town. It is 4 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface is drained by the Keiran, a tributary to the river Dee. It consists of a good soil. The parish is traversed by the road from Navan to Ardee. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown. The Roman Catholic chapel here is united to those of Heronstown and Syddan. There are four or five day schools. Parsonstown is the principal residence.

KILLASCOBE. See KILLOSCOBE, co. Galway, Ireland.

KILLASHANDRA, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of Tullyhunco, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles W. by N. of Cavan, and 75 from Dublin. The par. is 8 miles long by 4 broad, and contains the vil. of Arvagh. The surface consists of a hilly country, bordering on Lough Erne. The soil is poor. The roads from Enniskillen to Oldcastle, and from Ballyconnel to Longford, traverse the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kilmore, val. £1,166, in the patron. of Trinity College. The church was erected in the town in 1842. There are likewise a chapel-of-ease, a Roman Catholic chapel, Presbyterian meeting-house, and Wesleyan chapel; also four day schools. Castle Hamilton is the principal seat. The town is situated on the Croghan, in the midst of lake scenery. It consists chiefly of one well-built street, in which stands the market house. A considerable linen trade is carried on. The dispensary is within the Cavan Poor-law Union. There is a chief police station. Petty sessions are held once a fortnight. Wednesday is market day. Fairs are held on 28th March, 9th May, 22nd June, 23rd August, and 8th November.

KILLASHEE, or KILLISHEY, a par. in the bars. of North and South Naas, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Naas, its post town. It is 3½ miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface consists of a good soil, and is crossed by the road from Naas to Ballymore-Eustace. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. £202, in the patron. of the bishop. The foundation of the church is not known. A Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Newbridge. Killashee House was the seat of the late Baron de Roebeck. In this parish are some interesting ruins, and a round tower. There is one day school in the village.

KILLASHEE, a par. and post-office vil. in the bars. of Longford and Moydow, co. Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Lanesborough. The par. is 6 miles long by 2½ broad, and contains the vil. of Cloondara. The surface is generally flat and boggy, and the soil middling. The interior is traversed by the road from Dublin to Strokestown, and by the Grand canal, upon which latter the village is situated. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardagh, val. with another, £466, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a modern building, erected partly by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, a Dissenting meeting- ouse, and six day schools. Fairview is the principal residence. Fairs are held on the second Monday in March, 26th May, 29th September, and the first Wednesday in December.

KILLASNET, a par. in the bar. of Rosslogher, co. Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing part of its post town, Manor-Hamilton, and the vil. of Lurganboy. The par. is 9 miles long by 5 broad. The surface is mountainous and marshy, with Glenade and Glencar loughs. It has a limestone subsoil. The living is a vic. with Manor-Hamilton, in the dioc. of Ardagh. The Roman Catholic chapel at Glencar is united to that of Mullys. There are two Sunday and several day schools. Glenade is the principal residence.

KILLASPUGBRONE, a par. in the bar. of Carbury, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Sligo, its post town. The par. is 3½ miles long by 3 broad, and lies along the S. shore of Sligo Bay. The surface rises to the height of 1,078 feet in one part. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with St. John's, Sligo, £705, in the patron. of Trinity College, Dublin. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to the chapels of Cabry and St. John's. There is one day school.

KILLASPUGLONANE, a par. in the bar. of Corcomroe, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Ennistimon, its post town. The par. is near 3 miles square. It lies along the coast of Liscanor Bay. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilfenora, val. with Kilmanaheen, £141, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilmacrehy. Moymore, Summerville, Castleview, and Sandfield, are the principal residences.

KILLASPUGMULLANE, a par. in the bars. of Condons with Clangibbon, and Barrymore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Cork. Glanmire is its post town. The par. is 7 miles long by 4 broad. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £522, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is at Ballydclohar. There are Roman Catholic chapels and two or three day schools.

KILLASSER, a par. in the bar. of Gallen, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles E.N.E. of Foxford, its post town. It is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The surface is hilly, containing part of the Croyhan mountains. The river Moy flows on the southern border, and the road from Foxford to Tubbercurry traverses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Achonry, val. with Straid, £375, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel at Boulabee. In the village are National and other day schools.

KILLATHY, a par. in the bar. of Fermoy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Fermoy, its post town. It is 6 miles long and over 1 mile broad. The surface extends along the left bank of the river Blackwater. It consists of arable land, with some mountain pasture. It is traversed by the road from Fermoy to Doneraile. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with Ballyhooley, £411, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a hedge-school. Gurteen is the principal residence. Building stone, limestone, and iron occur.

KILLAUGHEY. See KILLOUGHEY, King's County, Ireland.

KILLAVALLA, a demesne in King's County, Ireland, near Roscrea.

KILLAVALLY, a vil. in the par. of Newtown, bar. of Moycashel, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles E. of Kilbeggan. It is situated on the road from Dublin to Athlone. Tyrrel's Pass is in the vicinity.

KILLAVINOGE, or CLONMORE, a par. in the bar. of Ikerrin, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Templemore, its post town. It is 5 miles long, and its greatest breadth is near 4 miles. The surface, which lies along the left bank of the river Suir, contains a large proportion of bog, but the soil is good. The road from Rathdowney to Templemore traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Templemore, £700, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Templemore and Killea. There are two day schools. Dromard is the principal residence.

KILLAWILLIN, or KILLAVULLANE, a post-office vil. in the par. of Monanimy, in the bar. of Fermoy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Mallow. It is situated on the left bank of the river Blackwater, and on the road from Mallow to Fermoy. Immediately over it rise the Nagle mountains. The pass of Killawillin, the ruins of Monanimy, supposed to have belonged to the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, and several natural caverns, are objects of interest.

KILLAY, a vil. in the par. of Bishopston, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles W. of Swansea.

KILLCHENZIE. See KILLEAN, co. Argyle, Scotland.

KILLCOTT, a tythg. in the par. of Hawkesbury, upper div. of the hund. of Grumbald's-Ash, co. Gloucester, 3 miles S.E. of Wootton-under-Edge, and 4 E. of Wickwar. It is joined with Saddlewood and Tresham to form a township.

KILLCOTT, a tythg. in the par. of Newent, hund. of Botloe, co. Gloucester, 1 mile from Newent, and 8 miles N.W. of Gloucester. It is joined to Boulsdon to form a township. The village, which is considerable, is situated in Dean Forest, near the Hereford canal.

KILLEA, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Raphoe, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of St. John's-town. The par. is 3 miles long by 1 mile broad, and contains the vil. of Carrigans. The surface lies along the banks of the river Foyle. It consists of a middling soil. The parish is traversed by the road from Lifford to Londonderry. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Raphoe, val. £153, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1765, by means of a sum raised by local contribution and assessment. There are a Sunday and two day schools. Dunmore House is the principal residence.

KILLEA, a par. in the bar. of Ikerrin, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.N.W. of Templemore, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface is rather mountainous and boggy, lying near the head of the river Suir. It attains an elevation of 1,462 feet at the Kilduff Mountain, and 1,683 feet at the Devil's-bit Mountain. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Templemore, £700, in the patron. of the bishop. Divine service is held in a private house. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Templemore and Killavenogh. There is a day school. Kilduff Park is the principal residence. Granite and limestone are quarried in the hills. There is a police station in the parish.

KILLEA, a par. in the bar. of Gaultiere, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing the vil. of Dunmore, its post town. The par. lies along the W. side of Waterford Harbour, and is 3½ miles long by 2½ broad. The soil is of middling quality. Portally Head and Creadan Head are prominent objects on the coast. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Waterford, val. with two others, £331, in the patron. of the crown. The church was erected by the late Board of First Fruits in 1818. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Passage and Faithleg. There are a Sunday and three day schools.

KILLEAD, or KILLAGH, a par. in the bar. of Lower Massereene, co. Antrim, prov of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Antrim. Crumlin is its post town. The par., which is 8 miles long by 5 broad, lies along the E. side of Lough Neagh. The Sixmile water touches it on the N., and the Crumlin water on the S. The soil is rich and well cultivated. The road from Antrim to Armagh and Newry traverses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Connor, val. £539. The church is over a hundred years old. The late Board of First Fruits built a chapel-of-ease at Gortree in 1831. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Glenavy. There are two Presbyterian meeting-houses in the parish. Here are a Sunday and about fifteen day-schools. Langford was the seat of the late Hon. Sir H. Pakenham; Glendarragh is another residence. There are ruins of a church at Dundesart, standing within an ancient entrenchment. Numerous relics and human bones have been excavated at this spot. There are several other church ruins in the parish, supposed to have been fortified and demolished during the rebellion of 1641.

KILLEAGH, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Imokilly, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Castlemartyr. It is a station on the Cork and Youghall direct line of railway. The par. is 4 miles long by 3 broad, and contains Glenbower. The soil is good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £648, in the patron. of the crown. The church was erected by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1812. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ardagh. There are a Sunday and four day-schools. Aghadoe is the seat of Sir William de Capell Brooke, Bart. There is a police station and a dispensary within the Middleton Poor-law Union. The village of St. Abban is alleged to take its name from a monastery founded here in 650. Fairs are held on the 13th June and 12th November.

KILLEAGH, or MOYNENE, a par. in the bar. of Fore, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Oldcastle, its post town. It is 6 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 2. The surface lies along the side of Lough Sheelin, and is crossed by the road from Oldcastle to Finea. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £162, in the patron. of the crown. The church was erected in 1806 by the late Board of First Fruits. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, united to that of Kilbride, and also two day schools. Crossdrum is the principal residence.

KILLEAN-WITH-KILLCHENZIE, an united par. in the district of Kintyre, co. Argyle, Scotland, 5 miles N. of Campbeltown. It is 18 miles in length and 4 in breadth, and includes the post village of Tayinloan. Killean lies to the N. of Killchenzie. The joint parishes extend along the W. shore of the peninsula, opposite Gigha Island. The surface, which is heathy, rises gradually from the coast till it attains an altitude at Benantuire of 2,170 feet above sea-level. This par. is in the presb. of Kintyre and synod of Argyle. The minister has a stipend of £178. There are two churches, a Free church, two parish schools, and several private schools. Killean House is the principal residence. The road from Tarbet to Campbeltown traverses the interior. Seals are occasionally taken on the coast. In this parish are a pillar tower, some Danish earthworks, and a fort. The Duke of Argyll is the chief landowner.

KILLEAN, an ancient par. now joined to Kilninian, co. Argyle, Scotland.

KILLEANY, or KILHENY, a par. in the bar. of Burren, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Kilfenora. Ennistimon is its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface for the greater part consists of waste land. The living is a vic. not in charge, in the dioc. of Kilfenora. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, united to that of Oughtmanna. The parish belongs to Creagh of Carrabane. There are traces of ancient fortifications, and of a cromlech.

KILLEANY, a par. in the bar. of Clare, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Headford, its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface is rather boggy, but has some good arable land. It is traversed by the road from Headford to Annaghdown. Part of Lough Corrib is within the limits of the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Headford, £834, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Headford. There are two day schools.

KILLEANY, or KILLANE, a vil. in the Arran Isles, co. Galway, Ireland. It is a coastguard and pilot station on Killeany Bay.

KILLEARN, a par. and post-office vil. in co. Stirling, Scotland, 7 miles W. of Fintry. The par. is 12 miles long, with an average breadth of 2. Its boundaries are co. Dumbarton and the pars. of Drymen, Balfron, Fintry, and Strathblane. The river Endrick flows along part of the northern and western boundaries, and joins the Blane. This par. is in the presb. of Dumbarton, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister has a stipend of £152. The church was built in 1826. There are two Free churches and three private schools within the parish. The principal residences are Killearn House, erected in 1688 by the Montrose family, to whom the greater part of the parish anciently belonged, Ballikinrain, Boguhan, and Moss. The roads from Stirling to Dumbarton, and from Balfron to Glasgow, traverse the parish; upon the latter stands the village of Killearn, containing the parish church; but the principal object of attraction is an obelisk to the memory of the great Buchanan, who was born at a farmhouse about 2 miles distant, now known as the "Moss." At Balglass there is an old residence, said to have been the retreat of Sir William Wallace; and Gartness was for some time the home of Napier of Merchiston, the eminent mathematician. A little N. of the village is the reputed scene of a battle between the Romans and Scots. This district was formerly subject to the frequent descents of Highland outlaws, who levied blackmail as late as 1743. Dualt Glen, Ashdow waterfall, and the Pot of Gartness, are very attractive features. There are ruins of the ancient church, erected in 1429. Duntreath Castle is the property of Sir A. Edmonstone, Bart. Basalt, jasper, millstone, &c., occur among the hills. The waters and streams abound in fish, and game is plentiful in the hills.

KILLEBAN. See KILLABBAN, Queen's County.

KILLEDAN, a par. in the bar. of Gallen, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 7 miles S.W. of Swineford, its post town. It is 5 miles long by 3 broad, and contains the vils. of Kiltamagh and Newtown-Brown. The surface has a considerable proportion of hilly pasture and bog, but the arable soil is good. The river Guishden effects the drainage towards the N. The road from Swineford to Ballina crosses the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Achonry, val. with Buhola, £296, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is at Ballinamore, was built by Mr. Ormesby in 1780. There is a Roman Catholic chapel; also five day schools. Killedan House, Annagh-hill, and Ballinamore are the principal residences. A Franciscan friary formerly stood here.

KILLEEDY, a par. in the bar. of Glenquin, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles S. of Newcastle. Ashford is its post town. The par. is 10 miles long by 5 broad. It is watered by a stream falling into the river Feale. The greater part of the surface consists of mountain, moorland, and bog. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £424, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, erected in 1817, was destroyed by fire in 1822. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, and a private Roman Catholic meeting-house, in this parish; also six day schools. Glenquin Castle was founded in 1462, and surrendered to Sir W. Raleigh.

KILLEEK, a par. in the bar. of Nethercross, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Swords, its post town. It is 1 mile long, and about the same broad. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Swords, £329, in the patron. of the archbishop.

KILLEELY, KILLILY, or KILLIGALLY, a par. in the bars. of Lower Bunratty, Limerick city, and Pubblebrien, cos. Clare and Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is included within the limits of the city of Limerick, its post town. The par., which is 4 miles long by 3 broad, is situated on the river Shannon. The road from Limerick to Ennis traverses the interior. The surface attains an altitude of 1,010 feet in the northern portion. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £279, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by Mr. Burton in 1735. There are a Sunday and six day schools. Cratloe Woods is the principal residence.

KILLEELY, or KILLILY, a par. in the bar. of Dunkellin, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Oranmore. Loughrea is its post town. The par. is 4 miles square. The surface is rocky, with limestone subsoil. It is traversed by the road from Loughrea to Kilcolgan. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmacduagh, val. with Kilcolgan, £275, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, and four or five day schools. The chief seats are Carrigeen, Larkvale, and Rahasane.

KILLEEN, a par. in the bar. of Skreen, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Dunshaughlin, its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface, which consists of a good soil, is intersected by the road from Dublin to Navan. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Tara, £439, in the patron. of the crown. The Earl of Fingal takes title of baron from this place, and resides at Killeen Castle. This castle was built, towards the end of the 12th century, by Sir Hugh de Lacy, and was long the seat of the Cusacks, from whom it passed, by marriage, into the Plunkett family. Near the castle is an old church, built in the reign of Edward IV. by Sir Christopher Plunkett, containing monuments of the Cusacks and Plunketts. An abbey is said to have been founded here in the 6th century by St. Endens. This spot is also the alleged site of a nunnery, founded by a sister of St. Fanchea.

KILLEEN, an ancient par., now joined to Aghmacart, Queen's County, Ireland.

KILLEEN, a vil. in the bar. of Dunkellin, co. Galway, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Kilcolgan. It is situated on Galway Bay.

KILLEEN, a bog in co. Tipperary, 5 miles N.E. of Cashel.

KILLEENADEEMA, a par. in the bar. of Loughrea, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Loughrea, its post town. The par., which is over 8 miles long, and near 4 broad, contains part of Loughrea. The surface is mountainous in the S., containing part of the Slievebaughta range. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. with Loughrea, £444. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilteskill. There are six day schools. Abbeyville is the chief seat.

KILLEENAGARRIFF, or KILNEGARUFF, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Castleconnell, its post town. The par. is 4 miles long by 2 broad. The surface, which consists for the most part of good soil, is drained by the Mulkern river. The road from Limerick to Dublin traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Stradbally, £406, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in ruins. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Castleconnell. There are two National and a private day school in the parish. Part of the demesne of Mount Shannon is within the limit.

KILLEENASTEENA, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.S.W of Cashel. It is 1½ mile long, and its greatest breadth is 1 mile. It is crossed by the road from Golden to Clonmel. The living is an impropriate rect. in the dioc. of Cashel.

KILLEENAVARRA AND ISLANDS, a par. in the bar. of Dunkellin, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 7 miles N.W. of Gort. Kilcolgan is its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface, which extends along the coast of Kinvarra Bay, consists of a fair soil. It is crossed by the road from Gort to Galway. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmacduagh, val. with Kilcolgan, £275, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a day school. Clough is the chief seat.

KILLEENEEN, or KILLINEEN, a par. in the bar. of Dunkellin, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Athenry. Kilcolgan is its post town. It is 4 miles long by 3 broad. The surface is of a rocky nature, but has a fair proportion of arable soil. The parish is crossed by the road from Dublin to Galway. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmacduagh, val. with Kilcolgan, £275, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a day school.

KILLEENEMER, a par. in the bar. of Fermoy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Kilworth. Coachford is its post town. It is 1 mile long by half a mile broad. The soil is of medium quality. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £30, in the patron. of the bishop.

KILLEENOGHTY, or CILLENAUGHTY, a par. in the bars. of Coshma and Pubblebrien, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Croom. The living is appropriated to the diocesan of Limerick. Limestone is abundant.

KILLEENTIERNA, a par. in the bars. of Magunihy and Trughanacmy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Castle-island, its post town. The parish extends over an area of 10,231 acres, and is situated along the bank of the river Brown Flesk. The road from Castle-island to Killarney traverses the interior. There is a considerable proportion of bog and heath. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with another, £354, in the patron. of H. A. Herbert,

Esq., and six others. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1814. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and two hedge-schools.

KILLEESHIL, or KILLESHILL, a par. in the bar. of Lower Dungannon, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Ballygawley, its post town. It is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The surface, which is inclined to be boggy, is drained towards the S. by a headwater of the river Blackwater. The parish is traversed by the road from Ballygawley to Dungannon. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £613, in the patron. of the primate. The church was presented to the parish in 1768 by the late Board of First Fruits. There is a Roman Catholic chapel united to the chapel of Donaghmore. There are six day schools. Anahue is the principal residence.

KILLEEVAN, a par. in the bar. of Dartree, co. Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Clones, its post town. The par. is 5 miles long by 2½ broad, and contains the vil. of Newbliss. The surface lies along the N. bank of the river Fina. It contains some extent of turbary bog. The interior is traversed by the roads from Clones to Dublin and Ballyboy. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Clogher, val. £523, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1794, and enlarged in 1812 by aid of the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Aughaboy. There is a Presbyterian meeting-house, also eleven day schools. Ballynure and Glynch are the chief seats.

KILLEGAR, a vil. in the bar. of Carrigallen, co. Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, not far from Carrigallen. Killegar House is the principal residence.

KILLEGLAND, a par. in the bar. of Ratoath, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Ratoath, its post town. It is 1 mile long by half a mile broad, and contains the town of Ashbourne. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Ratoath, £595, in the patron. of the crown and T. L. Norman, Esq. There is a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Ratoath, also two day schools.

KILLEGNEY, a par. in the bar. of Bantry, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 8 miles S.W. of Enniscorthy. It is 4 miles long by 2 broad. The surface is bounded on the N. by the river Bore, and is intersected by the road from Enniscorthy to New Ross. It is somewhat of a hilly character, and the soil poor. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with another, £288, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by means of a loan in 1827. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Chapel. There are a Sunday and two day schools in the parish. The living was held by Gordon, the historian, for some time. Castle-Borough is the residence of Lord Carew.

KILLEHENNY, a par. in the bar. of Iraghticonnor, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles W.N.W. of Listowel. Tarbert is its post town. The par. contains the vils. of Ballybunian and Ahaphond. The surface lies to the N. of the mouth of the river Cashen. It is somewhat mountainous and boggy. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Listowel, £335. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a hedge-school. Tullamore is the principal residence. Limestone is abundant.

KILLEIGH, a post-office vil. in the par. of Geashill, King's County, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Tullamore. It was anciently noted for its three religious houses. At the Dissolution the site of the abbey was given to the Geraldine family. The principal seat is Killeigh House. Fairs are held on the 1st July and 19th October.

KILLELAGH, a par. in the bar. of Loughinsholin, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles S.S.E. of Maghera, its post town. The par. is 4 miles long by 2½ broad. The surface is very mountainous, lying near the Carntogher hills. The small river Clody effects the drainage towards the N. The interior is intersected by the road from Belfast to Londonderry. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £250, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a modern building. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Maghera. There are four day schools in the parish. This district belongs principally to the Vintners' and Mercers' Companies. Basalt and sandstone are the prevailing rocks.

KILLELAN, a par. in the bars. of Kilkea and Moone, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of of Castledermot, its post town. The par., exclusive of three detached portions, is 3½ miles square. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Timolin, £272, in the patron. of the archbishop. Davidstown is the principal residence. Here is a tower of the Knights of St. John.

KILLELONEHAM. See KILLONEHAM, co. Limerick, Ireland.

KILLEMELY, a demesne in co. Tipperary, Ireland, near Cahir.

KILLEMELAGH, a par. in the bar. of Iveragh, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Cahirsiveen, its post town. It is 7 miles long by 6 broad. The surface lies along the bay to which the parish gives name, near Valentia and Bolus Head. The islands of Puffin, Bolus, and Ballinskelligs come within the limits. There is a good deal of lofty mountain land. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with two others, £116. There is a Roman Catholic chapel. Belville is the chief seat.

KILLEN, a vil. in the par. and bar. of Strabane, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. A fair is held here on the 4th December.

KILLENAGH, a par. in the bar. of Ballaghkeen, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Gorey, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 1½ mile broad, and lies along the sea-coast. Part of its boundary is traced by the river Awin-Banna. The living is an impropriate cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Ardamine, £91. There is a hedge-school. A dispensary here is within the Gorey Poor-law Union. Ballywalter House and Tomduff House are the principal residences.

KILLENAULE, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of Slievardagh, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 10 miles N.E. of Cashel, and 96 from Dublin. The par. is nearly 7 miles long by 2 broad. The surface consists principally of a light soil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with six others, £817, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a modern building erected by the aid of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Moglass. There are six day schools in the parish. Lane-park, Killeen, Springhill, Roan, Clonbroggan, and Sherbourne are the chief seats. The town is situated on the cross roads from Urlingford to Clonmel, and from Cashel to Callen. It contains a chief police station, and a dispensary within the Cashel Poor-law Union. In the vicinity coal, iron, clay, and slate occur. Fairs are held on 1st January, 25th March, 14th May, 24th June, 14th August, and 17th October.

KILLENCARE. See KILLINKERE, co. Cavan, Ireland.

KILLENCARRIG, a hmlt. in the bar. of Newcastle, co. Wicklow, Ireland, near Delgany.

KILLENNY, a par. in the bar. of Stradbally, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.N.W. of Stradbally. Adare is its post town. It is 1½ mile long by 1 broad. The soil is mostly good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £37, in the patron. of the bishop. Killon is a demesne within the limits.

KILLENVOY. See KILLINVOY, Roscommon, Ireland.

KILLERBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Heighington, S.E. div. of the ward of Darlington, co. Durham, 7 miles N.W. of Darlington. It is a meet for the Raby hounds.

KILLERBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Cayton, wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Scarborough. It is situated near the coast, and had formerly a castle built by Brian Fitzalan in the reign of Edward I.

KILLERBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Catterick, wap. of East Hang, North Riding co. York, 2½ miles from Catterick, and 5 N. of Bedale. It is situated near the river Swale. The Countess of Tyrconnel is lady of the manor. Killerby Hall is the principal residence.

retreat of Sir William Wallace; and Gartness was for some time the home of Napier of Merchiston, the eminent mathematician. A little N. of the village is the reputed scene of a battle between the Romans and Scots. This district was formerly subject to the frequent descents of Highland outlaws, who levied blackmail as late as 1743. Dualt Glen, Ashdow waterfall, and the Pot of Gartness, are very attractive features. There are ruins of the ancient church, erected in 1429. Duntreath Castle is the property of Sir A. Edmonstone, Bart. Basalt, jasper, millstone, &c., occur among the hills. The waters and streams abound in fish, and game is plentiful in the hills.

KILLEBAN. See KILLABBAN, Queen's County.

KILLEDAN, a par. in the bar. of Gallen, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 7 miles S.W. of Swineford, its post town. It is 5 miles long by 3 broad, and contains the vils. of Kiltamagh and Newtown-Brown. The surface has a considerable proportion of hilly pasture and bog, but the arable soil is good. The river Guishden effects the drainage towards the N. The road from Swineford to Ballina crosses the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Achonry, val. with Buhola, £296, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is at Ballinamore, was built by Mr. Ormesby in 1780. There is a Roman Catholic chapel; also five day schools. Killedan House, Annagh-hill, and Ballinamore are the principal residences. A Franciscan friary formerly stood here.

KILLEEDY, a par. in the bar. of Glenquin, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles S. of Newcastle. Ashford is its post town. The par. is 10 miles long by 5 broad. It is watered by a stream falling into the river Feale. The greater part of the surface consists of mountain, moorland, and bog. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £424, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, erected in 1817, was destroyed by fire in 1822. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, and a private Roman Catholic meeting-house, in this parish; also six day schools. Glenquin Castle was founded in 1462, and surrendered to Sir W. Raleigh.

KILLEEK, a par. in the bar. of Nethercross, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Swords, its post town. It is 1 mile long, and about the same broad. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Swords, £329, in the patron. of the archbishop.

KILLEELY, KILLILY, or KILLIGALLY, a par. in the bars. of Lower Bunratty, Limerick city, and Pubblebrien, cos. Clare and Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is included within the limits of the city of Limerick, its post town. The par., which is 4 miles long by 3 broad, is situated on the river Shannon. The road from Limerick to Ennis traverses the interior. The surface attains an altitude of 1,010 feet in the northern portion. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £279, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by Mr. Burton in 1735. There are a Sunday and six day schools. Cratloe Woods is the principal residence.

KILLEELY, or KILLILY, a par. in the bar. of Dunkellin, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Oranmore. Loughrea is its post town. The par. is 4 miles square. The surface is rocky, with limestone subsoil. It is traversed by the road from Loughrea to Kilcolgan. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmacduagh, val. with Kilcolgan, £275, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, and four or five day schools. The chief seats are Carrigeen, Larkvale, and Rahasane.

KILLEEN, a par. in the bar. of Skreen, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Dunshaughlin, its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface, which consists of a good soil, is intersected by the road from Dublin to Navan. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Tara, £439, in the patron. of the crown. The Earl of Fingal takes title of baron from this place, and resides at Killeen Castle. This castle was built, towards the end of the 12th century, by Sir Hugh de Lacy, and was long the seat of the Cusacks, from whom it passed, by marriage, into the Plunkett family. Near the castle is an old church, built in the reign of Edward IV. by Sir Christopher Plunkett, containing monuments of the Cusacks and Plunketts. An abbey is said to have been founded here in the 6th century by St. Endens. This spot is also the alleged site of a nunnery, founded by a sister of St. Fanchea.

KILLEEN, an ancient par., now joined to Aghmacart, Queen's County, Ireland.

KILLEEN, a vil. in the bar. of Dunkellin, co. Galway, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Kilcolgan. It is situated on Galway Bay.

KILLEEN, a bog in co. Tipperary, 5 miles N.E. of Cashel.

KILLEENADEEMA, a par. in the bar. of Loughrea, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Loughrea, its post town. The par., which is over 8 miles long, and near 4 broad, contains part of Loughrea. The surface is mountainous in the S., containing part of the Slievebaughta range. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. with Loughrea, £444. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilteskill. There are six day schools. Abbeyville is the chief seat.

KILLEENAGARRIFF, or KILNEGARUFF, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Castleconnell, its post town. The par. is 4 miles long by 2 broad. The surface, which consists for the most part of good soil, is drained by the Mulkern river. The road from Limerick to Dublin traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Stradbally, £406, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in ruins. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Castleconnell. There are two National and a private day school in the parish. Part of the demesne of Mount Shannon is within the limit.

KILLEENASTEENA, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.S.W of Cashel. It is 1½ mile long, and its greatest breadth is 1 mile. It is crossed by the road from Golden to Clonmel. The living is an impropriate rect. in the dioc. of Cashel.

KILLEENAVARRA AND ISLANDS, a par. in the bar. of Dunkellin, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 7 miles N.W. of Gort. Kilcolgan is its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface, which extends along the coast of Kinvarra Bay, consists of a fair soil. It is crossed by the road from Gort to Galway. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmacduagh, val. with Kilcolgan, £275, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a day school. Clough is the chief seat.

KILLEENEEN, or KILLINEEN, a par. in the bar. of Dunkellin, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Athenry. Kilcolgan is its post town. It is 4 miles long by 3 broad. The surface is of a rocky nature, but has a fair proportion of arable soil. The parish is crossed by the road from Dublin to Galway. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmacduagh, val. with Kilcolgan, £275, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a day school.

KILLEENEMER, a par. in the bar. of Fermoy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Kilworth. Coachford is its post town. It is 1 mile long by half a mile broad. The soil is of medium quality. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £30, in the patron. of the bishop.

KILLEENOGHTY, or CILLENAUGHTY, a par. in the bars. of Coshma and Pubblebrien, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Croom. The living is appropriated to the diocesan of Limerick. Limestone is abundant.

KILLEENTIERNA, a par. in the bars. of Magunihy and Trughanacmy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Castle-island, its post town. The parish extends over an area of 10,231 acres, and is situated along the bank of the river Brown Flesk. The road from Castle-island to Killarney traverses the interior. There is a considerable proportion of bog and heath. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with another, £354, in the patron. of H. A. Herbert,

Esq., and six others. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1814. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and two hedge-schools.

KILLEESHIL, or KILLESHILL, a par. in the bar. of Lower Dungannon, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Ballygawley, its post town. It is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The surface, which is inclined to be boggy, is drained towards the S. by a headwater of the river Blackwater. The parish is traversed by the road from Ballygawley to Dungannon. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £613, in the patron. of the primate. The church was presented to the parish in 1768 by the late Board of First Fruits. There is a Roman Catholic chapel united to the chapel of Donaghmore. There are six day schools. Anahue is the principal residence.

KILLEEVAN, a par. in the bar. of Dartree, co. Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Clones, its post town. The par. is 5 miles long by 2½ broad, and contains the vil. of Newbliss. The surface lies along the N. bank of the river Fina. It contains some extent of turbary bog. The interior is traversed by the roads from Clones to Dublin and Ballyboy. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Clogher, val. £523, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1794, and enlarged in 1812 by aid of the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Aughaboy. There is a Presbyterian meeting-house, also eleven day schools. Ballynure and Glynch are the chief seats.

KILLEGAR, a vil. in the bar. of Carrigallen, co. Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, not far from Carrigallen. Killegar House is the principal residence.

KILLEGLAND, a par. in the bar. of Ratoath, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Ratoath, its post town. It is 1 mile long by half a mile broad, and contains the town of Ashbourne. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Ratoath, £595, in the patron. of the crown and T. L. Norman, Esq. There is a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Ratoath, also two day schools.

KILLEGNEY, a par. in the bar. of Bantry, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 8 miles S.W. of Enniscorthy. It is 4 miles long by 2 broad. The surface is bounded on the N. by the river Bore, and is intersected by the road from Enniscorthy to New Ross. It is somewhat of a hilly character, and the soil poor. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with another, £288, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by means of a loan in 1827. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Chapel. There are a Sunday and two day schools in the parish. The living was held by Gordon, the historian, for some time. Castle-Borough is the residence of Lord Carew.

KILLEHENNY, a par. in the bar. of Iraghticonnor, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles W.N.W. of Listowel. Tarbert is its post town. The par. contains the vils. of Ballybunian and Ahaphond. The surface lies to the N. of the mouth of the river Cashen. It is somewhat mountainous and boggy. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Listowel, £335. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a hedge-school. Tullamore is the principal residence. Limestone is abundant.

KILLEIGH, a post-office vil. in the par. of Geashill, King's County, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Tullamore. It was anciently noted for its three religious houses. At the Dissolution the site of the abbey was given to the Geraldine family. The principal seat is Killeigh House. Fairs are held on the 1st July and 19th October.

KILLELAGH, a par. in the bar. of Loughinsholin, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles S.S.E. of Maghera, its post town. The par. is 4 miles long by 2½ broad. The surface is very mountainous, lying near the Carntogher hills. The small river Clody effects the drainage towards the N. The interior is intersected by the road from Belfast to Londonderry. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £250, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a modern building. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Maghera. There are four day schools in the parish. This district belongs principally to the Vintners' and Mercers' Companies. Basalt and sandstone are the prevailing rocks.

KILLELAN, a par. in the bars. of Kilkea and Moone, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of of Castledermot, its post town. The par., exclusive of three detached portions, is 3½ miles square. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Timolin, £272, in the patron. of the archbishop. Davidstown is the principal residence. Here is a tower of the Knights of St. John.

KILLELONEHAM. See KILLONEHAM, co. Limerick, Ireland.

KILLEMELY, a demesne in co. Tipperary, Ireland, near Cahir.

KILLEMELAGH, a par. in the bar. of Iveragh, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Cahirsiveen, its post town. It is 7 miles long by 6 broad. The surface lies along the bay to which the parish gives name, near Valentia and Bolus Head. The islands of Puffin, Bolus, and Ballinskelligs come within the limits. There is a good deal of lofty mountain land. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with two others, £116. There is a Roman Catholic chapel. Belville is the chief seat.

KILLEN, a vil. in the par. and bar. of Strabane, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. A fair is held here on the 4th December.

KILLENAGH, a par. in the bar. of Ballaghkeen, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Gorey, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 1½ mile broad, and lies along the sea-coast. Part of its boundary is traced by the river Awin-Banna. The living is an impropriate cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Ardamine, £91. There is a hedge-school. A dispensary here is within the Gorey Poor-law Union. Ballywalter House and Tomduff House are the principal residences.

KILLENAULE, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of Slievardagh, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 10 miles N.E. of Cashel, and 96 from Dublin. The par. is nearly 7 miles long by 2 broad. The surface consists principally of a light soil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with six others, £817, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a modern building erected by the aid of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Moglass. There are six day schools in the parish. Lane-park, Killeen, Springhill, Roan, Clonbroggan, and Sherbourne are the chief seats. The town is situated on the cross roads from Urlingford to Clonmel, and from Cashel to Callen. It contains a chief police station, and a dispensary within the Cashel Poor-law Union. In the vicinity coal, iron, clay, and slate occur. Fairs are held on 1st January, 25th March, 14th May, 24th June, 14th August, and 17th October.

KILLENCARE. See KILLINKERE, co. Cavan, Ireland.

KILLENCARRIG, a hmlt. in the bar. of Newcastle, co. Wicklow, Ireland, near Delgany.

KILLENNY, a par. in the bar. of Stradbally, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.N.W. of Stradbally. Adare is its post town. It is 1½ mile long by 1 broad. The soil is mostly good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £37, in the patron. of the bishop. Killon is a demesne within the limits.

KILLENVOY. See KILLINVOY, Roscommon, Ireland.

KILLERBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Heighington, S.E. div. of the ward of Darlington, co. Durham, 7 miles N.W. of Darlington. It is a meet for the Raby hounds.

KILLERBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Cayton, wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Scarborough. It is situated near the coast, and had formerly a castle built by Brian Fitzalan in the reign of Edward I.

KILLERBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Catterick, wap. of East Hang, North Riding co. York, 2½ miles from Catterick, and 5 N. of Bedale. It is situated near the river Swale. The Countess of Tyrconnel is lady of the manor. Killerby Hall is the principal residence.

Corrofin, was built about a century and half ago, and was enlarged by the late Board of First Fruits in 1826. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, and four day schools. Several seats adorn the surrounding district. Ruins of the old church are seen near, which is the basement of a round tower and an ancient cross. There are likewise ruins of two other churches, three castles, two cromlechs, tumuli, and forts. The ruins of Inchiquin Castle are particularly worthy of notice.

KILLINAGH, a par. in the bar. of Tullyhaw, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Manor-Hamilton. Black Lion is its post town. The par. is 9 miles long by 4 broad. The surface is very mountainous, and comprises part of Lough Macnean. The road from Enniskillen to Manor-Hamilton passes through a portion of the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmore, val. £307, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1797, chiefly by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Doobally. There are a Wesleyan meeting-house, a Sunday, and several day schools.

KILLINAN, a par. in the bars. of Dunkellin and Loughrea, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 7 miles S.W. of Loughrea, its post town. It is 5 miles long by 2 broad. The surface is hilly. The Gurtmackin rivulet and the road from Loughrea to Gort, traverse the interior. The living of Killinan, or Kilthomas, is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmacduagh, val. £452, in the patron. of the Marquis of Clanricarde and the bishop, alternately. The church was erected in 1797, by means of local contributions. There is a day school. Roxborough and Castleboy are the two chief residences.

KILLINANE, a par. in the bars. of East Idrone and West Idrone, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Leighlin-bridge, its post town. This par. is situated on the banks of the river Barrow, and contains the vil. of Royal Oak. The soil is generally good. The living is a suspended rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £202, in the patron. of the bishop. Killinane House is the principal residence.

KILLINANE, a par. in the bar. of Iveragh, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.N.E. of Cahirsiveen, its post town. This par. is 7 miles long by 5 broad. It is situated along the shore of Dingle Bay, near Valentia Harbour. The surface is mountainous and rocky. The river Ferta traverses the interior in making its way to Valentia Harbour, and the coast is indented by several small creeks, of which Kells and Lough Key are the principal. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Cahir, £402, in the patron. of the crown. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Cahir and Glenbeagh. There are two day schools.

KILLINARDRISH, a post-office vil. in the co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles E. of Macroom. It is situated on the river Lee, and contains a police station. Killinardrish House is the principal residence.

KILLINAVAIG, an ancient par. now joined to Morven, co. Argyle, Scotland.

KILLINCARRIG, a vil. in the par. of Delgany, bar. of Rathdown, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Bray. Near Old Killincarrig Castle stands the modern mansion which bears its name.

KILLINCHY, a par. and post-office vil. in the bars. of Dufferin and Lower and Upper Castlereagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Saintfield. The par. is 5 miles long by 2 broad, and is situated on the W. side of Lough Strangford. A small stream called the Blackwater drains the surface into that lough. Slate and coal are found. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Down, val. £577. The church was built, by means of local assessment and subscription, in 1829. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel, Presbyterian meeting-house, and several day schools. Ardview and Fair Valley are the principal residences. There is a police station, and petty sessions are held in the village. Balloo is one of two castles in the parish. Fairs are held on the 5th January, 6th April, 6th July, and 5th October.

KILLINCOOLE, a par. in the bar. of Louth, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles E.S.E. of Louth. Castle-Bellingham is its post town. The par. is 2 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface consists of an excellent soil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £243, in the patron. of the primate. The church was a gift of the late Board of First Fruits in 1799. Here are two day schools. Fair Valley is the chief residence.

KILLINCOOLY, a par. in the bar. of Ballaghkeen, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles E.N.E. of Oulart. Gorey is its post town. The surface extends over a considerable area, and is generally level. Part of the vil. of Ford is within the limits. The soil is fertile. The living is an impropriate cur. in the dioc. of Ferns. Wells Abbey is an attractive demesne.

KILLINEEN. See KILLEENEEN, co. Galway, Ireland.

KILLINEWAR, an ancient par., now joined to Glassary, co. Argyle, Scotland.

KILLINEY, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Rathdown, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Kingstown. The par. is near 2 miles long and over 1 mile broad. It is situated along the bay of its name, and contains a portion of the vil. of Cabinteely. Three hills rise abruptly from the coast, and command very extensive views. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £111, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Monkstown. The church was built in 1834 by the late Board of First Fruits. There is a day school. The residences and villas scattered over the parish are numerous; among them may be mentioned Killiney House. There are interesting ruins of the old church, and some Druidical remains. The memorial pillar observed near Killiney Hill marks the spot where the Duke of Dorset was killed by a fall from his horse in 1815. Building stone has been extensively quarried.

KILLINEY, a par. in the bar. of Corkaguiny, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 11 miles N.E. of Dingle. Castlegregory is its post town. The par. is 6 miles long. The surface is hilly, with a proportion of fertile soil. On the coast are several small islands, called the Seven Hoggs, and the Magharee Isles. The former are connected with the mainland by a long neck of sandy beach, which divides the two bays of Brandon and Tralee. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. £338, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was a gift of the late Board of First Fruits in 1810. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of North Cloghane. There are three hedge-schools.

KILLINEY, a vil. in the par. of Kill, and bar. of Rathdown, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland.

KILLINGBECK, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Seacroft, and par. of Whitkirk, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.E. of Leeds.

KILLINGHALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Ripley, lower div. of the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 1 mile S. of Ripley. It is situated on the S. side of the river Nidd, and on the road between Ripley and Harrogate. It has a station on the Nidd Valley branch of the North-Eastern railway. The village is considerable, and neatly built. It formerly belonged to the Chomleys, from whom it passed to the Lawsons. The soil is light. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a Church school for both sexes. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor.

KILLINGHOLME, a par. in the E. div. of the wap. of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 8 miles S.E. of Barton, and 2 N.E. of Ulceby, its post town and railway station. It is situated near the river Humber, and contains the tnshps. of North and South Killingholme, which latter extends to the mouth of the Humber. On the extreme point are two lighthouses, 43 feet high, with fixed lights, which may be seen at a distance of 11 miles. South Killingholme is a coastguard station. The inhabitants are principally employed in the brick and tile works. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1776. The living is a vic. united with that of Habrough, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £350. The church, dedicated to St. Denis, has a square embattled tower crowned with pinnacles and containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There are chapels for Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. At South Killingholme is a parochial school.

KILLINGTON, a chplry. in the par. of Kirkby-Lonsdale, ward of Lonsdale, co. Westmoreland, 7 miles N. of Kirkby-Lonsdale, and 4 S. of the Low Gill railway station. It is situated on the W. side of the river Lune. The land is chiefly pasture and meadow, with a little arable and woodland. The village is small. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1811. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £80, in the patron. of the Vicar of Lonsdale. The chapel-of-ease is an ancient stone structure with turret containing one bell. There is an endowed school for both sexes. The principal residence is Killington Hall, near the old tower of the Pickerings.

KILLINGTON. See KELLATON, co. Devon.

KILLINGWORTH, a tnshp. and colliery vil. in the par. of Long Benton, E. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 2¾ miles from Long Benton, and 4 N.E. of Newcastle. It is a station on the York, Newcastle, and Berwick line of railway. At Killingworth colliery in this township the great engineer George Stephenson was employed as brakesman, and here he made his first great improvements in steam engines. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

KILLINICK, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Forth, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S. of Wexford. The par. is 2 miles long and barely 1 mile broad. It lies along the W. side of Wexford Harbour, and is intersected by the road from Wexford to Broadway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with five others, £310, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church was erected by the parish, assisted by a loan from the late Board of First Fruits, in 1828. There are two Roman Catholic chapels in the union, and two day schools. The village contains a police station, and petty sessions are held at intervals. Fairs are held on Easter-Monday, 8th April, Whit-Tuesday, 27th May, 21st September, and 30th November.

KILLINKERE, or KILLENCARE, a par. in the bars. of Castlerahan and Upper Loughtee, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Ballyjamesduff. Virginia is its post town. It is 7 miles long by 4 broad. The surface consists for the most part of good arable soil. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmore, val. £707, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected at the expense of the late Board of First Fruits in 1817. Here are two (united) Roman Catholic chapels and two Presbyterian meeting-houses. One Sunday and several day schools are within the parish. Slate occurs here.

KILLINNY, a par. in the bar. of Kiltartan, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles W.N.W. of Gort, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 3 broad. The surface is extremely rocky, and consists chiefly of grazing lands. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmore, val. with Kilcolgan, £275, in the patron. of the bishop. Norman Grove is the chief seat. An ancient castle is observed.

KILLINVOY, a par. in the bar. of Athlone, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of Roscommon. Athlone is its post town. The par. is 4 miles long by 3 broad, and contains part of the vil. of Knockcroghery. The surface comprises parts of loughs Ree and Colleg, and is traversed by the road from Roscommon to Athlone. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with others, £253, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by aid of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1822. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Kilmean, Raharrow, and Ivernoon. There are a Sunday and three day schools in the parish. Skregg and Mountplunket are the principal residences.

KILLISHEY. See KILLASHEE, co. Kildare, Ireland.

KILLISK, a par. in the bar. of Ballaghkeen, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of Enniscorthy. New Ross is its post town. The par. is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface consists of a tolerably good soil. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with others, £152.

KILLISKEY, a par. in the bar. of Newcastle, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Wicklow. Ashford is its post town. It is 5 miles long by 3 broad, and contains a vil. of the same name on the river Vartrey, near the Wicklow mountains. It is traversed by the road from Dublin to Wicklow. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £213, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1818. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel and three day schools. Some of the most attractive features in this parish are O'Byrne's Castle in Dunran Glen, the Devil's Glen, and Glenmore.

KILLISPICK, an ancient par. now joined to Ardchattan, co. Argyle, Scotland.

KILLISPORT, a loch in Knapdale, co. Argyle, Scotland. It is situated on the eastern side of Jura Sound.

KILLO. See also KILLA.

KILLOCHYETT, a hmlt. in the par. of Stow, co. Edinburgh, Scotland.

KILLODIERNAN, a par. in the bar. of Lower Ormond, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles W.S.W. of Borrisokane. Nenagh is its post town. The par. is 3 miles long and a little over 2 broad, and contains the vil. of Puckane. The surface lies on the E. side of Lough Derg, and consists generally of a fair soil. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. 203, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1811. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Montsea. There are four hedge-schools. Blackfort is the principal residence. There are ruins of a castle near the Shannon.

KILLOE, a par. in the bars. of Granard and Longford, co. Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. The par. is 12 miles long by 5 broad, and contains the vils. of Drumlish and Ballinamuck. The surface, which is flat and moory, is traversed by the river Crumlin. The living is divided into Killoe Lower, united with Clongash, val. £402, in the patron. of the bishop, and Killoe Upper, united with Templemichael, val. £693, in the patron. of the bishop. The church of Killoe Upper was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1824. There are likewise a Presbyterian meeting-house and a Roman Catholic chapel, the latter united to that of Killoe Lower. The church for this division of the parish was built in 1828 by the late Board of First Fruits. There are several day schools in the parish. Newtownbond and Farraghroe are the only residences of consequence. Ballinamuck was the scene of Humbert's submission in 1798. Limestone for building and for burning into lime is worked.

KILLOFIN, a par. in the bar. of Clonderalaw, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Kildysert, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 2 broad, and contains the vil. of Labasheeda. The parish lies at the mouth of the Shannon, near Kilkerran Point; it comprises a peninsula extending between Clonderalaw Bay and the Shannon. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Kilmurry-Clonderalaw, £318, in the patron. of the bishop. Killofin House and Ballyartney are the principal residences in the neighbourhood. Calmanstown Castle and Gap Castle are in this parish. Coal and culm are found, but not generally worked.

KILLOGHCONNOGHAN. See KILLACONNIGAN, co. Meath.

KILLOGILLEEN, a par. in the bars. of Dunkellin and Loughrea, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles W. of Loughrea, its post town. The surface consists of arable and pasture lands. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmacduagh, val. with Killenane, £452, in the patron. of the Marquis of Clanricarde and the bishop alternately. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Killora. There is a day school. Monksfield is the principal residence.

KILLOKENNEDY, a par. in the bar. of Lower Tulla, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Broadford. Killaloe is its post town. The par. is 7 miles long by 3 broad, and contains the vil. of Kilbane. The surface is mountainous and the soil poor. Cragnamurragh and Glennagalliagh are the principal summits. The interior is traversed by the road from Broadford to Killaloe. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Kiltonanlea, £345, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kiltonanlea. There are two hedge-schools. Ballyquin is the principal residence. Building stone is worked.

KILLONAGHAN, a par. in the bar. of Burrens, co. Clare. prov. of Munster, Ireland, 9 miles N. of Ennistimon, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 3 broad, and contains the vil. of Fermoyle. The surface consists chiefly of barren upland. Slieve-Elva is a prominent feature in the E. of the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kilfenora, val. with Rathbourne, £247, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Rathbourne. There is a hedge-school. Lead ore is found among the hills.

KILLONAHAN, KILLONOGHAN, or KILLELONEHAN, a par. in the bars. of Coshma and Pubblebrien, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing part of the vil. of St. Patrick's Well. Drumcollogher is its post town. The par. is 3 miles long, and its greatest breadth is about 1 mile. The soil is generally good. The Great Southern and Western railway passes in the vicinity. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £30. The church is a small modern edifice. There are two or three day schools. Athyflyn is the principal residence. There are ruins of the old church, and of a castle of the O'Hurleys. Limestone is abundant.

KILLONE, a par. in the bar. of Islands, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Clare. Ennis is its post town. It is near 4 miles long and over 3 broad. The surface lies chiefly at the inner end of the estuary of the Fergus. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Dromcliffe, £575, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, and two or three hedge-schools. Edenvale and Newhall are the chief seats. There are some remains of an abbey founded in 1190 by Donald O'Brien.

KILLONOGHAN. See KILLONAHAN, co. Limerick.

KILLORA, a par. in the bar. of Dunkellin, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing the vil. of Craughwell. Loughrea is its post town. It is 4 miles long by 3 broad. The surface generally consists of good land. It is drained by the Carnamart rivulet, and is traversed by the road from Dublin to Galway. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmacduagh, val. with Killinane, £452, in the patron. of the Marquis of Clanricarde and the bishop alternately. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and two day schools. Ballymore is the chief seat.

KILLORAN, a par. in the bars. of Clonmacnowen, Leitrim, and Longford, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles S.S.W. of Aughrim. Eyrecourt is its post town. The par. is 4 miles long and its breadth 2 miles, besides which there are two detached portions belonging to this parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. with Kiltormer, £246, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Mullagh in Abbeygormican. There is a hedge-school. Burkeville is the principal residence.

KILLORAN, a par. in the bar. of Leyny, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles N.N.W. of Ballymote. It is 5 miles long by 4 broad, and contains the vil. of Coolany, its post town. The surface is mountainous and boggy, but is rapidly improving through drainage. The Coolooney and Owenmore rivulets drain the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Achonry, val. with another, £388, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was a gift by the late Board of First Fruits in 1766. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilvarnet. There are two Sunday and six day schools in the parish.

KILLORGLIN, a par. and post-office vil. in the bars. of North Dunkerron, Iveragh, Magunihy, and Trughanacmy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 12 miles S. of Tralee, and 201 from Dublin. The par. is 7 miles long by 4 broad. The surface lies on the N. side of Castlemaine harbour, and near the river Laune. The greater portion is boggy or poor land. The road to the well-known fishing waters of Carra traces part of the northern boundary. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. £332, in the patron. of the crown. The church was a gift by the late Board of First Fruits in 1816. There is a Roman Catholic chapel; also three day schools, one of which is supported by the London Missionary Society. Ardmoniel is the chief residence. The village is generally resorted to by anglers on their way to the wild Carra district. It contains a police station, and petty sessions are held at times fixed. There was a preceptory of Knights Templars, who anciently held territory here. The families of Moriarty, M'Carthy, Fitzgerald, and Conway had seats here. Fairs are held on the 9th May, 30th June, 11th August, and 19th November.

KILLOSCOBE, a par. in the bar. of Tiaquin, co. Galway, Ireland, 4 miles W. of Castleblakeney. The parish is of considerable extent. The living is a vic. annexed to Armaghdown.

KILLOSCULLY, a par. in the bars. of Owney and Arra, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles S.S.W. of Nenagh, its post town. The par. is nearly 6 miles long by 4 broad, and contains the vil. of Shellee. The surface is hilly, particularly so in the east, where the Keeper mountains rise 2,278 feet above sea-level. The Dublin and Limerick road traverses the interior. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. £248, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1828, by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballinahinch in Kilnerath. There are three day schools. Kinalta is the chief seat. Stone, slate, and marl occur, and there are some abandoned gold mines, and a cromlech.

KILLOSKEHAN, a par. in the bar. of Ikerrin, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles W.S.W. of Templemore, its post town. The par. is 2 miles long by 1 broad. The surface is mountainous, with a small proportion of arable ground. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Kilfithmone, £275, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a day school. Killoskehan House is the principal residence.

KILLOSOLAN, or KILLASOLAIN, a par. in the bars. of Kilconnell and Tiaquin, co. Galway, Ireland, 28 miles N.E. of Galway. The par. is of large extent, and contains the vils. of Castleblakeney and Caltra. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardagh, Elphin, and Kilmore, val. £355, in the patron. of the crown and the bishop, alternately.

KILLOSSERY, a par. in the bar. of Nethercross, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.N.W. of Swords, its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1 broad. The surface is traversed by a branch of the Malahide river. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Swords, £329, in the patron. of the archbishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Clonmethan. Bragil Castle is in the parish, where the O'Neills burnt Lady Bolton. Rathbeale and Rolltown are the two principal seats. There is a police station in the village.

KILLOTERAN, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Waterford, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 1½ mile broad, extending along the right bank of the river Suir. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Waterford, val. £100, in the patron. of the crown. The Incorporated Society erected the church, at their own expense, about the middle of the last century. There is a charter school, founded in 1744, and endowed by the Waterford corporation.

KILLOUGH, a vil. in the par. of Kilnemanagh, in the bar. of Bear, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles S.W. of Castletown Bearhaven.

KILLOUGH, or PORT ST. ANNE, a small post and market town in the par. of Rathmullen, in the bar. of Lecale, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Ardglass. It is situated on the bay of its name, and enjoys a considerable trade in exporting grain and cattle and in the fisheries. There are also considerable saltworks. Here is a coastguard station. The pier will admit vessels of 150 tons to come alongside. There are interesting caverns in the vicinity, and at St. John's Point was a preceptory of Knights Hospitallers. Fairs are held on the first Friday in February (old style), and on 9th June, 17th August, and 12th November.

KILLOUGH, a small river in co. Wicklow, Ireland.

KILLOUGHTER, an ancient par. now joined to Annagh, co. Cavan, Ireland.

KILLOUGHY, or KILLAUGHEY, a par. in the bar. of Ballyboy, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Frankford. Ballyboy is its post town. It is 5 miles long by 4 broad, and contains the vil. of Mountbolus. The surface consists generally of good land. Parts of loughs Annagh and Pallis are within the parochial limits. The road from Dublin to Birr traverses the interior. The living, which is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, forms part of the benefice of Fircal, val. together, £2,001. The church was built in 1818, by means of a grant from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballyboy. There are two day and three hedge schools. Annaghmore is the chief residence. There are remains of three ancient castles.

KILLOWEN, a par. in the bar. of Kinalmeaky, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles W. of Bandon, its post town. It is barely a mile in length and the same in breadth. The soil is good on the whole. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £100. Public worship is performed at a private house. There is a Protestant Sunday-school.

KILLOWEN, a par. in the bar. of Coleraine, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing part of its post town, Coleraine. The par. is about 2 miles square, and lies along the left bank of the river Bann. The greater part of the surface is under tillage. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £180, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1830, by means of a sum raised from various sources. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Aghadowey and Dunboe. There are three Sundays and five day schools. The site of M'Ughtry's Castle is now occupied by the modern mansion of Jackson's Hall.

KILLOWEN, a headland on the west side of Carlingford Bay, co. Down, Ireland.

KILLOWER, a par. in the bar. of Clare, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Tuam, its post town. The par. is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. It has a varied surface, with a proportion of bog. The interior is traversed by the road from Tuam to Headford. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Headford, £834, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a day school. Near the present seat of Castle Hackett are the ruins of the ancient castle. Silane is another residence.

KILLOWILLAN, an ancient par., now part of Castle Lyons, co. Cork, Ireland.

KILLPECK, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Wormelow, co. Hereford, 9 miles S.W. of Hereford, its post town, and 1 mile E. of St. Devereux railway station. It is situated on a branch of the river Monnow, and has the ruins of an old castle formerly belonging to the Kilpecks, who were descended from Hugh Fitzwilliam, a natural son of the Conqueror. A small priory for Black Canons was founded here as a cell to Gloucester Abbey. The land is partly in hops, with much arable and meadow, and 149 acres of woodland. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £50, in the patron. of the Bishop of Worcester. The church, dedicated to SS. Mary and David, is a specimen of Norman architecture, built in 1134 by Hugh Fitzwilliam. It has a square tower containing four bells, and is remarkable for its symbolical style of building, the number and arrangement of the windows, buttresses, &c., symbolising the Trinity, Commandments, Gospels, &c. In the interior are several tablets. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a free school for children of both sexes, supported by the Rev. Archer Clive. Mynde Park is the principal residence. T. G. Symonds, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KILL, ST. LAWRENCE, a par. in the bar. of Gaultiere, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.S.W. of Waterford, its post town. It is half a mile long and less broad. The living is a suspended rect. in the dioc. of Waterford.

KILL, ST. NICHOLAS, a par. in the bar. of Gaultiere, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Waterford. It contains part of its post town, Passage East. The par. is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface lies in the vicinity of the river Suir, and is diversified in outline. The living is a rect. with Faithlegg, in the dioc. of Waterford, val. £272, in the patron. of the crown. The church is an ancient structure. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Faithlegg and Killea. There are five or six schools in the parish. Parkswood is a noticeable residence.

KILLSWICK, an ancient par. now joined to Northmaven, Shetland Islands, coast of Scotland.

KILLUA, a par. in the bar. of Delvin, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Castletown-Delvin. Athboy is its post town. The par. is 3 miles long and near the same broad. It contains the town of Clonmellon. The surface consists of a tolerably good but light soil. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Killalon, £343, in the patron. of the Marquis of Drogheda and the bishop alternately. There are a church, a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Killalon, and five or six day schools, within the parish. The principal residences are, Killua Castle, the seat of Sir M. L. Chapman, Bart., and Ballinlough, the mansion of Sir James Nugent. In the vicinity of the former demesne are the remains of a preceptory of the Knights Templars. Limestone abounds.

KILLUCAN, or RATHWIRE, a par. and post-office vil. in the bars. of Delvin and Farbill, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. This parish comprehends the town of Kinnegad and the vils. of Rathwire and Raharney. The surface is inclined to be hilly, and has a considerable proportion of bog. The Royal canal traverses the interior, and the Connaught road describes part of the southern frontier. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £913. The church stands in the village, and was built in 1803, partly by aid of the late Board of First Fruits. The former church was an interesting old edifice. There are two Roman Catholic chapels united, and several day schools. Several seats adorn the neighbourhood. The village, which is considerable, is seated at the cross-roads from Dublin to Mullingar, and from Kinnegad to Castletown-Delvin. It contains a police station and a dispensary within the Mullingar Poor-law Union, also a loan fund, good inn, and the Killucan hunting club. Some traces of raths and other antiquities are visible, and, among others, the remains of a castle of Hugh de Lacy. The parish is supposed to take its name from having been the site of an abbey founded by St. Lucian. Fairs are held on the 27th March, 25th May, 29th September, and 28th November.

KILLUKIN, a par. in the bar. of Boyle, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing the vil. of Croghan, and a small portion of the town of Carrick-on-Shannon, its post town. The par. is 5 miles long and about 1 mile broad. The prevailing character of the surface is low hilly pasture. The rivulet which gives name to the parish traverses the interior in making its way to the Shannon. The parish is also crossed by the road from Carrick-on-Shannon to French-park. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. £265, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient structure. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a Sunday-school, and several day schools. Croghane is the principal residence. There are remains supposed to be of Druidical origin.

KILLUKIN, a par. in the bar. of Roscommon, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Strokestown, its post town. It is near 6 miles long by 2 broad. The surface consists of a fair soil, with limestone subsoil, and a small area of bog. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Ardclare, £162, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built at the sole expense of a Mr. Hawks in 1750. There are three hedge-schools. Mount Browne is the chief seat.

KILLULAGH, or KILWEILAGH, a par. in the bar. of Delvin, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Castletown-Delvin. It is over 6 miles in length, and its greatest breadth is 2 miles. There is a considerable aggregate of bog. The interior is traversed by the roads from Castletown-Delvin to Trim, Kinnegad, and Mullingar. The small river Deel effects the drainage in the centre and S. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Drumcree, £215, in the patron. of the crown, the bishop, and the Marquis of Drogheda. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Castletown-Delvin. There are two hedge-schools. Rockview and Bracklin are noticeable residences. Castle Mulchans and another castellated building are seen in ruins.

KILLUMMOD, a par. in the bar. of Boyle, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Elphin. Carrick-on-Shannon is its post town. It is near 5 miles long by 2 broad. The surface is extremely boggy, and abounds with numerous small lakes. It is traversed by the road from Croghan to Drumsna. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with Aughrim, £368, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a hedge-school.

KILLUNDINE, a castle in Morven, co. Argyle, Scotland. It is situated near the sound of Mull.

KILLURAN, a par. in the bar. of Lower Tulla, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.N.W. of Broadford. Killaloe is its post town. The par. is near 4 miles in length and about the same in breadth. It contains the vil. of Callaghans Mills, and the small lake of Lough Doon. The surface is somewhat mountainous. The Ougarnee stream traces the western border, and the road from Killaloe to Ennis traverses the parish in its S.W. district. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe. The rect. is held with O'Mullod, joint val. £560. The vic. is held with Kilseiley, joint val. £235, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, which is united to that of Killishen. There are two day schools. On the shore of Lough Doon are the ruins of a castle.

KILLURE, a par. in the bar. of Gualtiere, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.S.W. of Waterford, its post town. It is barely 1 mile square. The soil is generally good. The living is a suspended rect. in the dioc. of Waterford, united with several others. There are ruins of a preceptory of Knights Templars founded in the 12th century, and subsequently granted to the Aylmers.

KILLURIN, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of West Shelmaliere, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Wexford, its post town. The par. is 1½ mile long by 1 broad. The river Slaney bounds it on the E., and the road from Wexford to Enniscorthy traverses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with three others, £411, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built at the expense of the parish in 1785. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Forth. There are three day schools. In the vicinity are remains of a seat of the Devereux family, who anciently possessed this property.

KILLURSA, a par. in the bar. of Clare, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing part of its post town, Headford. The par. is 6 miles long by 2½ broad, and includes part of Lough Corrib, with Inchiquin Island. The surface is bounded on the N. by the river Black, whose course is subterraneous for some distance. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Headford, £834, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel at Headford is united to that of Killeany. There are nine or ten day schools. Ower is one of the principal seats. Cargin was the birthplace of Sir G. Staunton.

KILLURY, a par. in the bar. of Clanmaurice, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles N. of Ardfert. It contains Causeway, its post town. The surface extends 5 miles in length by 3 in breadth, along the shore of the Shannon estuary, between Kerry Head and Cashen river. There is some bog, and the soil is poor. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. £308. The church was lately built by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Rattoo and Ballyheigne. There are three day schools.

KILLYBEBILL, a par. in the hund. of Neath, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles N. of Neath. It is situated in the vale of the Tawe, near Pont-ar-Dawe Bridge, which crosses the river by one arch of 80 feet span. The Swansea canal and the Swansea Vale railway pass in the vicinity. The mountains here are clothed with wood, indicating the diminished effect of the copper works at Neath. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the coal trade, and in the neighbouring tin works of Ynispenllwch, one of the largest establishments in Wales. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £123. The old church is a convenient edifice; at Pont-ar-Dawe is a new church. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There are several chapels for Protestant Dissenters, and a National school.

KILLYBEGS, a par. in the bar. of Clane, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Clane. Naas is its post town. The par. is 3 miles long by 1 mile broad, and contains the town of Prosperous. The surface is flat and boggy. The road from Dublin to Rathangan traverses the parish, and the Grand canal passes along its S. border. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with Clane, £349, in the patron. of the crown. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Caragh. There are two National schools. Killybegs House is the principal seat in this neighbourhood. A commandery of the Knights Templars formerly existed here.

KILLYBEGS, a par., seaport, post, and market town, in the bars. of Boylagh and Bannagh, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. The par., which contains the town of its own name, is about 6 miles long by 4 broad, and lies between the bays of Mac Swyne and Fintragh. The surface rises from the coast into the lofty mountains of Bannagh; Crownarad is the most conspicuous summit, attaining an altitude of 1,619 feet. The town, once a parliamentary borough, is situated at the head of the harbour which bears its name, 157 miles N.W. of Dublin, and 9 from Ardra. It is not a commodiously built town, and though occupying an excellent position, carries on but an insignificant trade. The bay is one of the finest in this part of Ireland, with fixed lights at St. John's Point and at Rotten Island. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the fisheries. Its exports are farm produce, and imports, timber, coal, and culm. Its charter of incorporation was granted to Roger Jones in the reign of James I., before which time it was called Calebegg, and sent two members to the Irish parliament. The corporation has long since become extinct. There are police and coastguard stations, and a dispensary within the Glenties Poor-law Union. Petty sessions are held in the town. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Raphoe, val. £465, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected by aid of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Killaghtee. There are a Sunday and about half-a-dozen day schools. Fintragh is a noticeable seat. Tuesday is market day. Fairs are held on the 15th January, 20th April, 6th May, 21st June, 12th August, 15th September, 12th November.

KILLYBEGS, LOWER, and KILLYBEGS, UPPER, are civil divisions of the par. of Killybegs, co. Donegal, Ireland.

KILLYDONNELL, an ancient abbey in co. Donegal, Ireland. It is situated near Rathmelton, and is now a ruin.

KILLYGALLY. See KILLEELY, cos. Clare and Limerick.

KILLYGARVAN, a par. in the bar. of Kilmacrenan, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Rathmelton. The par. is 5 miles long by 3 broad, and contains its post town, Rathmullen. The surface lies along the W. side of Lough Swilly, and near Rathmelton Bay. The Rathmelton road follows the shore of Lough Swilly. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Raphoe, val. £161, in the patron. of the crown. The church was built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1814. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Tully. There are Presbyterian and Wesleyan meeting-houses; also a Sunday and three day schools. Hollymount is the chief residence.

KILLYGLEN GRANGE, a par. in the bar. of Upper Glenarm, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles W.N.W. of Larne. It is 3½ miles long by 1½ mile broad. The road from Larne to Glenarm traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Connor, val. with Connor, £206, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a day school.

KILLYGORDON, a post-office vil. in the par. of Donaghmore, bar. of Raphoe, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles E. of Stranorlar, and 142 from Dublin. It is situated on the river Finn, and contains a dispensary within the Stranorlar Poor-law Union. Killygordon House is one of several residences which adorn the neighbourhood.

KILLYLEA, a quoad sacra par. and post-office vil. in the bars. of Turaney and Armagh, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles W. of Armagh. The par. is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface is hilly. The Blackwater drains it on the W., and the Ulster canal intersects the interior. The living is a district cur. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £107, in the patron. of the rectors of Tynan, Armagh, and Derrynoose. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1832. Here are four day schools. Several residences grace the locality, among which is Knappagh. The village is a neatly built little place, standing on a sharp incline on the road from Caledon to Armagh. Fairs are held here on the last Friday of every month.

KILLYLEAGH, a par., post and market town, in the bars. of Dufferin and Upper Castlereagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. The par. is 5 miles long by 4½ broad. The surface lies along the W. side of Lough Strangford, and possesses a good soil. The road from Downpatrick to Newtown-Ardes traces the shore of the lough. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Down, val. £650, in the patron. of Trinity College. The church was first built about two centuries ago, but has since been enlarged by the assistance of the late Board of First Fruits. It is a cruciform structure with a spire. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Inch and Kilmore. There are three Sunday and several day schools. Killyleagh Castle, Ringdufferin, and Delamont are among the principal residences. The town, formerly a parliamentary borough, is a seaport, situated on the W. shore of Lough Strangford, and on the road from Downpatrick to Newtown-Ardes, 6 miles N.N.E. of Downpatrick, 20 S.E. of Belfast, and 100 N.E. of Dublin. The harbour is not very accessible for large craft, but a pretty brisk export trade is nevertheless carried on in farm produce and grain, in exchange for cotton, wool, coal, iron, and salt, which are imported. The pier was rebuilt by Lord Dufferin, and has materially assisted the prosperity of the town. The manufacture of muslin and cotton goods, and the spinning of linen yarn, give employment to a good many. The town obtained its charter of incorporation in the time of James I., and sent two members to the Irish parliament until disenfranchised at the Union. There are a police station, baths, dispensary, news-rooms, library, and loan fund. At one end of the town is the restored castle, now the residence of Captain Archibald Hamilton, who, with Lord Dufferin, are the owners of the town and vicinity. This castle was formerly the seat of the Hamilton family, afterwards Earls of Clanbrassel; it was originally built by the De Courcys, and was taken by Monk in 1648. Petty sessions, manor courts, and courts leet are held in the town. The celebrated Sir Hans Sloane was born here. Friday is market day. Fairs are held on 10th April, 26th May, 11th October, and 11th December.

KILLYMAN, a par. partly in the bar. of West O'Neilland, co. Armagh, and partly in the bar. of Dungannon, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Dungannon. Moy is its post town. The par. is 5 miles long by 4 broad. The river Blackwater separates the parish into two sections. The Armagh section is flat, that of Tyrone is hilly. The soil is generally of first-rate quality. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £593, in the patron. of the primate. The church was built by aid of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1824. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Clonmore. There are a Wesleyan meeting-house, three Sunday and seven or eight day schools. Church-hill, the demesne of the late Colonel Verner, M.P., is a very conspicuous feature in the landscape. The geological strata of this locality include building stone, limestone, basalt, clay slate, and red sandstone.

KILLYMARD, a par. in the bar. of Bannagh, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing part of its post town, Donegal. The par. is 9 miles long by 6 broad. The surface extends along the W. side of the river Lough Esk, as far as the head of Donegal Bay. It is mountainous, rising 1,967 feet and 2,213 feet, at Bluestack and Silverhill. A small proportion only of the surface is serviceable land. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Raphoe, val. £374, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by aid of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits, in 1830. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, Presbyterian, and Wesleyan meeting-houses, and seven or eight day schools. Lough Esk House is a pretty residence.

KILLYNURE, a lough in the co. Westmeath, Ireland. It is situated near Glassan.

KILLYON, a par. in the bar. of Upper Moyfenrath, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 8 miles N.W. of Innfield. Clonard is its post town. It is 3 miles long by 1 mile broad, and extends along the W. bank of the river Boyne. The Royal canal touches it on the S., and the road from Trim to Kinnegad traverses the interior. The soil varies much in quality. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Clonard, £230, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Longwood. There is a hedge-school. Killyon House is the chief residence.

KILMACABEA, a par. in the bars. of W. and E. Carbery, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Ross-Carbery. Union Hall is its post town. It is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The surface lies between Glendore harbour and the Kilvenog Mountain. The soil is mostly poor. One or two small lakes diversify the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ross, val. £373, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was a gift of the late Board of First Fruits, in 1828. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilfaughnabeg. There are a Sunday and three day schools. Clay slate and limestone are abundant.

KILMACAHILL, or KILMOCHAHILL, a par. in the bar. of Gowran, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Gowran, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad, and contains part of the vil. of Whitehall. The surface consists of a fair soil. The interior is drained by the Akore rivulet, a tributary to the river Barrow. The road from Dublin to Cork passes through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £147, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1815. There are three day schools. Paulstown Castle is the principal residence.

KILMACALLAN, a par. in the bar. of Tirerill, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles S.S.E. of Colconey. Boyle is its post town. It is 7 miles long by 6 broad, and contains part of the vil. of Riverstown and Lough Allen. The surface is mountainous, with some bog. The river Arrow flows through the parish, and the road from Dublin to Sligo runs along the western border. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with Boyle, £288, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected by aid of the late Board of First Fruits in 1818. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, a Sunday and eight day schools. Lakeview is the principal residence.

KILMACANOGE, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Rathdown, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.S.W. of Bray, its post town. The par. is about 3 miles square, and contains Kilmurray. The surface is extremely mountainous, containing the great Sugarloaf Mountain, 1,651 feet high. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Delgany, £500, in the patron. of the archbishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Bray and Stagonil. There are a Roman Catholic Sunday-school and two day schools. Several seats adorn the neighbourhood.

KILMACAR, or KILMOCAR, a par. in the bar. of Fassadinin, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Castlecomer. Kilkenny is its post town. The par. is 2 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface is for the most part in tillage or in pasture. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. £14. There are two day schools. Bleachfield is the principal residence.

KILMACDONOGH, a par. in the bar. of Imokilly, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Youghall is its post town. It is 4 miles long by 3 broad, and contains the vil. of Ballymacoda. The surface consists of a peninsulated tract lying between Castlemartyr river and Youghal Harbour on the one side, and Fenis river and Ballycotton Bay on the other. Ring Point is the seaward extremity of this peninsula. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with Kilcredan, £364, in the patron. of the crown. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Itermorrough and Kilmahon. There are a Sunday and two day schools. Ring House is a mansion standing about 1 mile to the W. of Ring Point.

KILMACDUAGH, a par. and the seat of a diocese in the bar. of Kiltartan, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, contains the vil. of Connells and part of its post town, Gort. The par. is 5 miles long by 2½ broad. The surface is rather rocky, with a proportion of bog, the remainder being arable and pasture. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmacduagh, val. with two others, £522, in the patron. of the crown. The church is at Gort, and was built in 1820 by means of a sum lent by the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Gort and Kiltartan. There are four day schools in the parish. A monastery was founded here in 620 by St. Colman-mac-Duach, which was succeeded by a priory in 1283, founded by Maurice, the then bishop. Near these remains, which are called the Seven Churches of Kilmacduagh, is a round tower in very perfect condition, but leans out of the perpendicular 4 feet more than the tower of Pisa. Several other remains of antiquity are found here. The diocese is supposed to have been founded at a very remote period. It now is joined with Killaloe, Kilfenora, and Clonfert. It is in the ecclesiastical province of Tuam, co. Galway, and comprises 21 parishes. The chapter consists of a dean, archdeacon, 2 prebendaries, besides treasurer and provost. The Roman Catholic diocese is joined to Kilfenora, and contains 19 parishes. The episcopal seat is at Gort.

KILMACDUANE, a par. in the bar. of Moyarta, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N. of Kilrush, its post town. The par. is 5 miles long by 4 broad, and contains the vil. of Cooraclare. The surface consists chiefly of hill, moor, and unprofitable land. The streams Dunbeg and Creegh flow through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Kilmurray-Clonderalaw, £318, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two Roman Catholic chapels and six day schools. Dungancella, Gower, and Cloonena are the chief seats.

KILMACLASSER, a par. in the bar. of Burrishoole, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles E.N.E. of Westport, its post town. The par. is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The surface is mountainous, and the soil various in quality. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Aughaval, or Westport, £661, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilmina. There are two day schools.

KILMACLEAGUE, a par. in the bar. of Gualtiere, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.S.E. of Waterford, its post town. It is 2½ miles in length by 1½ mile in breadth. It extends along the E. side of Tramore Bay, terminating in the headland of Brownstown Head. The soil is indifferent. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Waterford, val. with Ballinakill, £183, in the patron. of the bishop. The ancient seat of the Fortescues was at Somerville.

KILMACLENINE, or KILMACLENY, a par. in the bar. of Orrery and Kilmore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles W.S.W. of Doneraile. Mallow is its post town. It is 1 mile square. The surface comprises some extent of pasture lands. The road from Mallow to Newcastle passes along one of the boundaries. The living is a suspended rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, in the patron. of the bishop. An old castle, formerly of the Barry family, stands here. Fairs are held on the 6th April, 21st June, and 2nd October.

KILMACNEVAN, a par. in the bar. of Moygoish, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 9 miles W.N.W. of Mullingar, its post town. The par. is 4 miles long by 2½ broad. The surface consists of a very good soil. The parish is crossed by the Royal canal, and is bordered on the W. by the river Inny. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Leyny, £67, in the patron. of Lady Fetherstone. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Rathconrath. There are two day schools. Collanstown is the principal residence. There are ruins of an old castle.

KILMACOMB, a par. in the bar. of Gualtiere, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles S.S.W. of Waterford. East Passage is its post town. It is 2 miles long and barely 1 mile in breadth. The greater part of the surface is uncultivated, lying near Waterford Harbour. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Waterford, val. with Ballinakill, £183, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a ruin. There is a girls' school in the parish. Woodstown is the demesne of Lord Carew. Coal was formerly worked on this estate, but was soon abandoned. Some Druidical remains exist.

KILMACOMOGUE. See KILMOCOMOGE, co. Cork.

KILMACOW, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Iverk, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, near Mullinavat. Waterford is its post town. The par. is 6 miles long by 1½ mile broad, and contains the vils. of Graney and Old Dangan. The surface lies at the confluence of the rivulet Blackwater with the Suir. The soil is variable in quality, and the road from Waterford to Clonmel traverses the interior. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by aid of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits, in 1818. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Dunkitt and Kilbeacon. There are four day schools; also a police station, where petty sessions are held occasionally. The dispensary is within the Waterford Poor-law Union. Here are ruins of a castle, which formerly belonged to the Butlers.

KILMACOW, an ancient par. in co. Wicklow, now joined to Castlemacadam.

KILMACOWEN, a par. in the bar. of Upper Carbury, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Sligo, its post town. The par. is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface lies along part of the shore of Ballysadere harbour, and consists of good land. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with St. John's, Sligo, £705, in the patron. of Trinity College

Dublin. Divine service is held in a private house. There is a day school. Clover Hill and Seafield are the principal residences. Near the old church of St. Diermit are some Druidical remains.

KILMACREAN. See CUMMER, co. Clare.

KILMACREDA, an islet in Inver Bay, co. Donegal, Ireland.

KILMACREDOCK, a par. in the bar. of North Salt, co. Kildare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Celbridge. The Royal Canal passes in the vicinity. The demesne of Barrogstown is in this parish, which is not ecclesiastically recognised.

KILMACREE, a par. in the bar. of Forth, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Wexford. It is 1 mile long by three-quarters broad, and is situated near Wexford Haven. The road from Wexford to Killinick traverses the parish. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Killinick, £310, in the patron. of the crown and bishop, alternately. The church is in ruins. The Grange is the chief residence.

KILMACREHY, a par. in the bar. of Corcomroe, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles W.N.W. of Ennistimon, its post town. The par. consists of a main and of a detached district, and contains the vils. of Liscanor and Lehinch. The surface is open to the Atlantic, near Hag's Head. It has a bold coast line, defended by cliffs, abounding in sea-fowl. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilfenora, val. with Kilmanaheen, £141, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilaspughlenane. The chief seats are Birchfield and Moher, the latter situated at a very sublime part of the coast. There is a signal-tower on Hag's Head.

KILMACRENAN, a bar. in co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is bounded on the W. and N.W. by the Atlantic, on the E. by Lough Swilly, and on the S. by Raphoe. It is 24 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 23 miles. It contains the pars. of Aghanunshin, Aughnish, Clondahorky, Clondavaddog, Gartan, Killygarvan, Kilmacrenan, Mevagh, Raymunterdoney, Tullaghobegly, Tullyfern, and part of Conwal; besides the towns and vils. of Letterkenny, Rathmelton, Dunfanaghy, and Rathmullen.

KILMACRENAN, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of its own name, co. Donegal. prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 7 miles N.N.W. of Letterkenny. The par. is 11 miles long by 6 broad. The surface is mountainous and boggy. Edenacarnan and Lough Salt mountains are prominent summits. The road from Letterkenny to Dunfanaghy passes through the interior. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Raphoe, val. £656, in the patron. of Trinity College. The church is an old building. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, a Presbyterian meeting-house, five Sunday and eleven day schools. There is a police station in the village; also a dispensary, within the Millford Poor-law Union. It is alleged that St. Columb founded an abbey here, which was succeeded by a small friary, founded by O'Donnell, and of which the old parish church is a remnant. The Rock of Doune is seen in the vicinity of the village. Fairs are held on the first of every month.

KILMACSHALGAN, a par. in the bar. of Tireragh, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles E.S.E. of Easky, its post town. It is 7 miles long by 5 broad, and contains the vil. of Dromore East, and part of Lough Easky. The surface is nearly all mountain and bog. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killala, val. with another, £320, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected by means of a sum lent by the late Board of First Fruits in 1820. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, and four daily schools. Dromore House and Farranmacfarrel are the chief residences. Building stone and slate are found among the hills.

KILMACTALWAY, a par. in the bar. of Newcastle, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles S.W. of Dublin. It is 1 mile long and about half a mile in breadth. The soil is mostly good. The Grand canal passes in the immediate vicinity. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Clondalkin, £430, in the patron. of the archbishop. Castle Baggot is the principal residence.

KILMACTEIGE, a par. in the bar. of Leyny, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Tobercurry. Swineford is its post town. It is 8 miles long by the same in breadth, and contains the vil. of Aclare. The surface is mountainous and boggy, including Lough Salt, and part of Lough Easky. The river Moy intersects the interior, as also does the road from Ballina to Tobercurry. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Achonry, val. £307, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is ancient. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, a Sunday and four day schools. Banada and Clonrogeen are the chief seats. There are two or three objects of some antiquity in the parish; among others are Banada Abbey, Beleclare Castle, and some raths. Limestone, iron ore, and much basalt are found in the rocky formation of the surface.

KILMACTHOMAS, a post and market town in the pars. of Ballylaneen and Rossmire, bar. of Decies-without-Drum, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 15 miles W.S.W. of Waterford, and 110 S.W. of Dublin. It is situated a little off the main road from Cork to Waterford, on the side of a steep hill which overhangs the river Mahon. It is an inconsiderable place, containing a chief police station, and a dispensary within the Waterford Poor-law Union. Petty sessions are held in the town, where is also situated the church, Roman Catholic chapel, charity and National schools. A bridge spans the river near the point where Cromwell forded the stream when retiring from the siege of Waterford. The ancient family of Le Poer built a strong castle here which was reduced in 1643. Fairs are held on the 2nd February, 17th March, 12th May, 12th August, 29th September, and 6th December.

KILMACTRANEY, a par. in the bar. of Tirerill, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Ballinafad. Ballyfarnan is its post town. The par. is 6 miles long by 3 broad. The surface lies along the E. shore of Lough Arrow, and is bordered on the E. by the Arigna stream. The Commogue flows through the interior. There is some mountain waste, but the greater part is good soil. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with two others, £79, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was a gift of the late Board of First Fruits in 1816. There are a Roman Catholic chapel; also five day schools. Hollybrook House is the principal residence. In the village is a police station, and petty sessions are held occasionally.

KILMACUD, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Rathdown, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.S.E. of Dublin. The par. is about half a mile square. The living is a chplry. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Stillorgan, £140, in the patron. of the archbishop. Ribblesdale is the seat of the Archbishop of Dublin; Kilmacud House is another residence.

KILMACUMSY, a par. in the bar. of Frenchpark, co. Roscommon, prov. Connaught, Ireland, 1 mile N.W. of Elphin, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The soil is mostly good. The interior is traversed by the road from Boyle to Tulsk. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with Ardclare, £162, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two hedge-schools.

KILMADEMOGE, a par. in the bar. of Fassadinin, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Castlecomer, its post town. It is about 1 mile square. The surface consists chiefly of good land. It is drained towards the S. by the Dinane river. The parish is crossed by the road from Castlecomer to Kilkenny. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Mothell, £450, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a day school.

KILMADOCK, a par. in the co. Perth, Scotland, containing the post towns of Doune and Deanstown, 26 miles S.W. of Perth, and 44 from Edinburgh. The par. is about 8 miles square, and is bounded by co. Stirling, and the pars. of Port of Monteith, Callander, Strowan, Dunblane, Kincardine, and Lecropt. The Forth traces part of the S. boundary, and the Teith crosses the north-eastern extremity of the parish, which is intersected by several small streams, tributaries to these rivers. There are several small lochs, as Ludnich and Maghaig. The soil is very variable, and the surface is hilly. From Naigh More Hill is a fine view. This par. is in the presb. of Dunblane, and synod of Perth and Stirling. The minister has a stipend of £288. The church, which is at Doune, was built in 1822. In that town are also the Free church, Independent and Methodist chapels, and several schools. There is a Presbyterian church in the parish. The ancient church occupies the site of a Culdee monastery of St. Murdoc, which had six dependent chapels. Doune Castle is the seat of the Earl of Moray, who is the chief landowner. Other residences are Gartincaber and Cambusmore.

KILMADON. See KILMODAN, co. Argyle.

KILMADUM, a par. in the bars. of Fassadinin and Gowran, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Castle-Comer, its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface is hilly, but consists of a good soil. The small stream Douglas drains the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Dunmore, £179, in the patron. of the crown. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Mothell and Dysart.

KILMAGANNY, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Kells, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 13 miles S. of Kilkenny. The par. is 3½ miles square. The surface consists of arable and pasture land, and is traversed by the road from Kilkenny to Carrick-on-Suir, on which stands the village. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with another, £399, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1831 by means of a sum lent by the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Dunnemaggin. There are two Sunday and three day schools. Rosnara is the principal residence. In the village is a police station, where petty sessions are held at intervals. The dispensary and fever hospital are within the Callan Poor-law Union. A castle, the seat of the Walshe family, stands at Castle Hill. Fairs are held on Easter Tuesday and 4th September.

KILMAGLASS, an ancient par. now joined to Kilmorey, co. Bute, Scotland.

KILMAHOG, a vil. in the par. of Callander, co. Perth, Scotland, 3 miles N.W. of Callander. It is situated on the river Teith, and near Leny Pass.

KILMAHON, a par. in the bar. of Imokilly, co. Cloyne, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Cloyne. Shannagarry is its post town. The par. is 4 miles long by 3 broad. It occupies a site on the sea-coast, and contains the vil. of Ballinacreen. The soil is good. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £340, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built at the end of the last century. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, which is united to those of Kilmacdonough and Itermorrough; also two day schools. In the vicinity are the ruins of two castles formerly belonging to the Desmonds.

KILMAHUDDRICK, a par. in the bar. of Newcastle, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles W. of Dublin. It is about a quarter of a mile square. The living is a chplry. belonging to the benefice of Clondalkin, in the dioc. of Dublin, which see.

KILMAINBEG, a par. in the bar. of Kilmaine, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Ballinrobe, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad, and contains the vil. of Kilmaine. The surface consists of a good soil, and is traversed by the road from Kilmaine to Tuam. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Kilmaine, £458, in the patron. of the bishop. Fountain Hill is the chief residence. Here is a day school.

KILMAINE, a vil. in the par. of Kilmainbeg, bar. of Kilmaine, co. Mayo, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Ballinrobe.

KILMAINE, a bar. in co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. Its boundaries are the bar. of Cara on the W. and N.W., Clanmorris on the N. and N.E., and co. Galway on its remaining sides. Its length is 17 miles and its breadth 13. Loughs Carra and Mask lie to the W., and part of Lough Corrib to the S. This bar. contains the pars. of Kilcommon, Kilmainbeg, Kilmainemore, Kilmolara, Moogagagh, Robeen, Shrule, and parts of those of Ballinchalla, Ballinrobe, and Cong, also the town of Hollymount.

KILMAINEMORE, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Kilmaine, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Ballinrobe. The par. is about 5 miles square, and contains the vils. of Kilmaine, Carrowmore, and Rathgranagher. The surface is a little hilly, but consists of a good soil. The road from Ballinrobe to Galway traverses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Kilmaine, £148, in the patron. of the bishop. Glencorrib is the principal residence. Here is a police station, where petty sessions are held, also ruins of an old castle.

KILMAINHAM, a suburb of Dublin, in the par. of St. Jude, bar. of Uppercross, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is situated on the western boundary of the metropolis, near the terminus of the Great Southern and Western railway, 2 miles W. of the general post-office. It is a place of small attractions, unless it be for its ancient origin. This spot is supposed to have been the site of a religious establishment as early as 606, which was replaced by a priory of Knights Templars, founded in 1174 by Richard Strongbow, Earl of Pembroke. The Royal Hospital is of similar character to that of Chelsea, near London, for infirm officers and privates of the army. It was designed by Sir Christopher Wren, and built in 1680. It has a dining hall 100 feet long, with oak wainscoting, and several paintings. The chapel, which has a fine ceiling and a stained-glass window, is supposed to be a remnant of the ancient priory. This hospital is supported by the government. The county court-house is an imposing building, adjoining which is the county gaol. The county elections take place here, and the quarter sessions are held in the court-house. Here is an Independent meeting-house, and the parish church is close by. The queen visited the hospital in 1848. A fine old monument is in the Templars' churchyard.

KILMAINHAM, a par. in the bar. of Lower Kells, co. Meath, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Kells. It contains the vil. of Carlanstown, where is a police station. The land is chiefly the property of the Hussey and Meredyth families. There are quarries of building stone. The living is a rect. united with Newtown. Fairs are held at Carlanstown on the 12th March, 1st May, 6th August, and 19th November.

KILMAKEVOGE, a par. in the bar. of Ida, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of New Ross, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 1 mile broad. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Rosbercon, £328. There are two day schools. Aylwardstown is the principal residence.

KILMAKILLOGE, or KILMACHAELOGUE. See GOREY, co. Wexford.

KILMALCOLM, a par. and post-office vil. in the Lower ward, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 5 miles S.E. of Greenock. It is near 6 miles in length and breadth, and is bounded by the Clyde and the pars. of Houston, Erskine, Kilbarchan, Largs, Greenock, and Port-Glasgow. A considerable proportion is high, bleak moorland. The rivers Gryfe and Duchal traverse the interior. This par. is in the presb. of Greenock and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister has a stipend of £246. The church, which stands in the village, was built in 1833. There are a Free church, a Reformed Presbyterian church, and a Baptist meeting-house, also five or six schools. Duchal Castle is the ancient seat of the Porterfield family. Finlayston, Carruth, and Broadfield, are the other principal residences. At the first-named mansion Knox administered the sacrament after the Protestant form, and his communion service is still preserved at the house.

KILMALEADY, a bog in King's County, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Clara. It burst some years ago, and in consequence has moved several miles.

KILMALEERY, a par. in the bar. of Lower Bun-ratty, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Newmarket. Sixmilebridge is its post town. It is 2½ miles long by 1½ mile broad. It lies on the E. side of the mouth of the river Fergus. The soil is good. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Kilnasoolagh, £158, in the patron. of the bishop. At Clenagh is a castle of the M'Mahons.

KILMALEN, an ancient par. now joined to Inverary, co. Argyle, Scotland.

KILMALEY, a par. in the bar. of Islands, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles W.S.W. of Ennis, its post town. The par. is 7 miles long by 4 broad. The surface consists of mountain, moor, and bog. The Clareen stream, and the road from Ennis to Milltown-Malbay, traverse the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. £55, in the patron. of the bishop. Divine Service is held in a private house. There are two Roman Catholic chapels. Fairhill and Lough Burke House are the principal residences. Here is a dispensary, which is within the Ennis Poor-law Union.

KILMALINOGE, or KILNABRONOGUE, a par. in the bar. of Longford, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Portumna. The par. is near 2 miles square. The surface is flat, and consists of good land near the Shannon. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Clonfert, and forms part of the benefice of Clonfert, which see. Earlstown is the principal residence. Here are ruins of a convent, likewise of a church and chapel.

KILMALKEDAR, or KILMELCHEDOR, a par. in the bar. of Corkaguiny, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.N.W. of Dingle, its post town. It is situated on the shore of Smerwick Harbour, and covers an area of about 5,900 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with another, £133, in the patron. of the bishop. Divine service was, until recently, held in the police station. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, and a day school. This parish contains several curious objects of great antiquity, including the so-called hermitage of St. Brandon, the ancient and ruined parish church, besides several curious stones and monuments, some with ogham inscriptions.

KILMALLIE, a par. in the cos. Argyle and Inverness, Scotland, containing the post town of Fort-William. It is 60 miles long by 10 broad, and is bounded by co. Perth, and the pars. of Appin, Morven, Ardnamurchan, Glenelg, and Kilmanivaig. Its shores are indented by the sea-lochs of Linnhe, Leven, and Eil. The surface, for the most part, consists of mountain and heath. There are extensive grazing lands, and but a very small proportion of arable. The river Nevis and the lochs Archaig and Lochy are the principal waters. Ben Nevis, which is within the limits of this parish, attains an altitude of 4,370 feet. In the village is a monument to the memory of Colonel J. Cameron, who fell at Quatre Bras while leading on the 92nd Highlanders. The rock formations are slate, marble, red granite, and limestone. Salmon and herrings are taken in plenty on the coast, and the red deer, fox, eagle, &c., frequent the mountains. Lead ore is found in some of the hills. This par. is in the presb. of Abertarf and synod of Glenelg. The minister has a stipend of £288. The church was built at Corpach in 1783; besides which, there are in the parish the following places of worship—two government and two missionary churches, three Free churches, two Episcopalian, and one Roman Catholic chapel. There are 5 schools, 12 of which belong to the Established Church. Ardgour and Achnacarry House, the ancient seat of the Camerons of Lochiel, are the principal residences. Cameron of Lochiel, Sir Duncan Cameron, and MacLean of Ardgour are the chief landowners. On the summit of a rock overlooking the Lochy are the ruins of a castle, with traces of fortifications in different parts of the parish. Several large caves are met with; one of these, on the Nevis, is known as "Samuel's Cave," and served as a hiding-place for the vanquished followers of Prince Charles during the rebellion of 1746.

KILMALLOCK, a bar. or lib. co-extensive with the par., which see.

KILMALLOCK, a par., post and market town, in co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The par. is 4 miles square. The surface is undulating, and consists of a well-cultivated soil drained by two rivulets, tributaries to the Maig. The living is an impropriate cur. in the dioc. of Limerick, and in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is part of the dilapidated abbey church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, and contains several monumental structures. There are a commodious Roman Catholic chapel and three day schools. On the bank of the stream Lubach, at the meeting of the roads to Tipperary, Limerick, and Charleville, stands the town, 138 miles S.W. of Dublin, 43 N. of Cork, and 17 S. of Limerick. It is a station on the Great Southern and Western railway. It was formerly a place of great importance, and a parliamentary borough exercising separate jurisdiction as a county of itself. Its privileges have now become extinct, and its trade has degenerated into a few humble shops. The town is associated with many historical events, particularly those connected with the earls of Desmond, whose ancient seat was here. It was nearly demolished in 1642 by the Ormondes, since which time it has gradually sunk into decay. Among the most interesting ruins are those of a Dominican friary, founded in 1291 by Gilbert de Cullan. There are also traces of the old wall thrown round the town by Edward III., with its two gates, tower, &c. Many of the old stone houses are still remaining. Kilmallock gave title of viscount to General Sarsfield. The chief seats are Mount Coote and Ash Hill Tower. It gives name to a Poor-law Union containing 22 electoral divisions in cos. Cork and Limerick. The poorhouse has shelter for 1,300. Fairs are held in the town on the 21st February, 25th March, 9th June, 6th July, 8th November, and 4th December.

KILMALLOCK, a par. in the bar. of Ballaghkeen, co. Wexford, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Enniscorthy. The parish is of large extent, with a considerable proportion of bog. Building stone and marl are found. The living is a vic. united with that of Castle Ellis. The church is modern. The principal residence is Ballinkeel.

KILMALODA, a par. in the bar. of East Carbery, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles S.S.W. of Bandon, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad, and contains the vil. of Ballymacarthy. The road from Bandon to Clonakilty passes across its W. end. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Ross, val. £522. The church was erected in 1793. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Timoleague. There are a Sunday and four day schools. Kilmaloda House is the principal residence. Monteen Castle, of which remains still exist, was built in 1346 by the M'Carthys; there are also ruins of the old church.

KILMANAGH, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Crannagh, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N. of Callan. The par. is 3 miles square. The surface is hilly, but consists of a good soil. It is drained towards the S. by a small affluent of the King's river. The living is a prebend in the dioc. of Ossory, val. £474, in the patron. of Trinity College. The church was built at the end of the last century. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballycullen and Killaloe. There are three schools. Shipton and Banse are the principal residences. The vil. contains a police station, where petty sessions are held. A monastery was founded here by St. Natalis.

KILMANAGHAN, a par. partly in the bar. of Clonlonan, co. Westmeath, and partly in that of Kilcoursey, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Clara, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 3½ broad, and contains the town of Moate. The surface is flat and uninteresting, but consists of good land. It is crossed by the road from Moate to Clara. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Ardnurcher, £359, in the patron. of the crown. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, and five or six day schools. Kilfylan is one of several residences.

KILMANAHEEN, a par. in the bar. of Corcomroe, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing its post town, Ennistimon, and the vil. of Lehinch. The parish is 3½ miles long by 3 broad. The surface lies along the E. side of Liscanor Bay. The Oyna rivulet waters the interior. It consists principally of low hills affording good pasturage, but easily converted into arable. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilfenora, val. with two others, £141, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected by a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1829. The Roman Catholic chapel is at Ennistimon. There are several day schools in the union. Ennistimon House is the principal residence of the neighbourhood. There are ruins of an old church, and of the castles of Dough and Ennistimon, also several Danish raths.

KILMANLOE. See KILROE, co. Cork.

KILMANMAN, a par. in the bar. of Tinnahinch, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing the vil. of Clonaslee. The par. is 6 miles long by 5 broad. The surface is half mountainous and boggy, and includes Lough Annagh. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with Oregan, £575. Brittas is the seat of Lieutenant-Colonel Dunne, M.P. for the county. The parish takes its name from having had a church dedicated to St. Manman. A monastery was founded here in the 7th century.

KILMANNAN, a par. in the bar. of Bargy, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Wexford, its post town. The parish is about 2 miles square. The greater part of the surface consists of good land. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Mulrankin, £500, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Duncormick. There are remains of the old church, consisting of the bell tower, also a day-school. Sledagh is the principal residence. Great Curtoen Castle is within the limits of this parish.

KILMANWAIG. See KILMONIVAIG, co. Inverness.

KILMANY, a par. in the district of Cupar, co. Fife, Scotland, 4 miles N. of Cupar, its post town. Its boundaries are Balmerino, Logie, Dairsie, Moonzie, and Creach. It is 6 miles long by 2 broad. The river Motray crosses part of its eastern end. The road from Edinburgh to Newport traverses the interior. The par. is in the presb. of Cupar, and Synod of Fife, in the patron. of the United College of St. Andrew's. The minister has a stipend of £225. The church was built in 1768. There are a United Presbyterian church, and two non-parochial schools. Montquhanny and Rathillet House are the mansions of Gillespie of Montquhanny, the chief landowner. The latter was a royal demesne down to the time of Malcolm IV. It afterwards came into possession of the Hacksto[illegible], one of whom, David, was a prominent leader of the Covenanters in the seventeenth century. Dr. Chalmers was minister here for some time. Doule's Den is a spot much visited by tourists.

KILMAOGUE. See KILMEAGE, co. Kildare.

KILMARIE, a post-office station on the E. side of the Isle of Arran, co. Bute, Scotland, 4 miles from Lamlash.

KILMARNOCK, a par. and large manufacturing town in the district of Cunninghame, co. Ayr, Scotland. The par. is 9 miles long and its greatest breadth is 5. The Irvine bounds it on the S; on the other side it is encompassed by the pars. of Kilmours, Fenwick, and Loudoun. The surface is generally flat. The soil is fertile, and the land in a high state of cultivation. The Kilmarnock water traverses the interior. This par. is in the presb. of Irvine and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The two ministers have a stipend respectively of £145 and £148. The High Kirk was built in 1732, the Laigh Kirk in 1802; St. Andrew's church in 1841. There are also three Free churches, three United Presbyterian churches, a Reformed Presbyterian church, Evangelical Union, Baptist, and Roman Catholic chapels, besides a chapel-of-case, and one or two other meeting-houses for different Protestant sects. The academy at Kilmarnock was established in 1807. There are two parish schools, besides Stewart's endowed school, Free Church, Episcopalian, Roman Catholic, ragged, and several private schools. The principal landowners are the Duke of Portland, the Marquis of Hastings, Crawfurd of Crawfurdland, Blane of Grouger, Porleans of Monkland, Parker of Aisloss, and Dunlop of Annanhill. The ancient church was attached to Kilwinning monastery. The parish of Fenwick was formed in 1641 by a detachment from the northern division of this parish. Near the confluence of the Kilmarnock water with the river Irvine stands the town, in a spot about 11 miles N.E. of Ayr and 21 S.W. of Glasgow. It is a station on the Ayr and Glasgow railway. Kilmarnock was formerly a mere hamlet, but is now an important town and flourishing seat of manufactures. The thoroughfares are regularly laid out and the houses principally built of stone. The townhall, containing the court and public offices, was built in 1805. The public news-room was erected in 1814. The observatory is 70 feet high and commands an extensive view. In the market-place stands a monument erected in 1847 to Sir James Shaw. There are several excellent societies and institutions, including the procurators and merchants' societies, the philosophical institution, benefit clubs, libraries, Gray's museum of antiquities, six branch banks, viz. Bank of Scotland, Clydesdale Banking Company, Commercial, National, Royal, and Union Banks. Kilmarnock was long celebrated for the manufacture of the flat Lowland bonnets so much worn by the peasantry. But this important branch has been recently superseded by the manufactures of carpets and shawls. A considerable shoemaking trade is also carried on, and there are two breweries, rope walks, iron foundries, &c., in operation. The incorporated trades are bonnet-makers, skinners, tailors, shoemakers, and weavers. The town is governed by a provost, four bailies, and eleven councillors. It sends one member to parliament, together with Dumbarton, Port Glasgow, Renfrew, and Rutherglen. It is a free burgh of barony and was chartered in 1591 by Lord Boyd. The Kilmarnock Weekly Post is published on Saturdays. It was here that Burns published his first volume of poems. In the vicinity of the town is Dean Castle, formerly a fortified residence of the earls of Kilmarnock; and Kilmarnock House, also a residence of the same family, the last of whom was beheaded in 1745 for taking part in the rebellion in favour of the Stuarts. The old castle was accidentally burnt in 1735. Kilmarnock gives title of baron to the Earl of Erroll. Market days are Friday and Tuesday. Fairs are held in February, on the first Tuesday in May, the third Wednesday in July, and the third Wednesday in October (old style).

KILMARONOCK, a par. in the co. of Dumbarton, Scotland, 7 miles N. of Dumbarton. It is a station on the Forth and Clyde branch railway. The parish lies principally along the foot of Loch Lomond, the river Endrick tracing part of its N.E. boundary. It is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The surface is generally fertile, becoming moorish and hilly towards the S. The principal elevations are Duncruin Hill and Mount Misery. This par. is in the presb. of Dumbarton, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister has a stipend of £137. The church was erected in 1813. There are an United Presbyterian church, a library, and a school. Baturret Castle is the seat of Findlay of Easterhill. The principal landowners are the Duke of Montrose, Lady Buchanan, Buchanan of Ardoch, Mackenzie of Caldarvin, and Macadam of Mains. The parish takes its name from a well, dedicated to St. Marnoch, situated near the ancient church, which was granted to the monks of Cambuskenneth by Robert I. At Mains are the ruins of Kilmaronock Castle, and on Catter Hill was an ancient seat of justice, where the black mail was levied. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in February and last Thursday in April.

KILMARTIN, a par. and post-office vil. in the co. of Argyle, Scotland, 16 miles S.W. of Inverary. The parish is situated on the coast of the sound of Jura, opposite the northern extremity of the Island of Jura. It is bounded by the Lochs Craignish, Crinan, and Awe. It is 12 miles long by 2 broad, and includes two islands and several islets in Loch Awe. This par. is in the presb. of Inverary and synod of Argyle. The minister has a stipend of £189. The church, which is a Gothic structure, erected in 1335. There is also Free Church accommodation, and three schools. The village, which is small but neatly built, stands on the road from Lochgilphead to Obad. In Loch Crinan is good anchorage. Duntroon Castle, now modernised into Kilmartin House, is an object of some interest. Copper is met with occasionally. Salmon and herrings are plentiful. Fairs are held on the first Thursday in March, fourth Thursday in November, and the first Thursday in August and September.

KILMASHOGUE, a vil. in the bar. of Newcastle, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Dublin Castle. It is situated near the three rocks on the river Dodder.

KILMASTULLA, a par. in the bar. of Owney, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles N.N.E. of Newport-Tip. Killaloe is its post town. The par. is 4½ miles long by 2½ broad. The surface is mountainous, containing spurs of the Keeper mountains. The interior is traversed by the road from Dublin to Limerick, and by the Kilmastulla rivulet, which is a tributary to the Shannon. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Emly, val. with Templekelly, £540, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was a gift from the late Board of First Fruits in 1791. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Templekelly. There are a Roman Catholic, Sunday, and two or three day schools. Kilmastulla House and Crannagh House are the chief seats.

KILMAURS, a par. and post town in the district of Cunninghame, co. Ayr, Scotland, 2 miles N.W. of Kilmarnock. The par., which is 6 miles long by 3 broad, contains the vils. of Crosshouse, Knockentiber, Kirkton, and Milton. It is intersected by the Kilmaurs Water, which joins the river Irvine—this last traces part of the southern boundary. The surface is generally level, and draining is well attended to. Coal is extensively worked. The road from Kilmarnock to Irvine passes through the parish, and the Glasgow and South-Western railway in the vicinity. The town was constituted a borough of barony by James V., under the earls of Glencairn. It occupies a position on the banks of the Carmel, and is chiefly inhabited by manufacturers for the Glasgow and Paisley markets. It was once noted for the excellence of its cutlery. The town is governed by 2 bailies and other officers. This par. is in the presb. of Irvine, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister has a stipend of £277. The church, which is said to have been built in the 14th century, was repaired in 1804. It anciently belonged to the monks of Kelso, and was made collegiate in 1503. There are Free and United Presbyterian churches, and several schools. The principal seats are Craig, Thornton, Tour, Carmel Bank, and Tower Hill. Brisby Castle, on the Carmel, was a seat of the Barclay family. The cemetery was laid out by the Cunninghams, then earls of Glencairn, in 1600, and has remains of a monument to the ninth earl, and of a cell to Selkirk Abbey. The market is discontinued. Fairs are held in June, August, and November.

KILMAVEONAIG, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Blair Athol, co. Perth, Scotland, 5 miles from Blair Athol, and 80 from Edinburgh. It is situated under the Grampians, near the border of Inverness. The river Garra flows through the district. The par. is in the presb. of Lorn. The minister's stipend is £169.

KILMEADAN, a par. and post-office vil. in the bars. of Middlethird and Upperthird, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Portlaw. The par. is 4 miles long by 2 broad. The surface lies along the S. side of the river Suir. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Waterford, val. £148, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an old building. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, also four day schools. The village was formerly a place of some consequence, Kilmeadan Castle being the residence of a branch of the powerful family of Le Poer. This castle was demolished by Cromwell. It is now restored, and the residence of Viscount Doneraile. In the vicinity are a paper and a corn mill.

KILMEAGE, or KILMAOGUE, a par. and post-office vil. in the bars. of Connell and East Offaly, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing the vil. of Robertstown. The par. is 4 miles square. It includes a large portion of the bog of Allen. The surface is flat, and is traversed by the Grand canal. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with two others, £344, in the patron. of the bishop. In the village is a church, and a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Milltown. There is a Sunday-school and seven day schools.

KILMEANE, a par. in the bar. of Athlone, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles S.S.E. of Roscommon, its post town. The parish is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The surface lies along the W. margin of Lough Ree. It is traversed by the road from Roscommon to Athlone. The small stream Hine drains it towards the N. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with Killinvoy, £253, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and four hedge-schools. Moate Park is the demesne of Lord Crofton.

KILMEEDY, a par. and vil. in the dioc. of Upper Connello, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of Newcastle. The surface is boggy, with pasture land. The streams Deel and Skeagh drain the interior. The road from Drumcolloher to Rathkeale passes through the parish, upon which stands the village. It has a dispensary in the Newcastle Poor-law Union. For ecclesiastical purposes this parish is associated with that of Castletown. Heathfield is the principal residence of the neighbourhood.

KILMEEN, a par. in the bars. of East Carbery and Ibane, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.N.W. of Clonakilty, its post town. It is 6 miles long by 3 broad. The surface is hilly, but the soil good. The head stream of the Arighadeen drains it in the E. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ross, val. £593, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1810. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilkerranmore. Bennett's Grove is the principal residence. The remains of Ballinward Castle and some raths are observed.

KILMEEN, a par. in the bars. of Duhallow and Magunihy, cos. Kerry and Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Kanturk, its post town. It is 16 miles long by 8 broad, and contains the vil. of Boherboy. The surface, which lies along the headwaters of the river Blackwater, consists of a mountainous and boggy tract. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Dromtarriff, £580, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and three hedge-schools. Pobble O'Keefe, which belonged to the M'Auliffes, is in the vicinity.

KILMEEN, a par. in the bars. of Leitrim and Loughrea, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles E. of Loughrea, its post town. It is over 2 miles long and barely as much broad. The road from Loughrea to Banagher traverses the parish. The living is a suspended rect. and vic. forming a prebendary in the dioc. of Tuam, and in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Leitrim and Kilcooley. There is a day school.

KILMEENA, or KILMINA, a par. in the bar. of Burrishoole, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Westport, its post town. The par. includes the vil. of Knockaunyeveen, and several islands in Clew Bay. The interior is traversed by the road from Westport to Newport. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. £254, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1834. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Fahy. There are thirteen day schools. Rosslands is the principal seat.

KILMEGAN, a par. in the bars. of Upper Iveagh, Kinelarty, and Lecale, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing the town of Castlewellan and the vil. of Dundrum—the former is its post town. The par. is 6 miles long by 4 broad. The surface is mountainous, ascending from Dundrum Bay to a considerable height on the Slievecroob mountains, the highest summit being 1,755 feet above the sea. The living is a rect. united to Kilkeel, in the dioc. of Down. There are Presbyterian and Wesleyan meeting-houses, three Roman Catholic chapels, and nine or ten day schools. Castlewellan is the demesne of Earl Annesley.

KILMELCHEDOR. See KILMELKEDAR, co. Kerry.

KILMELFORD AND KILNINVER, an united par. in the district of Lorn, co. Argyle, Scotland, 10 miles S. of Oban, containing the post-office vils. of Kilninver and Kilmelford. It is situated on the coast of the sound of Mull and Loch Feachin. It is about 12 miles square, and has a coast-line of near 14 miles in extent, indented with numerous convenient creeks and bays. The surface is hilly, and adorned with a considerable extent of plantation. Ben Chapull is the most conspicuous elevation. The rivulets Euchar and Oude traverse the parish. The interior is diversified by numerous lochs, the principal of which are Slammadale and Tralig, and the coast is indented by Loch Melford, which is a sea-loch of great extent. The road from Oban to Lochgilphead passes through the village. This par. is in the presb. of Lorn, and synod of Argyle. The minister has a stipend of £166. There are two churches, one in either quondam parish. That of Kilninver was erected about 1793. The other is an ancient structure. There are also a Free church, two parish, and two non-parochial schools. The Duke of Argyll is the principal landowner. On the coast is Ronaldson's Tower, a curious structure of unknown origin, also a pillar stone, cairns, and tumuli.

KILMENAN, a par. in the bar. of Fassadinin, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Ballyragget. Ballinakill is its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface consists of a medium quality, and is bounded on the W. by a small tributary to the river Barrow. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Attanagh, £408, in the patron. of the bishop.

KILMENY, a quoad sacra par. in co. Argyle, Scotland, 5 miles N.E. of Kilarrow. It is situated on the N.E. side of the Island of Islay, and is about 12 miles long by 9 broad. This parish is now joined for civil purposes to Bowmore. The par. is in the presb. of Islay. The minister has a stipend of £120, in the patron. of the crown. There are a government church and school.

KILMERSDON, a hund. in the co. Somerset, contains the pars. of Ashwick, Babington, Buckland-Denham, Hardington, Hemington, Holcombe, Kilmersdon, Radstock, Stratton-on-the-Fosse, and Writhlington, comprising an area of 15,400 acres.

KILMERSDON, a par. in the hund. of the same name, co. Somerset, 10 miles from Bath, its post town, 6 N.W. of Frome railway station, and 121 from London. The par., which is extensive, contains the hmlts. of Coleford, Charlton, Kilmersdon Common, Luckington, Newberry, and Libycate. The town, which is well built, contains some good streets, which are paved and lighted with gas. It contains a new Temperance Hall, with a lecture room, gas works, &c. Petty sessions for the division of Kilmersdon are held monthly at the Gauntlet's Inn. There are extensive coal mines. The land is chiefly in pasture and the soil various. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £376, and the vicarial for £243 17*s*. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £214, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a stone structure, with a tower containing a clock and five bells. The interior of the church is very deficient in architectural adornment. In addition to the parish church there is a district church at Coleford, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £120, and in the patron. of the Vicar of Kilmersdon. There are schools endowed by different donors for the education of 40 children. There is also a Sunday-school and two places of worship for Wesleyans. Ammerdown is a modern mansion situated in an extensive park, surrounded by a wall 8 feet in height. There is a column in the park erected to the memory of Colonel Thomas Samuel Joliffe, 150 feet in height, with a central staircase. It bears inscriptions in English, French, and Latin. It is the seat of the Rev. Thomas Robert Joliffe, who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Here is published the weekly newspaper, the East Somerset Telegraph, which has an extensive circulation.

KILMESSAN, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Lower Deece, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Trim. The par. is 2 miles square. The surface, which lies partly within the Boyne Valley, consists of a fair soil, and is traversed by the road from Trim to Skreen. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with another, £316, in the patron. of the crown and the Marquis of Drogheda alternately. There is an old church, also a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Dunsany, and a day-school in the village. Swanstown is the principal seat.

KILMICHAEL, a par. in the bars. of East Carbery and West Muskerry, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.S.W. of Macroom, its post town. It is near 5 miles square. The surface is mountainous and boggy, and includes part of the valley of the river Letter. The interior is intersected by the roads from Cork to Castletown-Bearhaven, and from Macroom to Dunmanway. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £774, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by the Ecclesiastical Commission. There are five day schools. Greenville is the principal seat of the neighbourhood. An oaken handmill was found a few years ago in the bog some 9 or 10 feet below the surface.

KILMICHAEL, a vil. in the par. of Kilnamanagh and bar. of Bear, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 12 miles W.S.W. of Castletown-Bearhaven.

KILMICHAEL-GLASSARY, a par. in co. Argyle, Scotland, 17 miles S.W. of Inverary, containing the post-office station of Glassary, and part of the town of Lochgilphead. The par. is 22 miles long, and 12 broad, extending along the coasts of the lochs Fyne and Awe. The Glassary valley, which comprises the western portion, has some very fine scenery. The river Ad traverses the parish, and several lochs occur in the interior. The quoad sacra parish of Lochgilphead was formed out of this in 1846, and in 1853 another portion adjoining Inverary was severed from it, and annexed to Cumlodden. This par. is in the presb. of Inverary and synod of Argyle. The minister has a stipend of £285. The church was erected in 1827, but was much shaken by lightning in 1830. There are a Free church, Reformed Presbyterian church, Scottish Episcopalian chapel, and Baptist meeting-house; also two parish, an Assembly school, and several private academies. Poltalloch is the principal residence. The Campbells are the principal landowners. The ancestors of Campbell, the poet, lived at Kirnaw, in this parish. In the vicinity are four ancient chapels, and three forts. The herring fishery is followed with success, and salmon and trout abound in the Ad.

KILMICHAEL HEAD, a promontory on the coast of co. Wexford, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Arklow. It is a coastguard station, and has a good fishing-bank off it.

KILMIHILL, a par. in the bar. of Clonderalaw, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 9 miles W.N.W. of Kildysert, its post town. It is about 5 miles square. The surface is mountainous and boggy. The streams Creegh and Doonbeg flow through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Kilfarboy, £259, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Kilmurry and Clonderalaw. There are two hedge-schools. Fairs are held on the 19th May, 8th July, and 28th September.

KILMINA. See KILMEENA, co. Mayo.

KILMINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Axminster, co. Devon, 2 miles S.W. of Axminster, its post town, 7 S.E. of Honiton, and 23 from Exeter. It is situated on the river Axe, which bounds the parish on the E., and formerly belonged to the Torringtons. The soil is various, and the land chiefly arable. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £100, and the vicarial for £240. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Axminster, in the dioc. of Exeter. The parish church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing five bells. The Baptists have a place of worship, and there is a parochial school for both sexes. The representatives of the late William Tucker, Esq., are lords of the manor. A fair is held the first Wednesday in September for cattle.

KILMINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Norton Ferris, co. Somerset, 9 miles S. of Frome, its post town, 6 from Bruton, and 4 N.W. of Mere. The parish is small, and considered to be the most easterly in the county. A battle was fought here between the Danes and Alfred the Great. Near Stourhead is a triangular brick tower, 155 feet in height, founded in 1772 by Henry Hoare, Esq., commemorative of the victory gained by Alfred over the Danes; and in the S.W. extremity of the parish is a small oval intrenchment. called Jack's Castle. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £450. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £498. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a plain structure, with a tower containing two bells. In the church are interred the remains of Mr. Hartgill, and his son, both murdered in the reign of Queen Mary, by Lord Stourton, and others, who were convicted and executed. Kilmington manor, formerly belonging to the crown, was granted to the family of Le Port, in the reign of Edward I.; it afterwards passed to the family of the Hartgills. Sir Ainslie Hoare, Bart., of Stourhead, is the present owner of Kilmington manor.

KILMISTON, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Fawley, Winchester div. of co. Hants, 4½ miles S. of New Alresford, its post town, and 8 miles E. of the Winchester railway station. There are some barrows on the Downs. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £350 7*s*. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Cheriton, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is crowned with a spire. The charities produce £4 per annum, which goes to the support of a school.

KILMOCAHILL. See KILMACAHILL, co. Kilkenny.

KILMOCOMOGE, or KILMACOMOGUE, a par. in the bars. of East and West Carbery, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing Bantry, its post town. The par. is 14 miles long by 12 broad, and includes Whiddy Island. The surface is mountainous, and is diversified by the rivers Ouvane, Melagh, and Drumgariff. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £613, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Protestant Sunday-school and several day schools. Bantry Lodge is the mansion of Earl Bantry, and Glengariff Castle that of Captain White. At Carriganass are the remains of a castle formerly belonging to the O'Sullivan family; likewise vestiges of an abbey founded in 1466.

KILMOCRISH. See KILMUCKBRIDGE, co. Wexford.

KILMODAN, or KILMADAN, a par. in the co. of Argyle, Scotland, 15 miles S. of Inverary. It is situated in the valley of the river Ruail, near Loch Fyne, and is bounded by the parishes of Dunoon, Inverchaolain, Kilfinan, Strachur, and also by Loch Riddan. It is flanked by high hills, and possesses scenery of the grandest description. It possesses about 4 miles of coast line, and near the mouth of Loch Riddan is a stone pier for the accommodation of steamers. The par. is in the presb. of Dunoon and synod of Argyle. The minister's stipend is £174. There is a parish church, a Free church, and likewise schools. There is a mineral spring. Whinstone and limestone are found in large quantities. Agriculture in this quarter has greatly improved of late years. The chief seats are Dunaus, Glendaruel, and Ormidale. Here Colin Maclaurin the mathematician, and his brother the divine, were born.

KILMOE, a par. in the bar. of West Carbery, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles S.W. of Skull. Skibbereen is its post town. The par. is 7 miles long by 3 broad, and contains the vil. of Crookhaven. The surface extends along the coast between Crookhaven Harbour and Dunmanus Bay. It consists of a mountainous peninsula, a few small outlying islands, and the headlands of Mizen Head, Three-castle Point, and Brow Head. Copper is met with in parts. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £383, in the patron. of the crown and bishop, alternately. The present church was recently rebuilt, but the old one was erected in the beginning of last century by Bishop Brown. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Skull. There are three Sunday besides several day schools. Rockview is the principal residence.

KILMOILY. See KILMOYLY, co. Kerry.

KILMOKEA, or KILMAKEA, a par. in the bar. of Shelburne, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S. of New Ross, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad, and lies at the confluence of the rivers Barrow and Suir, including a tract known as Great Island. The road from New Ross to Ballihack traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Whitechurch, £517, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Whitechurch. There are two or three day schools. Kilmanick is the principal residence. Ballykearoague Castle formerly belonged to the Suttons.

KILMOLARA, a par. in the bar. of Kilmaine, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles S. of Ballinrobe, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad, and contains the vil. of Neale. The surface lies along the E. shore of Lough Mask. The soil is generally good. The road from Ballinrobe to Cong crosses part of the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with two others, £411, in the patron. of the bishop. Divine service is held in a private house. There are a Roman chapel and two day schools. Neale Park is the demesne of Lord Kilmaine, in the grounds of which a stone of Druidical origin is preserved.

KILMOLASH, a par. in the bars. of Decies Within and Without Drum, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.S.E. of Cappoquin. Lismore is its post town. It is 2½ miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface is hilly, with a proportion of bog. It has a middling soil, and is drained by the Bricky and Pheneas streams. The road from Waterford to Cork passes through the interior. The living is a suspended vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, in the patron. of the bishop. Woodstock is the chief seat. This parish formerly belonged to the Knights of St. John. The ruins of Clough Castle are in the vicinity.

KILMOLERAN, a par. in the bar. of Upperthird, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing Carrickbeg, its post town, which adjoins Carrick-on-Suir. The par. is 2 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface comprises part of the Suir valley. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with Dysert, £252, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Dysert and Kilsheelin. There are also one or two day schools. Coolnamuck Court is the principal residence of the place. A church formerly stood here, dedicated to St. Maidoc. Ballyclough Castle is within the limits of this parish.

KILMONEY, a par. in the bar. of Kerrycurrihy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Monkstown. Cork is its post town. The surface lies along the bank of the river Ownaboy. The soil is good. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cork. There is a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of St. Bridget, and two day schools. Kilmoney House is the principal residence.

KILMONIVAIG, or KILMANWAIG, a par. in the co. of Inverness, Scotland. It contains the post-office station of Invergarry, and is 9 miles N.E. of Fort William, its post town. It contains 15 miles of the Great Glen of Scotland, along Loch Lochy. Its length from S. to N. is about 60 miles, and its greatest breadth 20 miles. It comprises the district of Glengarry and part of the district of Loch Aber. It is in the presb. of Abertarff and synod of Glenelg. The minister's stipend is £289. The parish church is a modern structure, situated at the mouth of Glenspear. There is likewise a mission church of the Royal Bounty, two Free Church preaching stations, and a Roman Catholic place of worship. There are several schools. This place was termed, in 1745, the "cradle of the rebellion," from its having taken so prominent a part in the events of that period. Salmon fishing is carried on here, and communication is maintained by means of the Great Glen road and the Caledonian canal.

KILMONOGE, a par. in the bar. of Kinalea, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Kinsale, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 1½ mile broad, and contains the vil. of Belgoly. The surface lies along the coast near Oyster Harbour. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, val. with St. Peter's of Cork, £523, in the patron. of the bishop. Divine service is held in the schoolhouse. There are two day schools. Newborough is the principal seat.

KILMOOD, or KILMUD, a par. in the bar. of Lower Castlereagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Comber. Killinchy is its post town. It is 3½ miles long by 1½ mile broad. The small stream Blackwater flows through the parish, which is also traversed by the Comber and Killyleagh road. The soil is good. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Down, val. £124. The church was rebuilt in 1821. There are four Sunday and five or six daily schools. This parish anciently formed part of the possessions of Comber Abbey.

KILMOON, a par. in the bar. of Burren, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.N.W. of Kilfenora. Ennistimon is its post town. It is 5 miles long by 2 broad. The surface is hilly, consisting chiefly of a part of the Slieve-Elva mountains. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kilfenora, val. with Killeilagh, £247, in the patron. of the trustees of the late Marquis of Thomond. There are ruins of Lindoonvarna Castle, also of an old church, besides traces of fortifications. The Creagh family of Rathbane are the principal landowners.

KILMOON, a par. in the bar. of Skreen, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Ratoath. Ashbourn is its post town. It is 2 miles long and the same in breadth. The surface consists of a good soil, and is traversed by the road from Dublin to Slane. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Piercetownlandy, £308, in the patron. of the primate and the crown. The church was erected by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1816. There is a hedge-school in the parish.

KILMORACK, a par. in the co. of Inverness, Scotland. It is situated on the river Beauly, which runs by Kilmorack Falls, Eilan Aigash, and Dreum. It comprehends the village and valley of Beauly, and possesses the Falls of Kilmorack. The par. is in the presb. of Dingwall and synod of Ross. The minister's stipend amounts to £244. There are a mission church of the Royal Bounty, a Free church, two Roman Catholic places of worship, also parochial and other schools. In the neighbourhood are several hill forts, Druidical stones, and the remains of Beauly Priory. Old Red sandstone abounds, and formerly a black lead mine was worked. The principal cattle market for the north of Scotland is held on the moor of Ord in this parish. Lord Lovat and Chisholm of Chisholm are the principal landowners.

KILMORE WITH KILBRIDE, an united par. in the district of Lorn, co. Argyle, Scotland. It is bounded on the seaward sides by Mull Sound and Lochs Feachan and Etive, and on the land side by the parishes of Kilchrenan, Kilninver, and Muckairn. The parishes of Kilmore and Kilbridge were united shortly after the Reformation. The joint parish includes the post town of Oban, and likewise the Isle of Kerera. It is in the presb. of Lorn and synod of Argyle. The minister's stipend is £249. There are two parish churches, the one at Kilmore, and the other at Kilbride; the former is nearly 400 years old, and was once cruciform. At Oban there is a chapel-of-ease of the Royal Bounty, and places of worship belonging to the United Presbyterians, Free Church, and Independents. Throughout the parish are several schools for both sexes, in connection with the above-mentioned bodies. Loch Nell, which lies in the centre of the parish, is about 2 miles long, and three-quarters of a mile broad. The parish has about 20 miles of coast-line, which is generally high and rocky; and there are harbours both at Dunstaffnage and Oban, and the island of Kerera. The ferrys are between the mainland and the island of Kerera, Connel-ferry over Loch Etive, and from Mull-ferry to the island of Mull. The surface is for the most part hilly, and possesses good pasture for cattle, as also well cultivated valleys. Here deer, wild cats, and weasels abound; and there are some valuable fisheries. There are both sandstone and slate quarries in the neighbourhood.

KILMORE, a par. in the island of Mull, co. Argyle, Scotland. It is united to Kilninian, which see.

KILMORE, a par. and post-office vil. in the bars. of West Oneilland and Lower Orior, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. The par. is 6 miles long by 5 broad, and contains the town of Richhill and the vil. of Diamond. The surface is in a high state of cultivation. The Bann, the Casher, and the Tall, are the principal streams. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £1,774, in the patron. of the primate. The church was built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1814. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Mullavilly. There are a Presbyterian and two Methodist meeting-houses, six Sunday and eight day schools in the parish. Richhill is the chief seat. Castle Roe was formerly the seat of the O'Nials. A place called Diamond is interesting as being the scene of a conflict in 1795, from which originated the Orange faction. An abbey was founded here by St. Mochtee, and dedicated to St. Aldan.

KILMORE, a par. and vil. in the bars. of Upper Loughtee and Clanmahon, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Cavan, its post town. It is 7 miles long by 3 broad, and contains the vils. of Ballinagh and Crossdoney. The surface lies along the Erne, and includes part of Lough Oughter. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmore, val. with two others, £870, in the patron. of the crown. There are two churches, two Roman Catholic chapels, three Sunday and thirteen daily schools. Near the village stands the palace of the Bishop of Kilmore. Lismore Lodge is another seat. At Cloughoughter Castle died Bishop Bedell in 1641. The village was anciently called Cella Magna Death-reib, and had a monastery, according to some authorities, founded in the 6th century by St. Columb; its site is alleged to have been on Trinity Island, in Lough Oughter. The diocese of Kilmore is in the ecclesiastical province of Armagh. It was founded early in the 13th century, and was subsequently joined to Elphin and Ardagh. It extends over the county of Cavan, about three-quarters of Leitrim, and parts of Meath and Fermanagh, including 47 benefices, and 30 curacies. The gross value of the see is £6,340. The Roman Catholic diocese is in the province of Armagh, and comprises 43 parishes. The episcopal residence is at Cavan.

KILMORE, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Upper Deece, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles E.S.E. of Summerhill. It is 4 miles long by 3 broad. The soil is generally good. The Moynalty stream drains, and the road from Summerhill to Dublin traverses, the interior. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £278, in the patron. of the crown. There are an old church, a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Gaultrim, and two schools, in the parish. In the vicinity are several seats.

KILMORE, a par. in the bar. of Monaghan, co. Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Monaghan, its post town. The par. is 7 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 3. The soil is generally good, and the road from Monaghan to Clones traverses the parish, as also does that from Ballybay to Smithborough. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Clogher, val. £290, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built towards the close of the last century. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Drums-nart. There are a Sunday and nine day schools. Ballyleck is the principal seat.

KILMORE, a par. in the bar. of North Ballintober, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 7 miles N. of Strokestown. Drumsna is its post town. The par. is 4 miles long by 3 broad, and contains the vil. of Hillstreet. The surface lies along the S. side of the Shannon. It consists of a good soil, and is traversed by the road from Elphin to Jamestown. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. £200. The church was erected principally by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1828. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and seven day schools. Charlestown is the seat of Sir G. King, Bart., and Kilmore House that of the Almutys. A monastery was founded here in 1232 by Con O'Flangian.

KILMORE, a par. in the bar. of Lower Kilnamanagh, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Cashel, its post town. It includes a small detached portion. The surface has some mountain and moor, but the greater portion is good soil. The road from Tipperary to Templemore crosses the parish. The living is a suspended cur. in the dioc. of Cashel, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a day school. Kilmore House is the principal residence.

KILMORE, a par. in the bar. of Upper Ormond, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Nenagh. It is 6 miles long by 2 broad, and contains its post town, Silvermines. The surface is hilly, especially in the S., but is in a high state of cultivation. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with two others, £512, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by means of a loan from the late board of First Fruits in 1810. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballinaclough. There are five day schools. Kilbry is the demesne of Lord Dunalley; near it stands an old castle of the Prittie family. Kilmore House is another residence. Silver and lead are found.

KILMORE, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Bargy, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Badgetoun. Broadway is its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad, and comprises a small detached district, besides the Saltee Islands. The surface extends along a small harbour indenting the sea-lough Ballyteigue. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ferns, joined with Tomhaggard. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Tomhaggard. The principal seats are Ballyteigue Castle and Ballyharty House; near the former are the ruins of the old castle, which was the seat of the Whites. There is a coastguard station in the village.

KILMORE, a par. in the bars. of Upper Castlereagh and Kinelarty, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Ballinahinch. Crossgar, in this parish, is its post town. It is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The surface comprises loughs Polramer, and Mann. The soil is tolerably good. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Down, val. £265, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1792, chiefly by means of a donation from the Crawford family. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, and a Presbyterian meeting-house; also seven Sunday and thirteen day schools. Fairs are held on 11th February, 14th March, 1st May, 3rd June, 5th August, 29th September, 5th November, and 23rd December.

KILMORE, a par. in the bar. of Carbury, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 10 miles N. of Rathangan. Edenderry is its post town. It is 2½ miles long by 1½ mile broad. The living is united with that of Castle-Carbury. Windmill Lodge is the principal residence of the locality.

KILMORE, or KILMORE ERRIS, a par. in the bar. of Erris, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. Belmullet is its post town. It is 14 miles long by 5 broad, and contains the vils. of Binghamstown and Termoncarragh, besides several islands, of which North and South Inniskea and Devillan are the principal. The surface consists of a peninsula, known as the Mullet, lying between Broad-haven, Black-sod Bay, and the ocean. Granite and iron ore are worked. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Killala, val. £210, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1827. There are two united Roman Catholic chapels, and six day schools. Bingham Castle is a conspicuous residence.

KILMOREMOY, a par. in the bar. of Tirawley, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing Ballina, its post town, and the vils. of Bunree, Crockets-town, and Ardnaree. The surface is rather boggy, and is intersected by the rivers Moy and Bunree. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killala, val. with others, £777, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is at Ardagh. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a Baptist meeting-house, and several day schools in the parish. Belleck Manor is the seat of Colonel Gore.

KILMORGAN, a par. in the bar. of Corran, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Ballymote, its post town. It is 5 miles long by 2 broad, and is traversed by the road from Dublin to Sligo. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Achonry, val. with Emlaghfad, £562, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Emlaghfad. There is a day school. Newpark is the only residence.

KILMORICH, a par. in the co. Argyle, Scotland. It is united with Lochgoilhead.

KILMORY, originally Cill Mhuire, or Mary Church, a par. in the co. of Bute, Scotland. It reaches from Dippen, past Pladday Light, Drumodune Point, Loch Earsay, &c., to Loch Ranza, and is about 24 miles long, its greatest breadth being near the southern extremity, and 9 miles in extent. There are post-offices at Kilmory for its south, and at Loch Ranza for its north district. The par. is in the presb. of Kintyre and synod of Argyle. The minister's stipend is £237. The parish church is a commodious structure, enlarged in 1824. The Free Church has places of worship at Shisken and Loch Ranza. There are parochial and several other schools. In the neighbourhood are rude stones, tumuli, and cairns, attributed to Fingal. Along the coast, which is rocky, are several extensive natural caves, one being 120 feet long; it is known as the King's Cove, having, it is said, sheltered the celebrated Robert Bruce during his distress. There are harbours both at Blackwaterfoot and Arran. The Duke of Hamilton is sole proprietor of the parish. Two annual horse-fairs are held here, the one at Lag, and the other at Shedog.

KILMOVEE, a par. in the bar. of Costello, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Ballaghadireen, its post town. It is 9 miles long by 4 broad, and contains the vil. of Kilkelly. The surface is bleak and tame, consisting chiefly of hilly pasture and bog. Lough Nanoge lies in the S. district. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Achonry, val. with Castlemore, £232, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, and four hedge-schools. Carrowbeg is the chief residence of the parish.

KILMOYLAN, a par. in the bar. of Clare, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles S. of Tuam. Rathkeale is its post town. It is about 5 miles square, and contains the vils. of Anbally and Polsillagh. The surface is low, and the soil indifferent. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Moylough, £658, in the patron. of the bishop. Corrofin is the principal seat. There are remains of a castle at Anbally, also ruins of two other castles in the parish.

KILMOYLAN, a par. in the bar. of Shanid, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, near Shanagolden. Glin is its post town. It includes the vil. of Ballyhahill. The surface extends along the bank of the Shannon estuary, and is somewhat mountainous. It is drained by the little stream Oran. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. with Kilfergus, £171, in the patron. of the Vicars-choral of Limerick Cathedral. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Shanagolden and Robertstown. There is a day school. Shanid Castle belonged to the Desmonds.

KILMOYLY, or KILMOILY, a par. in the bar. of Clanmaurice, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Ardfert. Ballyhigue is its post town. It includes the vil. of Lerrigs. The surface lies along the coast of Ballyhigue Bay. The living is an appropriate vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and three day schools. Toherban was a German palatine settlement. Ballykealy Castle was the residence of the Fitz-Maurice family.

KILMUCKLIN, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Tipperary. Newport is its post town. It is 1 mile square, and is traversed by the road from Tipperary to Cappaghwhite. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, appropriated to the bishop's mensal.

KILMUCKRIDGE, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Ballaghkeen, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles E.N.E. of Oulart. The par. is 3 miles long by 2 broad, and comprises part of the vil. of Ford. The surface lies along the coast near Lough Learys. The living is a vic. united with Ballyvalden, in the dioc. of Ferns. The church was built in 1815 by aid of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Monimolin. There are five day schools. Kilmuckridge House is the chief residence. Here are police and coastguard stations, also remains of a monastery and of two ruined churches. Fairs are held on the 1st January, Easter Monday, 24th June, and 29th September.

KILMUD. See KILMOOD, co. Down.

KILMUIR, a par. in North Skye, co. Inverness, Scotland, 25 miles N.W. of Broadford. It is divided into three districts—viz. Kilmuir proper, Kilmaluag, and Steinscholl. It comprehends the northern extremity of the Isle of Skye, and also the islets of Altavaig, Tulm, Jasgair, Fladda, Trodda, and Fladdachuain. It has a sea-line of about 30 miles, and is bounded on the S. by the par. of Snizort, and on the other sides by the sea. The par. is in the presb. of Skye, and synod of Glenelg. The minister's stipend amounts to £158, in the patron. of the crown. The parish church, serving only for the districts of Kilmuir and Kilmaluag, is a commodious building. In the churchyard is the grave of Flora Macdonald, the guide of Prince Charles Edward. In 1847 the Court of Tiends erected the parish of Kilmartin, together with a part of Snizort, into the quoad sacra parish of Steinscholl, which has a government church. At the last-named place and Kilmuir the Free Church has preaching stations. There are several schools. Kilmuir Plain is the largest portion of cultivated land in the island. Not far from the church is a chalybeate spring, and in this parish is Loch Sianta or Shiant, "the sacred lake," celebrated for the cure of various ailments. A range of mountains in this parish attains the maximum elevation of 1,200 feet. In the midst of these mountains, and at the height of 1,000 feet above sea-level, is a secluded spot known as Quiraing, only accessible from three or four places. This valley is curiously concealed among the hills, and is large enough to pasture 4,000 head of cattle. It appears to have been used as a hiding-place by the former inhabitants of this locality, when obliged to leave their homes by reason of invasion. The coast-line, which is broken by many promontories and cliffs, is very beautiful. In the neighbourhood are the remains of several ancient forts and chapels.

KILMUIR, a district in Duirnish, Scotland.

KILMUIR-EASTER, a par. in the cos. of Ross and Cromarty, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Tain. It is bounded by the Cromarty Frith, of which it commands a view. It contains the hmlts. of Nigg, Kincardine, Ederton, Logie Easter, and Rosskeen. It is 10 miles long, and averages 4 broad. The par. is in the presb. of Tain, and synod of Ross. The minister's stipend is £212. The parish church is a large edifice erected in 1798. There is a Free church and several schools. The surface is for the most part pasture and barren moor, save near the coast, which is fertile and well cultivated. Portions have been much improved by shell manure. The coast is very flat, and the sea retires so far at the recess of tide as to permit almost of a dry passage to the E. coast. White and red sandstone are the prevalent rocks. The principal residences are Balnagown Castle, Kilmount, Tarbet House, and Kindace House. New Tarbet, formerly the residence of the earls of Cromarty and Delny, and of the earls of Ross, is now in ruins.

KILMUIR WESTER AND SUDDY, an united par. in S.E. of co. Ross, now known as Knockbain, which see.

KILMUN, a post-office vil. in the par. of Dunoon, co. Argyle, Scotland. It is situated on a bay 8 miles N.N.W. of Greenock, and 4 N. of Dunoon. About fifteen years ago this place was a paltry clachan, but now possesses many substantial dwellings, and has become a watering-place on the Clyde. There is an Established church and Free church, with schools attached to each. The parish takes its name from the church, which is dedicated to St. Mun, and is the burial-place of the Argyle family. It was founded in 1442, for a provost and six prebendaries, by Sir Duncan Campbell, of Lochaw, who afterwards assumed the title of Argyle. Other grants of land are recorded to have been made by the same family in the chartulary of Paisley. The church is a plain structure, and chiefly modern, save the tower, which is almost entire, and has a staircase of peculiar construction. Steamboats run frequently between this place and Glasgow, Greenock, and Dunoon.

KILMUNDY, a small vil. in the par. of Longside, co. Aberdeen, where formerly the manufacture of woollen cloths was carried on to a large extent.

KILMURRY, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Limerick, its post town. It is 2 miles square. The surface lies at the confluence of the Shannon and the Mulkern. It is traversed by the road from Limerick and Dublin. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £313, in the patron. of the crown. The late Board of First Fruits granted a loan for the building of the church in 1812. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of St. Patrick's. There are a Roman Catholic Sunday-school and three day schools. Troy Castle belongs to the O'Briens.

KILMURRY, a bog in co. Galway, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Tuam. It covers about 2,000 acres.

KILMURRY, a par. in the bar. of East Iffa and Offa, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles W.N.W. of Carrick-on-Suir, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 2 broad, and slopes towards the banks of the Suir river. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with Kilsheelan, £184. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Mockler and Grange. There is a day-school. Kilmurry House, Ballydine, Dovehill, and Ballycurkeen are the chief residences.

KILMURRY, a vil. in the par. of Thomastown, bar. of Gowran, co. Kilkenny, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Thomastown, and 11 E. of Kilkenny. It is situated near the river Nore, which is here crossed by a bridge.

KILMURRY, a par. in the bars. of East and West Muskerry, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E of Macroom. Crookstown is its post town. The Lee and the Bride traverse the interior. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Cork. The church has been rebuilt by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Cannaway and Moviddy. There are four hedge-schools in the parish. The principal residences are, Warren's Court, the seat of Sir A. Warren, and Kilmurry House. In the village is a police station. Clodagh Castle belongs to the M'Cartys. Fairs are held on the 1st February, 1st May, 8th September, 1st November, and 21st December.

KILMURRY-CLONDERALAW, a par. in the bar. of Clonderalaw, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing its post town, Knock. It is 4 miles long by 3 broad, and extends along the W. shore of Clonderalaw Bay. The surface is chiefly cold moorland. The road from Ennis to Kilrush follows the coast. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with four others, £318, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected by aid of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1810. There is a Roman Catholic chapel and five hedge-schools.

KILMURRY-ELY, a par. in the bar. of Clonlisk, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile N.N.W. of Shinrone, its post town. It is 4½ miles long by 1½ mile broad, and contains the vil. of Brosna. The surface consists mostly of good land, and is traversed by the cross-roads from Shinrone to Birr, and from Roscrea to Portumna. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Shinrone, £487, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Shinrone. There is a day school. Ashpark is the principal residence.

KILMURRY-IBRICKAN, a par. in the bar. of Ibrickan, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Milltown-Malbay. Ennistimon is its post town. The par., which is 8 miles long by 4 broad, includes several small islands and part of Lough Doo. The surface extends along the shore of the ocean, and is wildly mountainous, rising to the height of 1,282 feet at Slieve-Callan. The headlands of Lurga and Caherrush occur on the rocky coast. There is a coastguard station. The living is an impropriate rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe. There is a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Kilfarboy, also seven day schools. The fishery employs most of the inhabitants of the coast. Fairs are held on the 17th May and 25th August.

KILMURRY MACMAHON, a vil. in the par. of Kilmurry-Clonderalaw, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Here are the remains of a castle of the M'Mahons. Fairs are held on the 24th May, June, and September.

KILMURRY NEGAUL, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Lower Bunratty, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles N. of Sixmilebridge, its post town. The par. is 3 miles long by 1 mile broad, and comprises part of Lough Cullaunyheeda. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Kilfinaghty, £277, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in ruins. There is a Roman Catholic chapel. Kilkeshin and Ashley-Park are among the principal residences.

KILMURVEY, a vil. in the island of Aranmore, co. Galway, Ireland. It is situated on Kilmurvey Bay, and contains police and coastguard stations.

KILN, a rivulet of the co. Cork, Ireland. It falls into the river Lee at Cork.

KILNABRONOGUE. See KILMALINOGUL, co. Galway.

KILNAGLORY, a par. in the bars. of Cork and East Muskerry, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles W.S.W. of Cork, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 2 broad. The surface consists of a good soil. It is traversed by the river Bride, and the road from Cork to Inchegeelagh. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, val. with Athnowen, £583, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel and a day school.

KILNAGROSS, a par. in the bar. of East Carbery, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.N.E. of Clonakilty, its post town. It is 3 miles long by half a mile broad. The soil is generally good, and is drained by the Arigadeen stream. The parish is crossed by the road from Clonakilty to Cork. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ross, val. £215, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built about 1830. There are Sunday and daily schools. Shannondale is the principal residence. Slate is found.

KILNAHARD, a hmlt. on Lough Sheelin, co. Cavan, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Kilnalet.

KILNAHUE, a par. in the bar. of Gorey, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles W.N.W. of Gorey, its post town. It is 6 miles long by 3 broad. The surface is mountainous. Mount Annagh on the N. attains an altitude of 1,498 feet. The river Bann flows through the southern portion of the parish, which is also traversed by the road from Gorey to Carnew. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £95, in the patron. of the Dean of Ferns. Kilnahue House is one of several residences.

KILNALECK, a post-office vil. in the par. of Drumferton, in the bar. of Castlerahan, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Mount Nugent, and 61 from Dublin. It is situated on the road from Dublin to Enniskillen, and contains a police station. Fairs are held on the 2nd February, 25th March, 13th May, 11th June, 10th August, 11th September, 1st November, and 17th December.

KILNAMANAGH, a par. in the bar. of Bear, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Castletown-Bearhaven, its post town. It is 6 miles long by 3 broad, and contains the vils. of Allihies, Ballydonegan, Ballynacallagh, Ballynacarriga, Cloanmines, Firkeel, Kilkinnikin, Killough, and Kilmichael, and the island of Dursey. The surface consists of part of the peninsula lying between Bantry Bay and the estuary of the Kenmare. The coast is rocky, the Crow Head, Garrinish Point, and Blackhall Head, being the principal prominences. The bays are Ballydonagan and Kilkinny. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ross, val. with Bearhaven, £385, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Bear-Island and Castletown. There are five day schools. The copper mines of Allihies are in the vicinity, and slate and iron are also met with.

KILNAMANAGH, a par. in the bar. of Frenchpark, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Frenchpark. It is 6½ miles long by 2½ broad, and comprises part of Lough Gara. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Bridnague. There are four day schools. Here stood an old abbey, the site of which was granted to Earl Clanricarde at the Suppression. Kingsland is the principal residence.

KILNAMANAGH, a par. in the bar. of Ballaghkeen, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Oulart, its post town. It consists of two detached districts, separated by Killincooley. The soil is mostly good. The road from Wexford to Gorey passes through the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £134, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected by means of a gift from Robert Doyne, Esq., and from the late Board of First Fruits, in 1813. Here are a Protestant Sunday-school, and a day school. Kilnamanagh House is the only seat.

KILNAMANAGH, LOWER and UPPER, two bars. in co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The former is 9 miles long by 7 broad. Its boundaries are North Kilnamanagh on its N. and W. sides, Middlethird on the E., and Clanwilliam on the S. It contains the pars. of Aghacrew, Ballintemple, Clogher, Kilmore, Kilpatrick, Rathkennan, and parts of Clonoulty, Donohill, and Oughterteague. The Upper barony is 14 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 8. Its boundaries are Upper Ormond and Ikerrin on the N., Eliogarty and Lower Kilnamanagh on the E., Clanwilliam on the S., and co. Limerick on the W. It contains the pars. of Glenkeen, Moyaliff, Templebeg, Upperchurch, and parts of Ballycahill, Doon, and Toem, with the village of Borrisoleagh.

KILNAMARTERY, a par. in the bar. of West Muskerry, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles W.S.W. of Macroom, its post town. The par. is 8 miles long by 2 broad. The surface lies between the rivers Scullane and Lee. It is hilly, and is crossed by the road from Macroom to Inchegeelagh. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £272, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was a gift from the late Board of First Fruits in 1813. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballyvourney. There are four day schools. Raleigh is the principal seat. Copper and slate are found among the hills.

KILNAMONA, a par. in the bar. of Inchiquin, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles W.N.W. of Ennis. It is 4 miles long by 2 broad, and consists of a good soil, with some moorland. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Drumcliffe, £575, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, and a hedge-school. Shallee and Shallequarry are the chief seats of the parish. In the vicinity are ruins of two castles, of an old church, and of ancient fortifications.

KILNANARE, or KILLANEAR, a par. in the bar. of Magunihy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Milltown, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The church is in ruins. There are three day schools.

KILNANEAVE, a par. in the bar. of Upper Ormond, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles S.S.E. of Nenagh, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 2 broad. The surface is very mountainous. The river Nenagh flows through part of the parish, and has one or two falls. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Kilmore, £512, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Templederry. Mount Kennedy and Millbrook are the principal seats.

KILNARATH, a par. in the bar. of Owney and Arra, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles W. of Newport, its post town. It is 5 miles long by 2 broad, and includes a detached district, distant about 1 mile. The surface is mountainous, and contains a portion of the declivities of the Keeper mountains. Its highest ground is 1,204 feet. The road from Limerick to Nenagh passes through the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Newport, £822, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and four day schools. Castle-Waller, Oakhampton, Coole, and Drumbawn, are the principal seats.

KILNASOOLAGH, a par. in the bar. of Lower Bunratty, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, near Newmarket-on-Fergus, its post town. The surface lies along the estuary of the river Fergus, and is crossed by the road from Limerick to Ennis. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with two others, £158, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1815. There are three day schools. The principal residences are, Dromoland Castle, the seat of Sir L. O'Brien, Bart., and Carrigoran, that of Sir W. Fitzgerald, Bart. In the vicinity are remains of two ancient castles.

KILNAUGHTIN, a par. in the bar. of Iraghticonnor, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing Tarbert, its post town. The par. is 3 miles long by half a mile broad. The surface, which lies along the banks of the Shannon, is boggy. The soil is generally poor. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. £67. The church was built about three-quarters of a century ago. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a Methodist meeting-house, besides seven day schools. The principal residences are Tarbert House and Lislaghtin Abbey, near which are the ruins of Lislaghtin Abbey.

KILNDOWN, a chplry. in the par. of Goudhurst, hund. of Cranbrook, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 2½ miles S.W. of Goudhurst, its post town, and 7 from Marden railway station. It is situated on high ground, and is a separate ecclesiastical district. The land is fertile, and partly in hops. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £350. The church, dedicated to Christ, contains a stone pulpit, carved oak screen, and some stained windows. The church was erected by public subscription, and endowed by the late Marshal Beresford. There is a school for both sexes, endowed with £210 per annum by the late Viscountess Beresford, part of which is given in clothing to the children. There is also a library and reading-room, with 300 subscribers, and containing above 800 volumes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Richard Springett, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KILNEDDY, an ancient par. now joined to Knocktopher, co. Kilkenny, Ireland.

KILNEGARRUFF. See KILLEENAGARRIFF, co. Limerick.

KILNENOR, or KILLINOR, a par. in the bar. of Gorey, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles N. of Gorey, its post town. The par. is about 3 miles in length and the same in breadth. The surface comprises a considerable extent of mountain pasture. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with another, £176, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel. Ballyfad is the chief residence. A fair is held on the 8th September.

KILNER. See CULBONE, co. Somerset.

KILNHURST, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Swinton, and par. of Rawmarsh, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Rotherham.

KILNINIAN AND KILMORE, an united par. in the district of Mull, co. Argyle, Scotland. It includes Tobermory, its post town, and the post-office stations of Ulvas and Aros, also the islands of Ulvas, Gometra, Little Colonsay, Staffa, and Treishnish, which are all situated in Lake Nakeal. It is 12 miles from E. to W., and the same from N. to S. The par. is in the presb. of Mull and synod of Argyle. The minister's stipend is £231. Portions of the united parish were severed in 1845, and erected into the quoad sacra par. of Tobermory, with parts of Salen and Ulvas, both of which have a government church. There are parish churches both at Kilninian and Kilmore. The Free Church have a place of worship at Tobermory, and a preaching station at Kilmore. The Baptists have a chapel at the former place. There are several schools throughout the parish. The surface is hilly, with heath, but in some places fertile. Calgarry Castle and Torloisk House are the chief seats. In one of the Treishnish islands are the remains of fortifications, and on an eminence overlooking Kilmore is a Druidical temple. There is a harbour at Aros, and likewise at Tobermory. In the parish are five lakes with good trout fishing.

KILNINVER, an ancient par. now united to Kilmelford, co. Argyle, Scotland.

KILNOE, a par. in the bar. of Upper Tulla, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles W.S.W. of Scarriff. Killaloe is its post town. It is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The surface is rather mountainous, and comprises part of several loughs, including Lough O'Grady. The road from Scariff to Ennis traverses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Kilseily, £235, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Tomgrany. There are two day schools. Coolreath and Kilgorey are the principal seats. There are ruins of an old castle near the former seat.

KILNSAY, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Burnsall, wap. of Staincliffe, West Riding co. York, 9 miles N. of Skipton, and 11 N.E. of Settle. It is situated on the river Wharfe, and commands a fine view from Kilnsay Crag.

KILNSEA, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 8 miles S.E. of Patrington. The village is situated on a narrow projecting point which runs out to the German Ocean, terminating in the promontory of Spurn Head, on the extremity of which are two lighthouses and a four-gun battery. The land is arable, and the soil clayey. Spurn Head, the Ocellum Promontorium of Ptolemy, had once a considerable port called Ravenspur, or Ravensburgh, which, with its populous market town of the same name, was washed away early in the 15th century. It enjoyed a considerable trade, and sent members to parliament in the reigns of Edward I. and Edward III. There is a lifeboat, stationed here by the Hull Trinity House, for the purpose of assisting vessels in distress. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £82. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, was destroyed in 1826 by the encroachment of the sea; but some ruins of the tower are still visible. Divine service is performed in a large room. Some Roman relics have been discovered here. Sir S. A. Constable is lord of the manor.

KILNWICK, a par. and tnshp. in the Bainton Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Lockington, and 7 S. of Driffield, its post town. It is situated at the foot of the Wolds, on the road from Driffield to Beverley, and contains the tnshps. of Beswick and Lockington. The land is chiefly arable and the soil clayey, with peat and limestone in parts. The tithes were commuted for 63 acres of land at the enclosure of the parish, in 1786. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £101. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone building with a Norman doorway on the S. side, and a square tower. There is a National school for children of both sexes, also a Sunday-school. Kilnwick Hall, the seat of C. Grimston, Esq., who is lord of the manor, is the principal residence.

KILNWICK-PERCY, a par. in the Wilton-Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 1½ mile N.E. of Pocklington, its post town and nearest railway station, and 14½ miles from York. The surface is undulating and the scenery varied, with some fine plantations. The land is chiefly arable and pasture, with about 180 acres of woodland and 20 of water. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £160, and the vicarial for £117 8*s.* 6*d.* The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £180, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is a small edifice with a belfry containing one bell. In the interior are stained-glass windows, monumental slabs, and an ancient brass. The Hall, the seat of the Hon. A. Duncombe, M.P., lord of the manor, is a stone building surrounded by shrubberies.

KILPATRICK, a par. in the bar. of Kerrycurrihy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Monkstown. Cork is its post town. The surface lies along the W. side of Outer Cork Harbour. The soil is mostly good. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Cork, val. with Tracton, £97. There is a hedge-school. Fountainstown is the principal residence.

KILPATRICK, a par. in the bar. of Carbury, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Robertstown. Edenderry is its post town. It is 4 miles long and a little over 2 broad. It lies on either side the Grand canal. This parish appears not to form a separate ecclesiastical charge. Kilpatrick House is the chief residence of the neighbourhood.

KILPATRICK, a par. in the bar. of Lower Kilnamanagh, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles N.N.E. of Tipperary, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The soil is good. The road from Tipperary to Templemore traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Ballintemple, £590, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two schools.

KILPATRICK, a par. in the bar. of East Shelmaliere, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.N.W. of Wexford. Kyle is its post town. The par. is 3 miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface lies along the margin of the river Slaney, near Wexford Harbour. The interior is traversed by the road from Wexford to Dublin. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with another, £219, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected more than a century ago. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballymura. There is a National school.

KILPATRICK, a par. in the bar. of Fore, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Castle-Pollard. Castletown-Delvin is its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The soil is mostly good. The road from Mullingar to Oldcastle passes through the parish. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Rathgraff, £361, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in ruins. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and two day schools. Some raths are seen.

KILPATRICK, a vil. in the bar. of Kinalmeaky, co. Cork, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Bandon.

KILPATRICK, a hmlt. in the bar. of North Ballinacor, co. Wicklow, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Rathdrum.

KILPATRICK, otherwise DRIMADOWN BAY, is a small bay situated on the W. side of the isle of Arran, and at the mouth of the Blackwater.

KILPATRICK, EAST, or NEW, a par. partly in co. Stirling, but for the most part in co. Dumbarton, Scotland, 6 miles N.W. of Glasgow. It contains the vils. of New Kilpatrick, Craigton Field, Dalsholm, Bluerow, Knightswood, Milngavie, and Netherton Quarry. Its extent is upwards of 6 miles from N. to S., with a breadth of from 2 to 4 miles. To the N. of the parish are the Kilpatrick hills, attaining an altitude of 1,200 feet above the level of the sea, and from which the surface slopes down towards the rivers Kelvin and Allander. More than half the surface is under tillage. The par. is in the presb. of Dumbarton, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister's stipend is £270. The church, erected in 1808, is situated at New Kilpatrick. At Milngavie is a chapel-of-ease, and likewise an United Presbyterian church. There are six non-parochial schools. This parish was separated from West Kilpatrick in 1649. The original parish took its name from a church dedicated to St. Patrick, the patron saint of Ireland, who is said to have been a native of this place. The parish is traversed by the Forth and Clyde canal, which here crosses the Kelvinwater by a stupendous aqueduct 350 feet long. The Allander water also flows through the parish, and there are three small lakes. Coal, freestone, and limestone are worked in the neighbourhood, and clay-iron ore exists, although in no great quantity. There is a cotton factory, and paper, snuff, and corn mills, also a distillery, bleach and print works. In this district are portions of the wall of Antoninus, and remains of an ancient stronghold. Garscadden, Killermont House, and Garscube House are the chief seats.

KILPATRICK, WEST, or OLD, a par. in co. Dumbarton, Scotland, 9 miles W. of Glasgow. It is situated at Erskine Ferry, on the river Clyde, which separates it from co. Renfrew. It is a railway station on the Glasgow and Helensburgh line. The par. contains the vils. of Old Kilpatrick, Duntocher, Yoker, Dalmuir, Milton, Dunglass, Milton-field, Failley, Dalmuir-shore, Frisky, Hardgate, Dumbuck, Little-mill, and Bowling. The size of the parish is 8 miles by 3. More than one half of the surface is occupied by the Kilpatrick hills. About one half of the land is arable, and the other half pasture and woodland. The Allanderwater here widens into a lake, and the Forth and Clyde canal traverses the parish. In the neighbourhood are coal, limestone, and ironstone mines, also freestone and whinstone quarries. The par. is in the presb. of Dumbarton, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister's stipend is £250. The parish church, at Old Kilpatrick, was built in 1812. There are a Free church and chapel-of-ease at Duntocher, also a Free church at Old Kilpatrick. The United Presbyterians have places of worship at Old Kilpatrick, Duntocher, and Craigs respectively. The Roman Catholics have a chapel at Duntocher. There are nine private schools. The manufacture of agricultural implements, and also the spinning of cotton, is carried on. The Clyde steamers have five piers, or calling stations, in this parish. The village of Old Kilpatrick was erected in 1679 into a burgh of barony, but its privileges are now in abeyance. The wall of Antoninus passed through part of the parish, but the advance of agriculture has left very few traces of it. Lord Blantyre is the chief heritor.

KILPEACON, a par. in the bars. of Smallcounty and Pubblebrien, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles S. of Limerick, its post town. It is 1½ mile long by 1 broad. The soil is good. The road from Limerick to Bruff traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. with two others, £263, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is an old building, was repaired and enlarged in 1819. There is a day school, also a dispensary, within the Limerick Poor-law Union. This parish was granted to the King family by James I. Kilpeacon House stands near the ancient demesne. There are remains of forts and ancient earthworks.

KILPEDDER, a hmlt. in the par. of Kilcoole, bar. of Newcastle, co. Wicklow, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Newton-Mountkennedy.

KILPHELAN, or KILWHELAN, a par. in the bar. of Condons and Clangibbon, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1 mile S.S.E. of Mitchelstown. This par. is within the dioc. of Cloyne, but appears not to be ecclesiastically recognised as a parish.

KILPIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Howden, wap. of Howdenshire, East Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Howden. It is situated on the river Ouse. The inhabitants are engaged in lime burning, also in the coal trade. The soil is sandy and the subsoil clay.

KILPIPE, a par. partly in the bar. of Gorey, co. Wexford, and partly in that of South Ballinacor, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles W. of Arklow. The par. is 5 miles long by 4 broad, and comprises a large extent of mountain pasture. The Croghane Mountain is a prominent summit. It is crossed by the road from Carnew to Rathdrum. Coolbaron, Tobberparrick, and Wingfield, are the principal residences. The church was erected in 1765 at the expense of the parish. There are two day schools. Building stone can be obtained.

KILPOOLE, a par. in the bar. of Arklow, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing a part of Wicklow, its post town. It is a little over 2 miles in length and the same in breadth. It lies along the coast, which is rocky, including Wicklow Head, Brides Head, and Sea-park Point. The living forms part of the benefice of Wicklow [which see], in the dioc. of Dublin. The church is situated outside the limits of the parish. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a Quaker meeting-house, and three or four day schools. Kilpoole House is the chief seat of the neighbourhood. This parish anciently belonged to Kilmainham Priory. The ruins of Black Castle stand on an elevated spot near Wicklow. It is supposed to have been built in the 14th century. There are also ruins of two churches in the parish.

KILQUAIN, a par. in the bar. of Longford, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles W. of Eyrecourt, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 3 broad. The road from Banagher to Loughrea passes through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. with Donanaughta, £300, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel joined to that of Fahy, also two hedge-schools. Quainsborough is the principal residence.

KILQUANE, a par. in the bar. of Barrymore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles N.E. of Cork. Rathcormack is its post town. It is 3 miles long by 1 mile broad, and contains the vil. of Gogginstown. The surface, which is mountainous, is traversed by the road from Cork to Dublin. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, val. with Killaspugmullane, £522, in the patron. of the bishop. There are three day schools.

KILQUANE, a par. partly in the bar. of Fermoy, co. Cork, and partly in the bar. of Coshlea, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Kilfinnane. Mallow is its post town. The surface is mountainous, Seefin being the principal summit, which has an altitude of 1,706 feet. The living is appropriated to the see of Limerick. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Effin and Kilbreedy Major. There is a hedge-school.

KILQUANE, a par. in the bar. of Corkaguiny, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles N.N.W. of Dingle, its post town. It is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The surface, which consists of part of the Corkaguiny peninsula, lies between Brandon and Ballydarid heads. It partakes largely of the wild and mountainous character which prevails throughout the district of Munster. The living is a suspended rect. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe. There are two hedge-schools.

KILQUANE. See ST. PATRICK, co. Limerick.

KILRAGHTIS, a par. in the bar. of Upper Bunratty, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Ennis, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 2 broad. The living is a rect. and vic., held separately, in the dioc. of Killaloe, the former, with Ogashin, val. £371, and the latter, with Dromcliffe, val. £575, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, and three hedge-schools.

KILRAGHTS, a par. in the bar. of Upper Dunluce, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Ballymoney, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 2 broad. The surface is traversed by the road from Ballymoney to Broughshane. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Connor, val. with Rasharkin, £323, in the patron. of the bishop. There are three Presbyterian meeting-houses, two Sunday and three day schools.

KILRAINY, or KILRENNY, a par. in the bar. of Carbury, co. Kildare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.N.W. of Castle Carbury. Edenderry is its post town. It is 2½ miles long by 1½ mile broad, and is crossed by the road from Dublin to Galway. The living is a suspended rect. in the dioc. of Kildare, in the patron. of the bishop. Kilrainy House and Kilglass House are the chief residences.

KILRANE, a par. in the bar. of Forth, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Killinick. Taghmon is its post town. It is about 2 miles in length and breadth. The surface lies near the coast, under Greenore Point. The living is a suspended rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Rosslare. There is a day school. Hiltown and Ballytreat are the chief seats of the parish.

KILRANELAGH, a par. in the bar. of Upper Talbotstown, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles E. of Baltinglass, its post town. The par. is 3 miles long, and in some places nearly as much broad. The surface has much mountain and moor, attaining an altitude of 2,155 feet at Mount Cadeen. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. with Killigan, £316, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Rathvilly and Tinnock. There are four day schools. Fort Granite, Ballinroan, and Kilranelagh are the principal residences of the parish. Granite and stone slate occur among the rocks, and potter's clay is found.

KILRAVOCK CASTLE, 6 miles S.W. of Nairn, co. Nairn, is an ancient residence situated on an eminence near the river Nairn. It has been in possession of the family of Rose of Kilravock since the 13th century. Portions of it are said to have been designed by the celebrated Inigo Jones. It contains some ancient paintings and documents, which latter have been recently published by the Spalding Club. It was the birthplace of Henry Mackenzie's mother, and the heroine of "Ah! Chloris, could I now but sip."

KILREA, a par., post and market town, in the bars. of Coleraine, and Loughinsholin, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. The par. is 5 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 2 miles. The surface lies along the river Bann, and consists of land of medium quality. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £535, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two Presbyterian meeting-houses and a Roman Catholic chapel. The church was erected by the Mercers' Company. Two schools are supported out of the Erasmus Smith charity, and others by the Mercers' Company. Manor House is the principal residence. On the road from Maghera to Ballymena stands the town. It is situated on the W. bank of the Bann, which is navigable for small craft up to a point within a mile of the town. It is the property of the Mercers' Company, and consists of four chief thoroughfares and a square. A stone bridge carries the road across the river. The town contains the linen hall and market-house, police barracks, a good hotel, public schools, literary society, and savings-bank. Petty sessions are held monthly. At 1½ mile from the town are the ruins of Movanagher Castle, which form a picturesque feature in the landscape. The river abounds with trout and eels. Wednesday is market day, and a linen market is held on the fourth Wednesday in every month. Fairs are held on the second Wednesday in every month for cattle, &c.

KILREAGUE, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangarron, co. Hereford, 5 miles N. of Monmouth.

KILREE, a par. in the bar. of Kells, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Knocktopher, its post town. It is 2 miles in length and the same in breadth. The parish is crossed by the road from Dublin to Carrick-on-Suir. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Kells, £551, in the patron. of the bishop and Marquis of Ormonde alternately.

Kilree House and Chapel Izod House are the principal residences. Here is a very fine specimen of an ancient round tower, near which are some monastic ruins containing a monument to one of the Danganmores. These ruins mark the site of an abbey founded in 1176 by Geof. de Marisco, and dedicated to St. Gobban. Another object of interest is a curious stone cross, alleged to have been erected in memory of Neill Callan, King of Ireland, who was drowned in the Awnree, or King's river.

KILREEKHILL, a par. in the bar. of Leitrim, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles E.N.E. of Loughrea, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 3 broad, and is crossed by the road from Dublin to Galway. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. with Loughrea, £444. There is a Roman Catholic chapel. Dartfield is the principal residence. The Whaleys founded a monastery here, of which there are remains.

KILRENNY, a par. in the district of St. Andrew's, co. Fife, Scotland. It contains Upper Kilrenny and Nether Kilrenny, or Cellardykes. The parish is situated on the Frith of Forth, by which it is bounded on the S., and on the N. by the pars. of Carnbee, Crail, and Anstruther. Its size is about 2 miles square. It is well cultivated and has a rocky coast. The par. is in the presb. of St. Andrew's and synod of Fife. The minister's stipend is £252. The original church was given to the monks of Dryburgh by the Countess Ada, mother of Malcolm IV. and William the Lion. The present church is a modern and commodious structure; it has a manse built by J. Melvil, the Reformer. There are schools for both sexes. In this parish are Rennyhill and Innergelly, two fine mansions pleasantly situated. Coal, sandstone, and limestone are worked. Steamboat communication is carried on with Anstruther. The town of Kilrenny is situated 1 mile from Anstruther and 3 from Crail. It is a vil. and burgh of regality, and formerly returned, with St. Andrew's, Cupar, Crail, &c., one member to parliament, but was disfranchised about 25 years ago, and placed under the management of three persons of Cellardykes. The town revenue amounts to about £50. The population of the burgh in 1861 was 2,073.

KILRENNY. See KILRAINY, co. Kildare.

KILRHEDIN, or CILRHEDYN, a par. in the hunds. of Kilgerran and Elvet, cos. Pembroke and Carmarthen, 5 miles S.W. of Newcastle-Emlyn, its post town. It is situated on the river Cuch, and contains the hmlts. of Capel-Evan, Pentych, Cwmcych, Cwmforgan, and Blananllyn. There are the ruins of Kilrhedin Castle, surrounded by varied scenery. The village is considerable. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £378, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Teilo, was restored in 1855. In the churchyard is an inscribed stone with Ogham characters.

KILROAN, a par. in the bars. of Courceys and Kinsale, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S. of Kinsale, its post town. It extends over an area of 1,140 acres, and lies along the western shore of Kinsale harbour. The living is appropriate to the vicars-choral of Cork Cathedral.

KILROE, or KILMANLOE, a par. in the bar. of Duhallow, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing part of Kanturk. It is of small extent. The living is an impropriate rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne. There are three day schools in the parish.

KILROGUE, a hmlt. in the par. of Lacklagh, in the bar. of Clare, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Galway.

KILRONAN, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Waterford, its post town. It is over a mile long and barely as much broad. The surface is hilly and the soil of various quality. The road from Waterford to Stradbally traverses the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Waterford, united with Killure, which is a suspended benefice.

KILRONAN, a par. in the bar. of Glenahiry, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.S.W. of Clonmel, its post town. The par. is 6½ miles long by 4½ broad. The surface is mountainous and the soil of ordinary quality. The river Suir passes along the western boundary, and the river Nier and the road from Clonmel to Youghal traverse the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. £159. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Newcastle. There are four day schools. Kilronan House and Kilmanaham Castle are the principal residences. There are ruins of an old castle on the banks of the Suir. Copper, hornblende, and sienite are found in this district.

KILRONAN, a par. in the bar. of Boyle, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 9 miles N.E. of Boyle. Keadue is its post town. It is 5 miles long by 4 broad, and contains the vils. of Keadue and Ballyfarnon. The surface, which is partly mountainous and boggy, comprises portions of loughs Allen and Meelagh. The interior is traversed by the road from Leitrim to Sligo. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardagh, val. £134, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1788. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, a Sunday and six day schools. Kilronan Castle is the principal seat. In the burial-ground of the old church, now in ruins, lie the remains of Carolan, the composer, who died at Alderford in 1741. Sandstone and limestone are worked, and coal, and iron are also found.

KILRONAN. a vil. in the Island of Aranmore, co. Galway, Ireland. From a hill near the village, on a clear day, Hy Brysail, the paradise of the ancient Irish, is visible.

KILROOT, a par. in the bar. of Lower Belfast, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles E.N.E. of Carrickfergus, its post town. It is a station on the Belfast and Larne railway. The par. is 2½ miles long by 1½ mile broad. The parish lies at a short distance E. of Lough Mourne, and is traversed by the road from Belfast to Larne. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Connor, val. with Ballinure, £248, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Sunday and two day schools. Kilroot House and Castle Dobbs are the principal residences. The living was held by Swift for some time. Columnar, basalt, and limestone, are the prevailing rocks. Here is a police station. General Thurot selected this spot for the landing of his troops in 1760.

KILROSS, a par. in the bar. of Tirerrill, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles E.N.E. of Colooney, its post town. The par. is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface is partly mountainous, and comprises Lough Dargan, and part of Lough Ballylawley. It is traversed by the road from Sligo to Keadue. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with Boyle, £288, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballinakill. There are three day schools. Castle Dargan is the principal seat, and near it stand some old ruins. A house for Premonstratensian canons was established here in the 13th century.

KILROSSANTY, a par. in the bar. of Decies-without-Drum, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles W.S.W. of Kilmacthomas, its post town. It is 7 miles long by 4 broad. The surface is chiefly mountainous, comprising parts of the Commeragh and Monovoulagh mountains. The interior is intersected by the road from Waterford to Cork. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. £474, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits, and from John Palliser. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Fews. There is a meeting-house of the Irish Evangelical Society; also two National and two other day schools.

KILRUANE, a par. in the bars. of Lower and Upper Ormond, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Nenagh. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad, and includes several small detached portions. The soil is mostly good. The road from Birr to Limerick traverses the parish. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. £167, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1822. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Ardcrony and Modern. There is a day school. Clermont and South-hill are among the chief residences.

KILRUDDERY, a hmlt. in the bar. of Rathdown, co. Wicklow, Ireland, 4 miles from Bray, and 14 S. of Dublin. It has a natural theatre formed in the grounds of the seat of the Earl of Meath.

KILRUSH, a par., post, and market town in the bar. of Moyarta, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The par. is 5 miles long by 4 broad, and extends along the N. shore of the Shannon's mouth. The prevailing character of the surface is flat and boggy. The living is a rect. and vic., the former, val. £180, in the patron. of the trustees of the late Marquis of Thomond, and the latter, val. £350, in the patron. of the bishop, in the dioc. of Killaloe. The church was built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1819. It is a commodious building. There are, besides a Roman Catholic chapel, a Wesleyan Methodist meeting-house, and several day schools. Situated on an excellent harbour stands the town, 176 miles S.W. of Dublin, 117 N.W. of Cork, and 10 E.S.E. of Kilkee. It is an improving place, consisting of one principal street, running E. and W., and several subordinate thoroughfares. It is well paved and has a market-square. The pier is substantially built and conveniently arranged for the constant steamboat traffic from and to Limerick. It contains two good hotels for the accommodation of visitors, being a rather favourite summer retreat. Also a market house, police station, coastguard station, custom house, bridewell, and two banks. The fisheries are pretty extensive, and quantities of turf are shipped, which is procured from a neighbouring and extensive turbury. In the environs are Kilrush House, the seat of the lord of the manor, Colonel Vandeleur, and Mount Pleasant. About two miles from the town is a celebrated chalybeate spring. Near the church are the ruins of the old parish church, and at Mallagha the remains of a chapel, said to have been built by St. Senan. General sessions are held in January, April, July, and October; and petty sessions once a week. It gives name to a Poor-law Union, containing thirteen electoral divisions in the county of Clare. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on the 10th May, 4th July, and 12th October.

KILRUSH, a par. in the bar. of West Offaly, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Kildare. Kilcullen is its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface comprises some bog, and is intersected by the road from Athy to Kilcullenbridge. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with Ballyshannon, £347, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. Kilbeggan is the chief seat. Battlemount was the scene of Ormonde's signal victory over the rebels, under Lord Mountgarret, in 1642. An Austin friary was founded here in the 13th century by William de Mareschal.

KILRUSH, an ancient par. now joined to Clomantagh, co. Kilkenny, Ireland.

KILRUSH, a par. in the bar. of Decies-without-Drum, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, near Dungarvan, its post town. It is about 1½ mile in length and the same in breadth. The soil is mostly good. The road from Dungarvan to Cork passes through the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. £520, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in ruins. Springmount is the principal seat.

KILRUSH, a par. in the bar. of Scarewalsh, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile S.E. of Newtownberry. Ferns is its post town. It is nearly 4 miles square, and contains the vil. of Clohamon. The soil is generally good. The river Slaney flows through the W. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £514, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a church, Roman Catholic chapel, and two day schools. Woodfield is the seat of Lord Farnham.

KILSALLAGHAN, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Nethercross, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles N.N.W. of Dublin. The par. is 2½ miles long by 1½ mile broad. The soil is generally good. The road from Dublin to Drogheda passes through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £200, in the patron. of the crown. The church was erected by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1811. There are two day schools. Thorntown, Kilcoskan, Newburn, and Corstown, are the chief residences. Here are ruins of an old church and castle, and traces of ancient forts.

KILSARAN, a par. in the bar. of Ardee, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile S. of Castle-Bellingham, its post town. The par. is 2½ miles in length and the same in breadth, and contains the vil. of Greenmount. The surface lies near Dundalk Bay. It consists chiefly of good land, and is crossed by the road from Dublin to Belfast. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. with others, £394. The church is modern. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Strabannon. There are four day schools. Kilsaran House is the chief residence. A commandery of Knights Templars was founded here, in the 12th century, by Maud de Lacy.

KILSBY, a par. in the hund. of Fawsley, co. Northampton, 5½ miles N.W. of Daventry. Rugby is its post town. It is situated on the Oxford canal. The London and North-Western railway passes through the parish, and has a tunnel nearly 1½ mile in length. The old Roman way Watling Street passes to the W. of the village. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The surface is hilly, and a considerable portion of the parish is rich grazing land. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1777. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £116, in the patron. of the Precentor of Lincoln Cathedral. The church, dedicated to St. Faith, has a tower crowned by a spire, and contains four bells. The charities produce about £10 per annum, a portion of which is appropriated for ecclesiastical purposes. The Independents have a chapel, and there are National and Sunday schools. Courts leet and baron, and a customary court, are held annually. Henry Arnold, Richard Lee, and Thomas Orton Gevy, Esqs., are lords of the manor.

KILSCANLAN, a par. in the bar. of Bantry, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of New Ross, its post town. It is 2½ miles long by 1 mile broad. The soil is mostly good, and the road from New Ross to Taghmon traverses the interior. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with St. Mary's, New Ross, £864, in the patron. of the bishop.

KILSCANNELL, a par. in the bar. of Lower Connello, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles W.S.W. of Rathkeale, its post town. The par. is 2 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The soil is in general good. The surface is crossed by the road from Rathkeale to Newcastle. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £63. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1823. There are a Methodist meeting-house and a day school. Kilsconnell House is the principal seat.

KILSCORAN, a par. in the bar. of Forth, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles E.S.E. of Killinick. Broadway is its post town. The par. is nearly 2 miles in length and the same in breadth. It lies on the sea-coast near Greenore Point. The road from Broadway to Wexford passes through the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Tacumshane, £789, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1817. There are a Sunday and a day school. Hill Castle is the chief seat.

KILSEILY, a par. in the bar. of Lower Tulla, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing Broadford, its post town. The par. is 5 miles long by 3 broad, and comprises part of Lough Doon. The surface is mountainous and boggy. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with two others, £235, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1810. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Killokennedy. There are four day schools. Hurdlestown and Violet Hill are the principal residences. In the vicinity are ruins of a church and castle, also traces of forts. Slate and building stone can be obtained.

KILSHALVY, a par. in the bar. of Corran, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Ballymote. Boyle is its post town. It is 4½ miles long by 1½ mile broad. The soil is mostly good. The Owenmore and Black are streams traversing the interior, which is also crossed by the road from Ballymote to Ballaghaderreen. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Achonry, val. with Killaraght, £404, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilfree. There is a National school.

KILSHANAHAN, or BALLINAULTIG, a par. in the bar. of Barrymore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, near Watergrassmill. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, val. with Killaspugmullane, £522, in the patron. of the bishop.

KILSHANE, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles E.S.E. of Tipperary. It is 1½ mile in length and the same in breadth. The surface is watered by the Tipperary river. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Emly. Spring House and Kilshane are the principal residences. There is a mineral spring in the neighbourhood. Limestone and building stone are obtainable.

KILSHANNIG, a par. in the bar. of Duhallow, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Mallow, its post town. It is 7 miles long by 6 broad, and contains part of the vil. of Glantane. The soil is generally good. The river Blackwater passes through the parish. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £561, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a church, built in 1719, two Roman Catholic chapels, three Sunday and numerous day schools. Dromore is one among the numerous seats which adorn this district. Dromineen Castle, formerly of the O'Callaghans, is an interesting ruin standing on the banks of the Blackwater.

KILSHANNY, a par. in the bar. of Corcomroe, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Ennistimon, its post town. The par. is 3 miles in length and the same in breadth. The surface is flat, with a considerable proportion of bog and waste. It comprises part of Lough Goller. The road from Ennistimon to Kilfenora traverses the interior. There is a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Kilfenora, and two day schools. Streamlet Lodge is the chief residence. Here is a cell to Corcomroe Abbey. Remains of the old church are seen, with some castle ruins and traces of forts.

KILSHARVAN, a par. in the bars. of Lower and Upper Duleek, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Drogheda, its post town. The par. is 2 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The soil is good, and is drained towards the E. by the Nanny-water. The living is a vic. with Colp, in the dioc. of Meath, val. £131. Kilsharvan House is the chief residence. There are ruins of the ancient church. Limestone abounds.

KILSHEELAN, a par. and vil. partly in the bar. of East Iffa and Offa, co. Tipperary, and partly in the bar. of Upper Third, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Carrick-on-Suir, and 12 from Waterford. Newross is its post town. It is a station on the Waterford and Limerick railway. The surface is bisected by the river Suir, and the road from Clonmel to Waterford, upon which stands the village, passes through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. £184. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Kilgrant and Kilcash. There are two day schools. Gurteen is the principal seat. Here is a police station and a dispensary, which is within the Clonmel Poor-law Union. Sandstone is the prevailing rock.

KILSHENANE, a par. in the bar. of Clanmaurice, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Listowel, its post town. The surface is hilly, and a great part unenclosed. Part of the Knockandirit Mountain is within the limits. The river Feale flows in the vicinity. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Kilflyn, £271. Coal exists, but is not worked.

KILSHINE, a par. in the bar. of Morgallion, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Nobber. Navan is its post town. It is 3 miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface is traversed by the road from Nobber to Navan. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Clongill, £219, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church was built by means of a donation from the late Board of First Fruits in 1812. There is a day school. Kilshine House and Mountainstown are demesnes occupying a considerable proportion of the surface.

KILSHRULEY, a demesne in the bar. of Granard, co. Longford, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Edgeworthstown. It is situated near the river Camlin.

KILSILLAGH, a par. in the bar. of Ibane, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles E.S.E. of Clonakilty, its post town. It is half a mile in length, and the same in breadth. The par. lies between the bays of Clonakilty and Courtmacsherry. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ross, val. with Lislee, £500, in the patron. of the bishop.

KILSKEER, a par. in the bar. of Upper Kells, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing Crossakeel, its post town. The par. is 6 miles long by 3 broad. The soil is partly good. The road from Dublin to Killeshandra traverses the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £383, in the patron. of the crown. The church was built principally by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballinlough. There are two National schools, and a day school assisted by the Erasmus Smith charity. Newgrove is the chief seat. There are some remains of an abbey, said to have been founded in the 6th century.

KILSKEERY, a par. in the bar. of Omagh, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 7 miles S.W. of Fintona. Enniskillen is its post town. The par. is 7 miles long by 4 broad, and contains the vil. of Trillick. The surface is hilly, and consists of indifferent soil. It comprises two small lakes, and is crossed by the road from Enniskillen to Fintona. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Clogher, val. £886, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a modern structure. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a Methodist meeting-house, six Sunday and several daily schools. The principal seats are Kilskeery House, Derryallen House, Corkhill Lodge.

KILSPINDIE, a par. in the Gowrie district of the co. Perth, Scotland, 5 miles N.E. of Perth. It is situated in the Carse of Gowrie, near the Dundee and Perth line of railway. It includes the vils. of Kilspindie, Kait (post-office), and Pitrodie. This par. is in the presb. of Perth, and synod of Perth and Stirling. The minister's stipend is £225. The church, which is a plain modern structure, is situated in the vil. of Kilspindie. The pars. of Kilspindie and Kait were united early in the 17th century. The ruins of Kait church are still visible. It was here that the mother of Sir William Wallace found refuge, and whence Wallace went to attend school at Dundee. The glens and lower grounds are exceedingly productive, but the upper districts are heathy and barren.

KILSUB. See BAWNBOY, co. Cavan.

KILSYRE. See KILSKEER, co. Meath.

KILSYTH, a par. in the co. Stirling, Scotland. It is bounded by the co. Dumbarton on the S., and on the other sides by the pars. of Fintry, Denny, Campsie, and St. Ninian's. It is traversed along its southern border by the N. road from Stirling to Glasgow. Croy and Castlecary, on the Edinburgh and Glasgow line, are its nearest railway stations. The par. is in the presb. of Glasgow, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister's stipend is £271, in the patron. of the crown. The church is a commodious structure, containing tombs of the Livingstone family, who forfeited the title of Viscount Kilsyth in 1715. The United Presbyterians, Free Church, Wesleyan Methodists, and Independents, have each a place of worship. There are several schools. The surface is hilly, the Kilsyth hills rising from 1,000 to 1,368 feet above sea level. From the loftiest peak is a view over sixteen counties, from sea to sea. Several springs rise in different parts of the district, which form numerous streamlets, and drive a vast amount of machinery. Here the Forth and Clyde canal has a reservoir, which occupies the site of the battle fought in 1645 between the Covenanters and Montrose, which ended in the defeat of the former. There are many circular forts, termed chesters, two Roman camps, and two Pictish forts. Of the latter, that at Balcastle is considered the most entire work of the kind in Scotland. Here are mines, from which the Carron Company extract many thousand tons of iron yearly, several extensive collieries, and quarries of freestone and whinstone. In the mountains porphyry, agates, and yellow jasper are found. Weaving and paper-making are carried on here. This parish claims to have introduced into Scotland the cultivation of the potato. The town of Kilsyth was erected into a burgh of barony in 1826. It is situated 12½ miles N.E. of Glasgow, and 15 S. of Stirling. It is chiefly occupied by weavers. It is well built, and lighted with gas. The Western Bank of Scotland has a branch here, and there is a savings-bank. Fairs are held on the second Friday in April, and the third Friday in November. There is also a cattle show in June.

KILTALE, a par. in the bar. of Lower Deece, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles W.N.W. of Dunshaughlin. Derrypark is its post town. It is a little over 1 mile in length and the same in breadth. The soil is of prime quality. The road from Dublin to Trim infringes on the southern border. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Knockmark, £291, in the patron. of the crown. There is a hedge-school.

KILTALLAGH, a par. in the bar. of Trughanacmy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Miltown, its post town. The par. is 2 miles long and 1½ broad, and contains the town of Castlemaine. The surface lies along the bank of the river Maine. It is mountainous and boggy, including part of the Slieve Nish mountain. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with three others, £410, in the patron. of the crown. The church was erected by aid of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There is a Roman Catholic chapel and four or five day schools. Laharun is one of the principal residences.

KILTAMAGH, a post-office vil. in the par. of Killedan, in the bar. of Gallen, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 7 miles S.S.W. of Swineford. Here is a dispensary within the Swineford Poor-law Union.

KILTARLITY, an extensive highland par. in co. Inverness, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Beauly. It is situated on the river Beauly, and includes Conveth, Caplach, Mayne, &c. It extends about 30 miles in length and 6 in breadth, occupying nearly 92,000 Scotch acres. It is in the presb. of Inverness and synod of Moray. The minister's stipend is £239. The church is a modern and commodious structure. There is a Free church at Kiltarlity, and a Free Church preaching station at Strathglass. At Eskadale is a Roman Catholic chapel. There are several schools for both sexes. In this district are several lakes, well stored with salmon, trout, &c. The surface, which is mountainous, is mostly covered with wood, heath, and extensive mosses. Game is very abundant. In the parish churchyard are the remains of a Druidical temple, and there are five others within a mile of it. Two miles N.W. of the church is a circular vitrified fort called Dun Fionn, or Fingal's Fort, 60 yards in circumference. It crowns the summit of a conical hill accessible only on the E. The ruins of Castle Spynnie occupy the crest of a hill 700 feet high. Its walls are built of stone without cement. Beaufort Castle occupies an eminence, rising from the river Beauly. It is built on the site of Beaufort, or Dunie fortress, which, in the reign of Alexander I., sustained a regular siege by the troops of Edward of England.

KILTARTAN, a bar. in co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. Its boundaries are Galway Bay on the N., Loughrea on the E., and co. Clare on the S. and W. Its extreme length is 16 miles and its breadth 8. It contains the pars. of Beagh, Kilbeacanty, Killinny, Kilmacduagh, Kiltartan, Kinvarradoorus, and parts of Ardrahan and Kilthomas, with the town of Gort. It gives title to Viscount Gort, of Loughcooter.

KILTARTAN, a par. in the above bar., 4 miles long by two broad. It contains part of the town of Gort, its post town. The surface is hilly and the soil of medium quality. The road from Gort to Galway passes through the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kilmacduagh, val. with Kilmacduagh, £522, in the patron. of the crown. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Gort and Kilmacduagh. There are three day schools. Coole Park is the chief seat. Here are ruins of two churches and of an old castle. Marble and limestone can be obtained.

KILTEALE, a par. in the bars. of East Maryborough and Stradbally, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Stradbally its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2½ broad. The surface is hilly and heathy. It is crossed by the road from Stradbally to Portarlington. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. with Tecolme, £250, in the patron. of the bishop. Near here is the rock and castle of Dunamase.

KILTEARN, a par. in the cos. of Ross and Cromarty, Scotland, 6 miles N.E. of Dingwall. It is situated on the Cromarty Frith and river Skiack, the latter being formed by the union of several mountain streams. The par., formerly a vic., is in the presb. of Dingwall and synod of Ross. The minister's stipend is £249, in the patron. of the crown. The church contains tombs of the Munros of Fowlis. The Free Church has a place of worship here. Coal, iron, and lead are found here, but obstacles exist in working them. There are mills of various descriptions in the neighbourhood. The surface is cultivated near the coast, but hilly in other parts. Ben Uaish or Wyvis Point is the highest, being 3,720 feet above the level of the sea, and capped with snow during all the year. There are five old chapels and burying places. Not long since there was a Druidical circle of stones here, but they have been removed in the progress of agriculture.

KILTEEL, a par. and vil. in the bar. of South Salt, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Naas, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The soil is generally good. The road from Ballymore Eustace to Rathcoole traverses the interior, upon which road stands the village. The living is a vic. with Kilbride, val. £75, in the patron. of the archbishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Rathmore and Kilbride. Whitefort is the principal seat. Here are ruins of Kilteel Castle, also vestiges of an abbey where numerous relics have been brought to light. Fairs are held on 1st May, 24th June, 29th September, and 2nd November.

KILTEELY, a par. and vil. in the bars. of Smallcounty and Coonagh, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.S.W. of Pallasgrean. The par. is 2½ miles long by 1½ broad. The soil is good. The interior is traversed by the road from Pallasgrean to Bruff, on which stands the village. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Emly, val. with Ballybrood, £429, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Dromkeen. There are two day schools and a police station. Kildromin church was built by and belonged to the Knights Templars in 1291. Basalt and limestone occur. Fairs are held on 1st February, 1st June, and 25th October.

KILTEERY, a harbour in the bar. of Shanid, co. Limerick, Ireland. It is situated in the Shannon.

KILTEEVAN, a par. in the bar. of South Ballintober, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles E. of Roscommon. Castlerea is its post town. It is 4 miles long by 3 broad, and contains part of Lough Ree. The surface is very boggy, and is traversed by the road from Roscommon to Lanesborough. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with Roscommon, £203, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two day schools. Kilteevan House is the chief seat of the neighbourhood.

KILTEEVOGE, a par. in the bar. of Raphoe, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Stranorlar, its post town. The par. is 8½ miles long by 7½ broad. The surface lies along the banks of the river Finn. It is mountainous and boggy, and is crossed by the road from Strabane to Dunglo. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Raphoe, in the patron. of the Rector of Stranorlar. The church is modern. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Stranorlar. There are a Sunday and four or five daily schools. Cloghan Lodge is the seat of Sir T. Style, Bart.

KILTEGAN, or KILTIGAN, a par. and post-office vil. partly in the bar. of Rathvilly, co. Carlow, and partly in the bars. of Upper Talbotstown and South Ballinacor, co. Wicklow, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Hacketstown. The par. is 6 miles long by 4 broad. The surface is mountainous, the chief summits being Ballinabarny Gap, Slieveragh, and Carrig. The road from Hacketstown to Baltinglass touches the S.W. border of the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. with another, £316, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church was built by means of the late Board of First Fruits in 1826. There are seven day schools. Humewood and High Park are the principal residences. There is a police station in the village. In the vicinity are remains of ancient raths.

KILTEGAN, a par. in the bar. of E. Iffa and Offa, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Clonmel, its post town. It is 2 miles long and not a mile in breadth. The soil is good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with Donaghmore, £202, in the patron. of the bishop. Summerville is the chief residence.

KILTENANLEA, a par. in the bar. of Lower Tulla, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of O'Briensbridge. Cloonlara is its post town. The par. is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The surface lies along the bank of the Shannon, which has a fall at Doonass. The interior is crossed by the Limerick and Killaloe canal and by coach road. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Killokennedy, £345, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1782, and enlarged in 1829. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Killokennedy. There are four day schools. There are numerous seats in the vicinity.

KILTENNEL, a par. in the bar. of East Idrone, co. Carlow, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles E.N.E. of Borris. The par. is 5 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 4 miles. It contains its post town, Killedmond. The surface is very mountainous, the principal summits being Mount Leinster, Knockroe, Tomduff, and Ninestones. The parish is crossed by the road from Borris to Enniscorthy. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £243, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is at Killedmond. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and five day schools. Brooklodge is the chief seat.

KILTENNELL, a par. in the bar. of Ballaghkeen, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles E. of Gorey, its post town. It is 3¾ miles long by 1½ mile broad. It lies near the coast and the river Owenawnagh. The soil is indifferent. Tara Hill is the most elevated ground. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £132. The church is near a century old. There are a Sunday and two or three daily schools. Courtown is the seat of the Earl of Courtown. There is a police station in the village. The fishing trade is carried on by many of the inhabitants.

KILTESKILL, a par. in the bars. of Leitrim and Loughrea, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Loughrea, its post town. It is 3¼ miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface is mountainous, comprising part of the Slieve Baughty mountains. The interior is traversed by the road from Loughrea to Scarriff. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. with Loughrea, £444. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Killeenadeema.

KILTHOMAS, a par. in the bars. of Kiltartan and Loughrea, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Gort, its post town. It is 5½ miles long by 2½ broad. It comprises part of the Slieve Baughty mountains and Lough Coy. It is crossed by the road from Gort to Portumna. The living is a vic. with Killinane, in the dioc. of Kilmacduagh, val. £452, in the patron. of the Marquis of Clanricarde and the bishop alternately. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, also two day schools. Lime Park is the principal residence.

KILTHRIEW, a tnshp. in the par. of Kerry, co. Montgomery, 2 miles E. of Newtown.

KILTIERNAN, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Rathdown, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles S.S.E. of Dublin. The par. is 3 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface consists of a part of the country lying near the Three Rock Mountain and the Scalp Pass. The parish is crossed by the road from Dublin to Enniskerry. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with another, £190, in the patron. of the archbishop and archdeacon. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1826. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, also two or three daily schools. Kiltiernan House and Glencullen are the chief residences. Lead is worked near the village.

KILTIGAN. See KILTEGAN, cos. Carlow and Wicklow.

KILTINAN, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Fethard, its post town. It is 3 miles in length, and the same in breadth. The surface lies along the banks of the river Anner. It is mountainous in the eastern portion, comprising a portion of the Slievenaman range. It is intersected by the road from Clonmel to Cloneen. The church is in ruins. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a day-school. Kiltinan House is a mansion occupying the site of the old castle.

KILTOGHERT, a par. in the bar. of Leitrim, co. Leitrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing the vils. of Jamestown, Leitrim, Drumshanbo, and part of its post town, Carrick-on-Shannon. The par. is 11 miles long by 1½ mile broad. It comprises a part of Lough Allen, and some minor expansions of the Shannon. It is mountainous in the northern portion, where Slieve-an-Erin rises to the height of 1,922 feet. The road from Drumshambo to Drumsna passes through the parish, and on it stands the village of Kiltoghert. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardagh, val. £631, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is at Carrick-on-Shannon. It was built in 1827, partly by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and numerous day schools. Castlecarrow is the chief seat.

KILTOMY, a par. in the bar. of Clanmaurice, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles S.W. of Listowel, its post town. The par. contains part of the vil. of Lixnaw. The surface is mountainous and boggy. It is traversed by the river Brick, and the road from Listowel to Ardfert. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Kilflyn, £271. In the old parish church was the family tomb of the Fitzmaurices.

KILTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Brotton, E. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 6 miles N.E. of Guisborough, its post town. There are some traces of a castle, which formerly belonged to the Thweng family. Thomas Wharton, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

KILTON, a par. in the hund. of Williton, co. Somerset, 12 miles N.W. of Bridgwater, its post town, 6 N.E. of Watchet, and 7 N.E. of Williton station, on the West Somerset railway. The village is small, and situated on the coast. The soil is of various qualities, some parts being profitable arable land, the rest waste, chiefly adjoining the Quantock hills. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £189. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a small edifice with a square tower containing four bells. There is a small parochial school for children of both sexes. Henry Fownes Luttrell, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

KILTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Worksop, co. Notts, 2 miles N.E. of Worksop. It is situated on the Chesterfield canal.

KILTOOM, a par. in the bar. of Athlone, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles N.N.W. of Athlone, its post town. The par. is a little over 4 miles in length and the same in breadth. It comprises part of Lough Ree and the waters of the river Shannon. The surface, which is flat, is crossed by the road from Athlone to Roscommon. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with another, £192, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is modern. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Camma. There is a hedge-school, two National and several other day schools. Newpark is the chief seat. There are two police stations in the parish.

KILTOOM, a hmlt. in the bar. of Fore, co. Westmeath, Ireland, near Castlepollard.

KILTORAGHT, a par. in the bar. of Corcomroe, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Kilfenora. Carofin is its post town. The par. is 2½ miles long by 2 broad. The surface consists of hilly pasture, with bog, and some good arable soil. It is traversed by the road from Kilfenora to Ennis. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilfenora, val. with another, £74, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is little better than a ruin. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Clonney. There are a hedge-school and four day schools.

KILTORKIN, an ancient par. now joined to Knocktopher, co. Kilkenny.

KILTORMER, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Longford, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles W.N.W. of Eyrecourt. The par. is 4½ miles long by 2½ broad. The surface is flat and boggy. It is crossed by the road from Eyrecourt to Loughrea. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. with two others, £246, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by aid of the late Board of First Fruits in 1814. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, also three day schools. Eyreville is the chief seat. There is a police station in the village.

KILTORMER-KELLY, a demesne in the par. of Kiltormer, as above. It belongs to the Kelly family. Fairs are held here on the 17th February, May, August, and November.

KILTRELLIG, a vil. in the bar. of Moyarta, co. Clare, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Carrigiholt. It is situated on Kilbaha Bay.

KILTRISK, a par. in the bars. of Ballaghkeen and Gorey, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Oulart. Gorey is its post town. It is 3 miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface is all under tillage, and is drained towards the N. by the river Owenwarogh. The Blackwater and Ford road crosses the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Leskinfere, £655, in the patron. of the bishop. Edendale is the chief residence of the neighbourhood.

KILTRUSTAN, a par. in the bar. of Roscommon, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing part of its post town, Strokestown. The par. is 4 miles long by 3 broad. It is crossed by the road from Strokestown to Elphin. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with Bumlin, £423, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and four day schools. Creta is the principal residence. There are some abbey ruins, also remains of a castle formerly belonging to O'Connor Roe. Lead and potter's clay are found.

KILTUBBRID, a par. in the bar. of Leitrim, co. Leitrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles E.S.E. of Drumshambo, containing part of Keshcarrigan, its post town. Its greatest length is 6½ miles, and its breadth 3½. The surface is partly mountainous, and comprises Lough Scur and several other minor lakes. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardagh, val. £435, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1788. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, also four day schools. Letterfine and Driney are the chief residences. There is a dispensary within the Carrick-on-Shannon Poor-law Union. Two old castles are seen near Lough Scur, which formerly belonged to the Reynold family, also a sun altar. Iron, coal, and potter's clay are the chief mineral productions.

KILTULLAGH, a par. in the bars. of Athenry and Kilconnell, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles E.S.E. of Athenry, its post town. It is 5 miles long by 2½ broad. The soil is generally good, and is drained by the Raford stream. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. with Kilconickny, £310, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Killimore-Daly. There are a Roman Catholic Sunday-school and two daily schools. Kiltullagh House is the chief seat. Here is a dispensary within the Loughrea Poor-law Union. A cell to a Franciscan abbey was founded here in the early part of the 15th century. Traces of a castle and some church ruins are seen.

KILTULLAGH, a par. in the bar. of Castlereagh, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles W.S.W. of Castlereagh, its post town. It is 9 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 5 miles. It includes the vil. of Ballinlough. The surface is partly mountainous, and is crossed by the road from Castlereagh to Tuam. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with others, £624, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is at Ballinlough. It was built in 1824. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and several day schools. Willsborough is the chief seat.

KILTURK, a par. in the bar. of Bargy, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.S.E. of Bridgetown. Broadway is its post town. The par. is 2½ miles long by 1½ mile broad. The soil is good. Part of Lough Tacumshane is within the limits of this parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Tomhaggard, £350, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was a gift to the parish from the late Board of First Fruits in 1808. There is a hedge-school. Woodville is the chief seat. In the vicinity are remains of an old castle.

KILTURRA, a par. partly in the bar. of Costello, co. Mayo, and partly in the bar. of Corran, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles E.S.E. of Tobercurry. Ballymote is its post town. It is 3½ miles long by 2½ broad. The surface possesses no striking feature. It is crossed by the road from Ballymote to Ballaghdaerreen. The soil is rich. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Achonry, val. with Emlyfadd, £562, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two hedge-schools. Doo Castle is the only noticeable residence. Traces of raths occur on the hills.

KILTYCLOGHER, a post-office and market village in the par. of Cloonclare, bar. of Rossclogher, co. Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Manor-Hamilton. It is situated near the Glenfarne hills. There is a police station. Friday is market day. Fairs are held on the 14th of every month.

KILTIMON, a demesne in the par. of Newcastle, co. Wicklow, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Newtown-Mount, or Kennedy, or 6 N. of Wicklow. It lies near the river Leabeg, and gives name to Kiltimon Glen.

KILULTA, a demesne once part of Claneboy, in cos. Antrim and Down, Ireland. It conferred the title of viscount on the earls Conway.

KILVARNET, a par. in the bar. of Leyny, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Ballymote. It is 5 miles long by 2½ broad. The surface is boggy, and comprises portions of Templehouse Lough and Finn Lough. The river Owenmore flows round the eastern border. It is traversed by the road from Ballymote to Coolaney. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Achonry, val. with Killoran, £388, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballyrodan. There are several day schools. Annaghmore and Temple House are the principal residences in the parish. A preceptory of Knights Templars, or Drumabradh, was established here, of which there are still remains.

KILVE, a par. in the hund. of Williton, co. Somerset, 12 miles N.W. of Bridgwater, its post town, 4 miles E. of Watchet, and 5 N.E. of Williton station, on the West Somerset railway. The parish, which is small, is bounded on the N. by the Bristol Channel, and the turnpike road from Bridgwater to Minehead passes through it. The soil is various. The West Somerset hounds are kennelled here. Limestone is extensively quarried for burning into lime. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £211 10s. The living is a rect.* united with the vic. of Stringston, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £642, in the patron. of Balliol College. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small structure with a square tower containing three bells. The church has recently been restored. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes, also a place of worship for the Independents. Near the church, at a farm, are the remains of an ancient priory, or chantry, founded by Simon-de-Fourneaux. J. H. Sweeting, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KILVELLANE, a par. in the bar. of Owney and Arra, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing its post town, Newport Tip. The par. is 6½ miles long, and its greatest breadth is 3 miles. The surface, which is boggy, is drained on the S. by the river Clare. The Mulkern is a stream flowing through the western district. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Newport, £822, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is near a century old. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Kilnerath and Kilcomenty. There are seven or eight day schools. Barnee is the principal residence. In the vicinity are ruins of Derryleigh Castle, and of an old church. Building stone and copper ore are obtainable.

KILVEMNON, a par. in the bar. of Slievardagh, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles E.N.E. of Fethard, containing Mullinahone, its post town. The parish is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The surface is chiefly arable land. It is traversed by the road from Dublin to Clonmel, and by the river Anner. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. £514, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected at the expense of the parish in 1772. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and five day schools. Killaghy Castle and Gurteen are the chief residences—the former was taken by Cromwell.

KILVERSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Shropham, co. Norfolk, 2 miles N.E. of Thetford, its post town and station, on the Norwich section of the Great Eastern line of railway. The parish is small, and situated on a branch of the river Little Ouse. It formerly belonged to the Cornwallises. The soil is sandy, and the district abounds with game. A third of the parish is in sheepwalks, the remainder arable and plantation. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £140. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £140. The church is a very ancient Norman edifice with a round tower, and contains several monuments of the White family. Near to the church is Kilverstone Hall, situated in an extensive park, which is bounded on the W. by a wall of many miles in length. Some years ago, while deepening the channel of the river, the foundations of a bridge and several Roman antiquities were discovered.

KILVEY, a chplry. in the par. of Llansamlet, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles from Swansea. The living is a cur. annexed to Llansamlet.

KILVICKEON, an ancient par. in the district of Mull, co. Argyle, Scotland, now joined to Kilfinichen.

KILVINE, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Clanmorris, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 7 miles S.E. of Clare. It is 3¼ miles long by 2½ broad. The surface is boggy. The Dalgan stream flows within a short distance. The interior is crossed by the road from Tuam to Ballyhaunis. The living is a lapsed rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Tuam, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a day school. Rockfort is the principal residence.

KILVINGTON, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Newark, co. Nottingham, 7 miles S. of Newark, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Bingham. The par., which is inconsiderable, is situated on the south-eastern border of the county, and contains part of the hmlt. of Alverton. The church rates are assessed jointly with those of Staunton. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £200, held with that of Staunton. The church, formerly dedicated to St. Mary, was situated only a quarter of a mile from that of Staunton, and has been taken down. Henry Charlton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KILVINGTON, NORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Thornton-le-Street, wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N. of the Thirsk railway station. There is a Roman Catholic chapel.

KILVINGTON, SOUTH, a par. in the wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 2½ miles N.E. of Thirsk, its post town and railway station, and 8 S.E. of Northallerton. It is situated on the road from Thirsk to Yarm, and contains the tnshps. of Thornborough and Upsall. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £511, in the patron. of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Wilfred, is an ancient edifice with a wooden tower containing two bells. In the interior is an ancient font of the time of Edward IV., on which are engraved the arms of the Scrope family, who had a castle at Upsall. There is a Roman Catholic chapel.

KILWARLIN, an ancient div. of the bar. of Lower Iveagh, co. Down, Ireland. It is situated on the river Lagan.

KILWATERMOY, a par. in the bar. of Coshmore, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Tallow, its post town. It is 3½ miles long, and about the same in breadth. The surface lies along the banks of the rivers Bride and Blackwater. The road from Tallow to Youghal passes through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with another, £221. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1830. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Templemichael and Kilcockan. There are two day schools. Moore Hall is the chief seat.

KILWAUGHTER, a par. in the bar. of Upper Glenarm, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Larne, its post town. It is 4½ miles long, and from 1 mile to 3 miles broad. The surface attains an elevation of 1,558 feet at Agnew's Hill. The road from Larne to Antrim passes through the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Connor, val. £199, in the patron. of the bishop. There are three National schools. Kilwaughter Castle is the manor house, and the only seat worthy of notice.

KILWEILAGH. See KILLALAGH, co. Westmeath.

KILWHELAN. See KILPHELAN, co. Cork.

KILWINNING, a par. in the district of Cunninghame, co. Ayr, Scotland, 3 miles N.W. of Irvine. It is situated on the rivers Garnock and Lugton, and contains the post town of Kilwinning, and the vils. of Doura, Fergushill, and Dalgarven. It is a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway, where there is a junction to Ardrossan. The par. is in the presb. of Irvine, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister's stipend is £266. The church, erected in 1775 on the site of the abbey (afterwards mentioned), is a commodious structure. Here the United Presbyterians, the United Original Secession Church, Free Church, and Morrisonians, have each a place of worship. There are several schools for both sexes throughout the parish, both in connection with the churches and the neighbouring works. Here are the remains of a Tyronensian abbey, founded in 1140 by the Constable Hugh de Morville. It was dedicated, like the church which preceded it, to St. Winning. Its last abbot was Gavin Hamilton, of the Rosslock family, a hot opponent of John Knox. In 1560 it was destroyed by order of the States General of Scotland, the church and steeple being the only portions left. The parish derives its name from St. Winning, a Scottish saint of the 8th century; and there is in the district a well still known as Winning's Well. Eglinton Castle, Monkcastle, Ashgrove, and Mountgreenar, are the principal seats. Coal, limestone, and sandstone are extensively worked in the neighbourhood. Here are the Eglinton and other iron works, as well as several corn and sawing mills. The town is situated on rising ground, and commands a view of the Frith of Clyde. It is ancient, and consists principally of one street. It contains a foundry, two banking offices, a savings-bank, and friendly societies. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in mining and weaving. At this place the practice of archery is still kept up by the inhabitants, and prizes are annually shot for. It is the seat of the most ancient masonic lodge of Scotland, which is said to have been established in the middle of the 12th century by masons employed in the erection of the abbey. Fairs are held on the 1st February, and the first Wednesday in November.

KILWORTH, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of Condons and Clangibbon, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Fermoy, 133 S.W. of Dublin, and 22 N.E. of Cork. The par. is 4 miles long by 2½ broad. It is crossed by the river Funcheon, also by the road from Cork to Dublin. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with others, £712, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient building, and was furnished with a tower in 1742. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, a National and a charity school. Moore Park is the demesne of the Earl of Mountcashel. Maryville is another seat. The town, or rather village, occupies a site on the banks of the Funcheon, which is here crossed by a stone bridge of six arches. It contains a market-house, courthouse, fever hospital, dispensary (which is within the Fermoy Poor-law Union), flax and flour mills, and a police station. Petty sessions are held every three weeks. The manor anciently belonged to the Condons, the remains of whose castle stand on the river's bank, but was wrested from that family by Cromwell, and granted to Fleetwood. The town gives title of baron to the Earl of Mountcashel. Friday is market day. Fairs are held on 25th January, 21st April, 18th June, 11th September, 21st November, and 10th December.

KILWORTH, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 5 miles S.E. of Lutterworth, 3 N.W. of Welford railway station, 8 S.W. of Market Harborough, and about the same S.E. of Rugby, its post town. It is a small village, situated on the Union canal, near the river Avon, and is a meet for the Pytchley hounds. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1765. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £567. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a rude structure, with a square tower, crowned with a spire, containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £28 per annum, chiefly the rent of 33 acres of land allotted for the repair of the church and highways. There is a National school. Sir Alexander Dixie is lord of the manor.

KILWORTH, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 9 miles S.E. of Rugby, its post town, and 2 from the Welford railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Avon, near to which are the remains of an entrenchment. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £463, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a tower, surmounted by a spire, and containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £29 per annum. There is an endowed National school.

KILYBEBYLL. See KILLYBEBYLL, co. Glamorgan.

KILYCWM. See CILYCWM, co. Carmarthen.

KILYMAEN CLWYD. See CILYMAENLLYD, co. Carmarthen.

KIMBERLEY, a par. in the hund. of Forehoe, co. Norfolk, 3½ miles N.W. of Wymondham, its post town. It is a station on the Wymondham and Dereham line. The village, which is very small, consisting of a few farmhouses, is situated on the river Yare. It formerly belonged to the Fastolffs, and passed from thence to the Woodhouses, one of whom was at the battle of Agincourt. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1776. The living is a vic.* with the rect.* of Barnham-Broom annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small edifice with a tower, crowned by a spire, and containing two bells. It was thoroughly repaired in 1835. In the interior are two stained-glass windows, also a brass to the Woodhouses. The register dates from 1753. Kimberley Hall, formerly the seat of Lord Woodhouse, is situated in an extensive park. In the hall is a portrait of Vandyck, by himself, also a necklace of the queen of Henry V. There is an endowed school, also a place of worship for Wesleyans.

KIMBERLEY, a vil. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Greasley, co. Notts, 5 miles N.W. of Nottingham. The village is chiefly inhabited by colliers and framework knitters. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £170, in the patron. of the Vicar of Greasley. The church is a plain modern edifice.

KIMBERWORTH, a tnshp. and district par. in the par. of Rotherham, North div. of the wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 2 miles W. of Rotherham, its post town, and 5 N. of Sheffield. It is situated near the river Don, on the Sheffield and Rotherham railway, and includes the tnshps. of Marborough, and several other hmlts. and tnshps. It is mentioned in Domesday as including six carucates under cultivation, with Elsy for its lord. At the Conquest it formed part of the honour of Pickhill, and was given to Roger de Busle. The substratum abounds with coal and iron ore; and there are several quarries of building stone. The iron-stone was worked at a very early period, and forges existed in 1161. The monks of Kirkstead worked the forges at Tunnocliffe as a speculation, and had a grange here. The village, which is large, is situated on an eminence, and the inhabitants are partly employed in agriculture, and in the collieries and extensive iron-works which have been established. At Holm, in this parish, are the extensive iron and steel works, where the iron bridges of Southwark, Staines, Yarm, and Sunderland, were forged. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Rotherham. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, is a modern edifice, erected in 1842, at an expense of £1,500, with a campanile turret. There are Wesleyan and Independent chapels, also endowed and National schools. In the grounds of Wentworth, the seat of Earl Fitzwilliam, has been erected a monument to the late Admiral Keppell. Grange Hall, formerly the seat of the Earl of Effingham, is the chief residence.

KIMBLE, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Aylesbury, co. Bucks, 2 miles N.E. of Prince's Risborough, and 3 S.W. of Wendover. It was anciently called Kunebel, from the British king, Cymbeline, who is supposed to have had a fortified palace here, the vestiges of which are still known as Belinus' Castle. It contains the hmlt. of Kimble Wick and Marsh. It is diversified with several hills of bold elevation, and the lowlands are watered by a brook. The village is very small, and wholly agricultural. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £171 1*s.*, and the vicarial for £150. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £107. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There is a National school. Kimble House is the residence of Sir F. B. Morland, Bart.

KIMBLE, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Aylesbury, co. Bucks, half a mile N.E. of Great Kimble, and 3 miles S.W. of Wendover. The parish is of small extent, and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £185. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has several stained windows, and was lately restored by E. Lamb, Esq.

KIMBLEWORTH, an ext. par. place, in the W. div. of the ward of Chester, co. Durham, 2 miles N. of Durham, its post town. It formerly was a distinct parish, but consists now of two or three farms. There is no village. The living, which is a rect., was united in 1593 with the perpet. cur.* of Witton Gilbert, in the dioc. of Durham. There is no church.

KIMBOLTON, a par. in the hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 2½ miles N.E. of Leominster, its railway station and post town, and 15 from Hereford. The village, which is considerable, stands on an eminence near the turnpike road leading from Leominster to Tenbury. The land is partly in hops. Here are the remains of a Roman camp. The soil is clayey. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £346. The living is a perpet. cur. united with the perpet. cur. of Middleton-on-the-Hill, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £132, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a tower containing four bells. There is a place of worship for the Primitive Methodists.

KIMBOLTON, a par., post and market town, in the hund. of Leightonstone, co. Huntingdon, 11 miles W. of Huntingdon, and 8 N. of St. Neot's. It is situated on the verge of the county, in the wooded valley of the Kym, a branch of the Ouse, and near the Great Northern railway. It was anciently called Kinnibantum, and was held by the Mandevilles, Bohuns, and others. It is now held by the Montagues, who take from it the title of baron. The town is an insignificant place, wholly dependent on agriculture and the manufacture of lace. It is governed by a constable appointed at the courts leet and baron, held under the Duke of Manchester. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower surmounted by a lofty spire. In the interior are monuments of the Wingfield and Montague families. The charities produce £168 per annum; also an almshouse, built by the inhabitants of Kimbolton. There are chapels for Moravians, Baptists, and Wesleyans. There is a grammar school, at which agricultural chemistry is taught; also parochial schools for both sexes, and an infant school. Kimbolton Castle, which was built by the Wingfields, near the site of an older mansion, is the residence of the Duke of Manchester. It is situated in a park, and is celebrated as the place where Queen Catherine of Arragon resided after her divorce from Henry VIII. The Duke of Manchester is lord of the manor. Friday is market day. Fairs are held on the Fridays in Easter and Whitsun weeks, and the Friday after Old Michaelmas day, for toys, &c., and on the 11th December for cattle; also a statute fair for the hiring of servants on the 23rd September.

KIMCOTE, a par. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 3¼ miles N.E. of Lutterworth, its post town. It contains the vil. of Walton, and the hmlt. of Cotes-de-Val; also a portion of the tnshp. of Kenaptoft. A few of the inhabitants are engaged in frame-work knitting, and the remainder in agriculture. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1778. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £566. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a square pinnacled tower containing four bells. The living was once held by Jago, the poet. The parochial charities produce about £84 per annum, of which £30 goes to Durrad's school. There is a free school, erected in 1844 at the sole expense of Lord Willoughby de Broke. There is a chapel for the Baptists. Lord Willoughby de Broke is lord of the manor.

KIMMAGE, a hmlt. in the bar. and co. of Dublin, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Dublin Castle.

KIMMERIDGE, a par. in the hund. of Hasilor, co. Dorset, 5 miles S. of Wareham, its post town, and 3½ S.W. of Corfe Castle. It is situated on Ledge Bay, near St. Alban's Head, and is a coastguard station. It formerly belonged to Cerne Abbey, and was given by Henry VIII. to the Uvedales and Clavells, who built a pier and worked the alum up to 1745. British coins have been found, called "coal money," and copperas stones are abundant on the shore. Fossil coal of a vituminous nature is found in the cliffs, which burns with a strong light and emits a sulphureous smell, but when exposed to the air splits into pieces like slate. The village is very small and wholly agricultural. The entrance to the small bay called Botteridge Pool is between two high cliffs defended by a battery. The living is a don. cur.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £100. The church is in the Norman style of architecture, with a segmental doorway. Smedmore House is the principal residence. It is an ancient mansion, and has been in the possession of the Clavell family since the reign of Edward IV. Colonel Mansel, who is a descendant of the Clavell family, is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

KIMPTON, a par. in the upper half of the hund. of Andover, co. Hants, 5 miles W. of Andover, its post town and railway station, and 3 S.E. of Ludgershall. The land is chiefly arable. The inhabitants are engaged in agriculture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £530. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £400. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has been repaired and much improved by the erection of a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a National school.

KIMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Hitchin, co. Herts. 5 miles N.W. of Welwyn railway station, 6 E. of Luton, and 8 S. of Hitchin. The inhabitants are principally engaged in agriculture, and in straw plaiting. The land is chiefly arable, with some meadow and woodland. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £688 8*s.*, and the vicarial for £449 9*s.* The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £422. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower containing six bells. The interior has been thoroughly restored and enlarged, with the addition of a N. aisle. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans; also schools for both sexes supported by Lord Dacre. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum.

KINALDIE, a vil. in the par. of Kintore, district of Garioch, co. Aberdeen, 2 miles S. of Inverury, and 11 from Aberdeen by the Great North of Scotland railway, on which it is a station.

KINALEA, a bar. in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Its boundaries are Kerry currihy on the N., Kinsale and Kinalmeaky on the W., and the Atlantic on the E. and S. It is 13 miles long by 7 broad. It contains the pars. of Ballyfeard, Ballyfoyle, Cullen, Kilmonoge, Kinure, Leighmoney, Nohaval, Templemichael, and Tracton, and parts of those of Ballinaboy, Ballymartle, Brinny, Carrigaline, Dunderrow, Inishannon, Kilpatrick, Knockavilly, and Ringcurran, with the towns and vils. of Belgoly, Minane, and Tracton.

KINALMEAKY, a bar. in co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Its boundaries are East Muskerry on the N., Kinalea on the E., and East Carbery on the S. and W. It contains the pars. of Kilbrogan, Killowen, and Templemartin, and parts of those of Ballymodan, Brinny, Desertserges, and Murragh, with part of the town of Bandon.

KINARD, a par. in the bar. of Corkaguiny. co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles E.S.E. of Dingle, its post town. The par. is 4½ miles long by 3½ broad. The surface lies along the coast, and includes Kinard Head. It is chiefly mountainous, with some bog. The living is a suspended rect. and vic., in the patron. of the bishop. There is a hedge-school.

KINARD, a demesne near Killala Bay, co. Sligo, Ireland, 7 miles S.W. of Easkry.

KINAWLEY, a par. partly in the bar. of Tullyhaw, co. Cavan, and partly in the bars. of Clanawley and Knockninny, co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing Swanlinbar, its post town. The parish, which is of large extent, comprises part of Lough Erne, with several islands. The surface is mountainous, lying near the head of the river Shannon. The Cuileagh Mountain rises to the height of 2,188 feet. The parish is crossed by the road from Enniskillen to Ballyconnel. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kilmore, val. £593, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, and several Sunday and daily schools. Prospect Hill and Mount Prospect are the chief seats.

KINBETTOCK, a par. in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, now joined to Towie.

KINBRICK, a vil. in the par. of Dunblane, co. Perth, Scotland, 2½ miles N.E. of the town of Dunblane. It is a railway station on the Scottish Central line.

KINCAIRNIE, a vil. in the par. of Caputh, co. Perth, Scotland.

KINCAPLE, a vil. in the par. of St. Andrew's, co. Fife, Scotland, 3 miles W. of the town of St. Andrew's.

KINCARDINE, or MEARNS, a maritime co. situated on the eastern side of Scotland. It is bounded on the N. by the co. Aberdeen, from which it is partly divided by the river Dee; on the S. and W. by the co. Forfar, from which it is chiefly divided by the North Esk; and on the E. by the German Ocean. Its form is nearly that of a triangle, having its base towards the sea. Its length, stretching along the coast from the bay of Aberdeen to the mouth of the river North Esk, is about 30 miles, and its greatest breadth 24 miles. The coast is partly flat and partly rocky, and at the N.E. corner of the county the chain of the Grampians terminates, there forming what is called the Girdle Ness, which presents to the sea a bold face of rock from 60 to 80 feet high.—The chief mountains and eminences are, Mount Battoch, 3,465 feet in height; Clachnabane, 2,370; Cairniemount, 2,000; Kerloch, 1,890; the Hill of Fare, from 1,500 to 1,700; Scolty Hill, 1,500; and Strathfenella, a detached spur of the Grampians, from 1,200 to 1,500 above sea level.—It is watered by the rivers Dee, North Esk, Bervie, Cowies, Carron, and Luther Water, besides numerous burns, abounding with salmon and trout. The severity of the climate in the lower districts has been of late years much mitigated by drainage and the increase of plantations. In the mountainous parts it is extremely severe in winter and spring, and frequently excessively hot in the summer months in the glens among the Grampians.—Granite abounds in the Grampian district, but the hill of Strathfenella is an isolated mass of sandstone. The prevailing rocks in the other parts are greenstone, basalt, and breccia. The county is entirely destitute of coal. Limestone is found in various parts of the district, but only in large quantities at Mathers. There are a few sandstone quarries. Iron has been discovered at Balnakettle, and there are indications of iron ore in several parts of the county. In Arbuthnot parish, and near St. Cyrus, on the seashore, beautiful pebbles and jaspers are found, and cairngorm is occasionally met with in the Grampian streams. On the coast near Stonehouse are stalactite caves. The soil varies in different parts of the county. The Grampian district is very sterile, although a rich loam is occasionally found. The Howe of Mearns district is the most cultivated portion, and consists of a loam chiefly derived from clay and gravel. The estates into which this county is divided number about 80, of which 13 are very large, and have been for many years in the same families. The arable farms are of various sizes, the largest consisting of about 500 acres. The sheep farms are in general very extensive. The county has wonderfully improved in agriculture during the last half century, and all the new improvements in husbandry have been introduced. Manure (chiefly lime) has been most liberally used, and large tracts of land have been reclaimed. This operation has greatly been facilitated by the construction of new roads. It abounds in game of almost every description, and offers great attractions to the sportsman and angler. The county is almost exclusively of an agricultural character; for although it has the advantage of an extensive coast line, there is no harbour of any commercial importance.—Manufactures have not made much progress in this district. In various parts the manufacture of coarse linen is carried on, chiefly for houses in Dundee, Aberdeen, &c., and there is also a small trade in woollen cloth. There are breweries, distilleries, and manufactories of wooden snuff boxes. The inhabitants of the villages on the coast are chiefly occupied in fishing, and large quantities of haddock, skate, herring, cod, and turbot, are taken. The exports consist of cattle, pork, eggs, butter, potatoes, granite, fish, whisky, and ale. The principal imports are, colonial produce, salt, coals, lime, slate, and timber.—The main lines of road between the N. and S. of Scotland traverse the county, extending from the bridges over the Dee to the bridge over the North Esk. The chief cross-roads are, South Deeside, Netherby, and Slug. The Aberdeen railway traverses the county from Nigg to Marykirk, and the Deeside railway runs along the Deeside district. The county sends but one member to parliament. The parliamentary constituency in 1860 was 1,028. Bervie is the only royal burgh in the county, and there are but three burghs of barony, viz. Stonehaven, Fettercairn, and Laurencekirk. The county town is Stonehaven. The meetings of the courts under the Small Debt Act are held at Banchory on the fourth Thursday in the months of March, July, and November; at Bervie on the fourth Friday in January, April, July, and October; and at Laurencekirk on the fourth Saturday in the months of March, July, and November. The chief police stations are at Stonehaven, Banchory, Laurencekirk, Maryculter, Portlethen, and Fettercairn. The area of the county is about 382 square miles, or 243,200 statute acres, and its population in 1861, 34,466. It comprises eighteen parishes and three parts of parishes. Thirteen of its parishes constitute the presbytery of Fordoun, in the synod of Angus and Mearns; and one of the parts is in the presbytery of Brechin, in the same synod; two of the parishes are in the presbytery of Kincardine O'Neil, in the synod of Aberdeen; and three of the parishes, two of the parts, and the chapel-of-ease, are in the presbytery and synod of Aberdeen. The places of worship in the county include the Established Church, United Presbyterians, Free Church, Episcopalian, Independents, Baptists, and Roman Catholics. It has not been the scene of any extraordinary event, unless, as some historians aver, the great battle between Galgacus and Agricola took place here. It received its name from Kincardine, formerly a small town in the parish of Fordoun, and which was the seat of the county courts, &c., until the year 1600, when they were transferred to Stonehaven.—On Garvock Hill and at Aquhorties are Druidical remains, and at Raedykes, Stonehaven, and Fordoun are the remains of Roman camps. Near Garvock Hill is the Sheriff's Kettle, where, in the reign of James I., the Laird of Glenbervie was boiled to death. The principal ancient castles are, Dunnottar, Kame of Mathers, Finella, Green, Kinneffe, Whistlebury, and Morphie, some being in ruins.

KINCARDINE, a vil. in the par. of Fordoun, co. Kincardine, Scotland, 4 miles W.S.W. of Auchinblae. It was the county town until James VI. removed it to Stonehaven. Formerly it possessed a church and a market cross; the latter is now at Fettercairn. Here are the ruins of Kincardine Castle, which belonged to Kenneth III.

KINCARDINE, a par. in the district of Easter Ross, partly in the co. of Ross, and partly in the co. of Cromarty, Scotland, 12 miles N.W. of Tain. It is situated on the Dornoch frith at Bonar Ferry. It is bounded by the county of Sutherland, and the pars. of Fodderty, Edderton, Lochbroom, and Rosskeen. Its length eastward is about 35 miles, and it varies in breadth from 5 to 20 miles. The par. is in the presb. of Tain and the synod of Ross. The minister's stipend is £278. There is a Free church. The quoad sacra par. of Croick is in this par. There are several schools throughout the district. The surface is hilly, affording some sheep walks. On the top of a hill at Balnagowan is a bed of shells. Cairns and duns abound in the district. White and coloured marble, and cairngorm topazes, are found in parts. Salmon fishing is carried on to a considerable extent. A great battle was fought here in the 14th century, between the Mackays and the Macleods; and at a place known as Craigcaoineadham (the Rock of Sorrow) in this parish, Colonel Strachan, in 1650, defeated the Marquis of Montrose, previous to the betrayal of the last named at Assynt. The hmlt. of Kincardine, possessing a small harbour, is situated on the coast, 2 miles S.E. of Bonar Bridge.

KINCARDINE, a par. in the district of Monteith, co. Perth, Scotland, 3 miles S. of Doune. It is situated between the rivers Forth and Teith, and contains the vils. of Woodlane, Thornhill (post-office), Kirklane, and Norriestone, and the post-office station of Blair Drummond. The par. is in the presb. of Dumblane and synod of Perth and Stirling. Its minister's stipend is £255. The church is a substantial building in the Gothic style of architecture. There is a chapel-of-ease and a Free church at Norriestone. There are several schools in the district. It has derived benefit from the recent opening of the Forth and Clyde line through Gargunnock. Its size is 5 miles by 3, comprising about 7,600 acres. The surface is carse and moss land, mostly reclaimed, interspersed with many thin beds of shell. Here are sandstone quarries. A number of Roman antiquities have been found near the line of the Roman road. In this parish are several tumuli, one called Wallace's Trench, measuring 63 yards in circumference. In 1831 a suspension bridge was erected connecting this place with Stirling. Blair Drummond is the seat of H. Drummond, Esq., M.P., who is chief heritor. This place gives the title of earl to the Duke of Montrose.

KINCARDINE, a post town and seaport in the par. of Tulliallan, co. Perth, Scotland. It is situated on the Frith of Forth at Higgins Neuk ferry, 3 miles S.S.E. of Clackmannan, and 4 W. of Culross. It is a station on the Stirling and Dunfermline line. At one period this place was known as West Pans, from the salt works here, which have long ceased to exist. It is an irregularly built town with narrow streets, and, although it has some good houses, has not on the whole a prepossessing appearance. Ship building was carried on here to a large extent at one period, but has greatly declined. Several shipowners are settled in the town. The shipping belonging to the port amounts to above 9,000 tons, and is worth about £108,000. There are distilleries, rope and sailcloth factories, and bonding warehouses. Weaving is carried on to a small extent. The Commercial and Union banks have each a branch. It is a burgh of barony under the Earl of Elgin, and is governed by three bailiffs. The parish church of Tulliallan, a modern structure, is situated in the town. The United Presbyterians and Free Church have each a place of worship. The sheriff's small-debt courts are held on the first Mondays in February, May, August, and November. A commodious harbour and excellent quay have been constructed, which, together with the good anchorage ground of the Forth, render this haven an eligible refuge for vessels in distress. The harbour is capable of admitting vessels of from three to four hundred tons burthen. The Stirling and Granton steamers call here regularly. Along the Forth two large embankments have been made, reclaiming about 366 acres. Fairs are held on the last Friday of July (old style), and the Monday before Falkirk fair.

KINDARDINE, an ancient par. in the co. of Inverness, Scotland, now united to Abernethy.

KINCARDINE O'NEIL, a district in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland. It contains the pars. of Aboyne and Glentanner, Birse, Braemar and Craithe, Cluny, Coull, Echt, Glenmuick, Tullich, Glengairn, Kincardine O'Neil, Logie-Coldstone, Lumphanan, Midmar, Tarland, and Migvie. Its length is 57 miles, and its breadth varies from 8 to 16 miles.

KINCARDINE O'NEIL, a par. in the district of Kincardine O'Neil, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It is situated 22 miles W. of Aberdeen, on the river Dee, near Lumphanan Wood, where, according to Wynton's Chronicle, Macbeth was killed. It contains a village bearing its own name. It is bounded by the co. of Kincardine on the S.E. and S., and on the other sides by the pars. of Aboyne, Birse, Cluny, Midmar, &c. Its size is 7 miles by 5. The hilly portion is chiefly pastural, but there is some arable land. It is recorded that a wooden bridge was built here across the Dee six hundred years ago, at the expense of a knight called Allan Durward. The village is much resorted to in summer by invalids. The par. is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Aberdeen. The minister's stipend is £232, in the patron. of Sir W. Forbes, Bart., of Pitsligo. There is a Free church, also several schools. A bede house was founded here by a bishop of Aberdeen for eight old men, but at the Reformation it became extinct. Kincardine, Desswod, Learney, Camfield, Criagmyle, and Stranduff are the principal seats. This parish derives the suffix to its name from the Neil, a streamlet draining the western portion of the parish, and falling into the Dee. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in May (old style), and on the Wednesday and Thursday after the last Tuesday in August (old style).

KINCLAVEN, a par. in the district of Stormont, co. Perth, Scotland, 7 miles N. of Perth, and adjacent to Meikleour, its post town. The parish is traversed by the road from Perth to Dunkeld. Its nearest railway station is Stanley, on the Scottish Midland line. The river Tay runs about 10 miles along the boundary of the parish, and forms a cascade called the Linn of Campsie. There are several fishing stations on this river. The size of the parish is 4 miles by 2. Its surface is woody, but in some places fertile and well cultivated. It is in the presb. of Dunkeld, and synod of Perth and Stirling. The minister's stipend is £277. The parish church is an ancient structure. The United Presbyterians have a church, and took a prominent part in the secession. Opposite the mouth of the Isla, and on the river Tay, are the remains of Kinclaven Castle, once a royal residence, said to have been erected by Malcolm Canmore. This is the "won Kinclaven" described in the metrical history of Sir William Wallace.

KINCON, a vil. in the par. of Kinfian, in the bar. of Tirawley, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles W. of Killala.

KINCORA, a district on Lough Derg, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, near Killaloe—the ancient territory of the kings of Munster, and the site of the great Brien Boroihme's palace, of which a circular fort and a few stones are the only traces remaining. The "Lament for Kincora" was composed by MacLeag, the king's bard.

KINCRAIG, two promontories of this name, the one near Largo Bay, in co. Fife, the other on the river Spey, co. Inverness, Scotland.

KINDROCAT, an ancient par. in co. Aberdeen, Scotland, now united to Crathie.

KINDER, a hmlt. in the par. of Glossop, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 4 miles N. of Chapel-le-Frith. It is situated in the Peak, under Kinder Scout Hill, which rises to the altitude of 1,800 feet.

KINDER, a loch near New Abbey, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland. It is situated under Criffel.

KINDERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Middlewich, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 2 miles E. of Middlewich. It is joined with Hulme, and is connected with the parish of Middlewich by a bridge over the canal. The village is considerable. The powerful barons of Kinderton exercised the right of inflicting capital punishment for crimes committed within the barony until the end of the 16th century.

KINDRUM, a lough in co. Donegal, Ireland, lying between Mulroy Bay and Lough Swilly.

KINEAGH, a par. partly in the bar. of Rathvilly, co. Carlow, and partly in the bar. of Kilkea, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Rathvilly. Castledermot is its post town. The surface is level, and the soil mostly good. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £116, in the patron. of the vicars-choral of St. Patrick's, Dublin. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1832. Newtown, Philips, Bettyfield, and Ricketstown are the chief residences.

KINEARNEY, an ancient par. in co. Aberdeen, Scotland, now united to Cluny and Midmar.

KINEDAR. See KING EDWARD, co. Aberdeen.

KINELARTY, a bar. in co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is 11 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 7 miles. Its boundaries are Upper Castlereagh on the N., Dufferin on the E., Dundrum Harbour on the S., and Upper and Lower Iveagh on the W. It contains the par. of Loughinisland, and parts of Annahilt, Dromara, Kilmegan, Kilmore, and Magheradrool, and the town of Ballinahinch. This barony was the ancient territory of the MacArtanes.

KINELLAR, a par. in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, 7 miles N.W. of Aberdeen. It is situated on the river Don and Inverury canal, and contains the post-office station of Blackburn. Its average size is 4 miles by 2, covering about 5,000 acres. Its surface is fertile, and for the most part arable. It enjoys facilities of communication through the Great North of Scotland line. It is in the synod and presb. of Aberdeen. The minister's stipend is £160. The church is ancient, and contains an old font. In the churchyard is part of a Druidical circle. There are tumuli on a large common lying between this and the parish of Kintore, but claimed by both parishes. Between Drum and Harlaw is the Drum Stone, where the laird of Drum made his will before the battle of Harlaw.

KINETON, a hmlt. in the par. of Temple Guyting, co. Gloucester, 4 miles S.E. of Winchcomb. It is situated on the Cotswold hills.

KINETON. See KINGTON, cos. Warwick and Wilts.

KINFARE. See KINVER, co. Stafford.

KINFAUNS, a par. in the co. of Perth, Scotland. It is situated on the river Tay, which divides it from Rhynd and Perth. It is 3 miles E. of Perth, and is traversed by the road from that town to Dundee, and likewise by the Dundee and Perth railway, on which it has two stations—viz. Kinfauns and Glencarse, the latter situated within the parish. It is 5 miles long, with an average breadth of 1½ mile. The Sidlaw hills occupy a large part of the district, and one of them, known as Kinnoul Hill, attains a height of 632 feet above sea-level. The parish was given to Sir T. Charteris, or Longueville, by Bruce, and subsequently came to the Carnegies and Blairs. It is in the presb. of Perth, and synod of Perth and Stirling. The minister's stipend is £243, in the patron. of the crown. The church has been erected in portions at different periods. There is a Free church. The principal residences are, Glencarse House, Seggieden House, Glendoig House, and Kinfauns Castle—this last was built in 1822, from designs by Smirke, and is the property of Lord Gray; it contains the Charteris two-handed sword, 5 feet 9 inches long, and 2½ inches broad in the hilt. The Tay is here navigated by steam and sailing craft, which pass to and fro between Perth and Dundee.

KINGAIRLOCH, a district in the pars. of Appin and Lismore, co. Argyle, Scotland. It contains Kingairloch post-office station.

KINGARTH, a par. in the southern extremity of the island and co. of Bute, Scotland. It comprehends the post-office station of Kingarth, the vils. of Piperhall and Kerrycory, and the post-office vil. of Kilchattan. It is 7 miles long by 2 broad, and though in appearance flat, has a gradual ascent from the coast to the middle of the island. The soil of the cultivated land is light and sandy but fertile. In the interior are two mountains, Blane's Hill and Suidhe-Chatain, or "Seat of Catan," the former 486 and the latter 520 feet above sea-level. The par. is in the presb. of Dunoon and synod of Argyle. The minister's stipend is £297. The parish church is a modern and commodious structure. Here is a Free church. Ascoy and the seat of the Marquis of Bute are the only mansions, but there are several villas in the neighbourhood. The herring fishery is carried on with success, and game is plentiful. There are remains of a Druidical circle and of a vitrified fort. The Marquis of Bute is the chief landowner, and takes the title of baron from this place. His seat is Mount Stuart, situated on the firth of Clyde.

KINGCAUSIE, a demesne in co. Kincardine, Scotland, 9 miles N. of Stonehaven. It is situated near the river Dee.

KINGCOMBE, NETHER AND OVER, a tythg. in the par. of Toller-Porcorum, hund. of Beaminster-Forum and Redhone, co. Dorset, 6 miles S.E. of Beaminster.

KINGCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Long Ashton, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Bristol.

KING-CROSS, a vil. in the tnshps. of Shircoat and South Owram, par. of Halifax, West Riding co. York, 1 mile E. of Halifax. It is situated near the river Aire. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £180, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is dedicated to St. Paul.

KING EDWARD, popularly KENEDAR, and anciently KEN EDGAR, a par. in the district of Turriff, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It is a station of the Great North of Scotland Railway (Banff extension). It is situated 5 miles N. of Turriff, on the river Deveron, and contains the post-office station of King Edward, and the post-office vil. of Newbyth. It comprises about 14,000 acres, half of which are under tillage, and the rest either pasture, wood, or moss. Redstone and and greywacke are quarried. The coach road between Banff and Aberdeen, runs through the district. The par. is in the presb. of Turriff and synod of Aberdeen. The minister's stipend is £204, in the patron. of the crown. The parish church is a modern and commodious structure. At Newbyth there is a chapel-of-ease, which was rebuilt in 1853; it contains almost as many sittings as the parish church, and is under the joint management of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge and of its own congregation. The Free Church have a preaching station, and the Independents have a place of worship at Millseat. There are several schools, a public library, and savings-bank in the village. On the high road between Banff and Turriff are the remains of the castle of King Edward, once the residence of the Cumyns, earls of Buchan. In this parish are also the following seats: Byth House; Craigston Castle, commonly called the "Tutor," erected by Urquhart of Cromarty in the 17th century, and still in good preservation, and Eden Castle, now in ruins. The popular name of this place, Kenedar, signifies the "head of the valley."

KINGERBY, a par. in the N. div. of the hund. of Walshcroft, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2½ miles W. of Usselby, its nearest railway station, and 6 N.W. of Market Raisen, its post town. It is situated on a feeder of the river Ancholme, and contains the hmlt. of Bishop Bridge. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £287. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice, and contains monuments of the Young family, and two effigies of Knights Templars in armour. The parochial charities produce £100 per annum, bequeathed by Thomas Bell, being the endowment of 9 almshouses. Kingerby House is the principal residence. Kingerby Wood is a meet for the Brocklesby hounds.

KINGFIELD, or KENVILLE, a tythg. in the par. of Woking, first div. of the hund. of Woking, co. Surrey, 4 miles N. of Guildford.

KINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 4½ miles S.W. of Chipping Norton, its post town. It is situated on the river Evenlode, which separtes it from the county of Gloucester. The land is divided between arable and meadow, with a considerable tract of common. The meadows and pastures are occasionally subject to inundation. The soil in some parts is a rich loam, in others clay alternated with gravel. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £685 15*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £720. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, with a tower. There is a school for both sexes. The parochial charities produce £36 per annum. The Rev. J. W. Lockwood is lord of the manor.

KINGHAMFORD, a hund. in the lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, contains the pars. of Barham, Bishopsbourne, Kingstone, and Wooton, comprising an area of 9,160 acres.

KINGHORN, a par. in the district of Kirkcaldy, co. Fife, Scotland. It is situated on the northern coast of the county, and is intersected by the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee railway, which has a station at Kinghorn in this parish. Its coast line extends from the promontory called Kinghorness to the eastern end of Burnt Island. It contains the vils. of Inchkeith, Kinghorn, and Invertiel (a suburb of Kirkcaldy), and the harbour of Pettycur. Its size is 4 miles by 3½. The surface rises abruptly in many places, and attains at Glassmount Hill a height of 601 feet above sea-level. The greater part of the district is well cultivated. It contains some very fertile spots both along the shore and inland. The par. is in the presb. of Kirkcaldy and synod of Fife. The minister's stipend is £246. The parish church is a commodious building erected in 1774. There is a chapel-of-ease and a Free church at Invertiel. At Kinghorn the United Presbyterians, Free Church, and Baptists have each a place of worship. There are several schools in the neighbourhood. At Chapel-field, until a few years ago, were the ruins of an ancient chapel. In this parish are the ancient seats of Balmuto, Abden House, and Piteadie Castle; there are also two superb mansions recently erected, the one on North Glassmount, and the other on the Kilrie estate. Seafield Tower, formerly the seat of the Moutrie family, is situated on the shore, and is a very conspicuous object. Kinghorn Castle, which formerly stood on the N. side of the town, was a royal residence, and was given with its lands by Robert II. to his son-in-law Sir John Lyon, Lord Glammis. It was whilst riding near Kinghorn Castle that Alexander III., of Scotland, was killed by falling over a precipice, still called King's Wood End. Kinghorn Spa is celebrated from the fact of Dr. Anderson, physician to Charles I., having written a treatise upon the medicinal virtues of its waters. Tradition points to this as the spot where Macbeth routed the Northmen in the reign of Canute.

KINGHORN, a post town and royal burgh, in the par. of Kinghorn, mentioned above, 3½ miles from Kirkcaldy, and 2½ from Burnt Island. It is a station on the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee line. The railway here passes under Witch Hill, celebrated in story as the place where the witches of Kinghorn were executed. It occupies a pleasant situation on the side of a hill sloping to the Frith of Forth, directly opposite Leith. It was invested with the privileges of a royal burgh by King David I., and about that time is said to have been a royal residence. It had its latest charter granted in 1611, but was disfranchised as a municipal burgh in 1841, and placed under three managers. It unites with Kirkcaldy, Burntisland, and Dysart in sending one member to parliament. Its revenue is £400. The courts formerly held here have been transferred to Kirkcaldy. The town, which principally consists of one street, is well paved, and has greatly improved in appearance of late years. Most of the public building have been rebuilt. It contains a townhouse, gaol, and workhouse, also a burgh school-house, besides several other schools. There are Established, Free Church, United Presbyterian, and Baptist places of worship. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in hand-loom weaving, tanning, brewing, &c. It has a small harbour, but the harbour of Pettycur, near the town, is more used, having good accommodation for ships. The population of the burgh in 1861 was 1,230.

KINGLASSIE, a par. and vil. in the co. Fife, Scotland, 4 miles W. of Kirkcaldy. It extends 4 miles in length by 2 in breadth at its narrowest part, and 4 at its broadest. It is bounded on the N. by the river Leven, and is intersected by its tributaries, the Orr and Lochty. It contains about 6,000 acres, by far the greater portion of which is arable land. Ironstone has lately been found, and limestone and coal were until recently worked. The Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee railway passes through this district. The par. is in the presb. of Kirkcaldy and synod of Fife. The minister's stipend is £223. There is a Free church. The inhabitants are for the most part employed in weaving and in agriculture. There is an agricultural society. Fairs are held here on the first Wednesday in May and on the Thursday before Michaelmas (old style). It is a meet for the Fifeshire hounds.

KINGLEDOORS, a hmlt. in the par. of Drumelzier, co. Peebles, Scotland, 8 miles S.W. of Peebles. It is situated near the junction of the Powsail burn with the Tweed. Here was formerly a chapel dedicated to St. Cuthbert.

KINGLEY BOTTOM, a hmlt. in the par. of Birdham, co. Sussex, 3 miles S.W of Chichester.

KINGMOOR, an ext. par. place in the ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 3 miles N.W. of Carlisle. It is situate on the high road from Carlisle to Scotland, and has recently much increased in population. It belongs to the corporation of Carlisle, the freemen of which city have long been accustomed to hold their guild races here on Ascension Day. There is a village school.

KINGOLDRUM, a par. in the co. of Forfar, Scotland. It is bounded by Kerriemuir, Lintrathen, Cortachy, and Airlie, and is situated at the base of the Grampian hills. It is 7 miles long by 2½ in breadth. The surface is hilly in the S. and mountainous in the N., the Catlaw rising to an altitude of 2,214 feet above sea-level. The parish contains about 12,800 acres, of which 3,500 are in tillage. It is watered by the Prosen-water and Cromby, with their tributaries. The par. is in the presb. of Meigle and synod of Angus and Mearns. The minister's stipend is £149, in the patron. of the crown. The original church was given, about the 13th century, to the monks of Arbroath by Sir Alland Durward, of Lintrathen. The present church is modern. In the southern part of the parish stands Balfour Castle, an ancient structure in the Gothic style of architecture, and formerly the seat of the Ogilvie family of Balfour. Here are also the mansions of Pearsie and Baldovie. On the summit of Catlaw is an immense cairn, and Scurrock Hill is crowned with a Druidical temple. The post-office village bearing the name of the parish, is 4 miles W. of Kerriemuir.

KINGOODIE, a vil. in the par. of Longforgan, co. Perth, Scotland, 3 miles W. of Perth. It is chiefly inhabited by the labourers of the quarry of Kingoodie, which produces a very hard material known as "grain-stone," admirably adapted for the construction of docks, breakwaters, &c. Dundee Tower and Huntly Castle were built of stone from this quarry.

KING-ROADS, a good anchorage in the British Channel at the mouth of the Severn. Here is a light-house with a fixed light 73 feet above sea-level.

KINGSBARNS, a par. in the co. of Fife, Scotland. It is bounded by the North Sea and the pars. of Dunino, Crail, and St. Andrew's. Its size is 3¼ by 2¾ miles, containing about 3,200 Scotch acres, which, save about 200 acres, are all under cultivation. Its coast is rocky and low and has several cairns. The place received its name from certain storehouses erected here by King John, during his occupation of a castle in the neighbourhood, now demolished. The par. was part of Crail till 1631, and is in the presb. of St. Andrew's and synod of Fife. The minister's stipend is £252. The church stands in the village of Kingsbarns, which is 6½ miles from St. Andrew's, on the road between the last-named place and Crail. The fairs are now discontinued. The inhabitants are employed for the most part in weaving and agriculture.

KINGSBRIDGE, a hund. in co. Wilts, contains the pars. of Chiseldon, Cliffe Pypard, Draycott-Foliatt, Liddington, Liddiard, Treegooze, Lyneham, Swindon, Tockenham, Wanborough, Wootton-Bassett, and part of Hillmarton, comprising an area of 40,430 acres.

KINGSBRIDGE, a par., market and post town, in the hund. of Stanborough, co. Devon, 9½ miles from Kingsbridge Road station on the South Devon railway, 20 S.E. of Plymouth, and 34 S.W. of Exeter. It is situated on the summit and declivities of a hill at the head of Salcombe Haven, and formerly belonged to the Courtenays, Petres, &c. The parish, which is exceedingly small, comprising only 30 acres, chiefly laid out as gardens and orchards, is separated from Dodbrooke on the E. by a small rivulet. It is a petty sessions town, and polling-place for the southern division of the county. The streets are well paved and lighted with gas, and the houses are generally well built. It contains some shops, with a townhall, lecture hall, joint stock bank, a branch of the South Devon and Cornwall Bank, also gas-works, and the union workhouse. The townhall is a stone structure erected in 1850, consisting of a commodious room in which the petty sessions are held, county court, lecture hall, &c. The corn and malt trade is also carried on in the above building to a considerable extent. The large manufactory, formerly for woollen goods, has been converted into extensive steam and flour mills, the former trade having decayed. A brisk trade is carried on in timber, coals, leather, slate, and cider. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in fishing. The town is under the jurisdiction of the county magistrates, but a portreeve, or chief officer, is appointed at Michaelmas, when a court-leet is held by the lord of the manor. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Churchstow, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church is situated about the centre of the town. It is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Edmund, with an embattled tower, crowned with a spire and containing six bells. The interior of the church has been entirely restored. The charities produce about £449 per annum, of which £369 is Duncombe's bequest, for lectures, exhibitions, &c. There are National and British schools, also Crispin's free grammar school. The Independents, Wesleyans, Baptists, and Plymouth Brethren, have each a chapel. Tolley, a scholar of Henry VIII.'s time, was a native of this place. A newspaper called the Kingsbridge Gazette is published monthly. Market day is Saturday. A fair for cattle and live stock is held on the 20th July and two following days.

KING'S-BROMLEY. See BROMLEY, KING'S, co. Stafford, and the like for other places with this prefix, which will be found under the proper name.

KINGSBURY, a hund. in co. Somerset, in six detached portions. It contains the pars. of Chard, Combe, Huish-Episcopi, Kingsbury-Episcopi, Winsham, Ash Priors, West Buckland, Fitzhead, Bishops Lydeard, Wellington, and Wiveliscombe, comprising an area of 36,690 acres.

KINGSBURY, a par. in the Tamworth div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, 5½ miles S. of Tamworth, 5 N.E. of Coleshill, and half a mile from the Kingsbury station on the Midland, Birmingham, and Derby Junction line of railway. Atherstone is its post town. The par. is considerable, and contains the vil. of Hurley, also the hmlts. of Dosthill, Holloughton, Hurley, Foulend, Drakenage, Stateley, Heanley, Whateley Cliff, Bodymoor Heath, &c. It is situated on the river Thame, and has been held by the Bracebridges of Atherstone, through Turchill de Warwick, since 851. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £118. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient stone edifice with a square embattled tower containing five bells. The church was thoroughly repaired in 1835. The charities produce about £54 per annum, of which £25 goes to Coton's school. The Wesleyan Methodists have places of worship at Hurley and Bodymoor Heath.

KINGSBURY, a par. in the hund. of Gore, co. Middlesex, 8 miles N.W. of St. Paul's. It is situated on the river Brent, and contains part of the vil. of Hyde. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Chingesburie, and was formerly a royal manor. The land is chiefly in pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £500. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of London, val. £90, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, London. The church, which is situated at the southern extremity of the parish, is supposed to stand on the site of a Roman camp. It is dedicated to All Saints, and is a very ancient structure, with some Roman bricks built into the wall. In the interior are brasses to Shepherd and his eighteen children, bearing date 1520. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum. There is a National school.

KINGSBURY EPISCOPI, a par. in the E. div. of the hund. of Kingsbury, co. Somerset, 4 miles S. of Langport, 8 N. of South Petherton, and 2½ N.W. of Martock station on the Yeovil branch of the Bristol and Exeter line of railway. Ilminster is its post town. It is situated on the river Parret, and contains the hmlts. and tythgs. of Burrow, Lake, East and West Lambrook, Southay, Stembridge, and Thorney. It formerly belonged to the bishops of Wells, whence the adjunct to its name. The soil is loam and clay, with subsoil clay and gravel. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £360, in the patron. of the Chancellor of Wells Cathedral. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, has a pinnacled tower, 120 feet high, containing a clock and five bells. It is ornamented with eleven statues of kings, and was repaired in 1849. There are Sunday and National schools, the latter recently erected. The parochial charities produce about £24 per annum. The Wesleyans and Independents have each a chapel. Wadham Wyndham, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KINGS CAPLE, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Wormelow, 5 miles N.W. of Ross, its post town, 9 S.E. of Hereford, and 1 mile from the Fawley station on the Hereford, Ross, and Gloucester railway. It is situated on the river Wye, which is crossed by a ferry boat at Ruxtone. The soil is various. The appropriate tithes, which belong to the Dean and Chapter of Hereford, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £330, and the vicarial for £172 10*s*. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Sellack, in the dioc. of Hereford. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has a tower crowned by a spire and containing five bells. The charities produce about £15 per annum, of which £5 goes to a school. There is a National school, supported by voluntary contributions.

KINGSCAVE, a large cavern, 114 feet long, on the W. side of the Isle of Arran, co. Bute, Scotland, 1 mile N. of Drimadown Point. It is famed in story as having been the retreat of Bruce.

KINGSCLERE, a hund. in the Kingsclere div. of the co. Hants. It contains the pars. of Kingsclere, Ewhurst, Sidmonton, Litchfield, Wolverton, and part of Burghclere, comprising an area of 21,460 acres.

KINGSCLERE, a par. and market town in the above hund., co. Hants, 6 miles S. of Thatcham, 6 N. of Ashton, and 7 S.E. of Newbury, its post town. The parish, which is extensive and highly cultivated, is situated on the Downs, near the northern extremity of the county. It contains the tythgs. of Woodlands and Clerewoodcot, with nine others. The land is well wooded, and the extensive common was enclosed under an Act passed in 1842. The soil is various, but generally fertile. A small spring near the town turns four mills within 1½ mile of its source. Barley is widely sown, and malting is carried on rather extensively. The town, which is very ancient, was formerly a seat of Saxon kings, who had a palace here. After the Norman Conquest it came to the De-la-Poles, &c. It is now a small agricultural place, scarcely retaining any semblance of a market town. It is the seat of a Poor-law Union and the head of a superintendent registry district. Petty sessions are held monthly, and the board of guardians meet every alternate Tuesday. It is a polling place for the northern division of the county. The rectorial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,850, and the vicarial for £444. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a very ancient cruciform structure with a massive square tower rising from the centre, and containing six bells. In the chancel is a monument to Edward Webbe, D.D., chaplain to King Charles II.; it has also several brasses, one bearing date 1519. It was thoroughly restored in 1848, and a vicarage house built in 1850. The new district church, dedicated to St. Paul, has a square tower crowned with a lofty spire, and has upwards of 500 sittings. It was erected in 1845, and a parsonage house for the incumbent about the same time. The parochial charities produce about £130 per annum. The Wesleyans, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. There is an ancient free school for boys, endowed by Sir James Lancaster in 1618. The school-room and master's house was rebuilt in 1861. Lord Bolton is lord of the manor. On the adjacent hills are the remains of two Roman encampments. Market day is Tuesday. Fairs are held on Whit-Tuesday for pleasure, and on the first Tuesday after the 10th October for sheep.

KINGS-CLIFFE. See CLIFFE REGIS, co. Northampton, and the like, for other names with this prefix.

KING'S COLLEGE, an ext. par. place in Cambridge University. See CAMBRIDGE.

KINGSCOTE, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Berkeley, co. Gloucester, 16 miles S. of Gloucester, 5 N.W. of Tetbury, and 7½ from Charfield railway station. Wooton-under-Edge is its post town. It is situated near the extremity of a branch of the Cotswolds, and is mentioned in Domesday Book as Chingescote. It came through the Fitzhardinges to the Kingscotes above 700 years ago. The soil is stone brash and loam, with subsoil oolite. There are several quarries of stone called "clayrag," in which numerous fossils are embedded, and which, when polished, resemble Derbyshire marble. A tributary of the river Frome has its source in this parish, which is indented with deep valleys, the slopes of which are clothed with beech trees of luxuriant growth. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Beverstone, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, is an ancient stone structure with a low embattled tower containing two bells. It contains the cenotaph of the Kingscote family. There is a school, supported by subscription. Kingscote Hall is the principal residence. Earl Fitzhardinge Berkeley is lord of the manor and chief landowner. Fragments of tessellated pavements, coins, and other Roman antiquities, have been discovered.

KING'S COUNTY, an inland co. in the prov. of Leinster, Ireland, bounded on the N. by Westmeath, S. by Queen's County and Tipperary, E. by Meath and Kildare, and W. by Tipperary, Galway, and Roscommon. Its greatest length E. and W. is 45 miles, and greatest breadth N. and S. 39 miles. It comprises an area of 772 square miles, and contains a population by the census of 1861 of 90,043, against 112,080 in 1851, being a decrease of 22,037 in the decennial period. At the very dawn of Irish history this county formed part of the territory called Hy Falgia, including Meath, Westmeath, Dublin, and Kildare. In 1170 the English penetrated the country and effected settlements, but were stoutly opposed by the Irish. In the reign of Edward VI. the O'Connors, spreading disorder through the whole of Leinster, were dispersed by a force from England under Sir William Bellingham, and their forfeited lands were shared among the English. Constant insurrections and rebellions against the English power continued from Mary's reign to 1599, when Sir Oliver Lambert, with 1,000 foot and 100 horse, attacked the insurgents at Philipstown, and dispersed them so effectually that no serious resistance was afterwards offered. —For purposes of civil jurisdiction it is divided into the 12 baronies of Ballyboy, Ballybritt, Ballycowan, Clonlisk, Coolestown, Eglish, Garrycastle, Geashill, Kilcoursey, Lower and Upper Philipstown, and Warrenstown. It contains 51 parishes, including part of the borough and market town of Portarlington; the market and assize town of Tullamore—population in 1861, 4,791; the corporate towns of Philipstown, or Birr, with a population of 5,220, and Banagher; and the post towns of Parsonstown, Clara, Edenderry, and Frankford. Formerly the county sent six members to the Irish parliament, but since the Union its representation has been limited to two members for the whole county. The constituency in 1859 was 3,324. The election is held at Tullamore. The local government is vested in a lieutenant, 7 deputy lieutenants, and 105 magistrates, besides the county officers. There are 45 constabulary police stations. It is in the home circuit. Assizes and quarter sessions are held at Tullamore, where is also the county gaol and court-house. As regards military arrangements, it is partly included in the south-eastern or Curragh district, and partly in the western district. There are barracks for infantry at Banagher, Parsonstown, and Shannon Harbour, and for cavalry at Tullamore and Philipstown, affording altogether accommodation for 68 officers and 1,412 men.—The geographical features of the county are very irregular. The surface is in general flat, except in the S., where it rises into the Slieve Bloom mountains, which form the boundary between the King's and Queen's counties. There is only one passage through these mountains, called the Gap of Glandine, which is but 5 feet wide. The only elevations deserving of notice are, Croghan Hill, to the N. of Philipstown, which rises to 769 feet; the Height of Ireland, the highest point in the county; and the great hill of Cloghan, between the Brosna river and the Slieve Bloom mountains. The chief loughs are, Lough Pallis, containing the finest tench in Ireland, Lough Annagh, Lough Deroin, Lough Boura, and Lough Croghan. The climate is healthy. The soil is not fertile, being either a deep moor or a gravelly loam of medium depth, resting on limestone gravel. The pastures are excellent for sheep. The best land in the county is on the W. side of the Slieve Bloom mountains, extending to Parsonstown, and in the barony of Clonlisk. The Bog of Allen covers a large portion of the centre, and extends from E. to W. the whole length of the county. Of the total of 493,985 acres comprised within the county, 337,256 are arable, 145,836 uncultivated, 8,258 in plantation, 1,733 under water, and 902 occupied by the site of towns, roads, &c.—The chief produce of the county is wheat and potatoes, but barley, oats, turnips, clover, flax, &c., are also cultivated. Much care has recently been bestowed in improving the various breeds of cattle. The bullocks of Ballybritt are large, and are used for field work. The horses are in general well-bred, light, and active, and are reared in great numbers for the neighbouring fairs. The county is well fenced, but draining and irrigation are much neglected. The net annual value of property in the county under the Tenement Valuation Act is £241,523. The timber is large and excellent, and the bogs supply an unfailing amount of fuel.—The rivers are, the Brosna, which passes through the northern portion, the little Brosna, which traverses the S., and the Shannon, which skirts it on the W. The Grand canal enters the county near Edenderry in the extreme E., and following a westerly direction, unites with the Shannon near its mouth. It is the chief line of water communication for the county. The Athlone extension of the Great Southern and Western railway traverses it from S.E. to N.W., and in the S. a branch of the same line runs from Roscrea to Parsonstown. The roads, which are numerous, and greatly improved within the last few years, are maintained by grand jury presentments.—The only manufactures are for home consumption, comprising coarse woollens, friezes, linen, and stuffs. Spinning was formerly carried on to a great extent, and the women are reckoned very industrious. There are numerous flour-mills and distilleries.—The county is in the dioceses of Kildare, Meath, and Killaloe, with portions in Ossory and Clonfert.—The social condition of the poor is capable of much amelioration. The houses of the small farmers, and the cabins of the peasants, are mean, dirty, and poor, and their food is potatoes, milk, and oatmeal. They are illiterate, but with a wish for education.—There are mineral waters at Thinrone, in Garrycastle barony.; at Escar, in Coolestown; at Kilduff, in Philipstown, in the barony of Ballycowan; at Ballincar, and at Geashill.—The most interesting object of antiquity is a ruin called the White Obelisk, or the Temple of the Sun, in the Slieve Bloom mountains, being a large pyramid of white stones. Danish raths are common. There are interesting religious remains at Clonmacnois, Drumcullin, Kilcolman, Rathbeg, and Reynagh. The ruins of ancient castles are numerous: those worthy of notice are described under their several parishes.

KING'S CROSS, a suburb of London, in the par. of St. Pancras, 1½ mile N. of St. Paul's. Here is the terminus of the Great Northern railway, with a spacious hotel adjoining, built near the site of the small-pox hospital, which has been removed to Upper Holloway.

KINGSCOURT, a small post and market town, in the par. of Enniskeen, bar. of Clankee, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 22 miles S.E. of Cavan, 47 from Dublin, and 7½ S.S.E. of Shercock. It is situated on the borders of the cos. Meath and Monaghan. It consists of one main street, in which stand the market-house, the parish church, Roman Catholic chapel, dispensary, which is within the Bailieborough Poor-law Union, and a chief police station. The only trade of any importance carried on is that in corn. There are two public schools and a loan fund. Petty sessions are held once a fortnight. In the vicinity is Cabra Castle, the seat of the Pratt family, the founders of the town. The surrounding locality is very romantic, and on a lofty hill in the woods of Cabra stand the ruins of an old castle, commanding a very fine view. Tuesday is market day. Fairs are held on the 17th April, 23rd May, 18th June, 1st August, 19th September, 8th November, and 4th and 24th December.

KINGSDON, a par. in the hund. of Somerton, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.E. of Somerton, 2 N. of Ilchester, and 6 W. of the Sparkford railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the Roman road Fosse Way. The soil is clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £330. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £432, in the patron. of the University College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a tower containing five bells and a clock. Near the door is a basin for consecrated water, and in the transept the recumbent figure of a Knight Templar in armour. The Independents have a place of worship. There is a school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. Charles A. Moody, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KINGSDOWN, a par. in the hund. of Milton, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 4 miles S.E. of Sittingbourne, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Faversham. The parish is small, and the land partly in hops. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £194 10*s*. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, is a small ancient structure with several old monuments. The register dates from 1570. Lord Kingsdown is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

KINGSDOWN, a par. in the hund. of Axton, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 3 miles N.W. of Wrotham, its post town, 7 S.W. of Dartford, and 5 S.E. of Farningham railway station. The village, which is considerable, is wholly agricultural. The land is partly in hops, but the greater part arable, with about 800 acres of coppice wood. The surface is diversified with hill and dale. The living is a rect. with the cur. of Mapiscombe annexed, val. £382, in the dioc. of Rochester, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, situated in the centre of a wood, is dedicated to St. Edmund, and has a porch and one bell. The circular chancel of Mapiscombe church is still standing, though in ruins.

KINGSDOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Box, co. Wilts, 3 miles S.W. of Corsham.

KINGSDOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Ringswould, hund. of Cornilo, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 2½ miles S. of Deal, and 1½ mile from Walmer, its post town. It is a coastguard and fishing station, and latterly has greatly improved. The inhabitants are principally employed in fishing. Here are traces of a Roman camp. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £150, in the patron. of the trustees. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, was built and endowed by the late W. Curling, Esq., who also built a residence for the clergyman. The same gentleman erected a National school in 1845, which was presented to the parish by Mrs. Curling.

KINGSEY, a par. in the hunds. of Ashendon and Lewknor, cos. Bucks and Oxford, 2 miles N.E. of Thame, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Aylesbury. It is situated on the river Thame, and the road from London to Thame passes through the parish. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture and woodland. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £245, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Rochester. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a small structure with a square tower. There is a National school. H. S. P. Wykeham, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KINGSFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Wolverley, lower div. of the hund. of Halfshire, co. Worcester, 3 miles N.W. of Kidderminster.

KINGSGATE, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Peter, Isle of Thanet, and lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 2 miles S.E. of Margate. It is a fishing village and watering-place, and has a coastguard station on the cliffs. It was formerly called Bartholomew's Gate, prior to Charles II. landing here in 1683. Kingsgate House is the principal residence. The late Lord Holland erected a villa here, on the model of that of Cicero at Baix, and adorned the grounds with artificial ruins. The mansion has been converted into five dwelling-houses, and the convent and mews transformed into elegant mansions. Lord Holland also erected a monument at Hac Kendown in commemoration of a battle between the English and Danes. Near Northdown are three towers called Arx Ruochim, Harley, and Whitfield; the latter, being seated on the highest spot in the island, forms a sea-mark to mariners.

KINGSHAM FARM, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Pancras, city of Chichester, co. Sussex.

KINGSHEATH, a hmlt. in the par. of Birmingham, hund. of Upper Pershore, co. Worcester, 3 miles S. of Pershore. It is situated near the river Avon, on the line of the Gloucester and Birmingham railway.

KINGSHOLM, a hmlt. in the pars. of St. Mary de Lode and St. Catherine, in the city and co. of Gloucester.

KINGSKERSWELL. See KINKERSWELL, co. Devon.

KING'S KETTLE, a vil. in the par. of Kettle, district of Cupar, co. Fife, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Cupar. It is situated near the river Eden, and is a station on the Edinburgh and North of Scotland railway.

KING'S KEY, a spot on the Solent, in the Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 2 miles N.W. of Wooton, where King John hid away after signing Magna Charta.

KING'S KNOWE, a hmlt. in the par. of Colinton, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, three-quarters of a mile from Stateford, and 3 S.W. of Edinburgh. It is a station on the Edinburgh section of the Caledonian railway.

KINGSLAND, a hmlt. and suburban district in the par. of Hackney, Tower div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, 2 miles N.E. of St. Paul's, London. It is a station on the North London railway, and omnibuses run to the city. Previously to the middle of the 16th century, here was a hospital or house for lepers, which, after the Reformation, served as an out ward to St. Bartholomew's hospital till 1761. The chapel of the priory was suffered to remain as a proprietary chapel, in the patronage of the governors of the hospital, till 1847, when it was taken down. This place, which has recently vastly increased in population, extends along the road from London to Tottenham and Edmonton, and several streets and numerous houses of recent erection branch off on either side. The site of the hospital and part of the market gardens are now built over.

KINGSLAND, a par. in the hund. of Stretford, co. Hereford, 5 miles N.W. of Leominster, its post town, and 15 from Hereford. It is a station on the Leominster and Kington railway. The village is situated in a fertile valley watered by the rivers Lug and Pinsley. The par. consists of the tnshps. of Aston, Lawton, Street, Longford, and West Town. The land is chiefly arable, and the soil clay and gravel. The village, which is considerable, was formerly a market town. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £785 to the rector, and £55 to the grammar school of Eardisland. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £800. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a stone structure with an embattled tower containing a clock and six bells. In the interior are a stained window, a piscina, sedilia, and several monuments. The church was built in the reign of Edward I. by Edward Lord Mortimer, to whom a pedestal has been erected at a short distance from the village, near the junction of the roads, in commemoration of the battle of Mortimer's Cross, which was fought here in 1461. The parochial charities produce about £37 per annum, of which £10 goes to Woodhouse's school, which is conducted on the National plan. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The old Roman road passes through the grounds of the ancient mansion of Street-Court. The Rev. R. D. Evans is lord of the manor. A fair is held on the 11th October for cattle, sheep, horses, and pigs.

KINGSLAND-GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Islington, Finsbury div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, 2½ miles N.N.E. of St. Paul's, London. It adjoins Kingsland in the parish of Hackney, whence a road runs to Newington-green.

KINGSLEY, a par. in the hund. of Alton, co. Hants, 4 miles S.E. of Alton, its post town, 8 S.W. of Farnham, and 5 S.W. of the Bentley railway station. The village is situated on the road from London to Portsmouth. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in making agricultural machines. The land is partly in hops. The living is a vic. not in charge, annexed to the vic.* of Binstead, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a pointed tower containing two bells. Lord Sherbourne is lord of the manor.

KINGSLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Frodsham, second div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, co. Chester, 3 miles W. of Acton, and 3 S.E. of Frodsham, its post town and nearest station, on the Chester and Warrington railway. The village, which is large, is situated near the river Weaver. The soil is loam and clay, and in the neighbourhood is a pit of excellent rock marl. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £60, in the patron. of the Vicar of Frodsham. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, was erected in 1851. It is a red sandstone structure with a tower crowned with a small spire. There is a free school endowed with £20 per annum, for six boys; also National, Sunday, and infant schools. There are places of worship for Wesleyans, Primitive and Association Methodists. The trustees of the late J. H. Smith Barry, Esq., are lords of the manor.

KINGSLEY, a par. in the S. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 3 miles N. of Cheadle, its post town, and 1 mile from the Froghall station, on the North Staffordshire railway. It is situated on the Uttoxeter canal and the river Churnet, and contains the tnshps. of Kingsley and Whiston. It is a straggling built village, and the inhabitants are employed in the coal, brass, copper, and colour works. The land is very fertile, particularly near the village, where there is much rich meadow and pasture land. The surface is diversified with richly-wooded hills. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £200. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £234. The church, dedicated to St. John, was rebuilt in 1821, with the exception of the tower, containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £67 per annum, of which £53 goes to Stubb's school. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans. James Beech, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KINGSMARK, an ext. par. place adjoining the par. of St. Arvan's, co. Monmouth, 2 miles N.W. of Chepstow.

KINGSMARSH, an ext. par. place in the higher div. of the hund. of Broxton, co. Chester, 6 miles N.W. of Malpas. It is situated on the river Dee.

KINGSMUIR, a district adjoining the pars. of Crail and Denino, co. Fife, Scotland, 5 miles S. of St. Andrew's. It was given by Charles II. to Colonel Borthwick. There are coal mines. A fair is held on the first Tuesday in October.

KING'S MEAD, a hmlt. in the par. of Soberton, co. Hants, 3 miles E. of Bishop's Waltham.

KING'S MILLS, a vil. in the par. of The Catel, Isle of Guernsey, Channel Islands, 2 miles W. of St. Peter's.

KING'S NEWTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Melbourne, co. Derby, 6 miles S.E. of Derby. It is situated near the river Trent.

KINGSNORTH, a par. in the hund. of Chart, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 3 miles S. of Ashford. It is a small village situated near the South-Eastern railway. The land is divided between arable and pasture, with some hops and woodland. The village is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £630. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £630. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a small ancient edifice with five bells. It contains a handsome monument to H. Clarke. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a chapel belonging to the Bible Christians.

KING'S-RIVER, two streams of this name in cos. Wicklow and Kilkenny, Ireland. The former joins the Liffey near Blessington.

KINGSTEIGNTON, or KINGSTANTON, a par. in the hund. of Teinbridge, co. Devon, 1½ mile N. of Newton Abbott, its post town, 5 miles W. of Teignmouth, and 8 N.W. of Torquay. The village, which is large, is situated on the South Devon railway and river Teign. It is watered by a fine stream, which passes through the village, and works several mills in the neighbourhood. There are extensive potteries and clay works for the manufacture of tobacco-pipes, giving employment to a large portion of the inhabitants. The soil is various, but in general fertile. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £396, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a structure of red sandstone, with a tower containing a clock and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum, also a clothing club for the poor, supported by voluntary contributions. There is a National school for both sexes, and the Independents and Wesleyans have each a chapel. Lord Clifford is lord of the manor.

KINGSTHORPE, a par. in the hund. of Spelhoe, co. Northampton, 2 miles W. of Northampton, its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Nen, and was formerly a royal demesne. There are traces of St. David's hospital, founded by Peter de Northampton in 1200. There are extensive quarries of white freestone. The village, which is considerable, was formerly governed by a bailiff. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1766. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £700, in the patron. of St. Katherine's Hospital, London. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient Norman erection. The charities produce £135 per annum, of which £35 goes to the support of a free school. The Baptists have a place of worship, and there are National and infant schools. Kingsthorpe House is the principal residence.

KINGSTON, a par. in the hund. of Ermington, co. Devon, 7½ miles S.E. of Ivybridge railway station, and 4 S.W. of Modbury, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Erme, near Bigbury Bay. The soil is chiefly light, but fertile. The coast is defended by lofty cliffs, of which those of Scobbiscombe are remarkable for their precipitous elevation. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic.* of Ermington, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church is an ancient structure, in which a day and Sunday school are held. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. Richard Julian, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KINGSTON, a par. in the hund. of West Medina, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 6 miles S.W. of Newport, its post town. The parish, which is the smallest in the Isle of Wight, is situated near Kingston Cross, in the south-western part of the island. It is remarkably hilly and well wooded. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £220. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £204. The church is a small structure, dedication unknown. There is a school at Sherwell, attended by the children of this parish.

KINGSTON, a par. in the hund. of Taunton, co. Somerset, 3¾ miles N. of Taunton its post town. The parish is situated under the southern extremity of the Quantock hills, and is famed for its excellent cider, which is exported in large quantities. Traces of copper have been met with, and there are quarries of good building stone. The lower grounds are watered by numerous streams which descend from the hills. The soil in the higher lands is a stone brash alternated with sand, and in the lower a reddish fertile loam with stiff clay in places. The great tithes, which belong to the Dean and Chapter of Bristol, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £398 5s., and the vicarial for £200. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £190, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Bristol. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a noble structure built in the reign of Henry VII., with a lofty ornamented tower, containing six bells. The chancel contains a fine altar tomb of the Warre family. The register dates from 1677. The parochial charities produce about £71 per annum, of which £15 goes to the support of a school. There is a parochial school in connection with the church. The Independents have a place of worship. The hamlet of Hestercombe is situated on an eminence at the E. side of this parish. It belonged to Glastonbury Abbey in the reign of King Edward the Confessor, but was given by William the Conqueror to the Bishop of Coutance, and subsequently came to the bishops of Winchester as part of their manor of Taunton. It is now the property of the Warre family, to whom it has belonged since the reign of Henry III.

KINGSTON, a hund. in co. Surrey, contains the pars. of Kingston-on-Thames, Petersham, Richmond, Long Ditton, Kew, Malden, and part of Thames Ditton, comprising an area of 12,690 acres.

KINGSTON, a par. in the hund. of Longstow, co. Cambridge, 3 miles S.E. of Caxton, its post town, and 8 S.E. of Cambridge. The land is chiefly pasture and wood. The village, which is now an inconsiderable place, was formerly a market town, and two fairs were held annually, but these have long been discontinued. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1810. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, in the patron. of King's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to All Saints and St. Andrew, is an ancient structure with low tower. The charities produce £26 per annum, half of which goes to the support of Todd's school.

KINGSTON, a par. in the hund. of Tintinhull, co. Somerset, 1 mile S.E. of Ilminster, its post town, 4 miles S.W. of South Petherton, and 6 N.W. of Crewkerne. The par. is small, and contains the hmlts. of Allowenshay and Ludney. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £53. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing 4 bells. There is a school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. Earl Poulett is lord of the manor and chief landowner. There are ruins of a very ancient church at Allowenshay.

KINGSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Colyton Rawleigh, co. Devon, 2 miles W. of Sidmouth.

KINGSTON, a chplry. in the par. of Corfe Castle, co. Dorset, 1 mile S. of Corfe Castle. It is situated within the limits of the borough of Wareham, and contains Encombe House, the seat of the Earl of Eldon.

KINGSTON, a vil. in the hund. of Berkeley, co. Gloucester, 4 miles N.E. of Berkeley. It is situated on the ship canal.

KINGSTON, a par. in the hund. of Poling, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 5 miles W. of Worthing, and 4 S.E. of Little Hampton. It is a station on the Brighton and South Coast railway. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is situated between East Preston and Ferring, on the coast of the English channel. It has a preventive coastguard station. There is no village, only two or three farm-houses. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £92, payable to the Prebendary of Ferring, and £18 to the vicar. The living is a rect. annexed to the vic.* of Ferring, in the dioc. of Chichester. The church has been destroyed by the encroachment of the sea. The register is preserved, and dates from 1570 to 1671.

KINGSTON. See CHESTERTON PARVA, co. Warwick.

KINGSTON, a tythg. in the par. of Shorwell, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 5 miles S.W. of Newport.

KINGSTON, a tythg. in the par. of Ringwood, co. Hants, 2 miles S.E. of Ringwood.

KINGSTON, a hmlt. within the borough of Portsmouth, co. Hants, 1 mile N.E. of Portsmouth, of which it is a suburb. It is situated near Kingston Cross, and contains Portsea church.

KINGSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Ross, hund. of Greytree, co. Hereford, 2 miles N.E. of the town of Ross, and 10. S.E. of Hereford. It is situated near the river Wye.

KINGSTON, a quoad sacra par. in the pars. of Govan and Gorbals, cos. Lanark and Renfrew, Scotland, 2 miles S. of Glasgow, of which it is a suburb. It is situated near the banks of the Clyde. The par. is in the presb. of Glasgow, and in the patron. of subscribers.

KINGSTON, a manor in the par. of Woodbridge, hund. of Loes, co. Suffolk, 8 miles N.E. of Ipswich. It is situated near the river Deben, about 9 miles from the coast.

KINGSTON, a tythg. in the par. of Collingbourne Kingstone, co. Wilts, 2 miles N.E. of Lugdershall.

KINGSTON-BAGPUIZE, a par. in the hund. of Ock, co. Berks, 6 miles W. of Abingdon, its post town. At the Conquest it was given to Sir Richard Bagpuize, from which circumstance it derives the suffix to its name. At Newbridge, in this parish, the Earl of Essex, commanding the Parliamentary troops, was defeated while attempting to cross the river in 1644, and compelled to retreat. The village, which is very small, is situated on the road from Oxford to Bath within 2 miles distance of the river Isis, which is navigable as high as Lechlade. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £298, in the patron. of St. John's College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a modern structure, rebuilt in 1800. In the interior is a monument to John Flandy, Esq., whose family now hold the manor. The charities produce £10 10*s.* per annum, besides the endowment of Flandy's free school. Kingston House is the principal residence. Fairs are held on the 21st March and 28th September.

KINGSTON-BAY, a rocky creek on the coast of Galway, Ireland, about 5 miles W. of Clifden.

KINGSTON-BLOUNT, a lib. in the par. of Aston-Rownant, hund. of Lewknor, co. Oxford, 4 miles S.E. of Tetsworth, and 5 S.E. of Thame. It is situated under the Chiltern hills, near the line of the ancient Icknield Street.

KINGSTON-BY-SEA, or KINGSTON-BOWSEY, in the hund. of Fishergate, rape of Bramber, co. Sussex, 1 mile E. of New Shoreham, its post town. It is a small but flourishing village situated on the South Coast railway, of which it is the chief station for goods landed in Shoreham new harbour. There are very extensive warehouses and malthouses, also a ship-building yard belonging to Messrs May and Thwaites, and coke ovens and works of the South Coast Railway Company. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in fishing and boat-building. The road from London to Worthing passes through the parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £200. The church, which is an ancient structure, has been thoroughly restored. It contains many ancient relics. Kingston House is the principal residence, and is the seat of William Pennington Gorringe, Esq., who is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

KINGSTON DEVERILL. See DEVERILL KINGSTON, co. Wilts.

KINGSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Webtree, co. Hereford, 6 miles S.W. of Hereford, its post town, and 4 N.W. of the Tram Inn railway station. It is situated on the road from Ross to Ray. The land is partly in hops, and the soil of various qualities, but generally fertile. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £219, of which £105 is payable to the Dean of Hereford, and the vicarial tithes for £205. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect. of Thruxton, in the dioc. of Hereford. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a commodious stone structure, with a new square tower containing five bells. In the interior are several monuments. The charities produce about £80 per annum. There is a small school for both sexes, supported by Archdeacon Wetherell. There is a place of worship for the Baptists.

KINGSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Kinghamford, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 5 miles S.E. of Canterbury, its post town. It is situated on the river Stour, and includes part of the Barham Downs. The land is partly in hops. The village, which is small, is situated on the road from London to Dover. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £500. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £500. The church is a small structure dedicated to St. Giles. It contains several monuments. On the border of the parish is a Roman camp called Cæsar's Camp, where several antiquities have been found.

KINGSTONE, or KINSON, a chplry. in the par. of Canford Magna, hund. of Cogdean, East Shaston div. of co. Dorset, 2 miles N.W. of Blandford, and 6 N.E. of Poole. It is situated on the river Stour. The village is considerable.

KINGSTONE, UPPER, a hmlt. in the par. of Long Bredy, co. Dorset, 7 miles W. of Dorchester.

KINGSTONE-WINSLOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Ashbury, hund. of Shrivenham, co. Berks, 8 miles W.S.W. of Wantage, and 21 from Newbury. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural.

KINGSTON-GATE, a hmlt. in the par. of Kingston-on-Thames, co. Surrey, 1 mile N. of Kingston.

KINGSTON-INN, a hmlt. in the par. of Kingston-Bagpuize, co. Berks, 5 miles W. of Abingdon.

KINGSTON-LACY, a manor in the par. of Wimborne Minster, co. Dorset, 2 miles W. of Wimborne. It contains Abbotstreet, where was a monastery founded by St. Cuthburga, now the collegiate church, also several other hmlts. Here is a fine old seat, built in 1663, which has a picture gallery containing landscapes by Borgham, portraits by Vandyck, Lely, Kneller, and other ancient masters, and many paintings by Spanish masters.

KINGSTON-LISLE, a chplry. in the par. of Sparsholt, hund. of Shrivenham, co. Berks, 7 miles from Farringdon, and 5 W. of Wantage, its post town. It is situated on the old Roman road Port Way. Near the village is a singular stone called the "blowing stone," which is perforated, and was brought from the neighbouring hills. This stone, if blown through, produces a sound that can be heard several miles. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Sparsholt, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a small rough structure, with tower containing two bells. There is a place of worship for Baptists. E. M. Atkins, Esq., is lord of the manor. There is a meet for the old Berkshire hounds.

KINGSTON MARLWOOD and KINGSTON UPPER, hmlts. in the par. of Stinsford, co. Dorset, 1 mile N.E. of Dorchester.

KINGSTON-NEAR-LEWES, a par. in the hund. of Swanborough, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 2 miles S.W. of Lewes, its post town. It is situated near the Brighton railway at the south-eastern extremity of the South Downs. The surface is varied, and the meadows are watered by numerous brooks. Half the parish is unenclosed sheepwalks. The living is a vic. annexed to the vic.* of Iford, in the dioc. of Chichester. The church, dedicated to St. Pancras, is an ancient structure with a square shingled tower. In the church is a very antique carved oak pulpit. There is a brass to the Vinall family, bearing date 1667. The register dates from 1557. The Rev. John Goring, of Weston Park, is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

KINGSTON-RUSSELL, an ext. par. lib. in the hund. of Uggscombe, Dorchester div. of the co. Dorset, 1 mile S. of Corfe, and 8 miles from Dorchester. This place, which in ancient records is stated to have been in the parish of Whitchurch-Canonicorum, had formerly a weekly market and annual fair, but these have long been discontinued. There is no village, only a few scattered houses. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £151. There was formerly a free chapel dedicated to St. James, but it is now in ruins.

KINGSTON SEYMOUR, a par. in the hund. of Chewton, co. Somerset, 8 miles N.W. of Axbridge, 2½ W. of Yatton, and 15 from Bristol, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Yeo, near the Bristol Channel. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is in pasture, and has been frequently inundated by the sea. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £305. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a tower crowned by a small spire, and containing five bells. Over the altar is a painting of the Transfiguration, by Smirke. The parochial charities produce £1 per annum.

KINGSTON-UPON-HULL. See HULL, co. York.

KINGSTON-UPON-RAILWAY, a tnshp. and vil. in the par. of Kingston-upon-Thames, co. Surrey, 1 mile S. of Kingston, and 10 miles from London by the South-Western railway. It is a place of modern growth, containing many villas occupied by merchants and tradesmen residing in London, to whom it affords great facility, from its frequent express trains to London. The extension of the Hampton Court branch has also an intermediate station at Thames-Ditton. There is a church recently erected, and several private schools.

KINGSTON-UPON-SOAR, a par. in the first div. of the wap. of Rushcliffe, co. Nottingham, 9 miles S.E. of Derby, its post town, 10 S.W. of Nottingham, and 1 mile N. of the Kegworth railway station on the Midland Counties railway. The village, which is small, is situated on the E. side of the Soar navigation. There are several cottages of Gothic construction. For many generations it belonged to the Babington family, who had a spacious and ancient mansion here till the reign of Elizabeth, when it was forfeited by one of the family for the part he took in a conspiracy for the restoration of Mary Queen of Scots. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £80. The church, dedicated to St. Winifred, is a small stone edifice with a tower crowned by a spire, and containing two bells. The church was restored in 1848. In the interior is some exquisitely carved screen work and a richly sculptured monument to A. Babington. The charities produce £1 per annum. Kingston Hall is the principal residence, the seat of the Hon. Edward Strutt, who is lord of the manor.

KINGSTON-UPON-THAMES, a par., post and market town, and municipal borough, in the first div. of the hund. of Kingston, co. Surrey, 10 miles from Vauxhall Bridge, 10 from Hyde Park Corner, and 12 S.W. of London. It is a station on the South-Western railway. A railway diverging from the Windsor line at Twickenham also runs into the Old Town. It is situated at the junction of the New-Mill river, formerly called Hogsmill or Ewell, with the Thames. It was called by the Saxons Moreford, but subsequently took the name of Kyningestun, from its having been held in royal demesne, and the place in which many of the Saxon kings were crowned, among whom were Athelstan, Edwin, Ethelred, Edward the Elder, Edmund, Edward the Martyr, and Eldred. Near to the assize court is the coronation stone of the above kings, which is 3½ feet long. It was newly railed in 1850, when coins of the same kings were placed therein. Kingston of late has greatly increased in population, and contains many handsome villas, the residences of merchants and tradesmen residing in London. The town is well paved, lighted with gas, and well supplied with water, partly by pumps and partly from a conduit on Combe-hill, the water of which is conveyed by pipes under the river Thames, laid down by Cardinal Wolsey for the supply of Hampton Court Palace. The streets have been much widened and improved, and near the station of the South-Western railway an entirely new town has been formed. The noble five-arched bridge of Portland stone connecting Hampton Wick with Kingston was completed in 1828, at a cost of £40,000, in lieu of a wooden one built prior to the reign of Henry III. In connection with this bridge we may mention a curious petition still extant in the Public Record Office, of the king's footmen to Charles II. praying a grant of the fines which may be imposed on the bailiffs of Kingston (they prosecuting the suit at their own charges), for pulling down a part of Kingston Bridge, purposely to raise a benefit for the bailiffs there by the use of ferry boats to convey passengers, in consequence of which abuse, no watch being kept at the bridge, two children were drowned in the night.—There are malt houses, corn, flax, and oil mills, with breweries and a distillery. The public buildings are, the townhall, house of correction, now used for the barracks of the county militia, county court, gas works, corn and cattle market, union poorhouse, burial board, and police station. Kingston is governed by a mayor, 8 aldermen, and 24 councillors, and is divided into four wards, each ward returning six members. A county court is held every fourth Tuesday for the parishes in Kingston hundred, and petty sessions are held every Thursday for the county, and every Wednesday for the borough. The quarter sessions are held in October. The Lent assizes are also held here. It is a polling place for East Surrey, and was once a parliamentary borough, returning members to the parliaments from 4 Edward II. to 47 Edward III.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £500, in the patron. of King's College, Cambridge. The parish church, dedicated to All Saints, has been lately restored. It is an ancient cruciform structure with a tower rising from the intersection, formerly surmounted by a spire, which, having been destroyed by lightning in 1703, was taken down, and a portion of the church, of great antiquity, fell in 1730. The interior contains two brasses, one of which is to Skerne, the founder of the chantry, whose wife was daughter to Alice Piere, Edward III.'s mistress, and wife of Sir W. de Wyndeson, of Down Hall; also a monument to Bute, physician of Charles I. In addition to the parish church, there are six district churches, at Ham, St. Andrew's, Norbiton Hook, St. Paul's, Robin-Hood Gate for Kingston Vale, Surbiton, and Christ Church, the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £600 to £80. The district church of St. Mark at Surbiton was consecrated in 1845. The old church, with figures of the Saxon kings, fell down in 1775. The church of St. Peter, at the Norbiton end of the village, which was erected at the cost of £4,000 by subscriptions, is a handsome building of brick, with a square tower containing one bell. The charities produce about £1,182 per annum. There are Alderman Cleave's almshouses for 12 poor aged men and women. At Norbiton is the Cambridge asylum for soldiers' widows, the foundation stone of which was laid by the late Prince Consort in 1852. It has a chapel adjoining. There are grammar, blue-coat, National, and infant schools. The Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, and Roman Catholics, have places of worship.—Many Roman antiquities have been discovered in the immediate vicinity of the town, which induced Dr. Gale to identify this place as occupying the site of the ancient Tamesa mentioned by the geographer of Ravenna. On digging the foundation of the new bridge across the river, several Roman military weapons were found.

KINGSTON-WITH-BLYTHE-BRIDGE, a par. in the S. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 3½ miles S. of Uttoxeter, 10 N.E. of Stafford, and 2 S. of the Bramshall station on the North Staffordshire railway. It is a small village. The land is chiefly in pasture, and the soil a stiff marl. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £68. The church is a small ancient structure with a low brick tower. The parochial charities produce about £3 8*s.* per annum. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. The late Earl of Shrewsbury and Talbot was lord of the manor.

KINGSTOWN, formerly Dunleary, a seaport, market town, fashionable bathing-place, and station of the Royal Yacht Club, in the par. of Monkstown, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Dublin. It has two stations on the Kingstown and Bray section of the Dublin and Wicklow railway, one in the town, and the other at Sandycove Harbour, the royal mail packet station. The former name of this town was derived from Leary, son of "Nial, of the nine hostages," and monarch of Ireland in 458, who resided here. Its present name of Kingstown was conferred on it by George IV. on his embarkation here for England, after his visit to Ireland, in 1821. Queen Victoria also landed and embarked here in August, 1849. It is situated on the southern shore of the bay of Dublin, and possesses a pier harbour, first projected by Captain Toucher, and begun in 1816 by Rennie. Previous to the formation of this harbour the bay of Dublin was regarded as extremely dangerous for shipping, owing to a bar of sand which obstructed the entrance into the port, and rendered the western passage at times utterly impracticable. The cost of this harbour was more than half a million sterling. Its pier is 3,500 feet in length, and its western pier 4,950 feet. By an angular deviation they incline towards each other, leaving at the mouth of the harbour a distance of 850 feet, and enclose an area of 251 statute acres. A quay 40 feet wide is continued along the piers, protected by a parapet, on the sea side, 9 feet high. Along the breast of the harbour a spacious wharf, 500 feet long, has been erected, where merchant vessels of any burthen may deliver or receive their freight at all tides. A revolving light is placed at the extremity of the western pier. This harbour is now exclusively the station for the Holyhead and Liverpool steam packets. The Dublin and Kingstown railway, now amalgamated with the Dublin and Wicklow, affords frequent intercourse between these towns. It was first opened in 1834, and was continued to Dalkey in 1844, on the atmospheric principle, but this being found impracticable in working, it has since been continued to Bray on the ordinary plan.—The town has recently greatly increased in wealth and population, and in 1861 contained 1,823 houses, inhabited by a population of 11,584. It mainly consists of one spacious street, half a mile long, with several smaller streets branching out in all directions. There are several handsome ranges of buildings, as Gresham-terrace and Haddington-terrace. It contains market and court houses, fever hospital, a savings-bank, baths, hotels, lying-in hospital, race-stand, and George IV.'s obelisk, near the quay.—Here is an Episcopal chapel, built by subscription, and called the "Protestant Episcopal Mariners' Church." In the Roman Catholic arrangement the town is the head of a union comprising the parishes of Dalkey, Killiney, Old Connaught, Rathmichael, Tully, and the greater part of Monkstown and Kill. The chapel is a handsome building. There are also places of worship for Wesleyans, Independents, and Presbyterians, and a convent of Mercy. There are numerous schools in connection with the several denominations. According to the census of 1861, the proportions were, 3,335 belonging to the Established Church, 7,745 Roman Catholics, 167 Presbyterians, 88 Methodists, 165 Independents, and 88 of all other denominations.—From the purity of its air, its convenient situation, and excellent sea-bathing, Kingstown has become a great summer resort for the citizens of Dublin. The immediate neighbourhood is thickly studded with villas and handsome residences. Races are held annually in August, also regattas in the harbour. Near here are remarkable quarries of fine granite, which was employed in the erection of the bridge over the Menai Straits, and for the harbours of Howth and Kingstown.—This town is the head of a coast-guard district, including a force of 5 officers and 38 men, under an inspecting resident commander. There is also here a constabulary police force. Petty sessions are held every Monday, also a court to try harbour offences every Tuesday. The seneschal of the Glasnevin and Grangegorman manorial court sits on alternate Fridays for the recovery of debts within this district. The chief business is in connection with the fisheries, and in the cross channel trade, consisting of the export of cattle, corn, granite, and lead ore, and the importation of timber, coal, and iron. The chief residences in the neighbourhood are, Granite Hall, Northumberland Lodge, Wellington Lodge, Plunkett Lodge, Carrig Castle, Fairyland, &c.

KINGS WALDEN, a par. in the hund. of Hitchin, co. Herts, 4 miles S.W. of Hitchin, and 2 from St. Pauls Walden, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is a very ancient place, and was once held by Earl Harold. It is very stragglingly built. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £32. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a commodious structure with a square tower containing six bells. There are three schools for both sexes, supported by C. C. Hall, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

KINGSWEAR, a par. in the hund. of Haytor, co. Devon, half a mile S.E. of Dartmouth, its post town, 4 miles S. of Brixham, and 10½ S. of Torquay. It has a station on the Torquay branch of the South Devon railway. The village, which is small, is situated at the mouth of the river Dart, and on the eastern side of Dartmouth Harbour. It has the ruins of an old fort, taken by Fairfax in 1646, and on the brow of a hill near the village are some remains of military works. Kingswear is considered very invigorating to persons of consumptive or delicate constitution. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £4, and the vicarial for £7 15*s*. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £87, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, is a stone structure, rebuilt, in 1847, with the exception of the tower, which contains a clock and three bells. It contains a very old rhyming epitaph in French. The parochial charities produce about £23 per annum. John Fownes Lutterell, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KING'S WEIR, an ext. par. place adjoining the par. of Woolvercott, co. Oxford, 2 miles N. of Oxford.

KINGSWESTON, a tythg. in the par. of Henbury, lower div. of the hund. of Berkeley, co. Gloucester, 3 miles N.W. of Bristol. Kingsweston House is the principal residence. It formerly belonged to Lord de Clifford, but is now the seat of P. Miles, Esq., M.P. It is situated under Pen-Pole Hill, from which a view of the surrounding country may be obtained. It contains a fine picture gallery.

KINGSWINFORD, a par. and small town in the N. div. of the hund. of Seisdon, co. Stafford, 3 miles W. of Dudley, its post town, 3 N. of Stourbridge, and 13 N.W. of Birmingham. The par., which is considerable, is situated on the Stafford and Worcester canal, and contains the hmlts. of Bromley, Pensnett, Street End, Worsley, Wall Heath, and Holly Hall. It formerly belonged to the Saxon kings. Quarrybank, Brockmoor, and Pensett are now separate parishes taken out of this parish under Sir Robert Peel's Act. Here are extensive coal and iron mines, potteries, glass and wire works, brick and tile kilns, malting, nail-making, &c., which give considerable employment to the inhabitants. It contains Stourbridge union poorhouse and a savings-bank. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £950. In addition to the parish church there are six district churches—viz. St. Mary's, Brierley Hill, Hart's Hill, Brockmoor, Pensnett, and Quarrybank. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, at the death of the rector, in 1831, became locally the parish church of Kingswinford by Act of Parliament, and the old church was made a chapel-of-ease, adjoining the new parsonage, at Wordsley. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum. Here are National and infant schools. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Prestwood House is the principal residence. The Earl of Dudley is lord of the manor. At Kingswinford and Clent the inhabitants are exempt from serving on juries. Holbeche House, the ancient seat of the Littleton family, was the retreat of Catesby and other conspirators in the Gunpowder Plot. At Ashwood Heath, which is traversed by the Roman road, are remains of a camp.

KINGSWOOD, a lib. in the par. of Ewell, first div. of the hund. of Reigate, co. Surrey, 6 miles S.E. of Epsom, its post town, and 3½ N.W. of Reigate. It is a separate ecclesiastical district, comprising parts of the pars. of Ewell and Banstead. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a cruciform structure with a square embattled tower containing six bells. The church has been recently erected, at an outlay of £6,000, defrayed by Thomas Alcock, Esq., who is also the founder and supporter of the National schools.

KINGSWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Ludgershall, hund. of Ashendon, co. Bucks, 9 miles N.W. of Aylesbury. It is a small agricultural place.

KINGSWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Delamere, first div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, co. Chester, 3 miles S. of Frodsham, and 4 N.W. of Delamere. The soil is a light sandy loam. The chief part of this tnshp. is owned by the crown.

KINGSWOOD, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Oldland, par. of Bitton, co. Gloucester, 4 miles E. of Bristol. It is situated near the river Avon, and the Bristol and Gloucester railway, on the borders of Kingswood Forest. The village, which is considerable, is chiefly inhabited by colliers and hat-makers. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £101, in the patron. of the Prebend of Bitton. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity.

KINGSWOOD, a hmlt. in the pars. of Lapworth and Rowington, co. Warwick, 4 miles N.E. of Henley-in-Arden. It is a station on the Oxford, Warwick, and Birmingham branch of the Great Western railway, and is intersected by the Birmingham and Stratford-on-Avon canal.

KINGSWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 3 miles W. of Bewdley.

KINGSWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Stogumber, co. Somerset, 4 miles S.E. of Watchet.

KINGSWOOD, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Chippenham, co. Gloucester, 1 mile S.W. of Wootton-under-Edge, its post town, and 2 miles from the Charfield station, on the Bristol and Birmingham railway. It was once forest, and has the gatehouse and other remains of a Cistercian priory, founded in 1139 by Roger Berkeley, as a cell to Tyntern Abbey. The site was given by Queen Elizabeth to the Thynnes. Previous to 1844 it formed part of the county of Wilts, but is now annexed to Gloucester. The village is considerable, and many of the inhabitants in the cloth trade. There are woollen cloth factories at Kingswood Mills, Nind Mills, and Park Mills, also a brewery. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £99, in the patron. of the inhabitants. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure with one bell. It contains an ancient font, and tombs of the Berkeley family. There are schools for boys and infants. The Wesleyans and Independents have chapels. R. H. Blagden Hale, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KINGSWOOD FIELDS, a hmlt. in the par. of Shotwick, co. Chester, 5 miles N.W. of Chester.

KINGTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Pickering, wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Pickering, and 12 N. of Malton. The land is chiefly arable, and the soil sand and loam. Colonel Fothergill is lord of the manor and chief landowner. Kingthorpe Hall is the principal residence.

KINGTON, a tythg. in the par. of Thornbury, lower div. of the hund. of Thornbury, co. Gloucester, 1 mile W. of Thornbury, situated near the Bristol and Gloucester railway.

KINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Leintwardine, hund. of Wigmore, co. Hereford, 6 miles W. of Ludlow. It is a small agricultural place.

KINGTON, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Halfshire, co. Worcester, 9½ miles E. of Worcester, its post town, 8 N.E. of Pershore, and 8½ S.W. of Alcester. It is a small agricultural place consisting of a few farmhouses and cottages. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1781. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £99. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a plain structure with a tower containing three bells.

KINGTON, a par. and market town in the hund. of Huntington, co. Hereford, 18 miles N.W. of Hereford, and 154 W. by N. of London. It is the terminus of the Leominster and Kington branch of the West Midland railway. The par., which is of large extent, includes, besides the town of Kington, containing Old and New Kington, the tnshps. of Barton, Both-Hergests, and Lilwall. The town, which consists of two spacious streets, is situated under Bradnor Hill Camp, on the banks of the river Arrow. It is of considerable antiquity, and had an archer's castle for defence of the Welsh borders. Charles II. is believed to have slept at an inn in this town previous to the fatal battle of Worcester. The manufacture of woollen cloth was formerly carried on extensively, but has now entirely ceased, and glove-making, which, until a recent period, furnished employment to a considerable number of the inhabitants, has much declined. There are three branch banks, a savings-bank, iron foundries, a nail manufactory, and an extensive tannery. Courts leet and baron for the manor are held annually, at the former of which a bailiff is appointed; and the county magistrates hold petty sessions for the hundred of Huntington every Friday. The town is a polling-place for the county elections, and the seat of a Poor-law Union embracing 11 parishes in Herefordshire, and 17 in Radnorshire. It is also the head of new County Court and superintendent registry districts. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. with Huntington annexed, £520, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, and was thoroughly repaired and enlarged in 1829. There are also churches at Brilley, Huntington, and Michaelchurch. The Baptists, Wesleyans, and Independents have places of worship. The free grammar school was founded in 1619 by Lady Hawkins, who endowed it with an estate now producing £300 per annum. There are also National and Sunday schools. Bradnor Hill, to the N. of the town, are traces of an ancient encampment, and to the W. of the town is a mound which was formerly fortified—these works are supposed to have formed part of a chain of strongholds between Huntington Castle and the Castle of Lyon's Hall, to the S. of the parish. In a barn still standing the celebrated tragic actress, Mrs. Siddons, made her first appearance on the stage. Wednesday is market day. Fairs are held on the Wednesday before the 2nd February, Easter-Wednesday, Whit-Monday, 2nd August, 19th September, 11th October, and Christmas, chiefly for cattle.

KINGTON, a hund. in co. Warwick, in four divisions, distinguished as Brailes, Burton-Bassett, Kington, and Warwick [which see]. The Kington div. contains the pars. of Atherstone-on-Stour, Butlers Marston, Chadshunt, Compton Verney, Eatington, Gayton, Holford, Kington, Lighthorne, Oxhill, Radway, Tysoe, Whitchurch, and part of Ilmington, comprising about 31,000 acres. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of Worcester.

KINGTON, or KINETON, a par. and decayed market town in the hund. of Kington, co. Warwick, 11 miles S.W. of Warwick, its post town, 12 N.W. of Banbury, and 6 from Harbury station, on the Oxford and Birmingham Junction line of railway. It is situated on rising ground near a branch of the river Avon, and in the midst of a valley. A small brook runs through the parish. It contains the hmlt. of Little Kineton and the chplry. of Combrook under Edge Hill, where Charles I. was defeated in 1642. The elevation of Edge Hill above the sea is 700 feet, and the waters descend from it on one side into the Thames by the river Cherwell, and on the other into the Severn by the Avon. Kineton was formerly a place of great importance, and belonged to King Edward the Confessor. It subsequently was the residence of King John, whose palace stood on Castle Hill. It was given to Kenilworth Priory by Henry I. At Little Kineton is a well called King John's Well. It is a meet for the Warwick hounds. The market was discontinued in 1841. Petty sessions are held at the Swan Inn on the last Wednesday in each month. The town is a polling-place for the southern division of the shire. It is irregularly built, and the houses, which are of the rudest style of Elizabethan architecture, are in general of stone, with thatched roofs. In detached situations are several modern houses, built of stone and brick. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £116. The parish church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient cruciform structure with a tower containing six bells. The church was partly rebuilt in 1775. In the interior are effigies of a priest and several monuments. There is also a district church at Combrook, the living of which is a perpet. cur. The charities produce about £107 per annum, of which £25 goes to Combrook school. On the site of the old marketplace a schoolroom has lately been erected by Lord Willoughby de Broke. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship. A statute fair is held 2nd October, and a bean fair 5th February.

KINGTON LANGLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Kington St. Michael, N. div. of the hund. of Damerham, co. Wilts, half a mile N.W. of Kington St. Michael, and 2½ miles from Chippenham, its post town. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of St. Michael, in the dioc. of Gloucester. The church was erected in 1855, by voluntary contributions. It is a stone structure with a porch, and is dedicated to St. Peter. There is a National school for both sexes. Walter Coleman, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KINGTON MAGNA, a par. in the hund. of Redlane, Sturminster div. of co. Dorset, 7 miles W. of Shaftsbury, and 7 S.E. of Wincanton. West Stour is its post town. It is situated near the river Cale, and contains the tythg. of Nyland. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The village, which is small, is situated on the road from London, viâ Yeovil, to Exeter. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £532, in the patron. of trustees. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The register dates from 1559. There are places of worship for Independents and Primitive Methodists.

KINGTON ST. MICHAEL, a par. in the N. div. of the hund. of Damerham, co. Wilts, 3½ miles N.W. of Chippenham, its post town, and 36 from Salisbury. The par., which is considerable, contains the tythgs. of Easton Piercy, Kington St. Michael, and Kington Langley. It formerly belonged to the Saxon kings, who gave it to Glastonbury Abbey, which had a Benedictine nunnery cell, founded prior to the reign of Henry II. Some traces of it are still to be seen at a farm. Its revenue at the Dissolution was £38 3*s.* 10*d.* It was once a market town, but is now an inconsiderable village. The surface is flat, and the soil clay alternating with sand and stone brash. Building stone is quarried. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of St. Peter's annexed, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £450. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient Norman structure with a modern tower containing six bells. In the interior are some stained-glass windows, several monuments, and brasses of Lady Englefield, Snell, &c. The body of the church was built by Abbot Michael in the reign of Henry III. The parochial charities produce about £45 per annum, of which £5 goes to Bowerman's school, and £33 to Lyte's almshouses. A fair is held on the 6th October for horses.

KINGTON, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Chippenham, co. Wilts, 10 miles N.W. of Chippenham, its post town. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural, and is a meet for the Beaufort hounds. There are quarries of stone for common building purposes. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £553 14s. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £417, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a plain ancient structure with a tower containing four bells. This living was formerly held by Bishop Latimer, whose favourite oak-tree is here. William Codrington, Esq., is lord of the manor. Near Ebbedown are vestiges of a Roman camp.

KINGUSSIE AND INSH, an united par. in the district of Badenoch, co. Inverness, Scotland. It extends 17 miles from E. to W. and 20 from N. to S., and is bounded by the pars. of Moy, Laggan, Alvie, and Dalrossie, and on the S. by co. Perth. Its surface is mountainous and heathy, and it is more elevated than any other parish in Scotland, being situated nearly in the centre of the Highlands. It is intersected by the river Spey, the bed of which is 850 feet above sea-level. The other rivulets are the Tromie, Gynag, Calder, and Truim. The Highland road between Inverness and Perth traverses the parish. It is in the presb. of Abernethy and synod of Moray. The minister's stipend is £270. There are a Government church and a Free church at Inch. There are several schools in the neighbourhood. This locality, abounding in game of all kinds, is a favourite spot with sportsmen. Opposite the village of Kingussie, and on the S. side of the river, stand the ruins of Ruthven Castle, which was used as a barrack in the reign of George II., and was burnt down in 1746; it was a place of great antiquity, and was the ancient seat of the Lords of Badenoch. James M'Pherson, the composer and translator of Ossian's poems, was a native of this place. There are several lochs in the district, the principal being lochs Ericht and Inch. It contains the vils. of Kingussie, Newtonmore, and Ralia. Kingussie is 44 miles S. from Inverness and 73 N. from Perth on the great road between the two towns. It is a station on the Inverness and Perth and Inverness and Aberdeen Junction railway. Though a village it is a place of local importance, being the chief place in the Badenoch district. It possesses some substantial buildings. The town contains a small gaol and sessions house, in which the justices of the peace for the district hold their courts monthly, and a sheriff's small-debt court is held on the first Tuesdays in January, May, and September. The British Linen Company have a bank, and there is a savings-bank, also several insurance offices. The days for holding the fairs are for the most part regulated by the fairs of Beauley and Falkirk.

KINGWATER, a tnshp. in the par. of Lanercost, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 9 miles N.E. of Brampton. It contains the hmlt. of Westhall. It is situated in a vale extending over 7 miles in length, and watered by several rills issuing from the mountains which unite to the northward of Gilsland. The Earl of Carlisle and John Ramshay, Esq., are the principal landowners.

KINGWESTON, a par. in the hund. of Catsash, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.E. of Somerton, its post town, 8 from Langport, and 7 W. of Castle Cary railway station. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The soil is various. Blue lias is obtained from the quarries, of excellent quality for building. This place is memorable for the defeat of the Western insurgents in the reign of Edward VI. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £156. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £140. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone structure, with a spire containing five bells. The church was rebuilt in 1855. There is a school for both sexes, in which the Sunday-school is also held. The magistrates sit at Somerton. Francis Henry Dickenson, Esq., is lord of the manor, and resides at Kingweston House.

KINGWOOD COMMON, in the hund. of Binfield, co. Oxford, 4 miles W. of Henley-upon-Thames.

KININVIE, a barony in co. Banff, Scotland, 9 miles S.W. of Leith. It belongs to Leslie of Balquhan.

KINIRA, a bay in Ardnamurchan, co. Argyle, Scotland, 6 miles S.W. of Arisaig.

KINKELL, an ancient par. in the co. Aberdeen, Scotland, now united to Keith Hall.

KINKELL, an ancient par. now joined to Trinity Gask, co. Perth, Scotland.

KINKERSWELL, or KINGSKERSWELL, a par. in the hund. of Haytor, co. Devon, 2½ miles S. of Newton Abbott, its post town, 3 N. of the Tor railway station, and 1½ mile S. of the junction of the Plymouth and Exeter lines. It is a station on the Torquay branch of the South Devon railway. It is situated on the turnpike road between Exeter and Torquay. There are some limestone quarries. The land is chiefly arable. It is noted for its excellent cider. The village is considerable but chiefly agricultural. The appropriate tithes were commuted for a rent-charge of £210, and the vicarial for £145. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £105, in the patron. of the Vicar of St. Mary Church, who built the curate's residence in 1837. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone structure with a turret. In the interior are an ancient oaken screen and a monument to Sir John Dynham. The charities produce about £19 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans and Baptists have places of worship. There is also a Samaritan society supported by subscriptions. Barton Hall, the principal residence, is the seat of Henry Langford Brown, Esq., who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Many Roman coins were dug up in a piece of waste land near the church in 1840.

KINLET, a par. in the hund. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 5 miles N.E. of Cleobury Mortimer, and 8 S. of Bridgnorth. It includes the tnshp. of Earnwood. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The principal residence is Kinlet Hall, formerly the seat of the Blount family, whose ancestors came over with the Conqueror. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £320. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £320. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient cruciform structure, containing several monuments of the Blounts. There is a village school.

KINLOCH, a vil. in the par. of Collessie, co. Fife, Scotland, 5 miles W. of Cupar. It gives name to the Kinlochs of Gilmerton. Its population was greatly reduced some 30 years since by removal to Monkston.

KINLOCH, an ancient par. in co. Argyle, Scotland, now joined to Campbeltown.

KINLOCHAILART, a hmlt. in the district of Arrisaig, par. of Ardnamur, co. Inverness, Scotland, 27 miles N.W. of Fort William. It is situated on Loch Aylort, near the ferry to Skye, on Slate Sound. Fairs for the sale of cattle are held on the third Fridays in May and October.

KINLOCH AND LETHENDY, an united par. in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 6 miles N.E. of Dunkeld. It is bounded by Clunie, Caputh, and Blairgowrie, the latter being its post town. Its size is 9 miles by 1. Its surface is about half under tillage. The soil in many places is fertile. The par. is united to Lethendy in the presb. of Dunkeld and synod of Perth. The minister's stipend is £210, in the patron. of crown. There is one parish church jointly for this place and Lethendy. There is a Free church at Lethendy. Glassclune castle stands at a short distance from the village. On a moor known as Haer (i.e. battle) Cairns, where Agricola and Galgacus fought, are many tumuli. The parish is intersected by the Lornty Burn and Airdle Water. It contains three lakes. Marlee, a mansion of the Farquharsons of Invercauld, is situated in this parish.

KINLOCH BERVIE, a quoad sacra par. in co. Sutherland, Scotland. It comprises the northern portion of the quondam civilia par. of Edderachillis. It has a Government church with a minister's stipend of £120, and also a Free church.

KINLOCHLEVEN, a demesne on Loch Leven, near the borders of cos. Argyle and Inverness, Scotland, 5 miles N.E. of Invercoe. It is the property of the Camerons.

KINLOCHLYCHART, a quoad sacra par. in the pars. of Contin, Fodderty, and Urray, co. Ross, 5 miles S.W. of Dingwall. The living is in the presb. of Dingwall and in the patron. of the crown.

KINLOCH-MOIDART, a vil. in co. Inverness, Scotland, 8 miles N.W. of Strontian. It is a post-office station situated near Loch Moidart.

KINLOCHSPELVIE, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Torosay, E. side of Mull, co. Argyle, Scotland, 15 miles W. of Oban. It is situated on Mull Sound and Loch Linnhe, under Benmore, which attains an altitude of 3,168 feet above sea-level. It is chiefly mountain pasture and heath, abounding with game. The living is in the presb. of Mull, and in the patron. of the crown.

KINLOSS, a par. in co. Elgin, Scotland, 2 miles N.E. of Forres. It is bounded by the pars. of Rafford, Alves, and Forres, the Moray Frith, and the Findhorn estuary. It is a station on the Inverness and Perth and Inverness and Aberdeen Junction railway. The par. contains the vil. of Kinloss and post town of Findhorn. The parish is nearly rectangular in shape, measuring 3 miles by 4, and comprises about 4,000 acres, of which 2,850 are under tillage. It is generally flat, but fertile. Here are the ruins of Kinloss Cistercian abbey, founded in 1150 by David I., and subsequently given to the Bruce family, barons Kinloss and earls of Elgin. This par., which was disjoined in 1657 from the pars. of Rafford, Alves, and Forres, is in the presb. of Forres, and synod of Moray. The minister's stipend is £240. There is a Free church and several schools. The mansions are Sea Park and Grange Hall. The village of Kinloss is small, and situated at the head of Loch Findhorn.

KINLOUGH, a post-office vil. in the par. of Rossinver, in the bar. of Rosclogher, co. Leitrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 11 miles N. of Manor-Hamilton, and 141 from Dublin. It is situated on the road from Ballyshannon to Manor-Hamilton, near Lough Melvin. In the village stands the parish church, the Roman Catholic chapel, a school, and the dispensary, which is within the Ballyshannon Poor-law Union. It is the seat of a chief police station, and petty sessions are held at intervals. Near the village is Kinlough House, a modern residence. Fairs are held on the 6th of every month.

KINMAEL, the seat of Lord Dinorben, in the hund. of Rhuddlan, co. Flint, 4 miles W. of St. Asaph. It is situated near the confluence of the rivers Elwy and Clwyd. The mansion was burnt in 1842, but has since been rebuilt on a splendid scale.

KINNABAR, a bar. belonging to the Duke of Montrose, in co. Forfar, Scotland.

KINNAIL, a lough on the borders of cos. Cavan, Longford, and Westmeath, Ireland. It is about 2 miles long.

KINNAIRD, a par. in the district of Gowrie, in co. Perth, Scotland. It is bounded by the pars. of Inchture (its post town), Collace, Errol, Abernyte, and Kilspindie, and contains the vils. of Pitmiddie, Flawcraig, Nethermains, and Craigdallie. Its size is 3 miles by 2. It is fertile, but chiefly in pasture. The par. is in the presb. of Dundee, and synod of Angus. The minister's stipend is £220, in the patron. of the crown. The church is a modern and commodious structure. Here is Kinnaird Castle, said to be 700 years old. It was inhabited for a short period in 1617 by James VI., and now belongs to the Fingask family, by whom it was repaired about ten years ago. Weaving and agriculture are the chief employments of the inhabitants.

KINNAIRD, a quondam par. in co. Forfar, Scotland, now divided between the pars. of Brechin and Farnell. Here is Kinnaird Castle, the seat of the Carnegies of Southesk.

KINNAIRD, a vil. in the par. of Larbert, co. Stirling, Scotland, 3 miles N. of Falkirk. This estate was owned by Bruce, the celebrated Abyssinian traveller. The inhabitants are chiefly employed as colliers. The Carron Ironworks are in the neighbourhood.

KINNAIRD, a vil. in the par. of Moulin, co. Perth, Scotland, near Moulin, and 6 miles N.W. of Dunkeld. Kinnaird House is a seat of the Duke of Athol.

KINNAIRD'S HEAD, a high promontory on the coast of Buchan, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It has an ancient castle of the Frasers, and a lighthouse with a fixed light, in lat. 57° 42′ N., long. 2° 1′ W., which was erected in 1787, and is 120 feet high, and visible 16 miles off.

KINNATALLOON, a bar. in co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Its boundaries are Condons on the N., co. Waterford on the E., Imokilly and Barrymore on the S., and Barrymore on the W. It is 6 miles in length, and the same in breadth. It contains the pars. of Aherne, Ballinoe, and Mogeely, and part of those of Britway, Clonmult, and Knockmourne.

KINNEDER, an ancient par. in co. Elgin, Scotland, now united to Drainey. Here are the ruins of an ancient church, and also of a castle where the bishops of Moray formerly resided.

KINNEFF AND CATTERLINE, an united par. in co. Kincardine, Scotland. It is situated on the sea-coast, to the S. of Dunnotar. It is bounded on the W. by Arbuthnot, and on the S. by Bervie, and extends from the water of Bervie to the northern point, about 5 miles along the coast, which is very bold and rocky. Two-thirds of the land is under tillage. This united parish was once joined to the parish of Bervie. It is in the presb. of Fordoun, and synod of Angus and Mearns. The minister's stipend is £232, in the patron. of the crown. The parish church was erected in 1738. There is a Free church. Sandstone is quarried in the neighbourhood. Near the sea, and about 500 yards from the church, are the ruins of a castle, from which it is supposed the parish has taken its name. Tradition assigns it to Kenneth, a Scottish monarch. In the manse, or pulpit of the parish church, the regalia of Scotland was hid during the siege of Dunnotar Castle, in 1652. Kingorney, where Bruce landed in 1341, was the property of the celebrated Dr. John Arbuthnot, physician to Queen Anne, and intimate friend of Pope and Swift. Through this parish the road between Aberdeen and Montrose runs. It is a coastguard station.

KINNEGAD, a quoad sacra par. and post-office vil. in the par. of Killucan, bar. of Farbill, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 10 miles E.S.E. of Mullingar, and 36 from Dublin. It is situated on the Kinnegad river and the Great Connaught road. The Midland railway passes in the vicinity. Here are a church, Roman Catholic chapel, school, and a dispensary, which last is within the Mullingar Poor-law Union. This place is rather celebrated for its cheese, and was once a market town. It gives name to a quoad sacra parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £98, in the patron. of the Rector of Killucan. There is a police station in the village. A fair is held on the 9th May.

KINNEIGH, a par. in the bar. of East and West Carbery, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Dunmanway. It includes Enniskeen, its post town, and the vil. of Castletown. It is 10 miles long by 6 broad. The surface lies along the banks of the river Bandon, and is crossed by the road from Cork to Bantry. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £400, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1790. There are two united Roman Catholic chapels, a Sunday-school, two day schools, and three or four hedge-schools. Palace Anne and Fort Robert are the principal residences. Here is a very interesting pillar tower of hexagonal form.

KINNEIL, an ancient par. in co. Linlithgow, Scotland, now joined to Bo'ness. Here is Kinneil House, a seat of the Duke of Hamilton, where Dugald Stuart lived as tutor. It contains some fine carving, and is hung with ancient tapestry.

KINNELL, a rivulet which rises at Kirkpatrick-Juxta, in co. Dumfries, Scotland, and continues its course for 10 miles in a southerly direction, past Eeby

(where the river Ae joins) to the river Annan, near Lockerby.

KINNELL, a par. in the district and co. of Forfar, Scotland, 6 miles from Arbroath, its post town. It is bounded by the pars. of Craig, Farnell, Guthrie, Kirktown, and Marytown, and is watered by the streams Lunan and Pow. It is 4 miles long by 2¾ broad. The surface is flat, comprising about 4,000 acres, of which 3,500 are under cultivation. Through this parish the Aberdeen railway runs, and likewise the road between Brechin and Arbroath. The par. is in the presb. of Arbroath, and synod of Angus and Mearns. The minister's stipend is £230, in the patron. of the crown. The church is a substantial structure erected in 1855. In it is preserved a spur 8 inches long and 4 broad, said to have belonged to a man who fell in a battle between the Ogilvies and Lindseys, in 1443. In this parish are flax-spinning mills, and several tumuli.

KINNELLAR. See KINELLAR, co. Aberdeen.

KINNERLEY, a par. in the hund. of Lower Oswestry, co. Salop, 6 miles S.E. of Oswestry. The parish is intersected by the great Holyhead road and a branch of the river Severn. It contains the tnshps. of Dovaston, Edgerley, Kynaston, Maesbrook, Osbaston, and Tyricoed. The ancient castle was demolished during the minority of Henry III. by Llewellyn, Prince of Wales. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £114. The church is a plain edifice dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum.

KINNERSLEY, a par. in the hund. of Stretford, co. Hereford, 9 miles from Kington, its post town, 4 S.W. of Weobly, and 14 N.W. of Hereford. It is situated on the road from Leominster to Hay. The land is partly in hops, and the soil various. The village, which is a small agricultural place, had a castle of some importance before the Norman Conquest. The remains of the castle have been converted into a dwelling-house The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £415. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £353. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient structure with a tower. In the interior are several monuments of ancient date. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum, of which £5 goes to a free school. Kinnersley Castle is the principal residence. John Parkinson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KINNERSLEY, a par. in the hund. of South Bradford, co. Salop, 5 miles N.E. of Wellington. It is a small agricultural place, situated near the Shrewsbury and Newport canal. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £340. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £442. The church is an ancient structure dedicated to St. Chad. There is a school, supported by subscription. About half a mile from the village is a British encampment called the Wall.

KINNERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Old Radnor, co. and borough of Radnor, 3 miles N.E. of Radnor. It is joined with Salford and Badland. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Old Radnor. The principal residence is Kinnerton House.

KINNERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wentnor, co. Salop, 5 miles N.W. of Church Stretton. It is joined with Ritton.

KINNERTON, HIGHER, a tnshp. in the par. of Doddleston, co. Flint, 3 miles N.E. of Caergwrle. It contains the hmlts. of Kinnerton Bridge, Kinnerton Green, Babylon, and Water's Green.

KINNERTON, LOWER, a tnshp. in the par. of Doddleston, hund. of Broxton, co. Chester, 1½ mile from Doddington, and 5 miles S.W. of Chester. A small stream which flows past Kinnerton Bridge Hall divides England and Wales. There is a free school.

KINNESHEAD, a railway station on the Glasgow and Crofthead line, 5 miles from Glasgow.

KINNESSWOOD, a vil. in the par. of Portmoak, co. Kinross, Scotland, 5 miles E. of Kinross. It is situated under West Lomond Hill. This village was the birthplace of Michael Bruce, the poet (1746-67). A fair is held here on the second Tuesday in April (old style).

KINNETHMONT AND CHRIST'S KIRK, a par. in the district of Garioch, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It is about 8 miles S. of Huntly, and a railway station on the Great North of Scotland line. The par. is about 6 miles in length and 3 in breadth. The surface is diversified with high and low ground, but, with two or three exceptions, can scarcely be called hilly. The river Bogie forms the western boundary of the parish, and there are several minor streams here. On Malshach Hill is a medicinal spring. Several hundred acres of marsh and moor have been of late converted into arable land. The par. is in the presb. of Alford and synod of Aberdeen. The minister has a stipend of £125. The church, erected in 1812, is a commodious structure. Here is a Free church, and also two parochial schools. The parish is said to have taken its name from one of the kings, Kenneth, having been buried here. It includes the ancient par. of Christ's Kirk.

KINNETTLES, a par. in the co. Forfar, Scotland. It is bounded by the pars. of Forfar, Glammis, and Inverarity. Its size is 2 miles long by 2 broad. It is exceedingly fertile and well cultivated. The Dean and Kerbit, or Airty, are the principal streams. The par. contains the Kirktown of Kinnettles and the vil. of Douglastown. It is in the presb. of Forfar and synod of Angus and Mearns. The minister's stipend is £158, in the patron. of the crown. The parish church is a modern structure. There is also a Free church. Slate, sandstone, whinstone, and greywacke are quarried, and there are mineral springs in the neighbourhood. The parish is intersected by the Midland railway, which has no station here, and by the road from Cupar Angus to Forfar. The village is small, but well built.

KINNEYSIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Bees, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 4 miles N.E. of Egremont. The village is considerable, and many of the inhabitants are employed in the extensive lead mines and in the smelting mill belonging to the London Lead Company.

KINNIE, a rivulet in the co. Inverness, Scotland. It joins the river Garry above Inchlaggan.

KINNISHEAD, a hmlt. in Lower ward, co. Lanark, Scotland, 3¾ miles from Glasgow by the Glasgow and Crofthead section of the Caledonian railway, on which it is a station.

KINNISIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Bees, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 6 miles S.E. of Whitehaven and 4 from Egremont. It contains lead, and the soil is fertile. General Windham is lord of the manor.

KINNITTY, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Ballybritt, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 18 miles S.W. of Tullamore. The parish is large. The surface is mountainous in the S.E., where it includes part of the Slieve Bloom mountains. The road from Dublin to Birr passes along the northern border. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with three others, £231, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was enlarged, by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits, in 1817. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, a Sunday and several day schools. The village, which stands on the Dublin road, is a petty sessions town and a police station, containing a dispensary within the Birr Poor-law Union. The principal seats are Castle Bernard and Kinnitty House. An abbey is alleged to have been founded here by St. Finian in the middle of the 6th century, and demolished by the Danes. The poet and historian Colga Mac Conagahn is said to have been abbot here, and died in 871. In the vicinity are remains of Danish raths.

KINNORDY, an ancient loch in the co. Forfar, Scotland, near Kirriemuir, now drained, but gives name to the estate of Sir Charles Lyell.

KINNOUL, a par. in the co. Perth, Scotland. It is situated opposite the city of Perth, on the bank of the river Tay. It is 4 miles long by 1 mile broad, and the entire parochial area amounts to 3,680 acres, of which 3,100 are under cultivation. It includes Murray's Hall, Inchyra, Balbeggie, and Balthayock. Bridgend is in that portion of the parish which is nearest the city of Perth, with which it is connected by a bridge over the Tay. It consists of one street, containing several well-built houses. It is well paved and lighted with gas, and comes under the superintendence of the Perth police. There are breweries and two large nurseries, the one known as Dickson's having been established nearly 100 years. The roads from Dundee, Blair-Gowrie, and Cupar-Angus, converge at Bridgend, owing to its proximity to the bridge. The par. is in the presb. of Perth and synod of Perth and Stirling. The minister's stipend is £270. The parish church, situated at Bridgend, is a modern and commodious structure. It was erected on the site of St. Constantine, which Sir Robert Erskine gave to the monks of Cambuskenneth. The United Presbyterians have a place of worship at Balbeggie. There are several schools. The Perth Lunatic Asylum is situated in this parish. Inchyra and Murray's Hall are the chief mansions. The ruins of Kinnoul Castle, which formerly stood near the parish church, have entirely disappeared. Balsayock Castle, of which there are still some ruins, was the ancient seat of the Blairs. In this parish is Kinnoul Hill, from the top of which is a view over nine or ten counties, with Kilfauns Castle lying below. The hill is 632 feet high, and has a hollow called the Windy Gowle, with a remarkable echo, and a cave known as the Dragon-hole, said to have been a hiding-place of Sir William Wallace. On its slopes agates and some rare plants are found. Kinnoul gives the title of earl to the Hay family. The fairs have been discontinued.

KINNURE. See KINURE, co. Cork.

KINNY, a lough near Lough Swilly, co. Donegal, Ireland.

KINORE, an ancient par. in the co. Aberdeen, Scotland, now joined to Huntly.

KINOULTON, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Bingham, co. Nottingham, 8 miles S.W. of Bingham, its post town, and 10 S.E. of Nottingham. It is situated on the Grantham canal and the Fosse Way, and contains the hmlts. of Newbold and Lodge-on-the-Wolds. Lime is burnt for manure. The land is chiefly arable, but there are some fine tracts of rich grazing land. There is a chalybeate spring on the hill. The archbishops of York formerly had a palace here. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £160, in the patron. of the Bishop of Chester. The church, dedicated to St. Luke, is a red brick structure with a square tower containing five bells. The church was built by the Earl of Gainsborough in 1793. There is a village school.

KINRARA, a demesne of the Duke of Richmond, in the co. Inverness, Scotland, 12 miles E. of Pitman. It is situated on the river Spey.

KINROSS, one of the smallest cos. of Scotland, is bounded on the N. by the co. Perth, on the W. by Clackmannan, and on the S. and E. by the co. Fife. The general figure of the county is somewhat circular, although the line of boundary is very irregular. It extends from E. to W. about 13 miles, and from N. to S. 12 miles; its area is 77 square miles, or 49,531 acres. It may be described as an open vale or plain, environed by uplands and hills, the Ochill hills being on its N., the Lomond hills on its E., the Benarty Hill on its S.E., the Cleish on the S., and the Alva on the W. side. The principal streams are, the Garney, the South Queich, the Kelty, and the Orr, the two first discharging themselves into Loch Leven, which lies at the E. end of a wide vale, and nearly in the centre of the county; the small river Leven issues from it, and pursues an easterly course through the county of Fife. Besides Loch Leven, there are a few minor lakes—or, as they are popularly termed, tarns—on the eminences above Cleish. The climate is healthy, and although wet and cold, it has been of late years much improved by extensive drainage.—Coal is found on the Fife border, but is not wrought within the county. Sandstone is worked at Cleish, and limestone is procured in large quantities from the Lomond hills. In some places veins of lead ore are met with. The original condition of the county was of a moory or mossy nature, and a good deal of it remains so to this day, but the greater portion is now drained, and forms good arable land, resting upon gravel, intermixed with clayey loam.—This district has the remarkable peculiarity in its proprietary of being much divided into farms, each owned in feu by its tenant; there are in consequence more resident lairds in proportion to its extent than in any other division of Scotland. The farms were feued about the beginning of the 18th century from the house of Kinross to the tenants then in possession, whose descendants inherit the properties, paying for them an exceedingly trifling duty or quit-rent. The farms are generally let on leases of from 14 to 21 years, and vary in size from 50 to 300 acres. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agricultural pursuits, manufactures being little attended to except in the towns of Kinross and Milnthort, which carry on a considerable trade.—The county has the advantage of good roads, the chief one running through the town of Kinross and connecting Edinburgh and Perth. It is intersected by the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee line of railway. It contains only two towns, Kinross and Milnthort, the former being the county town. It unites with the county of Clackmannan in sending one member to parliament, and was united with that county in 1807 into one sheriffdom. The population of the county in 1851 was 8,924, and in 1861, 7,977, showing a decrease in the decennial period of 947. The sheriff's court is held at Kinross weekly on Tuesday, and the sheriff's small-debt court every Tuesday during session. Quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesdays of March, May, and August, and on the last Tuesday of October.—The county comprises only four parishes, and three parts of parishes; of these, three entire parishes are in the presb. of Dunfermline, and the other in the presb. of Kirkcaldy, but all in the synod of Fife; of the parts of parishes, one is in the presb. of Auchterarder, and the two other parts in the presb. of Perth, but all in the synod of Perth and Stirling. There are churches in the county belonging to the Established, United Presbyterian, and Free Church bodies.—The county was severed from the county of Fife in 1426, when it simply consisted of the parishes of Kinross, Portmoak, and Orwell, but received a further addition in 1685 of the parishes of Cleish and Tulliebole, and likewise parts of three parishes of the county of Perth.—At Cleish there was a Roman station, and traces of ancient camps are still visible. At Burleigh is an ancient castle, and in Loch Leven are St. Serf's Priory, Portmoak, a Culdee house, and the castle belonging to the Douglas family, where Mary Queen of Scots was confined. The most important seats are, Blairadam, Tulliebole, Greenfield, Hottonburn, Arnott, Kinross, and Cleish.

KINROSS, a par. and market town in co. Kinross, Scotland, 27 miles N. of Edinburgh and 17 S. of Perth. It is situated on the W. side of Loch Leven, which separates it from Portmoak. It is bounded by the pars. of Cleish, Orwell, Portmoak, and Fossoway. Its size is 4 miles by 3½, and its area is about 5,600 acres, the greater proportion of which is arable land. The par. is in the presb. of Dunfermline and synod of Fife. The minister's stipend is £200. The parish church, built in 1832, is a Gothic structure. There is a Free church, also two United Presbyterian churches. There are several schools in the neighbourhood for both sexes. Here formerly stood a castle of great strength, which was long the residence of the earls of Morton. It was removed about a century ago, and its site is now occupied by Kinross House, a structure designed and built by Sir William Bruce, the architect. The parish is drained by the Garney and the North and South Queich, which flow into Loch Leven. This sheet of water is 10 miles in circumference, and has a trout fishery which lets for nearly £200 per annum. In the loch are four islands. [See LOCH LEVEN.] The town of Kinross is of considerable antiquity and is the capital of the county. It occupies a site at one end of the open vale to which it gives name, a little to the N.W. of Loch Leven. It is a railway station on the Edinburgh, Frith, and Dundee line. Its streets, which formerly consisted of narrow lanes, have been greatly improved, and the town now contains many handsome houses, erected particularly in the line of the great N. road, which forms the main street. It contains the county sessions-house, townhall, two large inns, two branch banks in connection with the British Linen Company and the Edinburgh and Glasgow banks, and several insurance agencies, also subscription libraries and benevolent societies. The government of the town is vested in the hands of a committee of the inhabitants, who are elected annually. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of woollen goods and in cotton weaving. At one period the produce of the town was cutlery and brown linen, but these branches of industry have now become almost extinct. The courts of the sheriffs sit here every Tuesday during session, and justices of peace courts are held monthly. Market day is Wednesday, principally for corn. Fairs are held on the third Wednesday in March, the 1st June, the third Wednesday of July, and on the 18th October (old style).

KINROSSIE, a vil. in the par. of Collace, co. Perth, Scotland, 7 miles N.E. of Perth.

KINSALE, a bar. in co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It lies exposed to the Atlantic on the S., and is otherwise bounded by Kinnalea, Courceys, and East Carbery. It contains the pars. of Clontead, Kinsale, Tisaxon, and parts of Ballymartle, Dunderrow, Kilroan, Ringcurran, and Ringrone, with the town of Kinsale.

KINSALE, a par., maritime town, and parliamentary borough, in the bar. of Kinsale, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 14 miles S of Cork and 174 S.W. of Dublin. It has a station at Kinsale Road on the Cork and Bandon line. It comprises an area of 290 acres, and a population by the census of 1861 of 4,624 within the limits of the parliamentary borough. Its name is supposed to be derived from the Irish Cean Taile, signifying "the headland in the sea." Little of its history is known before the 12th century, when it came into the possession of the famous De Courcy by a marriage into the De Cogans, to whom the land was first granted. Here he built the castle of which the ruins now remain. The charter of incorporation was granted in the 7th year of the reign of Edward III., and it was from a very early period a borough by prescription. In 1380 the French and Spanish fleets were pursued by the English into the river Bandon, when an engagement ensued resulting in the defeat of the former. In the following year Richard II. granted a charter to the inhabitants in consideration of the insults they had received from the Spanish and Irish enemies and English rebels, by which they obtained the small customs of the port at an annual rent of 10 marks, the surplus to be expended in completing the walls of the town. In 1482 this charter was confirmed by Edward IV., who granted the corporation all such rights and privileges as the citizens of Cork possessed. In 1488, owing to their having favoured the pretensions of Lambert Simnel, Sir Richard Edgcumbe arrived here with five ships and 600 men to exact new oaths of allegiance from the Irish chiefs, which being given, pardon was granted. In 1594 the town was nearly consumed by a fire. In 1601 it was attacked by a Spanish fleet, and the town taken possession of by Don Juan D'Aquila. The English now advanced and commenced that siege so well known in the annals of Irish history. The castle of Rincurran, on the banks of the river, being taken by the enemy after a short but severe cannonade, was forced to yield to Lord Mountjoy. In like manner the fortress Castle-ni-Park was compelled to surrender; and after undergoing great danger and misery the Spanish commander entered into a capitulation and gave up the town, at the very moment when a large reinforcement from the Spanish king was on its way to relieve him. This utterly annihilated the Spanish power in Ireland. During the parliamentary war in 1641 the Irish were expelled from the town. In 1677 the Duke of Ormond built, for the defence of the town, a new citadel, called Charles Fort. It was here that James II. landed in 1689. Kinsale played an important part in the war against the English in support of James II.—The town is conveniently situated at the mouth of the river Bandon, which is here crossed by a ferry, and has a secure and commodious harbour. Its streets are steep and irregular, being built on the summit of Compass hill; some of them indeed so precipitous as not to admit carriages. The houses are well built. It is a place of great resort during the season for bathing, and numerous villas adorn its outskirts. The banks of the river are enlivened by many gentlemen's seats and plantations. The public buildings are Charles Fort, situated to the E. of the town, and now used as barracks, the townhall, assembly rooms, a convent, Carmelite friary, prison, workhouse, and commodious hotel with floating baths, just completed by the Kinsale Hotel and Bath Company. There is a brewery in the town and flour-mills adjacent. The trade is chiefly local or connected with the fisheries, foreign commerce being absorbed by the neighbouring port of Cork.—The corporation, which was styled "the sovereign, burgesses, and commonalty of the town of Kinsale," was dissolved under the Municipal Act, and its income and revenues vested in the town commissioners under 9 George IV., cap. 82. Petty sessions are held in the town. Value of property rated under the Towns Improvement Act, £7,573. It returns one member to parliament, and had a constituency in 1859 of 144.—The living is a vic. Its church, dedicated to St. Multosia, is a venerable cruciform building. It contains two marble monuments, one of the Southwell family and the other to the wife of Sir John Perceval, Bart. In the Roman Catholic division this parish forms the head of a union. Its chapel possesses a beautiful altar-piece. There are places of worship for Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. There are also six public schools. Also a fever hospital and dispensary. The parochial charities include the Gift House, where eight widows of decayed Protestant tradesmen receive a weekly allowance of 2*s.*; an ancient parochial almshouse, comprising sixteen rooms, and several small bequests for the superannuated poor who do not receive a portion of the weekly contributions of the church. There were formerly an abbey of Canons Regular, founded in the 6th century, and an abbey of Carmelite Friars, of which no remains are extant.—There are ruins of the fortress of Castle-ni-Park. Near here are some celebrated chalybeate springs. This town gives the title of Baron Kinsale to the ancient family of De Courcy. Market days are Friday and Saturday. A fair is held on the 4th September.

KINSALBEG, a par. in the bar. of Decies-within-Drum, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Youghal, its post town. It is situated on the Blackwater, near Youghal harbour and ferry. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. £217, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1821 by aid of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Clashmore. There is a day school. Loughtane is the chief seat.

KINSALEY, a par. in the bar. of Coolock, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.S.W. of Malahide. It is 2½ miles long by 1 mile broad. The soil is mostly good. The road from Malahide to Dublin passes through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Swords, £329, in the patron. of the archbishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel and a day-school. Abbeville and Kinsaley House are the principal residences in the neighbourhood. There is an ancient camp at Feltrim Hill which commands a view, also ruins of a church.

KINSHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Bredon, co. Worcester, 3 miles N.E. of Tewkesbury.

KINSHAM, LOWER, a tnshp. in the par. of Presteigne, co. Hereford, 2 miles E. of Presteigne. It is a small agricultural place.

KINSHAM, UPPER, a par. in the hund. of Wigmore, co. Hereford, 3 miles N.E. of Presteigne, its post town, 7 from Kington, and 12 from Leominster. It is situated on the river Lug, and on the turnpike road from Leintwardine to Presteigne. The land is partly in hops. The soil is very inferior in quality. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £15. The church is a modern structure with a belfry. The chancel contains escutcheons of the Oxford and Mortimer families. Kinsham Court is partly in ruins. Kinsham Dingle is a favourite resort for pleasure seekers on account of its scenery.

KINSLOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Worfield, co. Salop, 4 miles N.E. of Bridgnorth.

KINSON. See KINGSTONE, co. Dorset.

KINSTERRY, a vil. in co. Nairn, Scotland, near Nairn.

KINSTON-PLACE, a hmlt. in the par. of Silkstone, wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 3 miles from Barnsley and 33 S.W. of York. It is situated near the river Dearne and the Barnsley canal.

KINTAIL, a par. in the cos. of Ross and Cromarty, Scotland. It is surrounded by the pars. of Glenshiel and Lochalsh, and a part of the co. of Inverness, and is situated between lochs Dinech and Long. It comprises the vils. of Dornie (post-office), Bundalloch, and Kintail. Its average size is 13 miles by 6, and its surface for the most part consists of mountain pasture, well adapted for all kinds of stock. The par. is in the presb. of Lochcarron, and synod of Glenelg. The minister's stipend is £117, in the patron. of the crown. The parish church is so old that the roof fell in during divine service, in October, 1855, but without injury to any. The Roman Catholics have a place of worship at Dornie. In this district are two Society's schools. Not far from the church is Diarmod's tomb. Donan Castle, which belonged to the Seaforth family, was battered down in 1719. In the neighbourhood is the waterfall of Glomach. The parish is wholly encompassed by mountains, of which Tullochard, the loftiest, commands a distant prospect of the Hebrides.

KINTBURY, a par. in the hund. of Kintbury Eagle, co. Berks, 3½ miles S.E. of Hungerford, its post town. It is a station on the Hungerford branch of the Great Western railway. It is situated on the river Kennet, and the Kennet and Avon canal passes through the parish. It was anciently called Kennetbury, and was formerly a market town and had two fairs. It contains the tnshps. of Holt and Denford. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the silk mills. The parish, which is considerable, has a large tract of common. Many Saxon coins of the reign of Edwy were found here in 1762. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £402, and the vicarial for £803. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £607. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a square tower. In the interior are several ancient monuments of the Dundas and other families. There is also a district church at Denford, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £40. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel, and there is a Sunday-school in connection with the latter. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. Admiral Dundas is lord of the manor.

KINTBURY EAGLE, a hund. in co. Berks, contains the pars. of Avington Chaddleworth, Enborne, Fawley, Hampstead Marshall, Inkpen, Kintbury, Letcombe, Bassett and Regis, East and West Shefford, Speen, West Woodhay, and parts of Chilton Foliatt, Hungerford, and Shalbourn, comprising 42,560 acres.

KINTESSACK, a vil. in the par. of Dyke, in co. Elgin, Scotland, near Forres.

KINTILLO, a vil. in the par. of Dunbarney, co. Perth, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Perth.

KINTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Ness, co. Salop, 8 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury.

KINTORE, a par. and royal burgh in co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 2 miles S.E. of Inverury, and 12 N.W. of Aberdeen. It is intersected by the Great North of Scotland railway, which has a station here, the river Don, and the Aberdeen and Inverury canal. It contains port Elphinstone, on the canal, and part of the ancient par. of Kinkell. Its size is 9 miles by 3, and it contains about 8,000 acres, of which one half is cultivated. The land for the most part is owned by the Earl of Kintore, and Mitchell, of Thainston House—a mansion in this parish. It is in the presb. of Garioch, and synod of Aberdeen. The minister's stipend is £184. The parish church is a commodious structure built in 1819. Here is a Free church. There are four or five schools. In the parish are several cairns and tumuli, which are said to point out the position where Robert Bruce overtook and destroyed the English army under Edward I., after the defeat of Comyn, Earl of Buchan, near Inverury. The parish was once a forest, whence its name Kintore, or "wood head," and in it are the ruins of Hall Forest Castle, which was given by Robert Bruce to Robert Keith, after the battle of Bannockburn. The town of Kintore is a very ancient royal burgh, situated on the main road, and near the river Don. It is a railway station on the Great North of Scotland line. The town consists principally of one street, containing some well-built houses and a townhall. According to the census of 1861 it contained 100 houses, inhabited by a population of 568. Its charter is dated 1506, and was granted by James VI., in confirmation of others of an earlier period. It is governed by a provost, two bailiffs, a dean of guild, and a treasurer, assisted by 8 burgesses. It unites with Peterhead, Cullen, Banff, Elgin, and Inverury in returning one member to parliament. This place gives the title of earl to the Keith family.

KINTRADWELL, an estate and bay in co. Sutherland, Scotland, 3 miles N. of Brora.

KINTRAW, a post-office vil. in the par. of Kilmelfort, co. Argyle, Scotland, 14 miles W. of Inverary. It is situated in the vicinity of Loch Craignish.

KINTULLOCH, a vil. in the par. of Dunbarnie, co. Perth, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Perth. William the Lion granted the lands of Kintulloch to Hugh Say, an Englishman, part of which came afterwards to the monks of Scone.

KINTURK, a demesne in co. Westmeath, Ireland, near Castle Pollard.

KINTYRE, or CANTYRE, a district and peninsula in the co. of Argyle, Scotland. It is bounded by the Atlantic Ocean and the Frith of Clyde, and is united to Knapdale by the Isthmus of Tarbert. It comprises the pars. of Campbeltown, Killean, Southend, Killchenzie, Kilberry, Skipness, and Saddel. Its length is 42 miles, and average breadth 5; but at Loch Tarbert the breadth is only 1 mile. The surface is rugged, and attains an elevation of 1,515 feet at Ben Turrick. It contains lochs Kearan, Garasdil, and several minor lochs. It is supposed to be the country occupied by the Epidii of Ptolemy, and in the year 210 was settled by Reuda, son of Connor II., king of Ireland, then called Scotia. The Hibernian settlers were driven back to Ireland in 446, but returned in 503, under Fergus, the first Scottish king, who fixed his seat at Campbeltown. In the 9th century it was overrun by the Northmen, and afterwards submitted to the Macdonalds of the Isles, who, in the reign of James V., forfeited it to the Campbells. This district was considered one of the Hebrides down to the 17th century.

KINTYRE, MULL OF, consists of the promontory at the extreme S. of the above peninsula, and is the Epidium Promontorium of the Romans. It is washed by the waves of the Atlantic, and has a lighthouse on the rocks known as "The Merchants," at an elevation of about 287 feet above sea-level. A view of the neighbouring coast may be obtained from the Knockmoy Mountain, which is in this locality.

KINURE, a par. in the bar. of Kinalea, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles E.S.E. of Kinsale, its post town. It is situated on the coast, near Oyster Haven and Kinure Point. The soil of the interior is mostly good. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Cork, val. with Tracton, £97. The church is in ruins. Walton Court is the chief seat. The Dooney is a remarkable landslip in the vicinity.

KINVARRA, a post and market vil. in the par. of Kinvarradoorus, bar. of Kiltartan, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Gort, and 15 S.E. of Galway. It is situated on Kinvarra Bay. The village contains a Roman Catholic chapel and a police station. A considerable amount of turf and corn is exported, and a small fishing trade is carried on. There are remains of an old castle formerly belonging to the O'Shaughnessy family. Wednesday and Friday are market days. Fairs are held on 18th May and 17th October.

KINVARRADOORUS, a par. in the bar. of Kiltartan, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Gort, containing its post town, Kinvarra. The par. is 5 miles long and 4 broad. The surface lies partly on Kinvarra Bay. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmacduagh, val. with Kilcolgan, £275, in the patron. of the bishop. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel and six day-schools.

KINVASTON. a tnshp. in the par. of Wolverhampton, E. div. of the hund. of Cuttlestone, co. Stafford, 8 miles N. of Wolverhampton, and 2½ S.W. of Penkridge.

KINVER, or KINFARE, a par. in the S. div. of the hund. of Seisdon, co. Stafford, 4 miles S.W. of Stourbridge, its post town, 4½ from Kidderminster, and 16 from Birmingham. It is situated on the Stafford canal and the river Stour, and comprises the hmlts. of Whittington and Compton. Kinfare was once a borough and market town, and a place of considerable importance. It was also famed for its production of woollen cloths. On the S. side of Kinfare Edge are the remains of a Saxon camp, with a barrow and notched stone 12 feet in diameter and 6 feet high. Here are the extensive ironworks of Hyde and Whittington. The first rolling and splitting mill in England was erected at the former place. Spades, shovels, patent screws are manufactured here in large quantities. The soil is sandy loam and clay. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £200, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with a tower containing six bells. The church was thoroughly restored in 1836. In the interior are brasses of Grey, and Hampton, of Stourton Castle, and several ancient monuments. The parochial charities produce about £242 per annum, of which £114 goes to the free grammar school. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. Stourton Castle is the principal residence, and was the birthplace of Cardinal Pole. J. H. H. Foley, Esq., is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on the last Tuesday in February for cattle, sheep, and pigs, and on the second Tuesday in May, and first Tuesday in December, chiefly for pigs and horses.

KINWALSEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Hampton-in-Arden, hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, 5 miles S. of Coleshill. It is a small agricultural place.

KINWARDSTONE, a hund. in co. Wilts, contains the pars. of Great and Little Bedwin, Burbage, Buttermere, Chute, Chute-Forest, Collingbourne Kingston, Easton, Froxfield, Hippenscombe, Milton Libbourne, Pewsey, South Severnake, Tidcombe, Wootton Rivers, parts of Chilton Foliatt, Hungerford, and Shalbourn, comprising an area of 54,030 acres.

KINWARTON, a par. in the Alcester div. of the hund. of Barlichway, co. Warwick, 1¼ mile N.E. of Alcester, its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Avon, and on the road from Alcester to Henley-in-Arden. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The tithes were commuted for land on the enclosure of the parish. The living is a rect.* with the curs. of Weethley and Great Alne annexed, in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £490, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a small structure dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce £1 per annum. A National school was built in the parish of Great Alne in 1840.

KIONDROUGHAD, a vil. in the par. of Onchan, Isle of Man, 3 miles from Douglas.

KIPLIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Catterick, wap. of East Gilling, North Riding co. York, 7½ miles N.W. of Northallerton, and 3 S.E. of Catterick. It is situated on the river Ouse. The Countess of Tyrconnel is lady of the manor and sole landowner. Kiplin Hall is the principal residence.

KIPPAGH, a copper mine in co. Cork, Ireland, 9 miles W. of Skibbereen. It was once productive, but is now abandoned.

KIPPAX, a par. in the lower div. of the wap. of Skyrack, West Riding co. York, 8 miles E. of Leeds, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Pontefract. It is situated on the river Aire, and near the Selby railway. It contains the tnshps. of Allerton-Bywater and Great and Little Preston. It is believed to have derived its name from a keep or castle erected by the Saxons, near which stood a memorable ash, hence its name Chepesch, or "keep-ash," now Kippax. The inhabitants are principally employed in the collieries. The village, which is considerable, is built on the summit and slopes of a gentle acclivity rising from the river towards the N. The tithes were commuted for land under Enclosure Acts in 1791 and 1805. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £329, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure with tower and spire containing three bells. The register commences in 1534. The parochial charities produce about £28 per annum, beside some cottages for the poor. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. There is a free school for boys, also an infant school. The principal residences are Kippax Park and Kippax Hall. Mrs. Midhurst is lady of the manor.

KIPPEN, a par. partly in the co. of Perth, and partly in that of Stirling, Scotland. It comprises the quoad sacra par. of Bucklyvie, and the vils. of Arnprior, Cauldhame, Kapp, Kippen, and Shirgarten. The Forth and Clyde railway has a station at the village of Kippen. The par. is 8 miles in length by from 2 to 4 in breadth. It covers an area of about 10,000 acres, of which half are under cultivation. Ironstone is found in the neighbourhood, and sandstone is quarried. The parish is well watered by the river Forth and several streams. From the higher grounds an extensive and varied prospect is commanded, including Stirling Castle and the woody eminences adjacent. The road between Dumbarton and Stirling intersects this parish, as does also the Forth and Clyde railway. It is in the presb. of Dunblane and synod of Perth and Stirling. The minister's stipend is £250. The parish church is a modern and commodious structure. There are Free churches at Kippen and Bucklyvie, and at the last mentioned place there is also a chapel-of-ease, and an United Presbyterian church. In the neighbourhood are several schools. This place suffered much during the persecution of the Covenanters by the Stuarts in the middle of the 17th century, by reason of the zeal of its inhabitants. In 1679, at the battle of Bothwell, the men of Kippen and Galloway made a bold front in defence of the bridge. Rob Roy is said to have made a descent here in 1691. At Arnprior, in this parish, are the remains of a castle which belonged to Buchanan, "king of Kippen," who here entertained the "gude man of Ballangeigh" (James V.), and whose last descendant was executed at Carlisle in the rebellion of 1745 for the last of the Stuarts. In this district are several forts of Roman and Pictish origin. The village of Kippen is situated on the road between Dumbarton and Stirling, and is 5 miles E.N.E. of Bucklyvie. Formerly it carried on an extensive trade in the distillation of whisky. The fairs are held on the second Wednesday in April and the third Wednesday in May (old style), and on the first, second, and third Wednesdays in December; also at Bucklyvie, in this parish, on the second Tuesdays in February and March (old style), 26th June, on the last Tuesday in July and 18th November.

KIPPOCHILL, a vil. in the bar. and par. of Glasgow, co. Lanark, Scotland, near Glasgow.

KIPPS, THE, a hill in the par. of Temple, co. Edinburgh, Scotland. Its height is 1,785 feet above the level of the sea.

KIPPURES, THE, a chain of mountains on the borders of cos. Dublin and Wicklow, Ireland. They attain an altitude of 2,478 feet above the sea-level. The Liffey takes its rise in these mountains.

KIRBY, a div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, contains the pars. of Allesley, Arley, Astley, Bedworth, Binley, Brinklow, Bulkington, Burton-Hastings, Combe-Fields, Harborough-Magna, Shilton, Stretton-Baskerville, Willey, Withybrook, Wolvey, and part of Claybrooke, Holy Trinity, Stow, and Wolston, comprising 45,000 acres.

KIRBY, signifies "church-town," and is the same as KIRKBY [which see].

KIRBY-BEDON, a par. in the hund. of Henstead, co. Norfolk, 3 miles S.E. of Norwich, its post town. The village, which is small, consisting of a few scattered houses, is situated near the navigable river Yare. The inhabitants are employed in agriculture. The land is chiefly arable. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £250. It was formerly divided into the two pars. of St. Mary and St. Andrew. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £200. The church, which stands on rising ground, is dedicated to St. Andrew. It is a low structure, with thatched roof and a square tower. The entrance on the S. is through a Norman doorway. It contains monuments to the Brooke family. The register dates from 1558. There are also ruins of the church of St. Mary, which now form a picturesque ruin. There is a school, in which a Sunday-school is also held. Kirby Hall is in ruins. Sir Henry Tracy, Bart., and Charles Lombe, Esq., are lords of the manor.

KIRBY-BELLARS, a par. in the hund. of Framland, co. Leicester, 3 miles S.W. of Melton Mowbray, its post town. It is a station on the Midland railway. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Wreak. A college was founded here in 1319 by Roger Beler, which was made an Austin priory by Alice Beler in 1359. At the Dissolution its revenue was £178 7*s.* 10*d.* It is a meet for the Quorndon hounds. The village, which is small, is situated on the road from Melton to Leicester. The tithes have been commuted for land. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £84. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a commodious structure, with a tower crowned by a lofty spire and containing five bells. Kirkby Park, formerly the hunting seat of Sir Francis Burdett., Bart, is now a farmhouse. It was here that Sir Francis wrote his reform letter, for which he suffered imprisonment in the King's Bench. The Rev. — Edwards is lord of the manor. In 1821 many bones and teeth of the elephant, antelope, and other extinct species of animals, were dug up near the river, and also an urn containing black beads.

KIRBY-CANE, a par. in the hund. of Clavering, co. Norfolk, 4 miles S. of Loddon and 3 N.E. of Bungay, its post town. This place, originally called "Kirkby Camp," takes its name from an ancient camp at Powters Hill, where skeletons, colts, and various warlike instruments have been found. The village is a small agricultural place. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £425. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £390. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice, with a round embattled tower containing five bells. The register dates from the reign of Henry VIII. The parochial charities produce £81 per annum. There is a National school, also a school erected in 1858 by Sir E. Bacon. Kirby Cane Hall is situated in a park now the seat of Lord Berners, who is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

KIRBY-COLD. See COLD KIRBY, co. York.

KIRBY FRITH, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, near Glenfield.

KIRBY-GRINDALYTH, a par. in the wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 9 miles S.E. of New Malton, and 3½ from the Wharram station on the Malton and Driffield railway. The par., which is of large extent, contains the tnshps. of Kirby, Duggleby, and Thirkleby, and the chplry. of Sledmere. The village is inconsiderable. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York. The parish church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has an embattled tower, with a spire containing three bells. In the chancel are a sedilia and piscina, both in fine preservation; also an ancient stone font, and some lancet-shaped windows. There is also a district church at Sledmere, the living of which is a perpet. cur. Adjoining the parish church are the remains of an ancient monastery, now converted into farm buildings. There is a National school for both sexes.

KIRBY-HALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Little Ouseburn, lower div. of the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, three-quarters of a mile from Little Ouseburn, and 5 miles S.E. of Boroughbridge. It is situated near the river Ure, and is a meet for the Craven harriers. The principal residence is Kirby Hall.

KIRBY HALL, a seat of the Earl of Winchilsea, co. Northampton, 5 miles S.W. of Kingscliffe. It was built by Sir Christopher Hatton in 1590.

KIRBY-HILL, or KIRBY-ON-THE-MOOR, a par. in the wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 1 mile N. of Boroughbridge, its post town, and 5 miles S. of Ripon. The par., which is small, is situated on the river Ure, and on the road from Ripon to Boroughbridge, and contains the hmlts. of Humberton, Milby, and Langthorpe. The surface is elevated and the lands are in good cultivation. The village, situated on an eminence commanding a view of sixteen churches, and of the cathedrals of York and Ripon, is neatly built, and from its commanding site has received the name of Kirby Hill. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £300, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone building with a square embattled tower.

KIRBY-KNOWLE, a par. in the wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 9 miles S.E. of Northallerton, and 6 N.E. of Thirsk, its post town and nearest railway station. This par., which is situated in a valley, surrounded by an amphitheatre of hills, contains the hmlt. of Balk. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture, and about 360 acres of woodland and waste. The line of the Great Northern railway passes through the parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £415. The church is a small ancient structure, the chancel of which was rebuilt in 1815. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a chapel-of-ease at Bagby.

KIRBY-LE-SOKEN, a par. in the hund. of Tendring, co. Essex, 2 miles W. of Walton steamboat pier, 3 E. of Thorp, and 15 E. of Colchester, its post town. It is situated on the coast near Horsey Island, and is bounded on the N. by a creek of the North Sea, running up to Landermere. There is a wharf for loading and unloading small craft which are used for carrying corn to London. The greater part of Horsey Island, which is included in this parish, consists of valuable arable and marsh land. The Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, London, have a good estate here, constituting the endowment of the prebend of Sneating. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £240. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a small structure, with a tower containing five bells. It was rebuilt in 1833 with the exception of the tower. The register dates from 1681. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There are places of worship for Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists, and a National school for both sexes. A fair is held on St. Anne's Day.

KIRBY MILLS, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkby Moorside, North Riding co. York, 3 miles from Kirkby Moorside.

KIRBY MONKS. See MONKS KIRBY, co. Warwick.

KIRBY MUXLOE, a chplry. in the par. of Glenfield, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 5 miles W. of Leicester, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Market Bosworth. It is a small village and railway station, situated on a branch of the river Soar. Here are the ruins of a castellated mansion formerly belonging to the family of Hastings. The surface is hilly and the lower grounds are watered by two rivulets called the Kirby brooks.

It consists chiefly of rich grazing and arable land. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Glenfield, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is an ancient edifice with a low tower. C. Winstanley, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KIRBY-ON-THE-MOOR. See KIRBY HILL, co. York.

KIRBY-UNDER-DALE. See KIRKBY-UNDER-DALE, co. York.

KIRBY, WEST, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 8 miles W. of Birkenhead, and 8 N.W. of Great Neston. It is situated at the mouth of the river Dee, and contains the chplry. of Hoose, or Hoylake, with eight tnshps. The village of Kirby West is a favourite resort for bathers, and commands extensive views of the Irish Sea, the river Dee, and the Flintshire and Carnarvonshire hills. At Little Meolse are two hotels, affording good accommodation to visitors. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £703, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Chester. The parish church, dedicated to St. Bridget, is situated near Grange Hill, and was rebuilt in 1786. It has lately been restored and refitted with additional seats. In addition to the parish church there are two district churches, the livings of which are perpet., curs., val. £100 and £203. The parochial charities produce about £250 per annum, of which £56 goes to Clegg's free grammar school, and £187 for the poor, &c. There is a Church day school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school.

KIRBY WISKE, a par. in the wap. of East Gilling, North Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Thirsk, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Northallerton. It is situated on the banks of the river Wiske, and contains the tnshps. of Maunby, Newby Wiske, and Newsham. The Great Northern railway passes through the parish. Near the village are some traces of a Roman encampment. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £643. The church, dedicated to St. John, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing three bells. It has a fine Norman doorway. The parochial charities produce £36 per annum. Roger Ascham, the tutor of Queen Elizabeth, Dr. George Hickes, and Archbishop Palliser, were natives of this place.

KIRCUBBIN, a post and market vil. in the par. of Innishargy, in the bar. of Ards, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 14 miles N.E. of Downpatrick, and 111 from Dublin. It is situated on the road from Portaferry to Newtown Ards, and by the side of Lough Strangford. The village, which was founded in 1790, is now a busy, well-to-do little place. The principal trade is in straw-plait and linen weaving. In the village are a market-house, linen hall, and police station. Petty sessions are held here. Fairs are held on the 28th April, May, August, and November, and on the last Wednesday in the remaining months.

KIRDFORD, a par. in the hund. of Rotherbridge, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 5 miles N.E. of Petworth, its post town, and 5½ W. of Billingshurst railway station. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the river Arun. The parish extends northward to the borders of Surrey. There are good quarries of the Petworth and Sussex marbles. The land is principally arable and woodland, and the soil a stiff clay, but well cultivated. The living is a vic.* with the perpet. cur. of Plaistow annexed, in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £500. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has a square tower containing a clock and six bells. The union poorhouse is in this parish. Plaistow is an extensive district about 3 miles N., in which a chapel has been recently erected. Sladeland, Barkfold, Ebernoe, Ifold, and Shillinglee Park, are the principal residences. The latter is the seat of the Earl of Winterton.

KIRK, a vil. in the par. of Lundie, co. Forfar, Scotland, 7 miles N.W. of Dundee. It is situated under the Sidlaw hills.

KIRKABILL, an ancient par. in the co. Sutherland, Scotland, now joined to Tongue.

KIRK ANDREAS, a par. in the Ayre sheading, Isle of Man, 5 miles N.W. of Ramsey. It is situated in a very fertile part of the island, and is well inhabited. The village is small, most of the houses being scattered in small hamlets. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sodor and Man, val. £750, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, was rebuilt in 1802, on the site of a very ancient one. It contains a curious runic cross and an ancient font which belonged to Philip I. of France. Besides the parish church, there is a district church dedicated to St. Jude, the living of which is a perpet. cur.* val. £100, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Man. There are several barrows and remains of a fort near Ballacurry. Fairs are held on St. Andrew's and St. John's days.

KIRK-ANDREWS, an ancient par. in the co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, now joined to Borgue. The village, which consists of a few farmhouses, is situated 5 miles S.W. of Kirkcudbright, near Kirk-Andrews Bay, where are the ruins of a church.

KIRK-ANDREWS MIDDLE QUARTER, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk-Andrews-upon-Esk, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland. See KIRK-ANDREWS-UPON-ESK.

KIRK-ANDREWS NETHER QUARTER, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk-Andrews-upon-Esk, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland. This township, lying between the rivers Sark and Esk, comprises Solway Moss and a portion of the once debateable lands. See KIRK-ANDREWS-UPON-ESK.

KIRK-ANDREWS-UPON-EDEN, a par. in the ward and co. of Cumberland, 3 miles N.W. of Carlisle, its post town. It is a small village and railway station situated on the Carlisle ship canal and the river Eden. The par. contains the hmlt. of Hesket Hill and the chplry. of Beaumont. The wall of Antoninus is traced through this parish, and on the common several urns have been found. The surface is generally flat, and the soil a rich black loam, alternating with sand. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act at the commencement of the present century. The living is a rect.* united with the rect.* of Beaumont, in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £249. There is no church, the inhabitants attending Divine service at Beaumont, but the churchyard is still in use. The charities produce about £2 per annum. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor.

KIRK-ANDREWS-UPON-ESK, a par. in the ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 2½ miles N. of Longtown, its post town. It is a large parish, extending in a N.W. direction to the Solway Frith, a distance of nearly 20 miles. The rivers Liddel, Kershope, and Sark, separate it from Scotland. It is divided into three divisions, called the Middle, Moat, and Nether, and contains the chplry. of Nichol-Forest. The Caledonian railway traverses the parish, and has a station at Gretna. Over the Esk are two bridges, one of which, at Garristown, is of cast-iron, and there are two stone bridges over the river Sark. In this parish is included Solway Moss, where the Scots were defeated in 1745, also at Esk Bridge the Duke of Cumberland defeated a party of rebels. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £854. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone structure, erected in 1637 on the site of a much older one. There is also a district church at Nichol-Forest, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £132, in the patron. of the rector. Sir J. R. G. Graham, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

KIRK-ARBORY, a par. in Rushen sheading, Isle of Man, 3 miles N.W. of Castletown. It contains the vil. of Colby, with Balladoole House, and Bell Abbey, a modern seat. The village is considerable, and a large part of the land under tillage. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Sodor and Man, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown. Remains exist of two old churches. There is a village school. In the vicinity are a Druid circle, several barrows, and inscribed stones. Fairs are held on the 22nd June, 28th October, and 6th December.

KIRK-BALLAUGH, a par. in Michael sheading, Isle of Man, 8 miles W. of Ramsey. It includes the vil. of Ballamoor, where is a brewery. It is situated in a marshy district, through which flows a stream from Snafell. There are several warrens and marl pits, in which bones of the fossil elk have been found. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sodor and Man, val. £325. in the patron. of the crown. The church is a modern structure erected near the site of a more ancient one. There is a village school. Fairs are held on the 15th May and 26th August.

KIRK-BAMPTON, a par. in the co. Cumberland, 6 miles W. of Carlisle, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Wigton. It contains the tnshps. of Bampton Great and Little, and Oughterby. It is a polling-place for the county elections. The soil is various. In this parish are traces of numerous defensive works erected against the incursions of the moss-troopers. The principal of them is at the S. of the village, which occupies nearly an acre, and consists of an enclosure defended by a double rampant and double ditch. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, and has a chancel which is much admired. There is a parochial school.

KIRKBANK, a post-office vil. in the district of Kelso, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 2 miles from Kelso, and 11 N.E. of Jedburgh. It is situated near the confluence of the rivers Teviot and Tweed.

KIRKBEAN, a par. in the co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland. It is bounded on the S. and E. by the Solway Frith, and by the pars. of Colvend on the W., and Newabbey on the N. It contains, besides a vil. of its own name, the vils. of Prestonmill and Southerness. It is 5 miles in length by 3¾ in breadth. About one-half of the parish is under tillage, and the soil is generally fertile. It is watered by Southwick-water and the streams of Preston and Kirkbean. The par. is in the presb. and synod of Dumfries. The minister's stipend is £203. The parish church, built in 1766, had a tower added to it in 1840. There is a Free church, and also a school. The land is chiefly owned by the Stewarts of Southwick, and Balfours of Arbigland. The Cavens Castle and Arbigland House are the chief seats. Granite, sandstone, and limestone, are the prevailing rocks, but the latter only is worked. This is the birthplace of John Paul, otherwise Paul Jones, the navigator. On the borders of this parish is Criffle Mountain, with the ruins of the Castle of Wreaths, formerly the property and occasional residence of the Regent Morton. The length of the coast line is about 10 miles, and in its neighbourhood the tide ebbs and flows with such rapidity as sometimes to upset vessels. On Southerness Point, the most southerly part of the parish, is a lighthouse, and at Carsethorn Bay in the N. is good anchorage. The village of Kirkbean is one of the most beautiful in the S. of Scotland. It is situated about 1 mile from the sea, on the Dumfries road, from which place it is 12 miles.

KIRK-BRADDAN, a par. in the Middle sheading, Isle of Man, 2 miles N.W. of Douglas, of which it is a suburb. The par., which is situated on the river Douglas, contains, besides part of the capital, the vil. of Kewague. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the linen and paper mills. The village, which is considerable, is situated in a pleasant spot. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Sodor and Man, val. £175, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was rebuilt in 1773. In the churchyard are ancient crosses and a runic pillar. There are four district churches, the ruins of all which are perpet. curs. varying in val. from £300 to £70. There are National and other schools. The principal residence is Portechee, the seat of Sir G. Drinkwater. At Castleward Hill are some old ruins.

KIRK-BRAMWITH. See BRAMWITH, KIRK, co. York.

KIRK-BRIDE, or KIRK ST. BRIDGET. See BRIDEKIRK, co. Cumberland.

KIRK-BRIDE, a par. in Ayre sheading, Isle of Man, 5 miles N. of Ramsey. The village is small, and the land is well cultivated. At Point of Ayre is a lighthouse. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sodor and Man, val. £300, in the patron. of the crown. The church is dedicated to St. Bridget. The living was once held by Moore, the reviser of the Manx Bible, and friend of Bishop Wilson. There is a village school. At Cronk-e-vowlan are traces of a Danish encampment, and in the hills are several barrows. Fairs for the sale of cattle are held on the 12th April and 6th May.

KIRK-BRIDE, an ancient par. in the co. Ayr, Scotland, now joined to Maybole.

KIRKBURN, a par. in the Bainton-Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Driffield, its post town. The par., which contains the tnshps. of Eastbourn, Southbourn, and Tibthorpe, is situated at the foot of the Wolds, on the high road from Driffield to Pocklington and York. The village, which is neatly built, stands on an eminence in the vale of a rivulet from which it derives its name. The soil is clay and lime, well adapted for wheat. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £82. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure with a square tower containing three bells. It was thoroughly restored in 1856, at an outlay of nearly £2,000, contributed by the parishioners and landowners, and a small portion by the levy of a rate. It contains a very antique font, an old register, and a painted screen of carved work. There are National and Sunday schools, also a Sunday-school at Tibthorpe. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel, and the former chapels at Southbourn and Tibthorpe. Sir Tatton Sykes, Bart., is lord of the manor.

KIRKBURTON, a par. in the upper div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Huddersfield, its post town. The par., which is considerable, contains the tnshps. of Hipworth, Shepley, and Thurstonland. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the woollen and fancy goods manufacture, which are extensively carried on. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Hepworth annexed, in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £301, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The parish church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure erected in the 13th century, and has a tower containing six bells. In addition to the parish church there are four district churches at Holmfirth, Newmill, Shepley, and Thurstonland, the livings of which are perpet. curs. and curs., in the patron. of the vicar. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel, with Sunday-school attached; there are National schools for both sexes, also a mechanics' institute. There are several charities for the poor. Fairs are held on the last Monday in April and October for cattle.

KIRKBY, a chplry. in the par. of Walton-on-the-Hill, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 8 miles N. of Liverpool, and 6 N.W. of Prescot. It is a station on the Liverpool and Bury railway. The village, which is considerable, is situated near Kirkby Moss. The living is a perpet. cur.* annexed to the rect.* of Walton-on-the-Hill, in the dioc. of Chester. The church, dedicated to St. Chad, contains an ancient font of the time of William II. The charities produce about £13 per annum, £8 of which goes to the support of a school. The Earl of Sefton is lord of the manor, whose family have held it since the reign of William II.

KIRKBY-CUM-OSGODBY, a par. in the wap. of Walshcroft, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles E. of the Usselby railway station, on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincoln line, and 8 S.W. of Caistor. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1803. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Owersby. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient edifice much modernised, with a tower containing four bells. The charities produce about £1 per annum. There are chapels for Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Roman Catholics at Osgodby, and a National school at Kirkby. George Hewitt, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KIRKBY, EAST, a par. in the western div. of the hund. of Bolingbroke, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles S.W. of Spilsby, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Tattershall railway station. It is situated near a navigable stream, or catchwater, which is used as a canal. The surface towards the N. is hilly, but in the S. flat, and in the fens peat moor. The soil is a rich marly loam, alternating with sand and gravel. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1806. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £153. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure with a square tower containing two bells. It has an ancient stone font handsomely carved. The register commences in 1583. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a free school with an endowment of £70 per annum, also an infant school. Robert Maidens, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KIRKBY-FLEETHAM, a par. in the wap. of East Hang, North Riding co. York, 5 miles from Bedale, its post town, 9 from Richmond, and 3¼ N. of the Leeming Lane railway station. It is situated near the river Swale, and contains the vils. of Fleetham and Great and Little Fencote. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £474, and the vicarial for £288. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Fencote annexed, in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient building with a tower containing three bells. There is a National school. Kirkby Hall is the principal residence.

KIRKBY-FRITH, a lib. in the par. of Glenfield, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 4 miles W. of Leicester.

KIRKBY-GREEN, a par. in the wap. of Langoe, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 8 miles N.E. of Sleaford, its post town. The village is very small, consisting of a few scattered houses. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £67 14*s.* 6*d.* The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £180, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, is a modern structure built on the site of an older one. The register dates from 1722. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Henry Chaplin, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KIRKBY-IN-ASHFIELD, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Broxtow, co. Nottingham, 5 miles S.W. of Mansfield, and 11¼ from Nottingham. It is a station on the Nottingham and Mansfield section of the Midland railway. It is situated at the head of the river Erewash, on the borders of Derbyshire, and is intersected by the Erewash Valley railway. There are extensive collieries and limestone quarries. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in framework knitting, and in the manufacture of bobbin-net. The village, which is large, is neatly built, and has recently been much improved. The small rivers Leen, Maun, and Erewash have their sources in this parish. The surface is hilly, and the eastern portion of the parish is densely wooded. The tithes were commuted for land under Enclosure Acts obtained in 1795 and 1804. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £730. The church, dedicated to St. Luke, is an ancient structure with a tower containing three bells. There are free schools, erected in 1854 by voluntary contributions, and two other schools supported by the Butterley Company, proprietors of the mines. The Wesleyan Methodists and Baptists have places of worship. The Duke of Portland is lord of the manor.

KIRKBY-IN-CLEVELAND, a par. in the W. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Stokesley, its post town, and 10 from Guiseborough. It contains the hmlts. of Broughton and Great and Little Dromanby. The village, which is considerable, is situated under Wainstone Hill. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. with a sinecure rect., £360, in the patron. of the archbishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. Augustine, is a commodious stone edifice with a tower containing two bells. It was rebuilt in 1815, upon the site of a small cruciform structure. In the church and churchyard are monuments to the Dobson and Grenside families. There is a free grammar school, founded in 1708 by Henry Edmunds, who endowed it with an estate now producing £60 per annum. James Emmerson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KIRKBY-IN-MALHAM-DALE, a par. in the wap. of Staincliff, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Settle, and 10 S.E. of Skipton. Leeds is its post town. It is situated on the river Aire, and contains the tnshps. of Hanlith, Malham, Malham Moor, Otterburn, and Scosthrop. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the cotton mills. The soil is clayey. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £148. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient stone edifice, with a square tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce £115 per annum, £21 of which goes to Topham's free grammar school, in the schoolroom of which is also held a Sunday-school. The Wesleyans have chapels at Malham and Scosthrop. Walter Morrison, Esq., is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on the 30th June and 15th October at Malham for cattle.

KIRKBY-IRELETH, a par. in the hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 5 miles W. of Ulverstone, its post town, and 27 N.W. of Lancaster. It is situated on the river Duddon, and is a station on the Furness line of railway. It contains the tnshps. of Broughton and Dunderdale-with-Leathwaite, and is divided into four districts, called Heathwaite, Woodlands, Low Quarter, and Middle Quarter. The parish is chiefly moorland, but some parts are enclosed and well cultivated. There are extensive slate quarries in the Middle Quarter, employing between 300 and 400 hands. Copper and iron abound. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the cockle fishing, for which the Duddon is famous. An extensive tract of land has been reclaimed from the sea, near the mouth of the Duddon. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £125, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of York. The church, situated at Beckside, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing five bells. It is dedicated to St. Cuthbert, and has a stained-glass window and some ancient monuments. There is also a district church at Broughton-in-Furness, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. 108. At Middle Quarter is a Baptist chapel and a parochial school, and there is a church school at Beckside. Kirkby Hall, formerly the seat of the Kirkby family, is now a farmhouse. The Earl of Burlington is lord of the manor.

KIRKBY-IRELETH, or IRLETH, a chplry. in the par. of Dalton-in-Furness, hund. of North Lonsdale, co. Lancaster, 18 miles N.W. of Lancaster. It is situated near Morecombe Bay and the Furness line of railway. Iron ore and limestone are found. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £100, in the patron. of the vicar.

KIRKBY-KENDAL. See KENDAL, co. Westmoreland.

KIRKBY-LE-THORPE, or KIRKBY-LAY-THORPE, a par. in the wap. of Aswardhurn, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 2 miles E. of Sleaford, its post town. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The impropriation of Asgarby belongs to Sleaford almshouses. The living is a rect.* with the vic. and rect. of St. Denys and Asgarby annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £540. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure with a low square tower containing three bells. It has a Norman archway and ancient font richly carved. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a National school. The Marquis of Bristol is lord of the manor.

KIRKBY LONSDALE, a par., market and post town, in the ward of Lonsdale, co. Westmoreland, 12 miles S.E. of Kendal, 30 S.W. of Appleby, and 25 S.W. of Kirkby Stephen. It is situated in a fertile valley on the river Lune, or Lon. The road from Leeds to Kendal passes through the town, which has a station on the Ingleton branch of the Lancaster and Carlisle section of the London and North-Western railway. The par., which is 10 miles by 6, contains the tnshps. of Barbon, Casterton, Fir Bank, Hutton-Roof, Killington, Lupton, Mansergh, Middleton, and four hmlts. It was formerly held by St. Mary's Abbey, York, from whom it passed into the hands of the Lowthers, who take the title of earl from this place. The town, which has several good streets, has a cleanly appearance. It is well paved, lighted with gas, and abundantly supplied with water. It contains a market-house, bank, savings-bank, waterworks, bark and corn mills, mechanics' institute, and agricultural society. The houses are all built of mountain limestone and roofed with a light blue slate. It is a petty sessions town and polling-place for the county. The river is crossed by a stone bridge of three arches, from which a view may be obtained of the surrounding scenery. The principal manufactures of the town are blanket and carpet weaving, which afford employment to many of the inhabitants. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £550, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. In addition to the parish church there are seven district churches at Barbon, Casterton, Firbank, Hutton Roof, Killington, Mansergh, and Middleton, the livings of all which are perpet. curs.,* varying in val. from £100 to £80. The parish church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient stone edifice with tower containing six bells. It has four aisles and a carved pulpit. It stands on a hill, 180 feet above the level of the sea, and was given by Queen Mary to Trinity College. The parochial charities produce £219 per annum, of which a portion goes to the support of Godshalf's free grammar school, which has ten exhibitions at Queen's College, Oxford, and Christ's College, Cambridge. The school is under the control of 24 governors, and was established in 1591. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Sandemanians have each a chapel. Here is situated the union poorhouse, and county courts are held monthly. Kirkby Lonsdale is an archdeac. comprising the following pars.—Claughton, Kirkby Lonsdale, Melling, Tatham, Tunstal, and Whittington. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor. At Casterton is the celebrated Clergy Daughters' School. Market day is Thursday. Fairs are held on Holy Thursday for cattle and cloth, 5th and 6th October for cattle and horses, and 21st December for woollen cloths.

KIRKBY-MALLORY, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 4½ miles N.E of Hinckley, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Market Bosworth. It contains the chplry. of Earl-Shilton. Here was formerly a castle which belonged to the Mallorys. The manor was sold in the reign of Edward III. to Leicester Abbey, and after the Dissolution was granted by Henry VIII. to Thomas Harvey, from whom it passed to the Nöel family. A market was once held in the village, but has long been discontinued. The land is fertile and in a high state of cultivation. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1771. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £370, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has an embattled tower surmounted by a light cupola, and containing three bells. In the interior are several monuments to the Nöel family. The parochial charities produce about £114 per annum. There are two free schools entirely supported by Lady Byron. Kirkby Hall, rebuilt by the late Lord Wentworth, is situated in a spacious park through which a stream flows. There is a chapel-of-ease at Earl-Shilton, in this parish.

KIRKBY-MALZEARD, a par. in the lower div. of the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 4 miles from Masham, and 7 N.W. of Ripon, its post town. It is situated near the river Ure. The par. is of large extent, containing the hmlts. and tnshps. of Laverton, Fountains Earth, Galphay, Hartwith, Azerley, Braisty Woods, Brimham, Low Laiths, Summer Bridge, and Mickley. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the flax mills. There formerly existed here a castle of the Mowbrays, which was demolished in the reign of Henry II. At Fountains Earth are the remains of Fountains Abbey, occupying a space of 2 acres, and said to be the largest monastic ruins in England. The town, which is of considerable antiquity, was endowed by Edward I. with a charter for a weekly market and two annual fairs, which, after having been discontinued for several centuries, were temporarily revived in 1816. A considerable portion of the parish is high moorland, affording tolerable pasture, but the soil in the valleys is fertile and well cultivated. The living is a vic. annexed to the vic.* of Masham, in the dioc. of Ripon. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone edifice, with a tower containing a clock and four bells. In the interior is an ancient stone font. The parochial charities produce about £163, £13 of which go to the parochial school. There is a mechanics' institute, containing lecture and reading rooms, with a library containing nearly 1,000 volumes.

KIRKBY MISPERTON, a par. in the lythe of Pickering, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S. of Pickering, and 8 N.W. of Malton. It contains tnshps. of Great and Little Barrow. The soil is loamy and the land chiefly arable. The village, which is considerable, is neatly built. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £960. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient stone structure with a tower. In the interior is an octagonal font. The Wesleyans hold divine service in a private house. There are a few small charities. There is a National school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. Captain Legard is lord of the manor.

KIRKBY MOORSIDE, a par., post and market town, in the wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 8 miles N.E. of Hovingham, 8 W. of Pickering, and 28 N. of York. It is situated on the Dove, a branch of the river Rye, near the York and North Midland railway. The par. contains the tnshps. of Fadmoor, Farndale, Low Quarter, Brandale East Side, Keldholme, Kirby Mills, Gillamoor, and Langthorpe. The town, which is small and irregularly built, stands on the banks of the Dove, and on the high road between Pickering and Helmsley. It is almost surrounded by steep hills, and is the centre of a large agricultural district. It is a polling place for the North Riding, a petty sessions town, and the seat of a Poor-law Union. It contains the Tolbooth, a new building, a mechanics' institute, union poorhouse, and gaol. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agricultural pursuits, and in the manufacture of agricultural implements. There are also iron and brass foundries, brick and tile works, flour mills, a brewery, malt-houses, and rope walks. Windsor chairs are made, and sent to various parts of the country. Near the town are limestone and freestone quarries and coal mines. A Cistercian nunnery formerly stood about a mile from the town, founded in the reign of Henry I. by Robert de Stuteville, and which on its dissolution had an income of £29 6*s.* 1*d., and was granted to the Earl of Westmoreland. During the reign of Queen Elizabeth the manor was forfeited by the rebellion of that nobleman, and the estates reverted to the crown. It was afterwards given by James I. to the Duke of Buckingham, whose son, the noted George Villiers, through extravagance, was reduced to poverty, and died at a house on the moor, having previously disposed of his estates to Sir Charles Duncombe, an ancestor of the present owner. The living is a vic. with the curs. of Cockham and Gillamore annexed, in the dioc. of York, val. £417, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a tower rebuilt in 1803. In the interior is an antique brass of the year 1600, in fine preservation, bearing the figures of Lady Brooke and her eleven children in kneeling posture. The parochial charities produce about £27 per annum. There are places of worship for Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Independents, and Quakers. The Ryesdale and Pickering Lythe Agricultural Society holds its meetings here. Wednesday is market day. Fairs are held on Whit-Wednesday and on the 18th September for horses and cattle, also a statute fair for hiring servants on the Wednesday after the 5th November.

KIRKBY-ON-THE-HILL. See KIRKBY RAVENSWORTH, co. York.

KIRKBY-OVERBLOW, a par. in the upper div. of the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S. of Harrowgate, and 6 N.W. of Wetherby, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated on an eminence near the river Wharfe. The par. contains the tnshps. of Kearby-with-Netherby, Kirkby-Overblow, Rigton, Sicklinghall, and the chplry. of Stainburn. The surface is elevated, and the lands in high cultivation. About two-thirds of the land is meadow and pasture, and the remainder arable. From the higher ground a view is obtained of the valley of Wharfdale. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £944. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was made collegiate in the early part of the 14th century. It is a spacious and venerable stone structure, with a square tower containing a clock and three bells. There is a chapel-of-ease at Stainburn. The charities produce about £28 per annum, of which £12 goes to the support of a free school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. H. J. Scott, Esq., is lord of the manor. The Earl of Harewood is chief landowner.

KIRKBY RAVENSWORTH, or KIRBY-ON-THE-HILL, a par. in the wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Richmond, its post town. The par. contains the tnshps. of Kirkby Hill, Washton, Gayles, Dalton, Newsham, and New Forest. Here are extensive remains of a castle built by Bodin, ancestor of the Fitz-Hughs. The village is considerable, but the inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £120, in the patron. of the Bishop of Chester as appropriator of the rectory. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Felix, stands on a considerable elevation, and forms a landmark for mariners. It is an ancient edifice, erected in the latter part of the 14th century, and has a tower containing a clock and two bells. The parochial charities produce £1,243, the endowment of Dakyn's hospital and free grammar school. The hospital was founded in 1556 by John Dakyn, D.D., and provides for 24 aged persons, who were either born in the parish, or have been resident there at least ten years. Christopher Cradock, Esq., is lord of the manor.

KIRKBY, SOUTH, a par. in the upper div. of the wap. of Osgoldcross, West Riding co. York, 8 miles S. of Pontefract, its post town, 9 N.E. of Barnsley, and 6 N.E. of the Cudworth railway station, on the Midland Counties line. It contains the hmlts. and tnshps. of Skelbrooke, Robin Hood's Well, Stubbs, and North and South Elmshall. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the stone quarries, and in agriculture. Malting is carried on. The soil is clay alternating with sand and marl, and subsoil limestone. About two-thirds of the land is arable, the remainder pasture and woodland. The tithes were commuted for land and a corn-rent under an Act of Enclosure in 1807. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £244. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £45 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel with a Sunday-school attached. There is a day school for both sexes. The Rev. John Allott is lord of the manor. The chief seats are the Grove and Hague Hall.

KIRKBY STEPHEN, a par. and market town in East ward, co. Westmoreland, 4 miles S.W. of Brough, 10 S.E. of Appleby, and 24 N.E. of Kendal. Penrith is its post town. It is situated on the river Eden, and is a station on the South Durham line, from Redcar to Tebay. Here also is the junction of the Eden Valley branch of the Stockton and Darlington railway. The parish, which is very extensive, comprising about 32,000 acres, is a region of hills, thwaites, and dales, each watered by some gurgling beck or rivulet, which frequently overflows its banks, rendering the soil extremely fertile, while the higher grounds afford good pasturage. Part of the British Alps, comprising Wild Boar Fell and the fells of Nateby and Hartley, with the waste of Stainmore, are in this parish. It is bounded on the S. and E. by the great Pennine range, which divides it from Yorkshire, and on the W. by the pars. of Crosby Garrett and Ravenstonedale. It includes the tnshps. of Hartley, Kaber, Castlethwaite, Mallerstang, Outhgill, Nateby, Smardale, Soulby, Waitby, Wharton, and Winton. The town, which consists principally of one street, stands on an eminence formed of calcareous magnesian conglomerate, surrounded by lofty mountains. It contains the market-house, a branch of the Kendal bank, savings-bank, temperance hall, literary institute, union poorhouse for the East Ward union, Odd Fellows' hall, built in 1855, inland revenue office, stamp office, police station, and public weighing machine in the market-place. It is a polling place for the county. Petty sessions are held monthly, and the board of guardians meet weekly. The principal manufactures of the town are woollen and silk, which employ a great many of the inhabitants; others are employed in the coal and copper mines, and in the knitting of stockings. The trade of the town, since the opening of the above railway, in 1861, has very much increased. There is an abundance of limestone. The land is moory, and large quantities of grouse appear in the autumn, affording plenty of sport for the neighbouring gentry. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £356. There are also two district churches at Mallerstang and Soulby, the livings of which are perpet. curs., val. respectively £64 to £78. The parish church, dedicated to St. Stephen, is an ancient edifice, partly Saxon, with a lofty square tower containing four bells. Attached to it are three chantries belonging to Smardale Hall, Wharton Hall, and Hartley Castle repectively, which have recently been rebuilt, together with the chancel, but the body of the church is still in a very dilapidated condition. It contains tombs and effigies of the Musgraves, Whartons, Dalstons, and others. The church was given at the Conquest to Ivo-de-Talboise, and was afterwards given by him to Mary's Abbey, York. After the Dissolution it was sold by Edward VI. to the Musgraves of Hartley Castle. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £364 9*s.* 11*d.* The charities produce £222 per annum, besides which there is Lord Wharton's free grammar school, founded in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. It has an endowment of £45 per annum, and three small exhibitions at either Cambridge or Oxford. There are chapels for Independents and Wesleyans. The parish comprises three manors, for each of which manorial courts are held by Sir Richard Tufton, Bart., Sir George Musgrave, Bart., and the Earl of Lonsdale, who are the lords. Burn, the author of "Justice of Peace," was a native of this place. Market day is Monday. Fairs are held on the first Monday in Lent, Monday before the 20th April, 25th April, and 2nd October, for cattle, horses, woollens, &c., 29th September for horses, and the first Monday in June and July for the hire of servants.

KIRKBY THORE, or THURE, a par. in East ward, co. Westmoreland, 5 miles N.W. of Appleby, and 9 from Penrith, its post town. It is a station on the Eden Valley branch of the Stockton and Darlington railway. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Eden and Troutbeck, and contains the tnshps. of Milbourne and Temple Sowerby. It occupies the site of the Roman station Brovonacae, on the old road called Maiden Way, and is supposed to derive its adjunct designation from a temple to Thor, the chief of the Saxon idols. The manor was formerly held by the Whelps of Whelp Castle, which was built out of the ruins of the old Roman station. It afterwards passed into the hands of the Whartons. Many Roman relics have been found here, including a bath, altars, urns, and vaults; traces of buildings have also been discovered, and near it is Burwens Hill, an outcamp on the way which struck over Cross Fell to Bewcastle. The surface is fertile and highly cultivated, above two-thirds of the land being arable, and the remainder pasture. The soil near the river is a sandy loam, and in the higher lands gravel, alternated with clay. The parish is divided into three townships, Kirkby Thore, Milbourne with Milbourne Grange, and Temple Sowerby. Limestone and alabaster abound. Near the village is a sulphur spring called Potts Well. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £959. The church, dedicated to St. John, is an ancient red stone structure with a tower. It contains an old cross, and monuments of the Dalstons. In addition to the parish church, there are two district churches at Milbourne and Temple Sowerby; the livings of both are perpet. curs., val. severally £95 and £96. The charities produce about £9 per annum. There is an endowed school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. Sir Richard Tufton, Bart., is lord of the manor.

KIRKBY-UNDER-DALE, a par. in the wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 7 miles N. of Pocklington, its post town, and 5 W. of Burdale station on the Malton and Driffield railway. It contains the hmlts. of Garrowby, Uncleby, Painsthorpe, and Hanging Grimston. The village, which is small, is situated on the Bridlington and York road, near a rapid descent of the Wolds. There are several hills, one of which, 800 feet above the level of the sea, gradually descends to the plain of York. The soil is various, but in general fertile. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £867, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small structure with a tower containing three bells. It was thoroughly restored in 1828. There is a school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The Right Hon. Sir Charles Wood, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

KIRKBY-UNDERWOOD, a par. in the wap. of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 5½ miles N. of Bourne, its post town, and 7 E. of the Corby railway station. The village, which is much scattered, is wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1803. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £170, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary and All Saints, is a small ancient structure with a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce £72 per annum, £59 of which is the endowment of Brownlow's almshouses. Lord Aveland is lord of the manor.

KIRKBY-UPON-BAIN, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5¼ miles S.W. of Horncastle, its post town and railway station, and 4 N.E. of Tattershall. It is situated near the Horncastle canal, and contains the tnshp. of Tumby. The tithes were commuted for land and corn-rents under an Act of Enclosure in 1796. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £653, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a modern structure built on the site of an older one. The register commences in 1555. The parochial charities produce £80 per annum, the endowment of Brocklesby's free school for the education of the poor children of the parish. There is a chapel for Wesleyans. Earl Fortescue is lord of the manor.

KIRKBY WHARF, a par. partly in the upper div. of the wap. of Barkstone Ash, West Riding, but chiefly within the lib. of St. Peter's, East Riding co. York, 2½ miles S.E. of Tadcaster, its post town. It is situated on the N. bank of the river Wharfe, near the North Midland railway, and contains the tnshps. of Kirkby, Ulleskelf, North Milford, and Grimston. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The uplands are well wooded, and command views of the valley of Wharfdale. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £345, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a stone building with a tower containing three bells. It has recently been restored in memory of the late Lord Londesborough, who resided at Grimston Park. In the interior is a stained-glass window and some oak carving. The parochial charities produce £10 per annum. There is a girls' school, supported by Lady Londesborough, and a boys' school at Ulleskelf. There is an armoury at Grimston Park, which was collected by the late Lord Londesborough, and said to be one of the finest in the country.

KIRKCALDY, a political district of the co. Fife, Scotland, containing the pars. of Abbotshall, Aughterderran, Aughtertool, Ballingry, Burntisland, Dysart, Kennoway, Kinghorn, Kinglassie, Kirkcaldy, Lelie, Markhinch, Scoonie, and Wemyss. Its size is 14 miles long by 9 broad.

KIRKCALDY, a par., seaport, market town, and royal burgh in the district of Kirkcaldy, co. Fife, Scotland, 14 miles N. of Edinburgh, and 33 S.W. of Dundee. It is intersected by the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee railway, which has a station contiguous to the town. It is encompassed by the pars. of Dysart, Auchterderrand, and Abbotshall, and by the Firth of Forth. The par. is 2¼ miles in length by 1 mile in breadth, with an area of 1,100 acres. By far the greater portion of the land is under tillage. It has a coast line of three-quarters of a mile in length. The par. is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Fife. The minister's stipend is £247, in the patron. of the crown. The parish church, situated at the back of the town, is a modern and commodious structure. The United Presbyterians, the Free Church, the Baptists, the Episcopalians, and the Independents have each a place of worship in the town, and at Port Brae is a chapel of ease. The land is chiefly possessed by Oswald, of Dunnikier House. Here formerly was a cell belonging to the Culdees, of which the name Kirkcaldy is a corruption. Iron ore is found, and coal is worked in the immediate neighbourhood. The town of Kirkcaldy stretches for nearly a mile along the base of a range of hills close to the shore of the Firth of Forth. From the circumstance of its having until recently consisted of only one long street, it acquired the name of the "lang town of Kirka'dy." It has recently been much improved and widened, and several new streets built at right angles to the main street. It contains a townhall, built in 1829, and a gaol. It is well supplied with water, and is lighted with gas. In the vicinity are many detached dwellings. There are several schools, the chief being the Burgh School, erected in 1844, with money left by Robert Philips, for the education of children of both sexes. The principal inns are the "National," the "Harbour Head," and the "George." There are branch offices of the Bank of Scotland, and of the City of Glasgow, Commercial, National, and Union banks, also a savings-bank, chamber of commerce, several insurance agencies; besides agricultural, horticultural, scientific, and other societies. The trade of this place bears an intimate affinity with that of Dundee, consisting chiefly of the spinning of flax and the weaving of linen goods. The annual value of the linen trade of the town and the surrounding district is calculated to be about £200,000. The other branches of industry include a floor-cloth manufactory, a rope-work, two extensive iron-works, an iron shipbuilding yard, distillery, breweries, flour mills, &c. The port is the seat of a custom house, having the control over a line of coast extending from Aberdour on the W. to St. Andrew's on the E. The harbour is the property of the town, but under the management of parliamentary commissioners. It has been extended and improved on several occasions, and a grand scheme is in progress for the construction of an outer and inner harbour, at the cost of £30,000. The average depth of water is 12 feet at neap tides, and 18 at spring tides. A branch rail from the main line traverses the whole length of the harbour, and greatly facilitates the loading and unloading of vessels. Scarcely anything is known of the history of this place before 1334, when it was given to the abbots of Dunfermline as a burgh of royalty, and continued in their possession till 1450, when the commendator and convent disposed of the burgh and harbour, with all its privileges, to the bailies of Kirkcaldy. It was soon after created a royal burgh, and its privileges were ratified by Charles I. in 1644, who made it a free port, with fresh immunities. At this time it is said to have been more populous than it is at present, and to have had above 100 sail of ships belonging to the port. After the Revolution it rapidly declined, till 1763, when its commerce began to revive. It has since gradually risen into repute, both as a port and a manufacturing town. The number of vessels belonging to the port at present are about 100, of an aggregate tonnage of 9,000 tons. The principal exports are coals and linen yarn, and the imports flax, timber, and grain. The civic government of the town is confided to a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, 16 councillors, and a town clerk. The magistrates have all the powers ordinarily possessed by magistrates of royal burghs, and hold courts for trial of crimes and civil causes. Courts for recovery of small debts for the neighbouring district are also held here. It unites with Kinghorn, Dysart, and Burntisland in returning one member to parliament. The boundaries of the parliamentary borough are more extensive than the municipal—in 1861 the former contained 10,851 inhabitants, and the latter 5,195. The income of the burgh is about £638. The ships of Norway, Denmark, and Prussia frequent the port, and there are several small vessels employed in trading between this place and London, Leith, Glasgow, &c. Dr. Adam Smith, author of "The Wealth of Nations," was a native, as was also Mr. Oswald, of Dunnikier, the statesman and patriot, who for many years represented this burgh. One newspaper, the Kirkcaldy Advertiser, is published in the town. Saturday is market day, chiefly for grain, with generally a good attendance. In February, July, and October cattle markets are held.

KIRKCAMBECK, a stream in co. Cumberland. It rises in Spadeadam Moss, and joins the Irthing near Newtown.

KIRK-CAMBOCK, an ancient par. in co. Cumberland, now joined to Lanercost. It was given to the prior and convent of Carlisle, but was almost destroyed and ruined by the Scots. The living was a rect. rated in Pope Nicholas's valor at £8, but nothing in King Edward II.'s. The fabric of the church has long been in ruins. For the rites of baptism and sepulture, the people commonly repair to the church of Lanercost.

KIRKCHRIST, an ancient par. now united with Twynholm, in co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland. The village was situated near the river Dee, and opposite the town of Kirkcudbright, where are the ruins of a church with a cemetery, the latter being still used. A nunnery was founded here in ancient times.

KIRK-CHRIST-LEZAYRE, a par. in Ayre sheading, Isle of Man, 3 miles W. of Ramsey. The par., which includes the chplry. of Sulby, is situated in the most fertile part of the island, under North Barule, which attains an altitude of 1,840 feet above the sea. The village is considerable, and had formerly a Cistercian cell to Furness Abbey. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sodor and Man, val. £240, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a modern structure rebuilt on the site of a more ancient one. The parochial charities produce £20 per annum. There are three schools, one of which has a small endowment. Fairs for the sale of cattle are held on the 8th and 24th June.

KIRK-CHRIST-RUSHEN, a par. in Rushen sheading, Isle of Man, 4 miles W. of Castletown. It contains the ports of St. Mary and Erin, the island called the Calf of Man, and the Brada copper-mine. On the coast is the Spanish Point, near which is a lighthouse. At a place called Abbey-Old-Bridge are the remains of a Cistercian abbey founded in the 11th century by King M'Manus, where many of the kings in old times were buried. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sodor and Man, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown. There is a school with an endowment of £7 per annum. The principal residence is Rushen Abbey, the seat of Deemster Moore. In the vicinity are large boulders known as the Giant's Quoits, and a barrow.

KIRKCOLM, a par. in the co. of Wigtown, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Stranraer. It is bounded on the S. by the par. of Leswolt, on the N. and W. by the Irish Sea, and on the E. by Loch Ryan. It comprises Ervie and Kirkcolm post-office stations. Its size is about 6 miles long by 5 broad. Its surface is gently undulating, and has an area of 14,500 acres. The soil is generally fertile. The par. is in the presb. of Stranraer and synod of Galloway. The minister's stipend is £265. The church is a modern and commodious structure. There is a Free church, and also several schools, in the neighbourhood. Here are the ruins of Corsewall Castle, once a place of great strength. Near Loch Ryan, at the S.W. corner of the parish, are the ruins of Kilmorie (i.e. St. Mary's) Church, and adjacent to it is the Virgin's Well, celebrated for its alleged miraculous cures. Loch Connel is a fresh water lake about 1 mile in circuit. In this district are oyster beds, and off the coast cod, whitings, herrings, and lobsters are taken. The ancient parish church was dedicated to St. Columb, hence the name of the parish. On Corsewall Point is a lighthouse, the lantern of which is 112 feet above high water.

KIRKCONNEL, a par. in the district of Nithsdale, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 3 miles N.W. of Sanquhar. It has a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway, by which the parish is intersected. It is 17 miles long by 7 broad. There are about 6,100 acres under tillage. Two-thirds of the whole area is hilly pasture, and much attention is given to dairy farming. It is watered by the river Nith and its tributaries. The par. is in the presb. of Penpont, and synod of Dumfries. The minister's stipend is £241. The church is a commodious structure. Old Kirkconnel and its church, which was dedicated to St. Connel, stood about 2 miles N. of the present village. Glenwhurry Hill has recently been discovered to be the burial-place of St. Connel. There are two mineral wells in the parish. Coal, ironstone, limestone, and lead are found, but the first only is worked. The Duke of Buccleuch is the chief landowner.

KIRKCONNEL, a locality in the par. of Newabbey, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland. The Roman Catholics have a chapel here.

KIRKCONNEL, an ancient par. in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland, now united to Kirkpatrick-Fleming. It is the scene of the story of "Fair Helen of Kirkconnel Lee."

KIRKCORMACK, an ancient par. in co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, now joined to Kelton.

